Cisco Candidates Fare Badly in County Primary Voting

ALL LOSE TO OPPONENTS COUNT SHOWS

Cisco candidates, without exception, fared badly in the county democratic primary election Saturday. On the basis of unofficial returns not a single Cisco man, running for county or district office, got as far as the second primary to be held next month. The nearest that Cisco came to having a man left in the field was in the race for the 88th district court bench in which B. W. Patterson, formerly of Cisco and now of Eastland, received a small plurality over Frank Sparks and will contest with Sparks for the nomination in the second primary. Patterson got 2,545 votes and Sparks 2,478. J. D. Barker, Cisco, opposing those two was eliminated with 1,403 votes.

J. R. Burnett, Cisco, candidate for county judge likewise polled lowest of three candidates. Clyde L. Garrett, incumbent, came out of the primary with a comfortable majority over both Mr. Burnett and George Bryant and will be nominated without a run-off. Garrett, unofficial returns show, polled 3,249 votes; Burnett, 1,470, and Burnett, 1,293.

Sheriff's Race
In the sheriff's contest similar results occurred. Virge Foster, incumbent, was nominated with a majority over both his opponents. Foster, with an unofficial total of 3,856, received the third highest vote of any candidate for a county office. W. M. Miller, Cisco, was second in this race with 1,462 votes, and W. A. Hammett, Ranger, third with 1,425. Foster carried Eastland and Rising Star by big majorities over both his opponents, took a healthy plurality over Hammett in Ranger but lost Cisco where Miller was overwhelmingly favored.

P. L. Crossley polled the highest vote of any candidate for county office, defeating W. H. McDonald, district clerk, who was seeking re-election. 4,241 to 2,013.

T. L. Cooper, the tax collector, was returned to his office by the second largest vote accorded a county candidate. He defeated E. C. Satterwhite 3,860 to 2,773.

In the race for congress from the 17th district Joe H. Jones, Eastland county attorney, carried the county over Thomas L. Blanton, incumbent, Abilene, by 3,505 to 3,025.

Following are totals in the county races:

COX DEFENDS REFERENDUM REFUSAL ACT

Ed T. Cox, democratic county chairman, whose censure for failure to supply precinct chairman with prohibition referendum ballots was demanded in a resolution Saturday by the west Cisco democratic convention, today defended his action upon the ground that funds supplied by the candidates could not be legally used to pay the expenses of holding the referendum.
"Money paid by the candidates for holding an election under the law could not be legally used to pay the expenses of such a referendum," he declared. "The candidates pay the costs of holding an election and they did not authorize the costs of holding the prohibition referendum to be included in their assessments. Consequently their money cannot be taken legally to pay such expenses."
"For that reason I did not furnish the precinct chairman with the ballots. I could not legally do so."
The prohibition referendum was ordered by the state executive committee which paid the cost of printing the ballots. Each county was to pay the cost of counting them. The referendum was on a separate ballot to obviate the possibility of the legality of the primary being attacked.

NEW FACTORS FAVORABLE TO OIL INDUSTRY

AUSTIN, July 25.—The outstanding factors affecting the oil business during the summer, according to the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research, are operations of the new tariff to decrease importation, a continued decline in oil production in the mid-continent, in spite of a marked increase in drilling activity, gain in number of new well completions, and an increase in gasoline stocks due to unexpected low midsummer demand for refined products.
"Imports of oil into the United States for the week ending July 2, the first week after the tariff became effective, were down about 50 per cent, and gasoline decreased 100 per cent," the Bureau's report said. "It is too soon, however, to predict what effect this change will have on the mid-continent oil situation, because without doubt more oil will be shipped by tankers from California to make up for the lack of oil from Venezuela. Stocks of crude in California are on the increase, and a broader market is badly needed. Daily production July 1 for the first time since September, 1931, dropped below 2,100,000. One year ago the daily production was 2,450,000. The increase in productive wells in the mid-continent field during the first quarter of the year and continuing during the summer has amounted to 55 per cent. However, more than half the new wells have been drilled in East Texas, so that the new production gained by the completions has been more than offset by the decline in the oil fields since production in East Texas continues to be held down by proration rules to 333,000 barrels.
Revision Sought.
"In connection with the proration rules there is evidence of increasing agitation on the part of independent companies for a revision upward of the allowable production per well. This feeling is engendered partly because of allowed increases in Oklahoma and because Van oil field, controlled by a few large companies is permitted to produce 100,000 barrels or about 200 barrels per well, whereas East Texas was reduced to 46 barrels per well on July 16. The operators point out correctly that production in the rest of the state is not being controlled so well as in the big field.
"American Petroleum Institute figures on refinery operations for the first week in July showed a decrease of 47,000 barrels in the total crude consumed. At the same time there was an increase of 275,000 barrels in stocks of gasoline at refineries, but this increase is not regarded as serious in view of the fact that mid-continent refiners have curtailed runs to stills by an average of more than 50,000 barrels since June 15, and it is thought that

DEAD MAN IS NOMINATED FOR DISTRICT CLERK

CLEBURNE, July 25.—A dead man had been elected district clerk here, election returns revealed today.
Voters in Saturday's primary gave A. C. Womack, who dropped dead of heart attack after making his closing campaign speech Friday night, a majority over his only opponent, W. S. Carper. Some voters wrote in the name of Womack's widow on the ballot.
As far as was ascertainable Womack's election is without precedent in Texas.

