Four Men Held in Connection With Cert Kidnap Case

FIFTH BEING SOUGHT AS PLOT CLEARS

CORSICANA, May 13.—Arrest of four men and an extensive search for a fifth today cleared the kidnaping case of Robert Cert, Corsicana youth, officers here reported this morning.

Cert was abducted in December 1930 and secured his freedom by payment of $15,000 ransom demanded of his father, I. N. Cert, Corsicana banker. Cert was allegedly confined in a house near Dallas, pending payment of the ransom. The case had baffled private and public detective agencies for months.

Four of the five men allegedly connected with the kidnaping plot are:

Currie W. Caldwell, arrested in Waco. He is believed to be the author of typewritten threat notes demanding ransom from the Cert family. Caldwell is being held in the Waxahatchie jail.

Charles R. Hassell, held in the Groesbeck jail.

Doyle Nash, held by Hillsboro officers.

Doyle's brother, Jimmie, held in the Navarro county jail.

Charges of false imprisonment have been filed against each of the four.

Golf, theatres and rifle shoots together with a thriller in a parachute jump by B. H. Murphy of San Angelo will help fill a complete two full days of entertainment.

Official nomination of V. Earl Earp for state commander of the American legion 1932 will be the most important move on the part of the Seventeenth district in several years. This meeting being the last before the state convention at El Paso in September, all legionnaires are requested to register at Ranger on the above dates.

A complete barbecue has been arranged for all those who register on either Saturday or Sunday, to be held on Sunday noon at the Willows.

The Ranger chamber of commerce through Secretary Wayne C. Hickey extends a most cordial welcome to all visitors and every consideration will be given to those who attend.

The address of Senator Tom Connally will be open to the public and every one is invited to hear him at noon Sunday.

Where Kentucky Coal Field War Flames

Typical scenes in the mine war area of eastern Kentucky, where several men have been killed in desperate battles between jobless miners and company guards are shown here. Above is a mine of the Black Mountain Coal Corporation, a machine gun being concealed in the small house at the top. At the right typical children of Harlan county where 5,000 wives and children of miners are said to be facing hunger. The miners there quit the United Mine Workers of America for the Ku Klux Klan during the palmy days of prosperity and now, following recent wage cuts, are seeking to establish themselves in the union and re-win union recognition from the operators which they lost at the time.

WOUNDED, MAN IS SUSPECT IN BURGLARY

DALLAS, May 13.—Wounded by a bullet believed fired from a burglar trap at the Odeneal Watch shop, a suspect was in custody of police today in connection with an attempt to burglarize the jewelry store.

The suspect, who gave his name as Waldo L. Woodward, 22, was found lying in a box car this morning suffering from a bullet-wound in his thigh. Woodward claimed to have been shot by a rival over the affections of a girl at a dance last night.

A bullet hole drilled through the back door of the jewelry store at about the same height as the wound in Woodward's leg, led officers to hold him as a suspect. An old army rifle rigged in such a position as to fire when the door was opened was found empty.

COMMITTEE DISTRICTING REPORT HELD

AUSTIN, May 13.—Failure of senate conference committee members to sign a report on adjustment of congressional redistricting differences prevented offering of the report to the legislature today.

Rep. Penrose Metcalfe, of San Antonio, chairman of the conference committee, said the report would be withheld for a while. It was announced last night it would be sent in today.

Dissatisfaction of east and north-east Texas senators with the way the three new districts are located under the conference agreement is said to be the cause of the delay. All house conference committee members signed the report. It was said, Sen. Clint Small, of Wellington, a senate member, said enough senate conferees favor the report to get it before the senate. No senators had signed the report this morning, however.

AUSTIN, May 13.—Conference committee agreement between house and senate members on congressional redistricting were ready this morning for report to the respective branches of the legislature.

The redistricting bill as adjusted by the committee is said to follow the general lines of the house bill disregarding east Texas in creation of the three new districts.

