WPA TO BUILD 25 UNITS FOR CISCO RESORT

Accommodations Will Complete Recreation Facilities

An allotment of $30,499 for improvement of the Lake Cisco area as a recreation center, principally by the construction of native stone cottages for tourists and sportsmen, has been approved by the Works Progress administration, Mayor J. T. Berry was informed in a telegram from Senator Tom Connally today.

The project, the telegram said, is now ready for operation at the discretion of the state WPA office.

The project calls for building 25 cabins of the most advanced design at the lake, the site to be the level plateau across Highway 23 from the Cisco Country club property. Designs for the cabins were adapted from those used in building the cabins at the Brownwood state park and the Cisco units will embody the latest in such construction.

The presence of convenient and comfortable accommodations for tourists and sportsmen at Lake Cisco is the only thing lacking to make the resort one of the most attractive in the state, and approval of the cabin project is very gratifying to officials of the city and of the Lake Cisco Amusement company, operators of concessions at the resort, including the enormous concrete swimming pool, fishing and boating and so forth.

Mayor J. T. Berry said this morning that the city is ready to begin the project whenever the state WPA office is. He said it is expected this will be soon.

I see by the papers that Texas cities and civic institutions are taking W. Lee O'Daniel's suggestion seriously for their individual programs and are advertising for new businesses and new blood. The Fort Worth chamber of commerce is purchasing sundry space in periodicals that circulate among classes to which that community would appeal, while Dallas, Houston and other cities are making as ambitious efforts to attract industry.

What is sauce for the gander should be soup for the ducklings, and though it is difficult to make the pipsqueaks of the latter heard above the clamor of the former—the Rose Bowl-Sugar Bowl-Cotton Bowl row of such recent indignity, for instance. Such an episode is quite certain to attract attention.

But the plain truth of the matter is that clamor is less to be desired than common sense, as the attention which the aforementioned Bowl fracas proved in the teetotal absence of any of the latter and preferred ingredient. From listening to Fort Worth one would think that we people out here in Cisco were entirely uncouth, uneducated and uncultured, and that we think the Rose Bowl is the Seventh heaven and the Sugar Bowl the floor just below.

But back to the subject.

Navaho Economics Much Like Our Own

It seems that the Navaho Indians are going broke because of their riches. And somehow this topsy-turvy world of ours ought to be able to draw a useful little moral or two out of this odd situation.

Among the Navahos, ownership of a horse is the one infallible sign of wealth and social position. The horse needn't amount to much, as a beast of burden; he can be mangy, spavined, sway-backed and generally run down, but if he is just an indisputable, unmistakable horse he fills the bill.

So the Navaho who has made his mark on the reservation range land must acquire and maintain a herd of horses. He may not care to ride on them, or hitch them to wagons; so long as he owns them he is happy. And the young buck who goes a-courting finds his path much smoother if he can present his sweetheart's parents with a string of 10 or a dozen ponies.

Because of all this, the Navaho ranges are supporting at least 40,000 more horses than the tribe actually needs. Furthermore, these horses are eating grass and other forage which might well be supporting vast flocks of sheep—possession of which would actually mean more food, more cash money and better living quarters.

Indian Commissioner John Collier hopes to persuade the Navahos to reduce the number of their horses and increase the size of their sheep flocks. But until he can persuade them that "a worthless horse is not an asset, but rather a liability" he is likely to make scant headway.

It is easy enough for the white world to look down with amused contempt on the red man who is so ignorant that he doesn't know real wealth when he sees it. Yet perhaps the same sort of confusion, under some other guise, is commoner than we generally realize.

The innocent Navaho, for instance, might wonder why we look on it as a national calamity every time our farmers manage to produce a more than usually ample crop. Foodstuffs have been the most tangible and universally accepted form of wealth since the first hunter lugged home the first arrow-pierced deer; if we consider ourselves unfortunate because we have an abundance, the Navaho could hardly be blamed for being a bit puzzled.