TWO ARRESTED ON AUTOMOBILE THEFT CHARGES

Two men, charged with car theft, were arrested in Cisco Saturday afternoon by Chief of Police Daniels and Policeman Gustafson and turned over to county authorities. Complaints were filed against Jack Brown and J. W. Adams in justice court here in connection with the theft of a car from the Rev. Newton Baldere, which was later recovered. Adams lives at Dothan and Brown about five miles south of Cisco.
They were taken to Eastland to await action by the grand jury.
Officers had been seeking the two men in connection with the theft for some time.

STOLEN CAR RECOVERED.
A Chevrolet coupe, 1928 model, stolen from Oscar Schaefer Saturday night, was recovered this morning by Constable R. L. Wilson in the brush near the Eastland highway in East Cisco. The car was undamaged except for a flat tire.

News' Thankful For Help

The Daily News is indebted to Quincey Lee, Jewel Poe, T. C. Williams and a number of others who assisted in gathering and announcing returns to the crowd which gathered in front of the News' building Saturday night. Hundreds of citizens remained until midnight to hear the returns.
Due to the great length of the ballot the returns were slow but the News was able to furnish all the information available from the county and the state at that hour.
Second primary returns will be much quicker collected because the ballot will be only a fraction as long as the first.

BOND MARKET RISE BUOYS STOCK PRICES

In its weekly review of business and financial conditions The Wall Street Journal says:
The stock market was dominated by many factors during the past week and perhaps the most notable was the steady advance of fixed interest bearing securities. The bond market has long since been the cue to the stock market and the rising tendency in the former easily made for a better sentiment in the stock market.
Foreign affairs came to the fore during the week following the all important Lausanne agreement and the German dictatorship. Wall Street was pleased with the group of German business and economic interests in power in Prussia and apparently holds the reins of power in the greater part of Germany for peace and trade development.
The Interstate Commerce Commission's decision in the four-party rail grouping in the East also pleased the Street as much as it succeeded the original plans of the I. C. C. and indicated that that body was moving to help the railroads in a liberal manner in keeping with the times.
It has become apparent that sentiment in the Street has gotten away from the anticipated poor six months' statements making their appearance and have even discounted further dividend cuts in pivotal securities. Stockholders' lists indicate there has been a steady purchase of leading securities in small old lots throughout the country for investment purposes and that these stocks have been bought more with an eye to the return of prosperity than to immediate profits.
Stock prices advanced during the week in practically every department. The improved oil statements brought about substantial advances in these securities.
The volume of trading improved with the rise in shares, some stocks advancing to the highest prices on the current move, and as the week closed.
Steel operations held at 16 per cent during the past week, unchanged from the preceding week. The extremely low operations now prevailing and the fact that some upturn usually takes place in the fall ordinarily would justify predictions that the "bottom" had been reached. However, two of the outstanding leaders in the steel industry in the past week were inclined to be restrained in their comments on the prospects for business, realizing that the basis for optimism exists more in the hope than in any impartial survey of the situation.
The week's range of the Dow-Jones averages follows:
30 Industrials—High $47.69; low $43.79; close $47.69.
20 Railroads—High $17.49; low $15.05; close $17.49.
20 Utilities—High $18.98; low $17.65; close $18.98.
40 Bonds—High $72.97; low $71.37; close $72.97.

Former Cisco Boy Breaks Arm in Fall

Fred Mitcham, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. P. Mitcham of Dallas, formerly of Cisco, is in a Dallas hospital recovering from injuries to his arm received when he fell from an acting bar. His arm was broken in two places, necessitating confinement in the hospital for two weeks.

Penney Gets Big Results From Ad

Mit Williams, manager of the local J. C. Penney company, thinks that prosperity must be returning to Cisco if not to the whole country. His double page ad in The Daily News and American and Roundup (weekly) Thursday, heralding the big 49 cent Gold Nugget event, brought them the biggest day Saturday that the store has had since Christmas eve. "More people," said Mr. Williams, "visited our store Saturday than had come so since last Christmas eve and the sales were likewise greater than at any time since the big holiday trade." We are mighty well satisfied with the result.

Elser Cast First Vote in West Cisco

Max Elser, Sr., had the distinction of casting the first vote in Saturday's democratic primary in the West Cisco box.
J. M. Williamson cast the second ballot at that box.
Henderson—Atlantic Oil Producing Co. purchased Mills Bennett leases on W. J. Bright well farm of 188 acres including 10 completed wells in Rusk county, for reported consideration of about $400,000.