The average under census reapportionment figures should be 270,000. Under the bill Johnson county is included in the 12th district with Tarrant, Parker, Hood and Somerville.

In the 17th district Stephens, Palo Pinto, and Eastland are included along with Fisher, Jones, Shackelford, Nolan, Taylor, Calahan, Brown, Comanche, Mills, San Saba and Lampasas.

RED CROSS RELIEF FUND WITHDRAWN

R. T. Adkins, Red Cross auditor, of St. Louis, is in Cisco this week checking out the county chapter of the Red Cross in its drought relief fund administration. Distribution of relief through the county chapter will be discontinued Saturday when Mr. Adkins has completed his work. Coming in of spring gardens and availability of relief from other sources has prompted the Red Cross to close out its drought relief over most of the country at this time.

Since January 26 when the relief was first available in this county the Eastland county chapter, of which J. E. Spencer is chairman, has administered aid to 1003 families, numbering approximately 5,500 persons.

In the distribution of this relief from the Cisco headquarters Mr. Spencer has been assisted by A. M. Williams and J. B. Cate. A large part of the fund has been distributed through offices at Eastland, Ranger, Gorman and elsewhere in the county under Mr. Spencer's direction.

Spencer, of the chamber of commerce, from the Fort Worth chamber of commerce.

Preparations were being made to give the Fort Worthians a rousing welcome.

CATTLE LOSS WILL ALSO BE REPAID

AUSTIN, May 13.—A million dollars repayment of Texas farmers for losses through cattle and cotton restrictions was ordered today when the house of representatives concurred in senate amendments to its pink bollworm refunding bill.

The original bill introduced by Representative Lee Satterwhite, of Odessa, appropriated $300,000 to pay losses suffered by west Texans in the 1928-29 campaign to prevent spread of pink bollworm. The senate added $200,000 for farmers of northeast Texas for losses in 1922-23 and 1924 and $500,000 to reimburse farmers for losses due to tick eradication campaigns.

OVER 50 AT BANQUET FOR FORMER MAYOR

More than 50 persons attended the banquet on the Hotel Laguna roof garden last night honoring former Mayor J. M. Williamson upon his completion May 1 of 16 years of service as Cisco's chief executive. Mr. and Mrs. Williamson were honor guests.

At the conclusion of the program Mr. Williamson was presented with a gold medallion, on face of which, had been engraved a facsimile of Williamson dam. F. D. Wright made the presentation in behalf of Cisco citizens, appropriately expressing the thanks of the people for the former mayor's services with quotations from Kipling's inspirational poem "If."

Characteristics of the former mayor were eloquently brought out by P. W. Campbell, a former Ciscoan, now of Abilene, who declared that if Mr. Williamson can be charged with anything it was a persistent optimism in the face of discouragement and pessimism. He related incidents in his acquaintance with Mr. Williamson which exemplified this trait and declared that it was fitting that citizens should gather in such a way to express appreciation of the services of one who has been their leader.

Mayor J. T. Berry expressed to the retired mayor his wishes for a long and successful private life, declaring that he would be a hard man to follow in the mayorship.

Dr. C. C. Jones who served as toastmaster, injecting some of the spice of humor into the event, called upon Will Reagan, who entertained the occasion with a number of humorous stories and recalled some incidents which occurred during the first years of Mr. Williamson's administration, and Mrs. R. Q. Lee graciously paid tribute to Mr. Williamson's efforts and accomplishments.

Honor Guest Speaks

Mr. Williamson then spoke devoting about 15 minutes to appeal to the citizens to go forward in a program of building for the future. He declared that cities are made by men and that Cisco will be just what Cisco people want it to be. The necessity of finding a common ground upon which all can meet and work in harmony toward a common end was urged by the former mayor. He pointed out that it takes men who are consecrated and who are constructive in thought and determined in action to build and build with them for such consecration.

