LIQUOR BOARD TO BE NAMED AT ONCE

Loboes to Face Determined Foe Here Today

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

Phil Pettit is feeling a bit chagrined at the moment. He declared, rather sheepishly, that he did his best, but the best was not enough. I hope the experience makes him appreciate what I tried to explain to him several weeks ago when he arose in his place at the Rotary club, brushed aside my explanation and with the savage gusto of a cannibal eating his victim, proceeded to score me with with sarcastic remarks about my failure to make up a missed attendance upon the club. I told him then that there are certain things beyond the reach of man's effort and that the time was an instance of the fact. But the smart aleck wouldn't listen to me.

Now, he's done gone and missed, himself, on the theory that he could "make up" without any trouble at Eastland this week. But it came to pass that the Eastland club didn't have a meeting so he couldn't go there. Business kept him from going to Ranger. So he is in an embarrassing condition, because I'm asking him why he doesn't think enough of his Rotary pledge and ethics to keep up his attendance. He is supposed to be a high standing man in the community, the boss of the telephone system and all that. In keeping with the dignity of his position, he ought to redeem his pledge to be a good Rotarian. I am beginning to be ashamed of him.

R. H. Wells, speaker at yesterday's joint meeting of the Cisco and Eastland Rotary clubs, is a story teller of parts and graces. He told one that convulsed the meeting for a few moments. If the printed word could reflect his style of telling it, the effect would be better, but I am printing that particular story because, somehow or other, it meets the experience of many husbands.

One such had a wife of extremely affectionate disposition, who babyishly demanded that her mate reassure her of his love every time he came home. She usually met him with: "Honey, do you love me?" When he said, "Sure, I do," she wanted to know how much, and why, etc. He patiently went through the long formula of reassuring his wife that he loved her several bushelfuls day after day. But one evening he came home rather out of sorts. His wife met him with: "Honey, do you love me?" "Sure." "Honey, why do you love me?" That was quite enough. Said he: "My dear, I don't know why, but whatever it is, it keeps me from knocking the h— out of you."

That's a pretty good story, even for a Utah or Idahoan, from one of which states the speaker comes.

BULLDOGS ARE PRIMED, TEAM IS REVAMPED

Invaders Hope to Maintain Long Record of Wins Over Cisco

The Cisco Loboes and the Ranger Bulldogs will square off this afternoon at 3:30 at Chesley field in the only game in the Oil Belt district, a game that will determine which of two teams, neither having won a conference game, will occupy the cellar position this season.

The Loboes, rated slight favorites over the Ranger eleven, will be facing a determined foe according to reports from the Canine headquarters. The Bulldogs, smarting under a record of straight defeat after winning the district championship handily last year, will be determined to preserve a record of victories over the Cisco team that has been unbroken since 1930.

RECORDS

Following is the record of football competition between Cisco and Ranger high schools since 1922:

- 1923—Cisco 6, Ranger 0.
- 1924—Cisco 7, Ranger 0.
- 1925—Cisco 25, Ranger 0.
- 1926—Ranger 13, Cisco 6.
- 1926—Ranger 3, Cisco 0.
- 1927—Cisco 22, Ranger 0.
- 1928—Ranger 13, Cisco 0.
- 1929—Ranger 14, Cisco 12.
- 1930—Cisco 3, Ranger 0.
- 1931—Cisco 13, Ranger 13.
- 1932—No game.
- 1933—Ranger 7, Cisco 6.
- 1934—Ranger 42, Cisco 0.

The Cisco team, on the other hand, as eager for a victory, is suffering from a number of injuries that may further reduce the slender reserve forces they have. Lack of reserve power has been the chief Cisco handicap. The

Another Cisco Party Off to Deer Grounds

Off to the happy hunting grounds in southwest Texas in search of deer today were President Alex Spears of the First National bank and Dr. Charles Hale of Cisco and E. R. McDaniel of Abilene.

They expect to be gone for four or five days, hunting in southwest Texas.

COUNTY GINNINGS.

Five hundred and ninety-six bales of cotton were ginned in Eastland county from October 18 to November 1, according to a report of the United States department of Agriculture. Year's total up to November 1 are 2,410 bales. Ginnings up to October 18 were 1,804.

ITALIAN CAPTURE OF HARA IS REPORTED TO BE NEAR

(By Associated Press)

Italian correspondents reported today that the capture of the strategic city of Hara was imminent. Dispatches said that Italian Col. Maletti, leading native soldiers, had advanced in the Fafan river valley to a position about 28 miles "from the immediate objective."

General De Bono reported that Azbi, in the north, had been occupied with lively fighting in which 55 Ethiopians were killed and a hundred wounded. Twenty Askari were killed on the Italian side

Car for Buckner Home to Be Here Tuesday, Nov. 19

A car of provisions for Buckner's Orphans home at Dallas will be loaded at Cisco Tuesday from Baptists and friends of the institution in this section. Cisco will be the only stop to be made in the county, the Rev. E. S. James, First Baptist church pastor, said.

Meanwhile donors were asked to bring their gifts of groceries, clothing, poultry, sacked potatoes, fruits, stock feed, hay, etc., to either the First Baptist church or the East Side Baptist church which will serve as depots until the car is placed on a siding here to be loaded next Tuesday. Or, gifts may be brought to the car which will be here all day.

Maverick Season Is Rated Success

EASTLAND, Nov. 15. — Two hard games with Abilene and San Angelo in the offing, the Eastland Mavericks are taking a rest from play this week. The next game on the Eastland slate is with Abilene at Eastland, Friday, November 22. Eastland's season has already become a success in the eyes of a majority of the fans, since for the first time in its interscholastic competition it has defeated Ranger and tied Cisco in the same season.

Messrs. Charles Kleiner, Yancey McCrea, Dr. D. Ball, Floyd Cooper and L. C. Moore left this morning on a hunting trip.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Miller and W. J. Foxworth left Thursday afternoon on a hunting trip south of Alpine.