Supt. of Instruction: Shaver, 280,228; Wood, 277,785.
Railroad Comm'r (six years): Patterson 83,403; Satterwhite 143,887; Tennant, 103,190; Terrell, 228,340.
R. R. Comm'r (four years): Culbertson 103,710; DeWare 54,159; Hatcher, 149,628; Murphy 91,871; Thompson, 153,219.
Supreme court: Hickman 180,392; Pierson, 218,955; Spear, 127,187.
Congress Place No. 1: Adams 31,549; Cox 41,361; Darden 26,162; Hood 32,960; Parrish 58,447; Senter 24,886; Terrell 87,311; Westbrook, 40,823; Williams, 51,525.
Congress Place 2: Bailey, 122,325; Davis, 72,683; Downs, 33,150; Hawkins, 26,719; Holcombe, 73,918; Sartain, 37,865; Warner, 36,972.
Congress Place 3: Boggs-Scott, 29,666; Burkett, 56,788; Harigel 28,798; Hyer, 41,615; King, 22,820; Lea, 25,975; McGregor, 58,781; Real, 21,307; Strong, 101,682.
Congress, 17th district, returns from 19 counties two complete: Blanton, 20,368; Jones 18,580.

THREE FAMOUS NAMES BACK

DALLAS, July 25.—Returns of the Texas democratic primary election today swept three famous names, Mrs. Miriam Ferguson, Joe Bailey and J. H. (Cyclone) Davis back into the limelight.
Mrs. Ferguson, only woman ever to be governor of Texas and famous as a canner of peaches and pardoner of convicts, with 277,627 votes, was far ahead in the race for the gubernatorial nomination on the 12 noon bulletin of the Texas Election Bureau which represented for 655,370 votes. Gov. Ross Sterling was second with 208,213 votes and will oppose Mrs. Ferguson in a run-off since she failed to attain a majority.
Tom Hunter had 144,253 votes and 25,277 were divided among five other candidates.
The returns were from 230 of the 254 counties in the state with 30 complete.

Submission Issue

The bulletin gave the proposal to resubmit the 18th amendment 243,783 votes with 94,016 against. At least 78 counties, however, failed to take the referendum, because of expense or other reasons, and Dr. Atchicus Webb, state Anti-Saloon League superintendent, charged the pool was not representative.
Joe Bailey, Jr., son of the late senator who was a famous figure at Washington for many years, seeking his first office embarked auspiciously on a political career by polling the most votes of 28 candidates seeking three congress-at-large seats given Texas by the last census. Running on a repeal platform he polled 121,291 votes, but faces a run-off either with Oscar Holcombe, former Houston mayor, or Cyclone Davis.
The 12 noon bulletin gave Holcombe 73,180 and the 79-year-old Davis 71,862. Only three of the other eight candidates seeking the particular nomination polled as many as 30,000 votes.

WICHITA FALLS, July 25.—Tom Hunter, third in the democratic primary Saturday, today indicated he would take no part in the run-off between Gov. Ross Sterling and Mrs. Miriam Ferguson.

AND HOOVER SIGNED THE RELIEF ACT.

President Hoover signed into law the federal relief plan that amasses $3,800,000,000 in one coffer for invigorating business, increasing employment, and "relieving human destitution." A reminder that $120,000,000 will be available for advances to states under the federal aid highway law. A reminder that $186,000,000 is available for public buildings and waterway improvements "when the condition of the treasury permits." A reminder that federal reserve banks may discount eligible paper for individuals and corporations. A reminder that all reports of all reconstruction loans must be filed with congress monthly. A reminder that there will be an apportionment of the $300,000,000 fund for direct advances to states as loans "to provide food and shelter for those who need food and shelter the coming fall and winter."

Also, a reminder that Eugene Meyer, governor of the federal reserve system, and Paul Bestor, farm loan commissioner, automatically are removed from the reconstruction board. Gen. Charles G. Dawes removed himself from the position of president of the reconstruction board. He had a hurry-up call from Chicago where he had large banking interests. Then the so-called wise cacklers of the Eastern press, including Washington, declared that Dawes moved out because he would not take orders from Meyer. It was all guesswork. He moved out because one of the greatest banks of America needed $80,000,000 to guard the interests of its clients and protect the deposits of thousands who had placed their savings in its vaults. Dawes obtained the $80,000,000 from the Reconstruction corporation and four great banks and he placed his huge financial concern on a Rock of Gibraltar solidity.