Music for the evening was furnished by the Bluebonnet Trio, a name particularly appropriate in view of the decorations of the roof garden. The trio consists of Mrs. Ben Krauskopf, Mrs. Troy Powell and Mrs. Clifford Yeager. They presented three numbers with violin, piano and cello.

Mr. Wright's presentation of the medallion was the final number on the program after which the entire group, led by O. J. Russell gave hearty college yells for Mr. Williamson and for Mayor J. T. Berry.

Tables for the evening were arranged in a triangle with Mr. Williamson, the honor guest, and Mayor J. T. Berry seated on either side of Toastmaster Dr. Jones at the front.

DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

GOD LOVES THE GOOD:—Truly God is good to Israel, even to such as are of a clean heart. — Psalm 73: 1.

THE LAW A DELIGHT:—I delight to do thy will, O my God; yea, thy law is within my heart.— Psalm 40: 8.

FIRE ON THE FARM.

During 1930 farmers suffered one of the greatest fire losses in agricultural history—a total of about $125,000,000, according to the National Fire Waste Council, as compared with an average of $100,000,000 in "normal" years.

This unusually heavy fire loss was attributed largely to the drought, which increased the common farm hazards such as highly combustible buildings, isolation from the protection of adequately equipped fire companies, and general lack of fire-quenching facilities.

Even so, the annual farm fire loss cannot be justified. Numerous studies have been completed and others are being made on how to reduce the waste. Many authoritative booklets, dealing with every phase of the agricultural fire problem, are available. The barrier in the way of prevention, of course, is the same on farms as in cities—the refusal of the individual to learn the fundamentals of fire prevention, and his carelessness in permitting unnecessary hazards to go uncorrected.

It cannot be questioned that the annual fire waste has done much to prevent farm prosperity. Even if all property were covered by insurance—which it is not—no policy can compensate for destroyed buildings and crops, wasted time, devastated land. Every farmer should take steps to make his property as "fire-proof" as is humanly possible.

A THRIFTY POLICE CAPTAIN.

Chicago is the city of sensations. Capt. John Placek of the Chicago police force has furnished the latest. A special grand jury is very busy in Cook county. It has been systematically examining the accounts of police captains for several weeks in an inquiry into alleged graft and corruption. These busy grand jurors made the interesting discovery that Capt. Placek has deposited $227,000 in his bank accounts in the last five years. Now they are asking the captain this pointed question, "Where did you get it?" Of course, the captain may have been a plunger when the plugging carnival was on. If so, it will be easy for him to call in his brokers and their books. Otherwise otherwise. And perhaps a ride to Joliet for the gallant captain.

AL SMITH ON THE PRO ISSUE.

A New Jersey college paper quotes Former Governor Alfred E. Smith as saying "that both political parties will have to take a definite stand on prohibition in the next presidential election." Why so? In 1920 both parties in convention assembled drafted and adopted platforms without a plank, definite or otherwise, as to prohibition. Indeed, it was known at the time that the national leaders of both parties had a secret understanding that prohibition was "a closed incident" and neither a moral nor a political issue. It will be for the delegates to the democratic convention next year in the selection of members of the platform committee to make the most of it. Away down here in Texas there are thousands of democrats who insist that the platform should be silent as to the prohibition issue and that the issue, if it is an issue, should be relegated to each of the 49 states for settlement. This may be dodging the issue but millions of democrats the country over appear to be determined that economic issues shall be the paramount proposals carried by the platform of their party next year.

WEST TEXAS READY FOR WHEAT HARVEST.

Senator Clinton Small, who knows the Panhandle country, the Plains country, indeed, all sections of that empire lying to the westward of Fort Worth, predicts the largest yield of wheat ever known in Texas. His advices are that unless something unforeseen takes place the total yield may top 50,000,000 bushels and the minimum yield not less than 45,000,000 bushels. There are wheat growers who predict 40 bushels to the acre in many sections of western Texas. They know the yield is to be great but they are in doubt as to the price. It may go as high as 50 cents, they say, and may drop as low as the 40 cent mark. Harvesting will begin early in June and hundreds of unemployed are promised jobs while the season is on.

