THE PEOPLE MUST PAY

The Interstate Commerce Commission has granted to the railroads the increase of freight, passenger and other rates asked for, just as it had been expected it would do and as it became known it must do, when the federal labor bureau granted an increase of wages to railway employes aggregating $600,000,000 annually.

In other words, every time an increase in pay is awarded the employees of railroads, the people must pay that increase, be it what it may. This last increase was expected, but that makes it no less a burden. The increase will be levied on the goods the consumer must buy in order to live. And it means an immediate increase in the price of all commodities.

It was announced locally that the day following the award adding $600,000,000 to the pay of railway employes, with the attendant statement of a railroad manager that it would require an advance of 18 per cent in rates to meet that increase, that a packing house increased the price of hams ten cents per pound, just on the anticipation of having, at some remote time, to pay an increased rate of freight.

The increase in rates, the increase in wages and the increase in the cost of living, all come closely together, while the only hope of lower prices the people may expect is improvement in the transportation system and a better distribution of products. This may not be expected for a year, at least, owing to the debilitated condition of the railroads, but in the meantime prices will continue high and be raised steadily.

What is wrong in the proposition is that it raises the prices of all commodities to all the people and the only division, or class, receiving a relative increase in pay, to enable them to meet the higher cost of living, is the railroad employees. Were there to be any sort of co-operation between the dealer and the consumer, any spirit of live and let live, the increases might be so distributed, so assimilated as to lessen the burden, but, unfortunately, there are profiteers in the land who want only an excuse to raise the prices, as was the case of the packing house making an advance in the price of hams to meet an advance in freight rates which was then only in prospect, or the case of the magazine publishers who, when the new postal rate went into effect, adding a small fraction of one cent to the postage on a copy of the publication, immediately increased the price from twenty-five to thirty-five cents.

This spirit, carried into all lines following the increase in freight rates, is not only going to work a great hardship to a people already staggering under a burden they can hardly bear, but it is going to create a condition in the public mind which, it is feared, may only add to the great spirit of unrest throughout the country.

BUILD THE HILBURN

The road from Cisco to the Hilburn field should be well under way, if not completed by this time, considering when the project was undertaken, yet work has not commenced.

Something is wrong. Cisco is not in the habit of delaying anything so important to its business interests as this road will prove to be. It is not the Cisco way.

On two different occasions men residing along the route of the road, all willing and anxious to do their part, have come here to attend a meeting of those of Cisco interested in seeing the road completed, and found no meeting. An extra effort is to be put forth to have at the regular meeting of the Chamber of Commerce and Production tomorrow every person interested in the construction of the road present and that final action, looking to the immediate beginning of the work, shall be taken.

There is no time for delay. Cisco wants this road, needs it and is going to build it, but it should be done now. Vast amounts of material is demanded in that field, all of which would be purchased in Cisco were this road completed.

Let there be a turn out of citizens to the meeting tomorrow night and let arrangements be made for beginning the work at once.

STAYING ON OUR JOBS

It is trite to say that this is an age of unrest, that we are living in a day when nobody is satisfied, and in this country at least, the masses are "milling" like a herd of cattle on the verge of a stampede. Industrially, this is a serious matter. It keeps the cost of production up and the quantity of production down.

The labor turnover, as it is technically called, was never so great as it is now. Men go from job to job and place to place for no apparent purpose other than to make a change. Industries are put to the extra expense of constantly teaching new men and suffer the decline in production that follows the loss of experienced workers and the taking in of inexperienced ones.

Even inducements which in former times would have been considered certain to fix men on their jobs do not have that effect. For instance, four years ago a large shipbuilding corporation announced that to all employees who remained with the company four years it would distribute a bonus of the company's stock. That promise has recently been made good by the distribution among those who qualified of stock to the market value of $1,650,000. But of fifteen thousand employees of the company only 127 qualified for the bonus by remaining in its employ four years. The remaining 14,873 to whom this offer was made either did not believe it, or did not care for it as much as they cared to make a change.