'MY FAULT' IS EXPLANATION OF WHITAKER

Made Flying Trip; Should Have Wired, He Writes

Blaming himself for the situation which prevented his contacting Sec'y J. E. Spencer of the chamber of commerce and city officials in the course of a hurried visit to Cisco some time ago, Chief Engineer R. O. Whitaker of the state parks board, replied to a letter of apology from Mr. Spencer that he did not feel that anybody in Cisco was lacking in any interest in the development of the state park site here.

His purpose was to confer with Joe Carrothers, in charge of the survey of the 500-acre site, he said, and not to confer with the park committee on this flying trip.

"This purpose was accomplished," he wrote, and we now have the topographic map, and as soon as I can get my work current, will undertake the study of same, and at the first convenient opportunity, will be happy to visit Cisco, and at that time confer with all interested parties with reference thereto.

Failure of local officials to contact Mr. Whitaker on his visit here was the subject of an editorial in the Cisco Daily Press which pointed criticism at what the paper considered laxity.

Letter.

Mr. Whitaker's letter of explanation to Mr. Spencer, was:

Mr. J. E. Spencer, Manager, Chamber of Commerce, Cisco, Texas.
Dear Mr. Spencer.

Please accept my apologies for the long delay in replying to your appreciated letter of October 22. I was out of the office from October 18 until November 1, and since that date have only been here three days, having covered practically every park in the state system in the meantime. Naturally, this has thrown me far behind in my correspondence, and I anticipate it will take me two weeks to get caught up with it.

I was very sorry indeed, not to have seen you on October 20, when I passed through Cisco, but it was my own fault, as I should have wired you instead of depending upon a letter reaching you on that occasion. There was no particular occasion on this flying trip of mine, to have conferred with your park committee, but naturally, I would have been glad to have met them. The visit to Cisco at that time was merely incidental, as I could, by driving a slight excess distance, drive through there, and I was very anxious to see the area and confer with Mr. Carrothers, who was finishing the work.

This purpose was accomplished, and we now have the topographic map, and as soon as I can get my work current, will undertake the study of same, and at the first convenient opportunity, will be happy to visit Cisco, and at that time confer with all interested parties with reference thereto.

In view of the editorial which appeared in the Cisco Daily Press of Monday, October 21, copy of which was mailed me by someone, I wish to assure you again, that I had

Duck Season Opens Nov. 20 With Only 30 Days Allowed

With the deer and turkey season opening Saturday and many hunters with the time to spare, trekking off to the distant deer country to spend several days to a week or more, the stay-at-home sportsmen are looking forward eagerly to the opening of the duck season Wednesday, November 20.

The season on migratory fowl is short this year by edict of the biological survey of the federal government. Rigid restrictions have been imposed in an effort to curb the shooting of ducks which annually has taken a greater toll of the fowls than the year's hatch, according to the bureau.

Licenses.

State regulations require that a hunter shooting outside his county, must have a state license. Federal rules require any hunter of migratory waterfowl anywhere to have a migratory game stamp, which is sold at the post office and must be attached to the state license, if a state license is required, or to a card furnished at the post office. The stamp sells for one dollar.

Federal regulations do not apply to game that is not migratory, hence there is no federal supervision over shooting of quail. State laws, however, govern quail hunting as rigidly. The season opens December 1.

Shooting of ducks will be permitted for 30 days, beginning November 20 and ending December 19.

Rules.

The following regulations will apply:

- Shooting over baited water or land is prohibited;
- No live decoys may be used at any place;
- Shooting will only be permitted between sun-up and sun-down;
- Possession of more than one day's bag limit, reduced from 12 to 10, will be illegal;
- A three-shell limit on automatic repeating shotguns will be enforced;
- In order to hunt on city of Cisco lakes a city permit, costing $1.50 last year, will be required. Price of the license for this year was not learned this morning.
- State game laws restrict the season on wild turkey to the period from November 16 to December 31, inclusive, and the bag limit to three gobblers. Many counties have no open season.
- The deer season coincides with the turkey season. The bag limit is two bucks a season.
- Ducks were reported to be frequenting the upper reaches of Lake Cisco and other city waters in greater numbers than ever this year, promising excellent hunting.

TO ANNOUNCE MEMBERS AS BILL SIGNED

Sale of Spirits Is Limited to Unbroken Packages

AUSTIN, Nov. 15. (AP)—Governor Allred said today he would appoint a liquor control board simultaneously with placing, his signature to the bill passed yesterday, limiting the sale of distilled spirits to unbroken packages. He said he would sign the bill as soon as he had checked it unless discrepancies were found.

The bill becomes effective upon receiving his signature.

The control board will be composed of three members, who will select an administrator, and perfect the enforcement machinery.

Governor Allred signed the automobile drivers' license, which becomes effective April 1. The present qualified drivers will get a license at no expense, which will be subject to revocation.

Brazos Bill Signed.

The governor also signed the bill advancing $200,000 to the Brazos river conservation reclamation district to speed up the beginning of construction of the $30,-000,000 water control project.

The legislature adjourned at midnight last night, with liquor regulation, drivers' license, old-age pensions and officers salary bills passed.

The failure to enact revenue measures to pay the pensions virtually assured a third special session to be called in January.

The house blocked last minute attempts to pass a selective sales tax, coupled with increased industrial taxes.

The house meets Monday to hear evidence on the charges of official misconduct pending against J. E. McDonald, commissioner of agriculture.

Eastland Red Cross Chairman Named Thursday

EASTLAND, Nov. 15.—Mrs. J. A. Parker was selected as chairman for the Eastland Red Cross Roll Call this year at a meeting held in the commissioners court Thursday morning. The call is expected to begin immediately and the chairman's committee announced.

J. E. Spencer, Cisco, chairman of the Red Cross for Eastland county, stated that 1,500 memberships—same as last year—are aimed for this year. Eastland's memberships sought are 500.

Last year, R. T. Bridge, field representative for West Texas for the Red Cross, stated that Eastland made the best showing in the county.

In Ranger Mrs. L. H. Flewelling is chairman while in Cisco Mrs. J. E. Spencer heads the Red Cross workers.

Officers and committee members for next year will be elected at a county wide meeting to be held in Cisco, Friday, December 6. Plans for the drive next year will also be one of the objectives of the meeting.