This federal relief bill contains all the provisions of the original Garner bill with one item deleted. Eastern newspapers and publicity correspondents who know their financial onions and where to get them are branding Garner as "a radical." Why not Hoover? Didn't he sign the bill? Isn't it a law? Hasn't he declared that it is a "gigantic federal relief plan that amasses $3,800,000,000 in one coffer for invigorating business, increasing employment, and relieving human destitution?" There is a way to guard against human destitution: "provide jobs with wage attached for idle men and women who would scorn a dole, and are ever ready to give of their best to provide bread and shelter and all the other necessities of life for their loved ones."

OIL PRORATION UPHELD.

It is a cardinal tenet of the Jeffersonian faith that the people are the source of all power. Well, there is a high court decision to the effect that the people have something to say when it comes to the conservation of resources and the stabilizing of important industries in this commonwealth. Federal Judge Randolph Bryant handed down the opinion of a special three-judge federal court, denying the petition of oil operators for a temporary restraining order to prevent the Texas railroad commission from enforcing orders concerning allowable production of oil. This opinion resulted from a conference May 30 at Houston at which Judge Bryant considered the case with Federal Judge Hutchinson of the appeals court at Houston and Judge William I. Grubb of Birmingham, Ala.

In addition a temporary restraining order sought by a number of oil producers to restrain the state authorities from enforcing proration in the East Texas oil fields was denied pending appeal to the supreme court. All this is a reminder that the Texas supreme court has granted a writ of error in the case of Danciger Oil and Refining company against the Texas railroad commission, the suit involving the right of the railroad commission to prorate oil production. Danciger was successful in his suit in the district court but the court of civil appeals held in favor of the state. The opinion of the court of civil appeals stated that economic factors could be considered by the commission in promulgating its orders. Now, the supreme court agreed to review the case. Governor Sterling by declaring martial law in the East Texas oil fields stabilized the industry, sent the price of oil from eight cents per barrel to 90 cents, and made a record for the state and the industry that should receive the approval of all right thinking men and women.

SIX SOUTH AMERICAN NATIONS FACING WAR.

Six Latin nations threaten the peace of the South American world. According to a correspondent public tension is acute and it ranges all the way from international dispute to armed civil warfare. It must be conceded that the appalling losses caused by the World war did not make the Eastern or the Western world safe for democracy. All these South American nations have republican form of government, but in many military chieftains are the dictatorial rulers and the machine gun is more powerful than a prince of peace appeal to the spiritual side of the warring brothers. Under the flags of many nations the voters shoot it out after the election. In this, the republic of Washington, they talk and they vote it out. No, democracy is not a failure in the U. S. A.

A YEAR OF TUMBLING OF FEDERAL TAX RECEIPTS.

Washington reports a decrease of $870,499,711 in taxes collected by the government in the 1932 fiscal year ending June 30. There will be another new tax bill next year. It will be enacted by the congress. There are indications everywhere the country over that a general sales tax may be given a tryout. Well, a general sales tax would have its advantages. Like the dews of Heaven it would touch all alike. Those who buy little would pay little. Those who buy largely would pay largely. Moreover, all men and women under the flag who are able to pay their small quota should be willing to pay.

WILL O' THE WISP

The Government Takes Steps to Get Out of Business

TEXAS TOPICS

By RAYMOND BROOKS
AUSTIN, July 25. — Because of the Texas community property provision in the constitution, and the derivation of its statute law from Spanish sources, rather than from the English common law, Texas will have a good argument for putting one of the 12 — eight to 12 — federal home loan banks in a district limited to Texas only.

The law creating the home loan system and providing for the banks, directs that the location shall be, not so much on area or volume of business, as upon unity of the laws and homogeneity of the business practices of the member institutions. The members are the building and loan associations, savings banks and insurance companies.

Efforts will be made to have Texas declared one of the districts, as was the case when the farm loan bank system was created and for the same reasons.

An added reason is that in Texas all the building and loan and all the insurance companies are supervised by the state and are required to make reports and to use forms of identical kinds in each of the separate fields of business. These do not correspond to the regulations in other states.

Texas insurance companies undoubtedly will find the safe investments available through rediscunt of the paper in the Home Loan Bank an answer to the demand of outside companies for the repeal of the Robertson insurance law, requiring investment of three-fourths the reserve on Texas business of life insurance companies to be in Texas securities.

Chmn. W. R. Ely of the Texas highway commission pointed out that the election of the Ferguson would have meant, with their platform to take two-thirds the state highway fund and divert it to education — already financed — and to the general revenue, that none of the needed highway construction projects awaiting work could have been built for two years or longer.

Even the projects on which plans have been completed, and which are needed to close unpaved gaps, would have had to wait.

Texas would have had to close its $5,000,000 federal road aid, because it couldn't have matched it.

The Ferguson once before — the only time they were in power since there has been federal highway aid in the present form — lost that aid to Texas by reason of the unsatisfactory condition of the highway fund.

Until this year, former Gov. Jim Ferguson's personality has overshadowed the issues of his political campaign; but this year, he has stayed in the background and left the issues to stand — or rather to let the names and labels predominate over his individuality.