Probably they did not take much thought of what was going to happen four years hence. That is farther ahead than the great majority of people are looking in these days, possibly farther than they looked at any time. The old Romans had a motto, "Dum vivamus vivamus," which might be liberally translated, let us have a good time as we go along and let the future look out for itself. So we can see that even in our improvident spirit we have not discovered anything new in life. Centuries ago we were told there was nothing new under the sun, not even the political theories of would-be third party creators.

We ought to get back to solid ground stay on our jobs, lay by regularly of our earnings and be prepared against the day of trouble or for that old age which so steadily creeps upon us. We shall take no pride later in contemplating the fact that we were among the restless, thoughtless, improvident ones who lived through this restless era, if we do live through it, and survived the days of the high cost of living, for which our own foolishness is chiefly responsible.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

GERMANY HOPPING IN HER OWN FIRE NOW.

General Ludendorff's solicitude for the preservation of Poland and the rest of the world from the dangers of Bolshevism is very affecting. It makes one want to cry. General Ludendorff and other German militarists were alarmed over the same danger during the war, several times, if we remember. Usually their alarm ever benevolent coincided with German military reverses, and at such times they were very conscious that he war should stop and that the allies should turn their attention from Germany to Russia.

It seems probable Germany may still hope for some such diversion. She is seeking considerably more attention from the outside than she has, and would very much like to see somebody else favored with it in her place. Probably she would even welcome a mandate from the outside to do a little military campaigning in Russia in the interests of civilization, and charge it up against the allies' little bill. Also it would work in nicely with her desire to keep up a large military force in spite of the provisions of the treaty of Versailles.

The world does not minimize the dangers of bolshevism. It knows all about those dangers, including the knowledge of who turned them loose on the world. It was Ludendorff himself and the other German militarists who started that five-back of the Russian lines. They sent Lenin into Russia to do the kind thing, and it isn't their fault that similar fires failed to start in France and Italy. They tried hard enough to build them. Bolshevism accomplished the German purpose in Russia, but afterwards got beyond German control. Now it threatens to balk another German purpose in Russia, the German purpose to organize, dominate and exploit that country. If the original German plan had worked, Russia struck down from behind, would have ceased to be a military factor after as well as during the war, and would have been Germany's prize to pick up at her leisure.

Bolshevism spoiled that plan and Germany now raises the cry that the world must come and help her put out the fire she started, else Germany herself will be consumed. Poland, too, must be saved. Polish salvation has suddenly become very important to Germany, although heretofore her own efforts in that direction have been directed toward the object of sitting on Poland's neck.

We shouldn't wonder at all if General Ludendorff's anxiety had some real foundation this time. The fire may be burning Germany's toes a little, or threatening to. In which case Germany probably will dance some. Let her dance. We do not exactly see the world rushing in to save her from the results of her own crimes, certainly not in response to utterances that have such a familiar sound as the latest Ludendorff propaganda.—Kansas City Star.

Lacked Press Agents

The king ordered all the men to take the 9:4. The chancellor tremblingly approached the throne and whispered something, but his majesty shook his head impatiently.

"Let the publicity end be taken care of by the women and children," he exclaimed.

"But the women and children," ventured the chancellor, "will have all they can do to till the soil, operate the factories, keep the bourses open and so forth."
 "Then let the publicity end take care of itself," the king insisted, stubbornly. The result was about what you might expect. The war was fought with valor and brilliancy, but when it passed into history it did so with almost a total lack of anything like distinction.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Home Town Fire Department

The fire department made a record yesterday at the Wayne Fidler home, when it received an alarm at 4:40 o'clock, and returned to the station at 4:55. The firemen performed their setting up of apparatus with alacrity, excluded the smoldering soot from the roof and debilitated the functions of the blaze before it had time to gain sufficient momentum of strength to prove pernicious in its workings.—Valparaiso Vidette.