Weather

WEST TEXAS—Mostly cloudy, probably occasional rains in the southeast portion tonight and Saturday; colder in the south portion tonight; rising temperature in the north part Saturday.

EAST TEXAS—Cloudy, with occasional rains in the south section, and colder to freezing in the extreme north portion tonight; Saturday, cloudy, with occasional rains and colder near the west coast; slowly rising temperatures in the northwest section.

WISDOM WELL AT 1570 FEET

The Wisdom and Phillips Petroleum company Wende No. 1, six miles south of Cisco, was drilling ahead today at 1,570 feet, it was reported.

The well, in the vicinity of the famous Schoor gasser which for more than 15 years has supplied Humbletown with gas, is in a block of around 3,000 acres. It will test out production possibilities in an area where hopes have long been held for commercial pay.

TEMPERATURE STARTS CLIMB

Moderation of a cold wave that struck Cisco last night, toppling temperatures to a low of 42 degrees, was seen today as the mercury line began a gradual rise at 12:30, reaching 46 degrees an hour later.

The recording thermometer at the Cisco Gas Corp. offices revealed that the cold wave struck at 9 p. m., when the temperature was 52. At 6 a. m. today it was 42, remaining at that point until the rise set in.

Mist, but no rain, accompanied the cold.

FREEZE DUE TONIGHT.

DALLAS, Nov. 15. (AP)—The cold wave reached Texas today, bringing traces of snow and 28 degree weather in the panhandle, with scattered rains in other parts of the state. East Texas is due a freeze tonight.

PREDICTS CHINA BREAK.

TOKYO, Nov. 15. (AP)—Japanese press dispatches said today that the campaign for the independence of North China was near the climax. This statement predicted the breaking off of Hopei, Shantung and Chahar provinces from the central Nanking government soon.

She was hours overdue here on the last leg of her flight from England to Brazil.

Sees Toledo Peace Plan as Cure for "Mental Astigmatism"

TOLEDO, O., Nov. 15. (AP) — Out of the multiplicity of strikes that have swept over northern Ohio in the last two years emerged the Toledo industrial peace plan.

Four times since it was conceived and organized in June by Edward F. McGrady, No. 1 strike mediator of the department of labor, it has been tested.

In all four tests it has come off with quiet, non-spectacular victories that stand out in contrast with the frenzied jostling of crowds, shouting of epithets, and hurling of missiles outside strike-beset industrial plants.

Too Close to Issues. Leaders of 27 cities have written McGrady, asking "What is this Toledo plan? How does it work and why does it work?"

To the last question McGrady replies, "It cures mental astigmatism," a term he likes to apply to muddled thinking.

"Negotiators in strikes get too close to the issues," he said. "They need help from the outside; dispassionate counsel of those who see the good and the problems of the community as a whole above the differences of a comparative few."

Across northern Ohio at least 550 strikes had broken out in a wide variety of industries and communities between September, 1933, and July, 1935.

Ralph A. Lind, executive secretary of the National Regional Labor board in Cleveland, said that not more than 40 of these strikes occurred in Toledo. Three of these 40, however, were so spectacular they focused national attention on Toledo.

The Electric Auto-Lite strike which dragged from April 12 to June 24, 1934, was marked by violence which led to deaths of two men and the wounding of two officers and 15 soldiers of the Ohio National guard.

Other Strikes. A year later—April 23, 1935—the United Automobile Workers union called a strike which led to the closing of the Chevrolet Motor Co. plant, where 2,340 men were listed as employees. A week later the Fisher Body Co. plant in Cleveland, where 9,000 were employed, shut down. The dispute was not settled until May 15.

Six weeks later the International Brotherhood of Electrical workers called a strike in the Toledo Edison Co. It appeared for a time Toledo's industries would be paralyzed by a shutdown of power.

A permanent panel of eight non-partisan members was set up. Two panels of five each, one representing labor and one industry which might vary in personnel as new situations arose, also were organized.

Lind Named Chairman. McGrady selected Lind chairman. Lind, since January, 1933, had participated in approximately 1,000 labor disputes, most of which did not reach the strike stage.

"In the event of a deadlock or threatened strike or lockout the chairman calls in representatives of each panel individually," McGrady said. "They state their cases. The chairman then calls all three together. In four cases out of five, an agreement will result that will prevent a costly strike."

"There's going to be plenty of need for this plan or something similar," said McGrady. "I believe there will be many more strikes. History shows that when the nation is coming out of a depression, labor tries to get back what it has lost, and industry tries to gain what it has lost."

 Sweeter than cheerful fires of home,
 Sweeter than eve's tranquility—
 Thy will, O Lord, to me.

—LOUISA M. COADE.

Since the beginning of time the forces of good and the supposititious forces of evil have appeared to be locked in combat, but never before has there been such faith among men that good must prevail, finally utterly putting to rout the false belief of evil.—Duncan Sinclair.

A Sales Tax, or No Pension

ANOTHER special session of the legislature will be necessary if the state of Texas carries out its pledge to pay pensions to the aged during the present administration. The legislature has done what has been done by other state lawmakers in the same dilemma. They have passed a bill authorizing the payment of pensions under the constitutional amendment voted last August 24, but they have failed to enact any revenue-raising measure that will provide the funds for the purpose. In other words they have handed the old people a lot of "Continental greenback," worth no more than the ineffective desire of the state that the aged get their money.

It is needless to say that this is not only an ironical, but an extravagant procedure. It cost the state a great deal of money to hold the election which amended the constitution to permit payment of old-age pensions. It cost the state a great deal more to hold two special sessions, net result of whose action on the pension matter was simply a statutory reiteration of the sentiment expressed in the amendment. Now, if pensions are paid, another special session will have to be held to enact tax-raising measures, unless the issue is put off until the next legislature.