The Texas capitol, coveted goal of half a hundred candidates out of state offices, has been the one deserted place during the final week of the first primary campaign.

With that election out of the way the present occupants of offices will hurry back to catch up work undone; then a few of them will start out again for the short, sharp, two-man races for the nomination where the run-offs are required.

Election year always takes about two months out of the effective operation of the elective offices. This is true whatever set of individuals is in office. This year's campaign was the shortest in history. Thanks to the rigors of the governor's race and the congressional races, it has been one of the most intensive and vigorous, while it lasted.

Daily News and American and Roundup want ads are a good investment — Phone 80.

SOUND BASIS IS BEING LAID FOR RECOVERY

AUSTIN, July 25. — Great progress has been made in the last few weeks toward laying a sound basis for business recovery the world over, according to the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research. "Only extreme pessimism and disappointment engendered by three years of depression, combined with normal midsummer lethargy, could have developed a public psychology so utterly obvious of the constructive developments which have been taking place," the Bureau's report said.

"Reparations, which for nearly a decade and a half have stood as a dark cloud over Europe, obstructing normal economic relations, between nations and constantly threatening even worse developments, are now definitely a matter of history. It is unfortunate, but not vital, that the great achievement at Lausanne should be marred by the dust which has been raised over the connection between the reparations agreement and the war debts. The United States still has to accept the inevitable, but with the countries of Europe in their present frame of mind and manifestly anxious to find a way for joining this country in a program of arms reduction, a similar compromise on our war claims is sure to follow.

Many Hurdles. "Many hurdles remain to be crossed and some major explosion may force further delay, but the month of July started with every indication that the worst confusion that has ever hit the business exchanges of the world has settled toward a place where common sense meeting of men's minds will gradually shape the series of compromises which the nations of the world will have to make.

"Further reassurance of progress toward normal international relations is found in the strong position of leadership which Great Britain is again assuming in world affairs. To her, largely, belongs credit for breaking the impasse at Lausanne and her growing strength at home is indicated by the recent refunding of the national debt from a 5 per cent to a 3 1-2 per cent basis, thus saving $150,000,000 interest charges annually on her national debt. Also the Imperial Economic Conference at Ottawa which began July 18 has tremendous possibilities for the promotion of world economic stability. Thus, world financial leadership, which was virtually thrust upon New York after the war may now be slipping back to London because American financiers have proved themselves incapable of measuring up to the responsibilities involved.

"Congress has adjourned. Much of the legislation it enacted is constructive and in time will contribute toward business improvement. The

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer
WASHINGTON — You can get rid of Congress for awhile, but there are congressional investigations in progress all the year around. The congressional investigation is one of our most valuable institutions, which is one reason why it is so badly abused.

A couple of dozen of them either are about to begin or are still in progress. Some of the holdovers seem to have been little more than mere excuses for junkets, but the present Congress has been very cautious about that sort of thing and between caution and campaign work there won't be much of it this summer.

One is that about to be conducted into the loans of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation by a committee of five senators headed by Senator James Couzens of Michigan. The R. F. C. has been instructed to submit full information about all its loans.

"Bail Out Bankers"
THE R. F. C. investigation, however, is not expected to be either elaborate or sensational.

The Senate didn't even appropriate any money for expenses. What has been biting the upper house particularly has been the recent reported loan of $80,000,000 to Charles G. Dawes' Central Republic Bank & Trust Company of Chicago, and the Missouri Pacific railroad loan, of which $7,000,000, according to a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, was used to "bail out the bankers."

The House, free from administration control and in the hands of the Democrats, has been getting in a few investigatory licks of its own. It will work with the Senate in a joint inquiry into the procedure of the income tax division, fulfilling a long-time hope of both Couzens and Speaker John N. Garner, who have persistently charged irregularities in the Treasury's handling of tax refunds and other matters.

Two Campaign Probes

EACH branch will have its own committee investigating campaign expenditures, with most fireworks, if any, provided by the Senate group headed by R. B. Howell of Nebraska. The senators have $25,000 with which to investigate, the representatives only $10,000. No large slush funds are likely to be uncovered, as in some former years.

The Senate investigation of the Federal Farm Board has begun at last, with McNary of Oregon and Norris of Nebraska in charge. The committee in charge of that, which will give special attention to marketing operations and the question how the board may best be utilized if continued, expects to make a report in December when Congress meets again.

Inquiry into the stock market, which brought some sensational revelations of "rigging" three or four months ago, has largely been completed and Chairman Norbeck of the Senate committee on banking and currency is now trying to get any relevant evidence he can from the Treasury, the Internal Revenue Bureau and the Federal Trade Commission. This committee also expects to propose remedial legislation at the next session.

List is Limited

OTHER investigations ordered by the present Senate include those of air and ocean mail contracts, the prices of wheat, meat and sugar and the effect of deflation of foreign currency values on American imports. Department of Justice operations in Cleveland and rents in the District of Columbia.