BOUNDARY DISPUTE BETWEEN OKLAHOMA IS RESUMED TODAY

By International News Service.
 OKLAHOMA CITY, August 2.—Oil and gas leases valued at millions of dollars and interesting hundreds of people in all sections of the country, as well as many oil men in the mid-continent field are involved in the famous Red River boundary dispute, which will be brought before Frederick S. Tyler, United States supreme court commissioner, at a hearing beginning here today.

Possibility of the case going to Spain because of the existence there of old Spanish treaties concerning the Red River as a boundary is considered in some quarters.

The case has attracted considerable attention because of the fact that at one time armed hostilities were threatened. The question hinges on the Red River as a boundary between the two states. Valuable gas and oil leases extend into the river and the field there is a very valuable one. Both states contend their jurisdiction extends further than the other state concedes.

The situation became acute when Texas Rangers, in defiance of a federal court order, took forcible possession of the disputed territory. When the governors of two states, W. P. Hobby of Texas and J. B. A. Robertson of Oklahoma, were unable to come to an agreement they did agree to take the matter before the United States supreme court.

Frederick A. Delano was appointed to carry by the supreme court and has investigated the case thoroughly. The state of Texas will be represented by C. M. Carson, attorney general, while the attorney general of Oklahoma, W. P. Freeland, will represent the other claimants. John Pain of the department of justice, will represent the other claimants.

Since the case first attracted attention the value of the ground in dispute has increased. Because of the discovery of oil and gas the matter is of much interest to many people.

CAMP HUTCHINGS AT GALVESTON IS SCENE OF PERFECT ORDER

Associated Press.
 GALVESTON, August 2.—Texas cavalrymen engaged in enforcement of martial law in this city have settled down for a protracted stay at Camp Hutchings. Following a statement by Governor Hobby that, if necessary to keep this port open to commerce, he would maintain troops here until his term of office expires.

Ordered here June 7 to protect workers on the docks, the skeleton brigade of Texas cavalrymen, under command of Brigadier General Jacob F. Wilfers, has found its duties multiplied. With the suspension by order of the governor of the city's entire police department and the partial suspension of its board of city commissioners, the versatile guardsman took up police duty. Within three hours after the order was promulgated, the soldiers were walking beats.

Colonel A. W. Bloor, provost marshal, veteran of the Thirty-sixth division, acting "chief of police," not only found former policeman among the troops here, but also discovered a soldier who at one time had been a member of an eastern city's detective bureau. This talent immediately was called into service to train the new department, which now boasts motorcycle traffic officers, mounted officers for the residential section, an up-to-date detective bureau and a "riot squad."

Camp Hutchings, where the men are under canvas, overlooks the gulf and provides unexcelled opportunities for sunbathing. An hour daily, from 4:30 to 5:30 p. m., is set aside for water sports. Movies, baseball and other sports are arranged under direction of wartime welfare organizations, which volunteered for the service.

HIS MANNERS POOR; WIFE GETS DIVORCE International News Service. KALAMAZOO, Mich., Aug. 2.—After Mrs. Hazel Bush testified her husband's table manners were bad in the extreme, a divorce was granted to her by Judge George Weimer. Although he worked in a garage, he would not clean up before coming to the table, even when she had company, Mrs. Bush testified. His chief pleasure, she said, was in doing things to embarrass her before her friends.

Witnesses testified to seeing Maith and Mrs. Lever together and finding them registered at a hotel as "Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Maith." The former Mrs. Lever did not contest the suit or answer the charge made in the libel. Mrs. Lever, who is now in her early thirties, is the daughter of the late State Senator Thomas B. Harper of Jenkintown. She is now employed at a photographic studio.

Military Genius Opposes Pilsudski, Polish Patriot

International News Service. Leaders of the opposing armies which are affording satisfaction for the war gods in Europe are both great military men. Pilsudski, the Polish "patriot" and dictator of Poland, heads the legends that are attempting to stem the tide of Russian Bolsheviki forces led by General Brusiloff into Polish territory.