THE legislature is in a spot, of course. But it is in a spot because of a failure to apprise the voters, who acted upon the pension measure supinely confident that the funds for paying pensions would be a gift from heaven, of their responsibility in the matter at the time they voted. Had they put up to the citizen, along with the responsibility for saying whether or not the pension should be paid, the responsibility, also, for saying how they should be paid, the issue would have been clear and square. The legislative task would have been comparatively easy. But, no. It was an opportunity to play a political flute or two at the expense of the hopes of the aged beneficiaries of a pension measure. The pension authorization would be pushed through with the blinders, and the legislature would be forced to raise the money some way. That may have been good strategy for the proponents of the measure, but it is darn poor business for the state.

THE legislature that adjourned last night knew very well that the only means of raising a sufficient sum to pay old-age pensions in a satisfactory manner is a general sales tax. They did not have the courage to enact one. There is no doubt but what, to have enacted one would have meant the political curfew for many of the members of that body. Whether or not such a tax will ever be enacted depends upon the forces that are brought to play upon the minds of the people. The point we are endeavoring to make, however, is that the people of the state should not be beguiled into demanding expenditures without first being made fully aware of how those expenditures must be financed.

Flea Circus With Whale Exhibit

Madame Sirwell, only woman flea trainer in the world, and her troupe of performing fleas.

Trained Fleas At Whale Exhibit

Among the many added features with the big whale, the greatest biological exhibit of all times will be Madame Sirwell with her troupe of trained fleas. They ride bicycles, run races, juggle, kick a football, run a merry-go-round, do a fan dance and one of them the strongest, named Sampson, actually pulls a little wagon which weighs more than 6000 times his own weight. This feat if performed by man, would mean that the single human being, yoked to some kind of harness would be able to draw a gigantic truck loaded with some 400 tons.

Scientists have not been idle in the study of insects, that is in the learning or training of them. They have not left the investigation to the trainers alone, and in the biological laboratories of the New York University, Professor Theodore C. Schneirle has studied the intelligence of the insects.

Among the most intelligent of the insect group the fleas are much less highly evolved and probably would show lesser ability at learning despite the training records made by Madame Sirwell and others who have trained them. The ability to form conditional reflexes and to the higher members of the insect group of creation. This has been proved many times by leading professors in many of the larger universities.

Madame Sirwell has followed in the footsteps of her father and grand father as a trainer of fleas, and has with her the greatest troupe of trained fleas ever brought together. Each flea is named and she can tell them apart as easily as one does his friends. The madame insists that all the fleas are tied down with a fine copper wire, so no one need be afraid he will carry off her leading lady, or that the family dog will have a mixture of roving fleas to scratch.

The exhibit will be located on a specially constructed railroad car near the T. and P. freight depot for one day only, Monday, November 18. The exhibit will be open to the public from 2 p. m. until 10 p. m. daily

A Washington Daybook
 By HERBERT PLUMMER

By HERBERT PLUMMER
 WASHINGTON, Nov. 15. (P)—Veteran politicians and observers in the capital were a bit surprised when they heard that Joe Robinson, Democratic leader of the senate, had selected Senator Guffey of Pennsylvania to be chairman of the party's senatorial campaign committee for '36.

Positions of such responsibility usually go to senators of senior rank. The plump, jovial, gray-haired Pennsylvanian has served less than a year in the senate.

The subsequent announcement by Robinson, however, that Ed Halsey, secretary of the senate, would be "Freshman" Guffey's aide-de-camp, did much to reassure old-timers. The "Colonel," as Halsey is called by his friends, knows politics as few do.

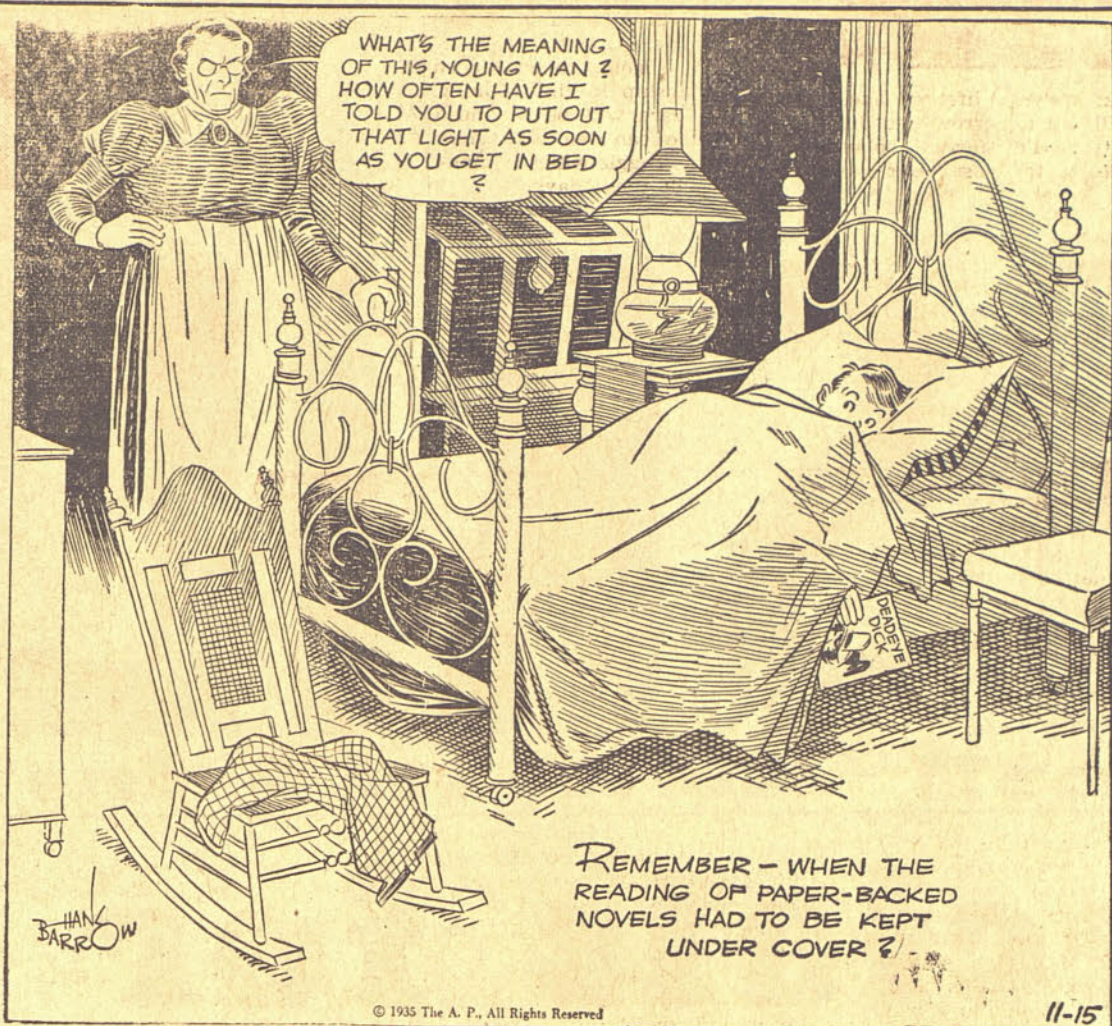

Theodore Roosevelt was presiding over the senate as vice president when Halsey came up