Speaking of wheat culture there are men away out in the west who say that it would be just as easy for that section of Texas to produce 200,000,000 bushels as 40 or 50 million bushels. Texas and Oklahoma growers promise to astonish the natives this year in the production of the golden grain. How will all this affect the price of wheat?

HOOVER ADVISES "SCRAP ARMAMENTS"

President Hoover has a new plan to bring about world revival of trade. He appeared before the congress of the International Chamber of Commerce and advised "the scrapping of armaments as a major means by which the world can encourage business revival." He declared emphatically that nearly five billion dollars is spent yearly on arms, or 70 per cent more than before the great war of history. If all the nations of the earth would scrap armaments it would be a godsend to the taxpayers of the world. But the statesmen of the world all advise the scrapping of armaments and let it go at that.

Why should Uncle Sam dismantle his navy and disband his army with the armies and navies of European and Asiatic countries more formidable than when the peace treaty was signed?

OTHER OPINIONS

A BARBAROUS NATION

America, in the opinion of Gilbert K. Chesterton, English author, is a nation of barbarians. There is no beauty here, very little culture, not even a village of the type that is necessary to accentuate the home influence in the life of the people. There isn't anything here, in fact, which impressed Mr. Chesterton as worth while, and the wonder is that anybody could be content to stay here.

One wonders, naturally, how Mr. Chesterton made so grievous a mistake in the selection of people with whom to associate while visiting America, and how even on a short journey through the country he failed to notice anything that pleased him. But it matters little, any way, and there is no occasion for popular excitement about his criticisms. There really are barbarians here, of course, there really is ugliness, and there are most of the other unlovely things Mr. Chesterton thinks he found while here. But not all of the visitors to this country see these undesirable conditions because not all come searching for them. It reminds one of the story of the three blind men who attempted to describe an elephant. One thought the pachyderm was like a wall, another that he was like a tree and the third that he was like a rope, each basing his opinion upon that small portion of the elephant's anatomy that he had been able to touch. Mr. Chesterton thinks America, is a nation of barbarians because he came here with preconceived prejudices and went about industriously to verify and strengthen them. While doing so, he missed all the beauty and refinement and virtue that exists in America and may be readily discovered by any who may be interested in searching for these things. —Brownwood Bulletin.

In the Political Arena

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD

Sen. Carl Hardin of Erath county was reasonably happy at the close of legislative action Thursday night. He is the author of the child welfare bills which were enacted by the senate and sent to the house. These bills had the backing of the governor, the American Legion, Col. William Strauss of Houston and many important welfare organizations the state over. A measure known as the key of the group of welfare bills for the creation of a state division of child welfare ran the gauntlet of all opposition when the house finally passed the senate bill with amendments. It is said the amendments were accepted by the author of the group of measures so the welfare workers and humanitarians predict there is no prospect of blocking passage.

Now the chief feature of the bill enacted by the house is a section placing all delinquent, dependent and illegitimate children and those in state, county or city institutions in custody of the state board of control. If a child is found to be neglected the board gives the parents 30 days to provide adequately for it after which the state takes control if the parents fail. A similar time is given them to take children now in state institutions out of them. More important than this the child welfare division is to seek care of its wards in homes rather than institutions. County welfare boards of seven members named by county commissioners' courts are authorized to co-operate.

Another section prohibits bringing orphans under 16 into the state without permits from the board of control unless they are brought in by relatives guaranteeing to assume their care. It is to be regretted that a house amendment exempted counties of less than 75,000 population from its provisions and as passed by the house the bill provided for payment of the same amount as now and reenacted many of the provisions of the present laws. There were two votes cast against the key measure when final action was taken by the senate and the bill sent to the house where slight opposition was encountered and amendments were tacked onto the original bill. Sen. Hardin is known as Santa Claus among the merchants and business men of Erath and his section of the state. He received his education at the old Jarvis college, Thorpe Springs, in earlier days one of the widely known institutions of learning in the rural districts of Texas. As a business man and civic builder he always had time to lend a helping hand to boys and girls who needed the helping hand. He has educated a number of children, boys and girls who have made good as men and women fighting the battle of life.