The House will investigate holding companies, federal competition with private business, postoffice construction projects, overlapping federal, state and municipal taxation and the silver situation.

benefits may be delayed for several months, however, on account of the activities usually associated with a national election which this year may be magnified because of the present abnormal economic situation.

Show Strength.

"Certain commodity prices have shown considerable strength during the past few weeks. Especially is this true of livestock, sugar, and to a lesser extent rubber. Cold storage stocks of a number of other farm products, including butter, cheese, eggs, and poultry are considerably below the July 1 five-year average and should demand be fairly well maintained during the next few months, strengthening of prices in these commodities too may be expected.

"While the past month has been notable for constructive developments of a basic character, it is not to be expected that there will be a sudden revival in either securities or in trade. The difficulties yet to be met are numerous and complex and the earnings statements coming in for the second quarter are not calculated to dissipate the gloom. Moreover, with the present low ebb of industry and trade, largely seasonal in character, earnings promise to continue low for several weeks more in spite of the drastic economies which have been introduced in all lines of industry."

PARIS STYLES

By MARY KNIGHT

PARIS, July 25. — Just a bit of Grand Prix gossip for you fresh from the race track — fashion gossip, that is — that will give you a real idea about what is being worn in the heart of styledom.

The season's trend as shown by certain notables in both French and American society is always a pretty safe bet. Madame Jacques Balsan, for instance, was gowned in navy blue with a feather boa and large hat of the same color. Madame Martinez de Hoz, who is always a synosure at equine events, wore a peach colored dress and a large velvet hat of the selfsame shade. The Baronne de Villers' Terrage wore blue and white with a large white hat trimmed in blue. The Countess de Viel-Castel chose salmon color for her hat and a dress of flowered crepe de Chine with salmon predominating. The Marquise de Llano, who had a horse in the Prix du Jockey club, wore red and white with a large red hat, while the Princess de Faucigny-Lucinge wore blue printed chiffon with a plain blue coat and hat.

CHAPTER I
The alarm whirred — as alarms, carefully set and wound have a way of doing — whirred and strangled through the dark with street flat, reverberated in the arway, punctuated by a slamming of windows and the sound of voices.

"Aw, turn that alarm off, will ya?"

"Hey, you Moran!"

"It's the real deal. Bud don't get up this early!"

Seven-thirty... And Mona (nee Minnie) Moran stirred, nestled cozily for a moment, then after a slender arm from the coverlet and snapped off the shrill noise. She turned over again, placed a palm beneath her cheek and closed her eyes.

Mona long ago had decided that the last half hour of sleep caught this way — stolen really from the workaday world — was the most delicious. Thirty more drowsy minutes to reflect on this and that or to forget it all in the relaxation of another nap.

Mona had problems. What girl as young and lovely as Mona does not have — even when she is not, as Mona assuredly was — the support of her family? There were five in that family, counting Dad in the hospital and Bud, the elder brother, away from home when he had a job and back home when broke.

Seven-thirty. Seven-fifty. Seven-fifty-five.

Then as if another alarm had sounded, Mona stirred again. She patted a dainty yawn with the back of her rosepetal hand, glanced at the sleeping Kitty beside her — Kitty's slim little girlishness occupying more than half the narrow bed — and took indifferent stock of herself in the mirror. She had become used to the pleasant report that mirror gave.

There were those who wondered why, with such a figure, such creamy skin, such gray-green eyes and miraculous bronze hair, Mona had not followed her first job as errand girl and later model at Pilgrim's with a stage affiliation.

It was true that Mona had had several such offers but she had rejected them all. To marry a stage electrician (more chorus girls did, you know, than landed millionaires — had no part in Mona Moran's plans.

So she had taken a job as receptionist for the exclusive law firm of Garretson, Lawton and Amesbury. "I see people here," Mona confided to her friend, Lottie Carr. "I get to know them without parading half dressed behind the footlights. I learn to walk, to talk, to dress and how to act."

Lottie, tall, blond and languorous, was a model at Pilgrim's.

"That Carr girl is no better than she should be," Ma would declare after one of Lottie's visits to the Moran home. "Perfume, $20 an ounce! Handkerchiefs $22 a dozen or I'm a liar. No good working girl."

"Oh, she's all right, Mother!" Mona would protest. "It's just that — that Lottie —" She would break off here for Mona could hardly finish as she had intended. "It's just that Lottie has no family to support," Ma would be hurt — and rightly — at that. "Well," Ma would weaken, "I don't want that girl calling up the house. I don't want you going out with her. My daughters are good girls!"

Mona was, and indeed, for that matter, so was Lottie. Mrs. Moran might have had the useful support of many rebuffed young men as to that.

Lottie, frivolous, gay, attractive in the costumes, her position as model afforded her, would beg Mona to join her on frequent parties with that collection of young clubmen to whom Lottie referred as "the gang."