THE GAY THIRTIES

With Only Two Suits to Wear in Movie Rogers Wore Both to Prevent Delays

When he was making pictures in Hollywood, Will Rogers was ever a problem for the directors who were working with him on his pictures.

Rogers never took himself seriously as did most stars and spent much of his time with extras and others on the lot.

He had two suits to wear in one picture—one blue—one brown. He showed up on the set one day wearing a blue suit.

"That's the wrong suit, Will!" Director David Butler informed him.

"But this was the suit I wore when we knocked off last night and we hadn't finished," Rogers protested.

"Sorry, Will, we're shooting in a different set today," said Butler from Virginia to serve as a senate page.

Halsey's Duties

The highest unofficial officer of the senate, privileged to sit on the floor directly beneath the vice president, Halsey has been a senate employe continuously since the time he was a page.

In the lean days of his party the "Colonel" was carried on the rolls of the senate as an assistant door-keeper. Actually he was secretary to the Democratic minority—a sort of mental guard.

It was his duty to know the whereabouts of all democratic senators when congress was in session.

Routine such as pairing democratic senators to see that no party vote is lost, sending out notices of party conferences and caucuses, and keeping minutes of such meetings now is entrusted to an aide.

Thumbing The Record

In the campaign of '36 his official title as Senator Guffey's aide will be "secretary of the democratic senatorial elections committee." All of which means he will do most of the work in the effort to elect new democratic senators and re-elect old ones.

Already he is thumbing his way through the dreary pages of the Congressional Record, jotting down how this senator voted on a particular piece of legislation, what that senator said about work-relief appropriations or any other subject—compiling anything that can be of use in the various state campaigns.

"Okay," replied Rogers, and not to be caught unprepared, he started peeling off the blue suit. He was wearing the brown one underneath.

CISCO PEOPLE MAY CONTRIBUTE

Cisco people have an opportunity to contribute to the memory of Will Rogers. Famous friends have organized the Will Rogers Memorial commission. The First National Bank of Cisco will be glad to accept contributions to this fund so that the donor will have assurance that the contribution will be safely received by the proper authorities. Every cent subscribed will be used for memorials to be selected by Henry Ford, Herbert Hoover, Alfred E. Smith, Will H. Hays, Jesse H. Jones, Owen D. Young, Vice President John H. Garner and other men and women of national prestige and respect. The memorials will depend upon the number who contribute—but they will be used for charitable, educational, and humanitarian purposes. There will be no cold shaft to honor the memory of this warm, friendly man. They will be living, continuing memorials.

starting eleven will compare with any in the district, but there are so few men available for replacements that after the second quarter the home team is practically at the mercy of the opposition.

A cloudy, cold day, free of rain was in prospect for the game this morning.

The Ranger team, after a disastrous showing with material of which great things had been expected, has been revamped, with new players replacing some of the older boys. That revision has brought about improvement in late games and it is expected to make the Bulldogs much stronger for their encounter with the Loboes.

Bulldogs Primed

The Ranger Times sports writer comments:

"The Bulldogs have been primed up for the Cisco game for more than a week and the short delay in playing has not been enough to cause a let down in their spirit, which is probably at the highest peak since the opening of the season and the much-defeated team has a will to win that has been so lacking in the season so far.

Several changes in the lineup during the game are anticipated, according to Coach Moore, who, in the Cisco game, will make repeated changes in the backfield, according to his early plans.

Moore has indicated that he will likely start Walsh, Jacoby, Hartin and Cox in the backfield, with Kribbs and Ainsworth being worked into the combination from time to time throughout the game, while Jacoby, who has been playing from the short position in the backfield in most of the games in which he has been used, will go to the "tailback" position on most plays, giving him more territory in which to get up speed before plowing into the Cisco line.

"The Bulldogs are particularly anxious for a win from Cisco, not only because the game would aptly be called 'the fight on the cellar stairs,' but because of the anxious and keen rivalry that has prevailed between the two teams. The Bulldogs, too, will be after a win at Cisco because of the fact that a Cisco high school team has not defeated a Ranger team since the 3 to 0 win in 1930, though the Loboes tied 13 to 13 with the Bulldogs in 1931, no game was played in 1932 because of ineligibility of the Cisco team that year, and another close game was played in 1933 when the Bulldogs won by a score of 7 to 6, only to lose it because of an ineligibility."

HIGH COURAGE

by Jeanne Bowman

SYNOPSIS: Anne Farnsworth has lost her name, the fortune she should have inherited from Luke and Lucinda Farnsworth, and even her fiancée, Rob Crocker, who deserted her the moment he found she was not to inherit the Farnsworth Fisheries. But her life as "Nikki Nielsen" in the Finnish colony of Union Town is happy, and she knows now that she loves John Neuman, leader in the community. And she hopes to learn more of her past and to improve her future with his help.

Chapter 29.
FISHER GIRL.
"Will you marry me, Nikki, when I come back from Alaska? You know I love you."
"John, I'm afraid."
"Afraid?"
"Afraid to trust my feelings. Two months ago I was going to marry Rob Crocker. Now I don't love him. This feeling I have for you is so different. I'd like to believe it would last forever, but how can I? How do I know? I'm not like you. I haven't been true to a dream, as you have. Oh, I liked you that night at the dance, I hoped I'd see you again. I even asked Duke Lansing to find you and bring you up, but you didn't come and Rob did."
"Forget it, Nikki, let's sit here and talk. We've a lifetime ahead of us. I'll sail tomorrow and during the time I'm away I believe you'll learn to trust your own feelings. Somehow I believe we're destined for each other."