GENERAL BRUSILOFF. General Brusiloff was in command of the Russian army that in August, 1915, in a great drive against the Germans and Austrians from Pripet to the Rumanian border, captured 400,000 prisoners. Before this drive Brusiloff was little known and no one really had heard of him as a military genius.

He was born sixty-five years ago at Ruzitsa, a curious semi-Oriental city in the Russian Caucasus, of a famous Russian family, which for generations had been distinguished in the military and political history of his country. He was schooled at one of the Russian military academies, and in his early youth was commissioned in the army as a subaltern in the cavalry guard.

He entered with zest into the daring, adventurous life which is traditional among the regiments of the Caucasus and famed as the finest rider and most brilliant officer of the guard, was soon placed in command.

Talented, romantic and good looking, he became a popular favorite in court and military circles.

A soldier of commanding personality and intellect, soon made his mark and at the age of forty-four attained the rank of general. He, however, was known as a thinker, rather than a fighter, and previous to 1915 had never been in a battle.

In physique Brusiloff belongs to the true cavalryman type. He has the slender, elastic appearance of a man under forty, and a quickness of action and address. His features are finely molded, with a high, aristocratic nose, keen.

quizzical, grey eyes and a broad, intellectual forehead.

He has been oftentimes accused of cruelty, but those who know him best say that he is kind.

GENERAL PILSUDSKI. General Josef Pilsudski, Poland's lone dictator, beloved of the Polish peoples but said to be held in doubt by aristocratic Poland, is at the head of the Polish army which has been forced to retreat by the bolsheviki forces under command of General Brusiloff.

General Pilsudski, about the age of the leader of the opposing army, is a man of heavy build, imposing nature and is noted for his ability as a military tactician. He was the organizer of the Polish legions which with Austria fought Russia, and at the beginning of the threatened bolsheviki invasion mobilized the Polish army to stem the "Red" tide into his country.

All of his life Pilsudski has fought, worked and plotted for Polish independence. As president of Poland he is looked to by the people to protect them from the bolshevik rule, of which they are said to be much in fear.

About bolshevism Pilsudski says: "I believe bolshevism is purely a Russian disease. You will notice that bolshevism does not take root in countries which are not purely Russian. In the parts of old Russia where the social system is not characteristically Russian, as, for instance, in Poland, Estonia, in the Ukraine, in the Cossack region and in Siberia, it never has obtained any real hold. The root idea of Russian bolshevism is class vengeance."

MUNICIPAL ARGUMENT OVER COIN IS FLIPPED

International News Service. Kansas City, Kan., Aug. 2.—The "flip" of a coin saved this city $500 after futile efforts of Mayor Mendenhall and Secretary Berry, of the Wyandotte County Gas company, to compromise a bill owed by the city for several years.

After a long conference the gas company's bill, originally $42,000, was reduced to $35,500. The city still balked and demanded the bill be made an even $35,000.

"We are only $500 apart on a settlement. Let's flip a penny for it," suggested the mayor.

"You're on," said the secretary. "Heads for the city," said the mayor. "The company will take tails," said Berry.

The coin, a new Lincoln one-cent piece, spun in the air. A tinkle; heads won.

DENVER WILL PERMIT BUILDING OF ADOBE HOUSES IN THE CITY

Associated Press. DENVER, Colo., August 2.—houses may soon be seen in Denver. A shortage and the high cost of building material recently resulted in a change of the city regulation permitting adobe construction. Several permits have already been issued. "Houses of adobe can be made as comfortable and attractive," F. M. Ladd, building inspector, declared in commenting on the changes. "If the construction properly, we will not have any objection to their construction."

Three conditions were named in issuance of permits. They will be limited in frame residence district, vice of the city building inspection to making adobe bricks and construction must be followed and the building when completed, must be given a coat of stucco.