NOR is it likely that he could quite understand our difficulties with "over production" in other lines. For here, again, the things we produce are wealth—wealth pure and simple. If large numbers of us must do without them because we are producing too many of them, the situation is hardly one which would commend white man's economics to the red man.

Somewhat similar is the complaint that we have put too much money into productive machinery during the last decade or so. This machinery produces wealth; why should our ability to produce more wealth get us into trouble?

When Mr. Collier undertakes to explain the ins and outs of wealth to the Navahos, perhaps he had best confine himself strictly to horses and sheep.

Quail Season Opened Dec. 1

The quail season opened in Texas on Dec. 1 and quail hunters all over Texas found the conditions better this year than for the past few years. The six counties in my district have a very good crop of quail and better crops are promised, if the land owners and the sportsmen will cooperate and save an adequate seed stock for next spring. When hunters find only four or five birds in a covey they should be left alone, because they will be the start of two or three coveys next spring.

Hunters should feel that it is their responsibility to see that there are enough birds left to furnish them the sport next fall, when the season opens. In the past there have been too many quail killed, therefore we could not expect a good crop of birds. If a farmer sold all of his cotton seed and did not save back enough to plant next year, surely he would have to buy seed to plant. So with the quail situation, if all of them are killed off this year, there will be only one thing to do next year—Buy birds to start the nesting season with.

Last year the Texas Game, Fish and Oyster commission distributed 14,075 quail in places where the sportsmen would buy half of the quail received. In other words the game department gave the purchaser one quail with each one that he bought. The total cost being about 85 cents per pair, the cost of trapping and transportation of one bird. Without proper food and cover conditions quail cannot exist on a farm or locality. Encourage the building up of these two most important factors in game management.

Season and Bag Limit

Quail season will run from December 1, 1938, to January 16, 1939, in both the north and south zones. The bag limit is 12 birds per day and not more than 36 in any one week. The possession limit is also 36.

Brown, Coleman, Comanche, Eastland, and Erath are the counties in this district that will have an open season this year. Callahan county is still closed. This is the first year that Coleman county has been opened for the past three seasons. This county has profited by this closed season and now if the hunting and harvest is controlled, Coleman county with its good food and cover conditions in most parts should keep the hunter well supplied with birds. Many places in this county will have to improve the food and cover conditions before the land will hold the quail.

Rifles may be used in killing quail, and if shot guns are used they must not be larger than a No. 10 gauge and permanently plugged to a three shell capacity.

Cats Kill Quail

I was driving down the highway the other night and saw a black wild house cat spring from the road and miss a quail only by inches. It is needless to say that this cat will not bother more quail. This is one reason that I ask you to kill all wild house cats. One land owner told me the other day that he had been missing his quail slowly. He took his dog and went down on a creek that runs through his place and here

This venture is to give stockmen in this section of the central west a place to hold auctions for their cattle instead of having to go to Albany, Stamford or other places still more remote, and will tend to bring this part of the state into more prominence as a foundation stock center . . .

The Sin of Covetousness

Text: Exodus 20:17; Luke 12:13-21; I Timothy 6:6-10

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of Advance

Covetousness may be the underlying motive of self-seeking, even when one would put it upon the plane of justice. This is illustrated in the story of the man who came to Jesus, asking Him to have his brother divide the inheritance with him. We do not know all the circumstances or details, but Jesus evidently sensed the fact that this man was poisoning his own life by some false sense of injustice or by some covetous spirit. So He said, "Man, who made me a judge or a divider over you?" It was in this connection that He particularly emphasized the sin of covetousness and the fact that a man's life does not consist in the abundance of the things that he possesses.

He proceeded then to tell the story of the successful farmer, the man who was going to pull down his barns and build greater and take his ease and enjoyment out of the things that he had built up over many years. The successful farmer was probably no better or no worse than many men in a similar circumstance, but he had left out of account the most important thing of all, namely, his life. Death made all his prosperity and the things he had stored up mean nothing to him. But even in death, if he had sought treasure in heaven, there would have been some satisfaction in his life and some real heritage of goodness.