Anne sat on a gray boulder, and John at her feet, hands clasped about his knees, looked up at her. Wordless communion. Until a family of bluejays clattered down into the dell and began scolding.
"We'd better get away before Papa Jay has apoplexy," Anne ventured.
"Want to walk to the top of the hill? There's an old logging road near here."
Slowly they walked, trees meeting over head, wild currant waving plumes of fragrant red blossoms in their path, flowering dogwood with blossoms like carved ivory dipping and swaying above them.
They crossed streams on plank bridges swung on cables and then came out on the heads, the river below them, and beyond the Pacific, silvered with afternoon mist.
"I know a short cut back," John said, looking at his watch. "Perhaps we'd better take it."
They talked as they walked; that is, John talked and Anne listened. "It won't be easy being the wife of a fisherman, Nikki. I want you to understand that. Not that I intend to remain one always."
"What do you intend to do, and what did you major in, at college."

"Political economy," he answered. "It's always appealed to me. My Irish side, I guess. But I believe there is going to be a need of statesmanship in this country. I believe there will be the need of men who can see both sides of the class struggle which is making itself felt these days."
"I'm as anti-radical as men are made, but I realize that unless leaders come out of the ranks, agitators will speak for them and the chance of welding the two factions into a harmonious whole will be lost."
"I want to be financially free to carry on this work. I've been asked to run for the legislature but I'm not ready to accept. I'm too young for one thing, and I'm not financially able for another. But with you to help me, Nikki—" He looked down, and when he saw the tenderness in her eyes as she looked up, he waited for nothing more.
"Nikki," he whispered, "I know now what you're going to say when I come back from Alaska. I do, don't I."
"—I think so, John," she agreed.
She wondered if a ship coming in from storm-ridden seas, knew the peace she found in the haven of his arms. And then breaking into the charm of the moment came John's voice, low, curt—"Nikki, hide there, behind that thicket, quick."
Like a shadow, Anne obeyed. She saw John walk towards the beach and stretch out in the sand, back to a log. A moment later she heard voices.
For a while she could not identify them, and then she looked out across the water. There was a fish trap there. The pilings to which the different sets of nets were hung, were old, weatherbeaten, some of them broken off at the water-line. The little shed which sat on its long legs at the mouth of the trap looked as if it were ready to collapse at the first wind storm.
For fully five minutes John waited, then nonchalantly stood up, brushed the sand from his clothes, and sauntered back towards the road. Once there, he motioned Anne to join him and hurried her back over the trail without pausing to explain.
When they were in view of the others he slackened his pace. "That's an old fish trap the government ordered abandoned some time ago. Evidently some tramps hiding out there."
"I thought traps were always set where the current carries the fresh water."
"There's a current there, some freak sends it into that cove. The trap there used to be one of the best on the river."
"But why were you afraid for me?" Anne persisted.
John smiled down at her. "Must I remind you that you are very precious to me?"
They joined the others and a few moments later embarked upon a smooth sea, tinted with the last of sunset.
Anne, going up the steep flight of stairs to the grey shingled house she called home, smiled at John.
"See that window?" she asked, pointing to the one looking west. "I'll wait up there until I see your ship come home."
They stood for a moment in the darkness of the room. "And as soon as we sight land, I'll start looking up here, Nikki, and it's the last thing I'll look at when I put out to sea."
The next morning Anne stood at the window, watching a puffy little tug escort the Star of Lapland to the bar, then stand by as the sails unfurled to catch the brisk morning wind. Long she stood there, until the last fluttering pennant had merged with the horizon mist, and then she turned to pick up the threads of living, frayed by John's departure.
"I know I'm a girl, but even a girl has some brains."
Anne sat on a wharf piling, curls tucked under a seaman's cap, slim figure boyish in blue slacks and high dark blue sweater.
"But, Nikki," George was protesting, "girls don't fish . . . it's well it isn't nice, you know, what I mean, no girl wants to go around smelling like a fish market."
"I wouldn't be a very big market smell. George," she insisted. "I only weigh a hundred and twenty."
"And the men swear something awful, sometimes."
"But they swear in Finnish, so erman." He paused and looked at the girl, who sat looking west, chin thrust forward and out.

"And we'd like to take care of you, Orvi and me."
Anne smiled at him. "I know you would. And I'd love to have you take care of me, but I have reasons for wanting to do this. George, won't you trust me?"
"Sure," began George dubiously, "but, gee, I wish John was here."
"So do I," agreed Anne lightly, and jumping up thrust out her hand. "Is it a bargain? Am I hired?"
"You knew you would be," grinned the big fellow sheepishly.
But having agreed to take Anne aboard the Nikki, as part of her crew, both George and Orvi set about making a fisherman of her. At first, determined to cure her of her peculiar intentions, they gave her work that taxed her strength, duties which had sickened girls who had made holiday trips with them.
Anne said nothing. She stood duty at the winch until she thought her back would break and her arms pop out of sockets. She learned to use a gaff without closing her eyes. She became acquainted with all the intricacies of the engine, and horrified Liisa by returning from the drift one night as oil smeared as any garage mechanic.
The fish were running; they poured into the Columbia. And the Sorki boys were happy. They would go a long way this summer toward paying off their debt. But there were others who were not contented, men who fished for the Farnsworth canneries.

"Sky's Limit" At Girls' School

Aviation Now Is Part Of Regular Curriculum

PAINESVILLE, O., Nov. 15. (AP)—Add flying to the curriculum of a girl's college and you have the latest thrill in the education of Miss 1935.

It's the newest course at Lake Erie college here and already has attracted more than 30 students and several members of the faculty.

Whether Lake Erie is the first woman's college to offer such a course is not known, but it is a fact that none is more popular.