All the backers, speaking of the humanitarians, in behind these bills are to be congratulated. In a government sense a splendid start has been made. It will be up to all men and women interested in child welfare to continue the noble work until Texas shall have a system of welfare laws second to none in the nation.

Scientists who have viewed it estimate that it was about seven feet long and four inches in diameter.

DOGDOM'S DEAD HEROES LIE IN OWN CEMETERY

By HENRY MINOTT
United Press Staff Correspondent
DEDHAM, Mass., May 13.—Dogdom's distinguished dead sleep here in the canine equivalent of Arlington National Cemetery.

On a gentle green slope, streaked with gravel paths, ornamented with flowering shrubs and plants, and shaded by cedars, oaks and pines, are hundreds of neatly-kept graves of dogs that died heroically, of dogs that starred on the stage, of dogs that won top honors in their breeds, and of dogs which might be classified as "just plain mutts," but which won a master's love.

It is called the Pine Ridge Animal Cemetery. It was established by the late Mrs. Huntington Smith, founder of the Animal Rescue League of Boston, was opened to the public in 1907, and is operated by the League's caretaker, Edward Prescott and two assistants tend the grounds.

Burial Plot for Men

Cats and canines, rabbits and squirrels, parrots and monkeys are buried there. There is even the grave of a hen. But most of the approximately 1,200 graves, covering more than six acres, are those of dogs, and in one huge plot are the resting places of 14 dogs, all of which were owned by one woman.

A 200-foot grape arbor offers a picturesque approach to this model graveyard. In the center of the cemetery is a memorial of granite, shrouded with privet and inscribed: "To the many dogs that have given their lives in the service of man."

Nearby is a weeping willow. At least three-quarters of the graves have monuments, stones or tablets as elaborate as those to be found in an ordinary cemetery. And many of these granite or marble memorials bear epitaphs, such as: "She shared in my joys and kissed away my tears."

"Not a common doggie, human as could be; surely there in Heaven you are waiting, Babe, for me."

Tribute to Cat
On a cat's tombstone one reads: "He was only a cat, but he was human enough to be a great comfort in hours of loneliness and pain."

Quite the most pretentious memorial in the graveyard is a vast stone said to have cost $3,000. Behind the big bronze door, of this honeysuckle-covered vault lies the body of Jessie, a dog once owned by the late R. H. White, Boston merchant.

The pets of many prominent persons from various sections of the United States lie in Pine Ridge. A granite stone inscribed "In memory of Master Billy Arliss" marks the grave of a dog which for years was the almost constant companion of George Arliss, the actor.

Bayonet Shortened for Quicker Killing

LONDON, May 13.—The war lords of Europe, always looking for new ways of killing men more quickly and with less trouble, have shortened the bayonet.

During the World War the Allied infantry went into action with long knives attached to their rifles. The British Tommy had 24 inches of cold steel.

Instructors at training camps, however, had considerable difficulty in teaching the recruits to sink the long blades into the sawdust figures. It proved to be even more difficult to thrust the bayonets into the enemy who blocked and jabbed with a 15-inch blade.

Thus, in reviewing trench warfare during peace, the military leaders decided this form of killing could be expedited by a shorter bayonet in the hands of a skilled soldier. The new rifle calls for a nine inch bayonet. Belgium has a nine and one-half inch bayonet, the Italian is 11 1/2 inches and the French 15 1/2. The Germans have made no change.

Although it is frequently reported, new gasses have been found so powerful that one sniff will wipe out an entire army, that shells loaded with germs will be unloosed in the next conflict and the mobilization and mechanization of war equipment will facilitate slaughter in the next war, army officials hold the efficacy of the bayonet has not passed.