Covetousness is a social sin, but it is equally a personal sin in its effect upon the man who practices it. It is a social sin because it may have serious results upon one's fellowmen. The man who has an inordinate desire for wealth, or for possessing what other men have, may create all manner of distress and social injustice by his covetousness. What he does not always see is that, even where he gains his ends, he blasts and destroys his own soul.

Good Roads Ass'n Head Urges Texas Sales Campaign

AUSTIN, Dec. 9. (Sp.)—The matchless opportunities and natural resources existing in Texas have been reviewed in recent months but there remains the more important task of "selling" these god-given assets to those who have the capital and desire to utilize them.

Pointing out that a successful sales campaign would be of benefit to every resident of the state, he claims such a program would bring into Texas industries which could operate here at a profit because of the proximity of virtually all types of raw materials.

"It would add to payrolls that would be circulated in Texas to pump new life into the commercial stream," he writes. "It would give us a better balance with agriculture and open for Texas an era of sound prosperity such as has rarely been experienced by another portion of the nation, not excepting the hectic development witnessed in California during the rush for gold and lumber. Texas, with its more than 100 years of history and tradition, has its feet on the ground, its institutions and its destiny are deeply rooted. It is ready to go places in a sound, sensible and conservative way.

Years of Co-Operation

"The task of selling Texas, however, is one that cannot be undertaken in a day or completed overnight. It will require years of co-operation between all citizens and groups interested in the advancement of the state.

"In recent years much good has been accomplished by the special trains run to the North and East, taking industrial, educational and commercial leaders to those sections. These trains served to whet the interest of these centers. It disabused their minds of many misconceptions and brought home to these fellow countrymen of ours that Texas no longer was a raw frontier, inhabited principally by gun-toting cowboys and murderous Indians. The Texas Centennial activities also helped to promote Texas.

"There have been suggestions in recent years that an advertising fund be created to advertise Texas. Practically all of these plans were misconceived in that they sought to take funds already allocated to some governmental enterprise. A notable example along this line was the suggestion that highway funds be used for advertising. The sponsors of this idea failed to realize that Texas needs every dollar it can reasonably get its hands on to build a network of roads that will provide a transportation base for a greater state.

"At a recent meeting of the executive committee of the Texas Press association tentative plans were outlined for another special train invasion of the industrial centers. In the next few months efforts will be made to enlist the cream of the industrial, educational, professional and political talent in a crusade in the form of the 'Texas Industrial Special.' Present plans call for its departure in the late spring. The trip will be timed so that the leading industrial and textile centers will be visited by the special, the trip ending in New York with a few days at the New York World's fair.

"O'Daniel With Party
"Governor-elect W. Lee O'Daniel is expected to accompany the party. As governor of the state then he will be able to speak for himself on his program for the extension of Texas industries. It has been suggested that it might be to the best interests of the state to recess the legislature for the period of the tour and to take as many members of the house and senate on the trip as possible. If necessary, the trip could be made in several sections which, in itself, would be a great advertising feat.

"While on the visit to the North and East it might be possible for Texas leaders to arrange for a mass visitation of industrialists and capitalists to Texas and the Southwest, where they could see at first hand the glories of the state and go away with a better appreciation of the reasons why Texas has so consistently been the nation's 'bright spot.'

"Aside from benefiting the state through the medium of a special train, the trip would be of great profit to those Texans making it. Such a trip would serve to weld Texas' divergent interests into a strong, united front, it being the history of journeys such as the ably get its hands on to build a network of roads that will provide a transportation base for a greater state. They also failed to consider that good roads constitute the best advertisement a state can offer. They failed to give due weight to the principals of taxation and did not recognize the fundamental idea behind gasoline taxes and motor vehicle registration fees, namely, that they are taxes assessed on a special class based primarily on the use which that class makes of its highway system. But enough of that. Because of the widespread public support for the highway construction program, these efforts have been overwhelmingly defeated.

"At a recent meeting of the executive committee of the Texas Press association tentative plans were outlined for another special train invasion of the industrial

OUT OUR WAY By Williams

Washington Daybook

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—So far as Nazi diplomats are concerned, the Pan-American conference at Lima will be a closed book.