Before beginning the course every student is required to present written permission from her parents. After that "the sky is the limit."

Flying Climaxes Course.

First on the program is a thorough study of ground-work—fundamentals of flying and instruction on weather conditions. This is followed by lectures by pilots and demonstrations of parachute jumping.

The actual flying is the climax. Every student has two hours in the air sharing the controls with the instructor, Philip A. Meinke, operator of a flying service in nearby Willoughby.

At present, Miss Suzanne Grant of Columbus, O., now ready for her third hour in the air, is one of the advanced students. From the faculty are Mss Rheta B. Edmundson of Newport, R. I., and Miss Dorothy R. Corcoran of Painesville.

The pretty coed flyers hail from all sections of the country with the city of Cleveland leading with nine enrolled in the class. They are Mary Belle and Vivian Armstrong, Joyce Schelley, Gretel Gerstenberger, Eugenia Flanders, Alice Nagy, Ruth Warren, Pauline Swaim and Janet Walther.

Among the others are Ruth McCracken, Shanghai, China; Mary Louise Miller, Columbus, O.; Nellie Marshall, Betty Ellett and Aileen Reed, all of Akron, O.; Betty Bachman, Sharon, Pa.; Elizabeth Dawson, Warren, Pa.; Allie Lou Hall, East Springfield, Pa.; Mary Louise McFarren, Northeast, Pa.

Human and Other Nature

By W. F. BRUCE

There are of course more uses of a college freshman than as instructors of their teachers; I mean as sources from which their teachers and continually learning something. There may be a few who will consciously instruct or at least offer suggestions to their elders. But most of their teaching is unconscious. Too many of them are not self-confident enough as to their own ability. But I count it one of the rewards of my profession to learn from my students.

Sometimes all innocently enough a student will give me a thought about some matter that I have been studying on for years and yet this idea simple as it seems after I get it has escaped my search. By the time one goes through a year with a group of students of all sorts of experience and from all sorts of environment he has acquired many new opinions and many new outlooks on life. Sometimes it is a revelation of human nature that presents just a little different phase from any that one has ever taken notice of before.

The returns from the teaching profession are meager enough anyway. Then one may be pardoned for taking from his work these intangible values that make life richer and livelier. Sometimes these returns are picked up from the most unexpected and unpromising sources. A boy or girl who has grown up away from the busy thoroughfares and is therefore more or less unsophisticated and whose mind is virgin soil for the planting of ideas and impulses if often a revelation even to himself when he once gets the

THE IMPORTANCE OF . . . VENTILATION

The warm air throughout the home during winter should be just as pure and contain just as much oxygen as the fresh, pure air of summer. Rooms that are poorly ventilated, even though sufficiently warm for comfort, can be injurious to health. Stale or stagnant air is depressing, and fails to produce the pleasant and stimulating effect of pure air in motion. . . . No matter what kind of fuel you use to heat your home during winter, it is important to have proper ventilation and circulation of pure air. This is especially important if the flame from the fuel comes in contact with the air you breathe. The reason is simple.

Fuel does not burn unless mixed with oxygen. Prove this to yourself by the simple test of dropping a lighted match into a bottle. Place your hand on top of the bottle and you will note that the match stick will NOT continue to burn after the oxygen inside the bottle has been used up by the burning fuel. Likewise, the oxygen content of the air inside your home is gradually reduced by the occupants of the household through the processes of breathing and by the fuel burning in your heating equipment.

Without proper ventilation the air becomes stale. Sooner or later the tender air passages of the body become inflamed, leaving them an easy prey to vicious attacks of "colds" and serious respiratory diseases. Guard your health this winter with proper ventilation as well as adequate heat in every room in your home.

Tune in each Thursday night at 6:30, WFAA-WBAP, for vital facts to help you guard your family against the Common Cold Germ.

Ex-Army Gridiron Chief, Approves Modern Tactics

By DILLON GRAHAM
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15. (AP)—Back around the turn of the century, when the tandem and tackle-back formations comprised football's chief offensive maneuvers, Ernest (Pot) Graves played four seasons at tackle on Army's eleven. He then coached for nearly two decades before quitting the game.

Now, as a retired colonel on special duty in the chief of engineers' office here, Graves puffs his pipe and chuckles as he recalls the old days and reads of the successes of the gridgers he coached at West Point, Harvard and Princeton.

He Wrote "Lineman's Bible" Many of his players earned fame as coaches and were among the hundreds of mentors who used Graves' manual of line play—"The Lineman's Bible" published in 1920. To this day, at West Point, they mention Graves as an example of perfection in positional technique. What he didn't know about line play wasn't worth knowing.

A big jovial fellow around 60, with white hair and eyebrows that speak a language of their own, Graves has seen the football cycle move through all the stages from the old days of push and pull down to the highly intricate game of today. His chief comment is that a player must be faster and more agile today and that he has more opportunity to use his intelligence.

Played the "Greats" His gridiron competition began in 1897 at the University of North Carolina, then picked up again in 1901 at the military academy. He played fullback at the southern school and tackle at army. It was during his West Point years that he faced such gridiron greats as Shelvin, Yale's great end, and Walter Eckersall, Chicago's brilliant quarterback, runner and kicker, and played alongside Charles Daly, perhaps Army's greatest quarterback, and Paul Bunker, an all-time Army tackle. Maj. Gen. Leon Kromer, now chief of cavalry, was his coach.

He recalls the 1903 game with Chicago, Army's first inter-sectional clash.

"Eckersall was running wild then, but Army was primed for him. We swarmed on him so closely he didn't have a chance to do any drop-kicking or running," he said, "that is, after he returned the opening kickoff 60 yards."

He coached at West Point in 1905-06, 1912-17 and 1919-20. Harvard used him as a line coach in 1907-08 and Princeton in 1921. Met Rockne-Dorais Pass Barrage It was while he was at West Point that Notre Dame came to the plains to uncork a forward passing barrage, with Gus Dorais pitching and Knute Rockne catching, that had Army groggy. Graves regards the 1916 West Point team as the best he ever coached—the outfit that had Elmer Oliphant and Gene Vidal, now chief of the commerce department's air service, in the backfield—and he classes Hamilton Fish, an all-America at Harvard and now representative from New York, as the best lineman he ever taught.