SIMPLE HOME REMEDY FOR GRAY HAIR OR BALDNESS

Brings Back Youthful Color, Stimulates Growth Too

YOU LOOK YOUNGER AND EXPERTS CAN'T DETECT

"I was amazed to notice my hair getting thicker, more even colored and healthy looking and every single gray hair in my head turned back to youthful color again as if by magic," declared an enthusiastic user of Lea's Hair Tonic which has amazed thousands and is being introduced here now.

Lea's Hair Tonic contains numerous ingredients a doctor labored years to work out in his search for something harmless which one could use for years with unvarying change in the hair—a stimulating massage treatment of the scalp which seems to put nature back on the job. He didn't want an ugly eye or tint that produces shocking shades, ever growing darker and dull. He figures if a tonic would stimulate the liver, heart, digestion, bowels, etc., the proper tonic massage would stimulate the growth and health of the scalp, hair roots and color glands. How successful he was can be proven by using Lea's Tonic a few weeks, each night to bald or gray spots. To test apply nightly to spot size of silver dollar and watch results. There are over 3,000 shades of human hair—no dye expert can paint the hair so exquisitely as nature. One appears years younger. No shocking change to startle your friends—just a gradual change day by day so naturally not even an expert will detect Lea's. Any hair with a spark of life left springs into activity, and bald spots fade away. Thousands of exhaustive empirical tests prove this and every claim is backed up by the nationally known Lea Tonic Co.

If a reader desires to try Lea's Hair Tonic on guarantee of complete satisfaction, they should get a bottle at drug store or pin dollar bill to this and send to Lea Tonic Co., Brentwood, Md., for regular bottle, full directions, postage paid. Sent C. O. D. if desired—12c extra. —Adv.

One MELODY GIRL

by RUTH DEWEY GROVES
AUTHOR OF "THE HUSBAND HUNTERS"

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Beryl Borden, secretly in love with Tommy Wilson, prevents his attempted elopement with her half-sister, Irene Everett, by kidnapping him with the assistance of her "gang." Failing to convince him of his duty to finish college and not disappoint his aunt, Beryl lets Tommy return to Irene who, enraged at the delay, refuses to elope with him.

Later Tommy rescues one of Beryl's gang from drowning. The girl is blamed by her family.

Irene receives the offer of an audition over radio, and again refuses to marry Tommy. She consents to let Beryl accompany her to the studio. While waiting in an ante-room, Beryl sits down at the piano and dramatically croons melodies to the father who died so long ago. Accidentally hearing her, one of the directors is charmed and gives her a private test. They like the velvety tones of her voice and assure her of a contract with Mr. Gaylord. When Beryl tells Irene, whose test is a failure, the latter flies in a rage and says Beryl has made a fool of herself.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XII

Always that thrust from Irene. Beryl winced inwardly. Could her sister have guessed how she felt about Tommy Wilson—how he was the greatest thing in the world to her in spite of her appreciation of his limitations?

Well, whatever Irene thought she'd never get the truth from her lips, Beryl decided, and remained silent.

Irene stormed on until they reached the Pennsylvania station, then verbal exhaustion forced her silent into silence. But once they were seated in the Long Island train she took up her grievance again, impelled to questioning by her curiosity.

Beryl would not tell her of the chance she was to have to sing for Mr. Gaylord, the soap manufacturer. After all, she had her own pride and sense and if Mr. Gaylord did not like her voice she'd never hear the end of it from Irene if she told her of the trial beforehand.

Irene was still talking angrily when they arrived home. The scene that ensued, with their mother inevitably siding with Irene, finally sent Beryl to her room to save herself from crying before them.

"The hard-boiled ingrate," Irene characterized her as Beryl disappeared up the stairs, her head high and an air of jaunty disdaining her heartache.