The same is true of other non-American nations, also, but it is likely to be noticed this session mainly because so much of what will be done is likely to be associated in the public mind with Germany.

The matter of closed sessions previously had not been of particular importance. Almost every important nation in the world has had unofficial representatives nosing around. The general sessions and even the committee sessions have been open to them, as well as to the public. (That, of course, has not applied to strictly off-the-record get-togethers of diplomats with special axes to grind.)

This year the policy of closing important meetings to all but American republics is to be followed. There is no official resolution on the subject, but inform-one contemplated that the close contacts formed and the companionship enjoyed has served to break down rivalries, prejudices and misunderstandings. Many times misunderstandings between two strongly opposed groups can be dissolved because of the neutrality of interest developed through the intimate association of a long train ride. After all, most of our aims and ambitions are identical. It is in the method of execution that we are prone to become engaged in controversy.

"Let's all join in the program to 'sell Texas!'"

Don't Let That Pipe Fool You

It's almost unbelievable, but here's Billy Burke with a pipe in his mouth instead of the cigar which heretofore has been as much of his equipment as his niblick. And to complete the metamorphosis, his dog, Jerry, also comes up with a briar stuck between his teeth as the former National Open champion makes the winter golf circuit in Dixie.

manded assurance that no federal measure would be applied to them.

They received the assurance, privately, of course. The plane manufacturers and the armed forces work very closely together, in any event, so it didn't involve any great concession. The factories work on secret military designs with as much industry and enthusiasm as the army and navy plane designers. But when the talk centered around mass production of fighting planes, the factories wanted to be sure they would not be induced to make huge expansions and then be faced with competition from a flock of federal airplane mills.

What they remembered was that two years ago a senate committee headed by Senator Nye of North Dakota (who is a pacifist except with respect to Loyalist Spain), conducted an investigation into possibility of government manufacture of all munitions and planes. The committee brought in non-military engineers who testified that with an expenditure of $40,000,000 to $45,000,000 the government could build its own factories to manufacture munitions and airplanes, as well as to become independent of private shipyards for battleship building—at least in peacetime.

Government Has One Plant

Neither the army nor the navy attached a dime's worth of weight to the senatorial findings, but the plane manufacturers wanted assurance, just in case. They remembered that already the government has one airplane plant of its own. It manufactures nothing but naval training planes, but in a pinch it could be expanded into something bigger and more competitive.

Calvin Coolidge Turned His Back On the Presidency

AS early as the spring of 1927, a movement got under way to re-elect Calvin Coolidge, then serving his second term. But the quiet New Englander wanted no more of the most difficult office in the country. On Aug. 2, 1927, he set about to cut short the re-election campaign.

He did it at his summer office in the Black Hills of South Dakota, issuing one of the briefest but most historic presidential statements of all time. "I do not choose to run for President in 1928."

The President's announcement fell on newspapermen like a bombshell. At 11 o'clock he told them he would have a statement at noon when he was to be inducted into the Sioux Indian tribe. Soon after he handed his statement to his secretary, told him to type 15 or 16 copies and bring the messages to him. He then personally cut them apart into thin slips and handed them out to reporters as they passed his desk. He refused additional comment.

The public, however, refused to believe the President. They placed every possible interpretation on the message until at last in a terse six sentences added to a speech at the final moment in December, Mr. Coolidge declared that he was not a candidate and that the "decision must be respected."

So retired into public life one of the most legendary characters ever to reach the White House. The "prosperity President" is shown here on a stamp of the new U. S. regular series, enlarged. (Copyright, 1938, NEA Service, Inc.)

There have been suggestions in recent years that an advertising fund be created to advertise Texas. Practically all of these plans were misconceived in that they sought to take funds already allocated to some governmental enterprise. A notable example along this line was the suggestion that highway funds be used for advertising. The sponsors of this idea failed to realize that Texas needs every dollar it can reasonably

The Story of OD and AD

and the TOMATOES

OD and AD owned neighboring farms. Both decided to grow tomatoes. But when their tomatoes were ripe, OD and AD had different ideas as to how they would sell them. This is the story of what happened.