Among the Army players Graves coached who have made records as college coaches, are John McEwan of Oregon, Army and Holy Cross; Bob Neyland of Tennessee and Army; Ralph Sasse of Mississippi State and Army; "Biff" Jones of Army, Louisiana State and Oklahoma; and Paul Parker and Bill Britton of Tennessee.

Free Centennial Trips Possible by Thrift Stamps

Never before has so much been offered to the public as is now being offered by the Centennial Thrift Stamp campaign, is the report from El Mina Shrine Temple in Galveston, headquarters for the campaign being launched by the Shrine uniform bodies of Texas.

By merely asking for and saving Centennial Thrift stamps, every Texan may take absolutely free, a trip to any Centennial celebration in 1936. Such a trip may include either Greyhound bus or Bowen air line transportation, meals and hotel accommodations, Centennial admission tickets, gasoline and oil books for use of your own car, etc.

Of course, many persons will not be able to travel to one of the many Centennial celebrations. For these, hundreds of attractive and valuable articles may be had by saving Thrift stamps. Such articles as jewelry, watches, linens, luggage are included in this list, it was stated at headquarters.

This is one of the most unique and unusual projects ever to be conducted in Texas. The campaign is spreading throughout the state and will last for the next 18 months.

W. H. Schneider, well-known Shriner and a past potentate of El Mina Shrine Temple, Galveston, is the executive chairman of the Thrift Stamp committee. Mr. Schneider went on to explain that Centennial Thrift stamps were a series of 25 historical stamps, commemorating heroes and spots of the Texas revolution of 1836, such as Houston, Fannin, Austin, the Alamo, and so forth.

Entertains Friends at Forty-Two Party

Miss Marie Tune entertained a number of friends Wednesday evening with a forty-two party at her home on Fourth street. Yellow chrysanthemums were effectively used in decorating the room. Assorted candies were served throughout the evening.

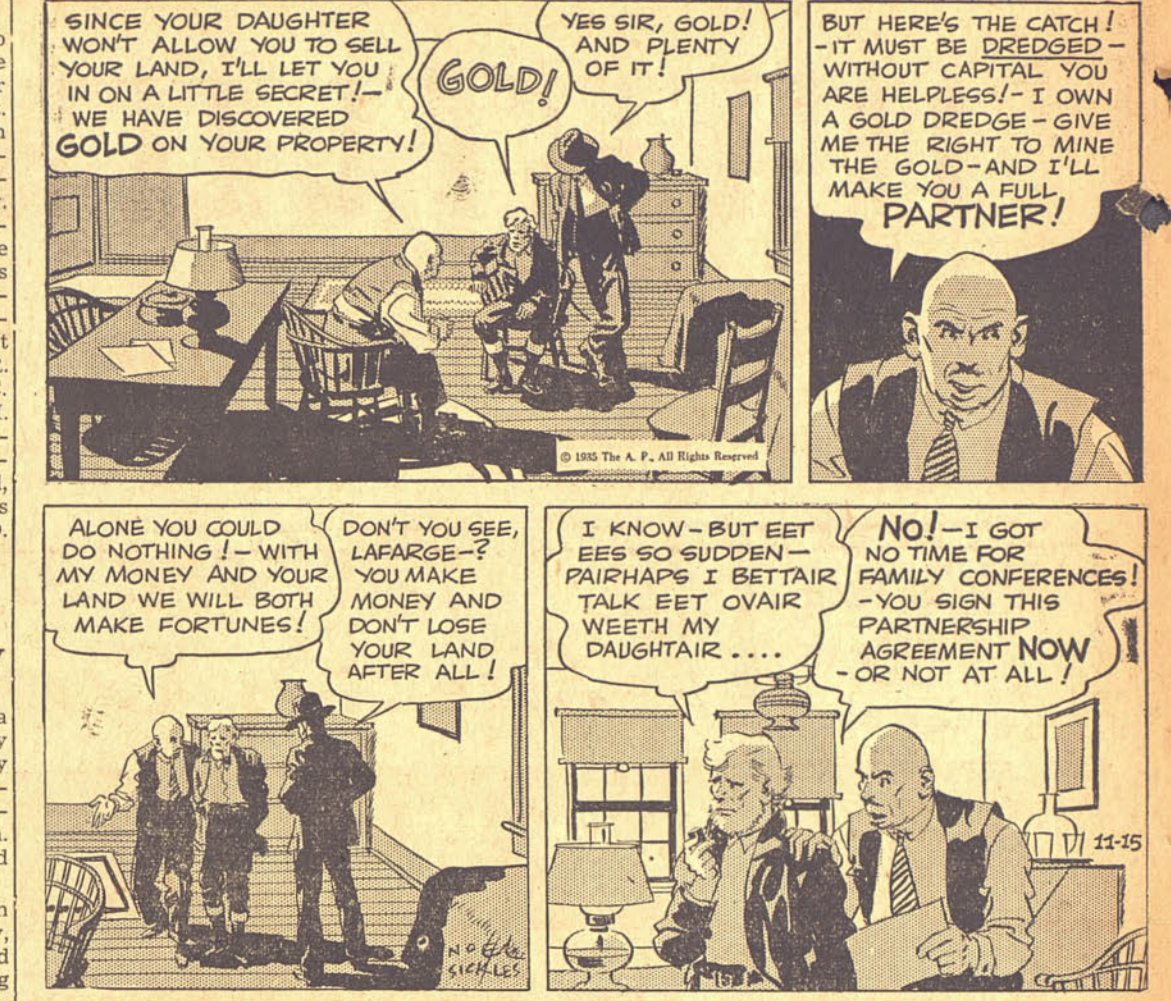

At the end of the games, high score prize, a box of stationery, was given to Marie Qualls, and the low prize, a box of dusting powder, was awarded Flora Bacon.

Miss Tune, assisted by her mother, Mrs. Clarence Tune, served refreshments of sandwiches, olives, potato chips, and tea to the guests. Plate favors were yellow chrysanthemums.