"Sometimes, Lottie. But don't count on me for many of these affairs. I need my sleep. I have to work."

"Go to bed and never meet any nice people!" Lottie amended here. "You might get yourself a husband thing Bud did. His activities worried Mona was furtive mysterious. Never a day passed that Mona quite escaped that nameless worry over her brother. She saw vague disgrace in the offering.

There was orange juice for breakfast, scrambled eggs and golden toast liberally buttered. The delicious scent of coffee had been filling the halls for half an hour. Ma poured a steaming cup and set it beside Mona's plate.

In a clean print house gown, Mrs. Moran was taking her comfortable way between table and stove, chatting busily, neither waiting for nor expecting response. She announced that Kitty's marks at school were better this month. "You see, Min, what a little interest in them teachers does for a child?"

For Ma, swathed in her best black had bustled over to have a talk with Kitty's principal.

Mona smiled. She knew that most likely Miss Preston, with hundreds of children to deal with, did not know Kitty Moran by sight.

Mrs. Callahan had new linoleum for the kitchen. About time Joe did something for his mother except bring his girl in for dinner every Sunday. The Donahue twins were leaving. The Caseys were going to have one of them new French telephones.

If Min would leave her silk underwear cut on a chair Ma would rub it out and press it. There was no sense to Min's tring herself out at night after work.

"It's your day to visit your father anyway," Ma observed somewhat unnecessarily. Mona was as likely to forget to go to the office as to the hospital on visiting night.

"Tell him I'll be over Sunday," Ma went on. She always said that. "I'll post him a chicken. Kitty can go up to Alice's."

As Ma always cooked something for her husband, and as Kitty always spent Sunday with Alice, this required no particular response. Alice was Mona's elder sister, married these two years and much against Ma's wishes. However, after the deed had been done Ma was the first to give Alice her support.

Most of the baby's finery had been bought by Ma from dimes and quarters saved painstakingly out of the housekeeping money. Mona suspected that Ma's movie money found its way into the same fund.

It had been Alice's rather unfortunate marriage which had set Mona against marrying a poor man. Her sister, once so smart-looking skipping off to work every morning so proud of her ability to help with the family expenses, was now, after two years of married life, a changed being.

Dressed sloppily in house dresses her hair straggling about her neck, her face guileless of color and her skin unpowdered, Alice struggled half-heartedly through her day's work in a badly furnished, rather malodorous little flat.

There were always, no matter at what time of day one might call, dishes soaking in the sink, babies' clothes draping the radiator, something stewing on the stove and a broom to be stumped over in the dark hallway.

The baby was always ailing, always whimpering in apologetic little means. Jim, the rather disillusioned young husband, usually sought a pool room after the casual, badly-cooked meal Alice would set out for him. Mona could hardly blame him.

It was amazing that this drab, uninteresting, unkempt little creature could be the gay, chic Alice who had gone off so confidently to marry Jim.

Whose fault was it that their marriage had turned out so badly? No-baby's probably. Just the pressure of circumstances.

"Where'd you get the orange juice?" remarked Bud. It was an unprecedented extravagance in the Moran household.

Minnie's beau had brought her home from a party in Brooklyn, Ma explained. "Anc this is what he stole away with one of them maids at Washington Place. A crate of oranges, mind you! Drinking, I'll bet. Anyhow better than a lot of orchids!"

She pronounced the word "orchards." Ma had met that exotic flower only in print.

"No," Mona said. "Mr. Hart stopped to talk to one of the marketmen in Washington street, Mother. You know they get there late at night and wait until morning when the hotel people buy. Well, then Mr. Hart wanted to buy something, too. The crate was right there and he couldn't take it home very well to his club so he gave it to me. He knows we have a large family."

Mona laughed slightly. Cliff Hart was a friend of Lottie's. Rather a good sort, too. Lots of money funny rosy eyes twinkling gray-blue.

This rather dashing young man in a humorous frame of mind, had insisted on driving Mona home via Brooklyn bridge. The party had been in 71st street.

"Yeah, he did it for the family!" Bud began derisively.

"Children," Ma softly interposed. She filled Bud's plate with crisp bacon and carefully browned potatoes.

"Eat a real meal now, Min. I declare, you're as skinny as a rail."

"And," Bud rapped out, "it ain't so stylish!"

Kitty appeared, cozy in her blue bathrobe, her hair tousled and face flushed from sleep, demanding her orange juice. She moved kitchenward with a backward glance over the lifted rim of her glass and at once engaged in conversation with Ma concerning a talk at school on the subject of vitamins.

"You are early, Bud," Mona remarked with lowered voice. "Everything all right?"

Bud's eyes shifted and he looked at his sister unceasingly. "Yeah."

There was a pause. Mona knew what that meant.

"It's no Fordham way. I'll need carfare, Min."