How OD and AD Sold Their Tomatoes

OD filled baskets with his tomatoes and put them in a wagon and drove to town. He went up and down the streets looking for people who wanted to buy tomatoes. Some days he sold all. Some days he sold only a few. When the season was over, he found he had made just enough to live on.

AD thought there must be a better way to sell his tomatoes. He knew he must tell people about them, but he decided he could never sell very many tomatoes if he talked to people one at a time. So he used one of the simplest forms of ADVERTISING. He built a stand by the side of the road where many people passed. He put up a sign that said: "AD's big, red, ripe, juicy tomatoes." Because so many people saw the sign, enough people stopped to buy so that he sold all his ripe tomatoes every day. Many who bought, remembering his name on the sign, came back again and again. When the season was over, he had money in the bank.

One day AD heard that tomato juice was healthful and good to drink. He thought it would also be convenient to handle, to sell, and to serve in the home. He told OD about it. The next year both decided to make and sell tomato juice.

How OD and AD Sold Their Tomato Juice

OD's wife squeezed tomatoes all day and put the juice in bottles. OD took it to town and went from door to door, looking for people who wanted to buy tomato juice. In a whole day he could call at only about 50 homes. As most people had never heard of tomato juice and did not know how good it was, he sold only a few bottles each day.

AD felt sure there was a better way to make and sell his tomato juice. He took some money from the bank and bought a shiny new press that squeezed out juice easily and quickly. He put the juice in bottles that could be tightly sealed. He had labels printed for the bottles, reading:

AD's PURE TOMATO JUICE.

He went to the grocery stores in town, where many people came every day, and asked the grocers to put a few of his bottles on their counters. Then he put an advertisement in newspapers read by thousands of people. The advertisement said:

"Enjoy the refreshing taste of AD's PURE TOMATO JUICE, pressed from big, red, vine-ripened Tomatoes. Good to drink and good for you. At your favorite grocery store."

Because so many people read about it, enough people asked for it to exhaust the supply quickly. And remembering AD's name on the label they came back and asked for it again. So AD bought tomatoes from his neighbors and made more tomato juice to supply the demand.

What OD and AD Did The Next Year

OD and his wife decided that if they were going to make any money, they would have to work harder. So she got up earlier in the morning and picked tomatoes and squeezed and bottled juice all day. OD spent a longer day in town trying to see more people in order to sell more bottles. But, even though OD and his wife worked long and hard, they could not make any money.

AD now saw how true it was that the more people he told about his tomato juice, the more he sold. So he advertised in other cities, telling women how good tomato juice was for their families to drink. He also sent salesmen to call on grocers. He got so many orders that he arranged to buy tomatoes from hundreds of other farmers, built a bigger building, bought more equipment, more bottles and labels, and employed more people. AD knew that, because his name was on every bottle, he must always maintain the high quality of his product. And, because he did this, women soon insisted on AD's PURE TOMATO JUICE.

AD already had found that the more he advertised and the more bottles he sold, the less it cost him to put up each bottle. Therefore, as his advertising was extended all over the country and his sales increased, he reduced the price. Thus more and more people could afford to enjoy tomato juice, and, although his profit per bottle was now very small indeed, he sold so many bottles that he had a very fine business. So both AD and his customers were benefited.

AD tells OD how an Idea Became an Industry - through ADVERTISING

ONE DAY, years later, OD called on his old neighbor AD. He said "It's remarkable how your business has grown since you got that idea about selling tomato juice."

"Yes," said AD, "but even more important have been the benefits to other people. We are now only one out of many producers of tomato juice. Yet we take all the tomatoes grown by more than a thousand farmers who have here an assured market for their crops. We give steady employment the year round to several hundred people and employ hundreds more on part-time. We pay more than half a million dollars a year to manufacturers of cans, bottles, labels, supplies, and equipment.

"The entire industry now sells more than twenty million dollars worth of tomato juice a year and the public enjoys its healthful benefits—at the lowest price at which it ever has been sold. Yes, tomato juice was a great idea, but that idea would have benefited very few —without ADVERTISING to tell the story."

Farmers to Vote Saturday on Cotton Quotas

Eastland county farmers who planted cotton in 1938 will vote Saturday in a referendum to determine whether or not there shall be imposed upon them cotton marketing quotas for the 1939 crop.

The ballots will be absolutely secret. They will not be signed and will not even be numbered, so that it will be impossible to check back on them in any way. Elmo V. Cook, county agent, said.

The ballots are slips of paper about 8 1/2 inches long and three inches wide, with the following printed legend:

"1930 Cotton Marketing Quota Referendum Ballot:
"Do you favor cotton marketing quotas for the 1939 crop?"

"If you are for quotas put 'X' in this box (Yes).
"If you are against quotas put 'X' in this box (No)."

Mr. Cook stressed the point that farmers are not voting on the Triple A program in next Saturday's referendum, but only on the cotton marketing quota such as was in effect this year. The vote, he said, will determine whether a three-cents per pound tax shall be levied against those who plant more than their acreage quota of cotton.

All farmers can sell the cotton they produce on their allotted acreage without a tax. Those who do not exceed their cotton acreage quota will receive benefits amounting to around 3.8 cents per pound on the normal yield. Those who exceed their acreage quota will be taxed three cents per pound for cotton produced and sold on the excess acreage.

The same plan was in effect this year, so that cotton growers will know exactly what they are voting on in Saturday's election.

Amazons, according to Greek legend, were a tribe of women who allowed no men in their country, Asia Minor, and spent most of their time hunting and warring.

SERIAL STORY LOVERS AWEIGH

BY BETTY WALLACE

CAST OF CHARACTERS
JUDY ALCOTT—admiral's daughter. She faced a choice between two navy suitors.
DWIGHT CAMPBELL—ambitious lieutenant. He faced a choice between his wife and duty.
JACK HANLEY—flying sailor. He faced a test of a patient love.
MARVEL HASTINGS—navy wife. She faced the test of being a good sailor.

Yesterday, Dwight asks Judy to forgive him, to pick up the broken pieces. But she tells him she is engaged to marry Jack!

CHAPTER XXVI

The moment the words left her lips, Judy Alcott lost the triumph that had inspired them. She felt cold, and Dwight's stunned face was not the victory she had thought it would be. It was like a flame that had dwindled quickly to ashes.

He said, "I'm sorry, Judy. Sorry I said those things. Of course I couldn't expect a girl like you to sit around and wait while I—while I came to my senses." His mouth twisted. "We all find out there is no Santa Claus. We all discover we can't undo the mistakes we made. But I wish—God, how I wish—I had seen things clearly. I wish I had married you!" The violence of his words shook him. And then he was reaching for her, pulling her into his arms. "I love you," he said over and over. "Now that I can't have you, it's too cruel to bear. I want you. I need you."

She should have pushed him away. But she had hungered for his arms so long. To be close against his heart, to feel the rise and fall of his breathing, to have his pleading in her ears like this, was so sharply sweet, that for a moment she remained quiescent, still. But then she put her hands against his chest and stirred. "Don't, Dwight. It's no use."

Why must she deny the fire in her own blood? Why must she torture herself and him? Was it pride, exacting its toll? Pride that must be satisfied, that wouldn't let her yield to him, that wouldn't admit those sobs and those tears he had caused her?

Without her own volition, words were tumbling forth. "You were wanted to marry a rich girl, you thought it would help you get ahead. You knew that my father's influence could help you, but you weighed everything carefully and in the end it seemed to you that Marvel's money could help more. Bigger and better parties. Influence in Washington. She spoke of it! Her uncle's a banker, he has friends on the Naval Affairs Committee. You thought that would be an easier, quicker way than the road of merit. Oh, you were cold about it. You considered it from every angle!"

"That's not true!" he shouted. "Everybody knows it is true. Everybody knows that every single move you ever made, since you came into the navy, has been with the single thought of getting ahead."