"Bud, I've got 50 cents to last until

Ma remarked, "Rus was lucky to get her. I well remember the day..." Her voice in a rush of reminiscence floated back from an increasing distance. She was in the kitchen getting her purse.

"Wasn't she the girl whose mother wanted a baby with curly hair?" asked Mona amusedly.

"Like yours and Alice's."

"Like ours. And didn't her mother sew bought curls in her bonnet so people seeing her in her carriage—" "Blond curls and the baby's own hair black as the ace of spades," her mother amended. "That was Gertie. But for all that she grew up to be good-looking, curls or no curls."

"She doesn't wear false hair now," Bud remarked defensively. Rus Webber was a good guy. If he married a straight-haired dame then straight hair was the ticket. Bud would hear nothing that sounded like a reflection on Rus or his bride.

"What is your new job—a garage job?" Mona asked as Ma disappeared with the coffee pot.

Bud shifted. "Yeah. Something like that. It may be night work. I've got to show up this morning, anyhow."

His eyes, avoiding hers, attached themselves to a spot on the table cloth. He drank his coffee moodily.

Mona rose, put her chair back in its place, picked up her coat slid into it, and locked up her purse and gloves. She was at the door when Bud called suddenly.

"Guess who I saw yesterday, Min?" He was regarding her shrewdly as if his news was of great import. A smile hovered over his lips. He rose from his chair.

"I haven't the least idea, Bud. I don't know your friends."

"Your friend, Min." He came a step or two nearer.

She was frankly puzzled. Their social activities were as far apart as the poles. "A friend of mine?"

"I'll say a friend of yours, Min." Bud's voice dropped insinuatingly. He took a step nearer his sister.

"Well?"

Already she knew what Bud was tonight. There is carfare there is lunch and a shine."

"Make one of your swell friends buy your lunch."

"The girls tie tightened. "I don't do that, Bud."

"Well, they buy you dinner—" "That's different. I'm out of the office then. And I don't dine with anyone I've met through the office."

It was one of Mona's unbreakable rules. She had heard Mr. Garretson thus instruct a younger lawyer. "Never play round with an employee or a client."

There were plenty of others to show Mona attentions. Yes, but they didn't invite her to lunch.

"I'll give you 15 cents and that's that," Ma announced after an unsatisfactory inspection of her purse. "You must have something with you. You have cigarettes—"

"There's a quarter on the shelf Bud can take," Ma called in quickly. "I have ice, and milk and there's fruit—"

"Don't give him any money, Ma," threw in Kitty unexpectedly. "Make him walk to Fordham. Do him good. Or—perly—get that girl of his to give him a lift in her car."

The conversation at the table ceased abruptly.

"Who says I've got a girl with a car?" Bud inquired in surprise.

"I say so," Kitty appeared in the doorway, conscious of the backing of her mother who had followed her in innocent interest and stood close at hand. "I say so and so does Isabel Flynn. We saw you yesterday at the corner."

"Oh," Bud's face lost all interest. He attacked the food on his plate with renewed energy. "That was Rus Webber's wife. Rus was buying a package of cigarettes. My girl."

"A fine girl Gertie Webber is, too,"

THANKS VOTERS

To the Voters of Commissioners Precinct No. 4, Eastland county, Tex. In the primary Saturday I received the highest number of votes cast for any candidate for county commissioner. For this I am deeply grateful to the voters of the precinct and especially thank my loyal friends who gave so generously of their time and efforts in my interest.

On the face of unofficial returns there will be a runoff between me and Mr. Britain. With the same loyal support from my friends, accorded me in the first primary, I believe I will win this race.

If I am elected I pledge to the voters of this precinct my full time and best efforts to the end that the affairs of the county may be administered in the best way possible and in the interest of all the people.

Again thanking you and soliciting your support in the second primary, I am,

Sincerely,
ARCH BINT. —Adv.

prices will hold. Most encouraging of all are the figures of the United States Bureau of Mines issued for May, which indicate a very favorable balance between supply and demand factors. The barometer accompanying the report shows the weighed index of supply to be 97.4, whereas the weighed index of demand stood at 97.1.

"New discoveries in undeveloped areas and new developments in old fields were notably meagre. Perhaps it is the midsummer heat, but it is also a fact that new pools are becoming rarer. Two extensions to the producing area were recorded in northern Duval county, a wildcat well drilled by Concord Oil company Oil company in Colorado county encountered gas, and Texas and Pacific Coal and Oil company completed the largest well yet drilled in southern Ward county, West Texas. In nineteen hours, the well produced 680 barrels of pipe line oil from a depth of 2,310 feet. No other features of sufficient importance to reach the headlines happened."

A CARD OF THANKS.
I wish to thank my neighbors and friends for the nice vote given me in my race for the office of commissioner of precinct No. 4. While I did not get enough votes to elect me to the office, yet my appreciation for those I did get is none the less. Again let me say, I thank you.
L. H. QUALLS.