"A man's a fool not to want to succeed!"

"Yes, but there are ways. And ways."

"I never did anything underhanded. I never used pull—"

"You wouldn't have hesitated, if you had had it."

"Pull is an asset. Why shouldn't a man use it if he has it?"

Little Dog, Big Ribbon

Wearing a blue ribbon almost as big as himself, Bobby of Hilgerbille, prize miniature pinscher of the 44th annual Philadelphia Kennel Club Dog Show, proudly displays his trophy.

"A moment ago you accused me of marrying her for her money." But she knew that thought this was true, it did not prevent him from really loving Marvel; from being affected by her beauty and her lure.

"I guess I'll get out here," he said, reaching for the door handle. "Don't. I'll drive you to the pier."

She should have realized that it was better to let him go here. But she had never been one to foresee the sharp eyes, the delighted gasps, of other people. Gossip always caught her unaware.

So when they stopped at the pier, and Dwight got out, she did not notice anyone she knew. Yet the moment she reached home, her mother said to her, "Judy, I've just had a phone call from Mrs.

"Was he making love to you?" her mother asked, in a quiet voice. (To Be Continued)

Methodist WMS Celebrates 60th Anniversary

The Women's Missionary society of the First Methodist church celebrated the 60th birthday of the organization recently with a luncheon at the home of Mrs. C. R. Sanford. Blue, silver and white were the colors carried out in decorating the luncheon table. Miniature silver reindeer stood on the shore of a mirror lake, surrounded by cotton and silver snow in the table center. At either end white tapers burned in silver holders. At intervals were placed silver poinsettias, miniature Santas, polar bears and snow-covered houses. Two white-iced cakes, each bearing 30 candles, completed the table decorations.

Mrs. John Shertzer gave a history of the society, and a baby life membership was presented Julian Patterson, small son of Rev. and Mrs. Joe Patterson.

Those present for the luncheon were Mmes. Will Reagan, J. T. Fields, C. Paschal, Fred Hayes, Ed Huestis, N. W. Noell, Jessie Harper, Joe Lovelady, L. E. Vaughn, W. G. Powell, R. A. Langston, M. A. November Sales of Ford Cars Highest

DEARBORN, Mich., Dec. 9.—November retail sales of Ford group units exceeded those of any other month of 1938, it was announced today at the offices of the Ford Motor company here. The combined sales of Ford cars and trucks, Mercury, Lincoln-Zephyr and Lincoln cars reached a total of 50,406 units.

The record mark is particularly noteworthy since 1939 Ford and Mercury units were not introduced until November 4.

For December the company increased production of Ford and Mercury units to 4,400 a day in the United States and Canada to keep pace with increasing volume of retail sales. Lincoln-Zephyr production has been successively stepped up since the 199 models were introduced in October. The Mercury 8 increase for December was approximately 30 per cent.

Despite these increases, sales are still ahead of production, company officials said.

No comparison was made with November, 1937 since new models were introduced late that month.

After 11 years of sponsorship he was named commissioner-general by the federal government, and was instrumental along with other prominent Texans, in obtaining a $3,000,000 federal appropriation for the exposition.

In his law career Thomas declined two important positions—membership on the state railroad commission in 1922 and the judgeship of the court of civil appeals in 1923. He was a trustee of Baylor university.

Clamor and a lot of loud talking will get attention, of course, but usually not the right kind of attention. It is suggested rather wisely, I think, that some commonsense examination of what we have to offer and what we should like to attract ought to be made at a community business "council of war." This does not necessarily mean reaching out, blindly, as such things are usually done, for something off yonder. It would mean conservation of the resources at home, conservation of our buying power, protection and promotion of the business and industry we already have, and the selling of Cisco to the area about it and from which it expects to draw its support.

What is wrong with a community business plan for 1939? What is wrong with working out a co-operative community business program for bringing more business and farther business into Cisco? What is wrong with substituting some practical imagination for impractical complaints and business planning for "I hope we can" stuff. If we take care of what we have we need worry little about what we will get.