She wanted someone to share her unexpected good fortune—to thrill with her over its possibilities. Beryl was not one to enjoy happiness alone. As she was eager to share other people's sorrows and joys she was just as eager to share her own. She liked sympathy when she needed it, and plaudits and congratulations when she deserved them. And now when she had something tremendous to share there was no one near and dear to her to share it.

If in the fortlessness of her position she indulged in a little self pity no one knew it and when next her family saw her there was no trace of the tears she had shed. Rather she affected an unconcern in regard to their sullen, criticizing silence that furthered their impression of her heartlessness.

Mrs. Everett had warned Irene to keep quiet before her father. He'd had a trying day at the store without Beryl's help and his wife knew the instant he entered the house that he would not take part with anyone who started a row, regardless of justice. Mrs. Everett dreaded her husband's displeasure for, like many mild but strong-minded persons, he was loud in battle and she feared his words would be overheard by the neighbors. Next door a family had built up close to the property line, and in summer time, with the windows open—

"Don't get your father started," she had whispered in an aside to Irene just before the family gathered for dinner.

Irene had been upstairs taking a shower bath and dressing for the evening. She had telephoned Tommy to come over after dinner—

Beryl had heard her—and when she came into the dining room she was palpably made up to please him. She looked as fresh and dainty as a daisy in dew. Beryl who had been helping her mother in the kitchen, was more like a flower beside a dusty road.

Mrs. Everett, too, looked the toilet. Beryl offered to make him a tomato cocktail and when she brought it, filled with fine ice, she thanked her with a grateful glance.

He was too tired to sense the undercurrent of ill feeling that his wife and daughter shared. Otherwise he would not, perhaps, have been so tactless as to ask Irene how her audition had come out.

"It was a flop," Irene answered, "and it's all my fault. Behind her father's back her mother shook a warning head at her. She checked her speech but her eyes glared daggers at Beryl.

"Why, that's too bad," her father said sympathetically, but he did not question her further. To a man who had been on his feet all day after sweeping out grocery store—lifting, heaving, stooping, dragging, weighing and wrapping packages, trying to give service to make up for lack of superior stock, a daughter's aspirations were less interesting than the prospect of rest. Especially when he could leave her future to her mother. His wife could handle these things better than he could, he'd always argued, and so he had been more or less left out of consideration when Irene's career was being discussed.

Mrs. Everett felt no such comfortable acceptance of her daughter's first failure. But she was able to hide her disappointment from her husband because of her belief that Irene had been dealt with unfairly. She still believed what Irene had told her—that Beryl had got them both laughed at in the studio. Beryl had not denied it. Another time and Irene would succeed.

The dinner that Mrs. Everett had prepared as a feast to celebrate Irene's triumph was eaten in silence. Irene was the first to leave the table—to wait for Tommy on the front porch.

Beryl, realizing that it was hopeless to expect assistance from her, too, had made plans for the evening after she'd heard Irene telephoning to Tommy. Irene had hinted broadly to him at the time that she had some trouble to pour out to him and Beryl had guessed that she meant to accuse her of everything she could.

Well, she wasn't going to stay around and get an earful of what Tommy thought about it. Tommy was Irene's man and she could expect him to sympathize with her sister.

For her part she'd go to her gang and tell them her good news. The kids would appreciate it. When she got them all together she swore them to silence and then confided that she was going to get a chance to sing on the radio. "And we'll make up a code," she said excitedly, "like some of the radio announcers do so they can tell their wives when they'll be home and then I can send messages to you."

"Aw, you're gonna sing; not talk. If you talk nobody'll listen to you."

"Well, I can cough."

"I'll let you know as soon as I'm hired and don't forget not to breathe a word of it."

They asked her a lot of questions but she wouldn't keep them but late enough to give all the answers. It was still too early to go home, though. Tommy was sure to be there.

She dismissed her gang and went for a walk along the beach. It was practically deserted and Beryl loved it when she had it alone. There were big boulders strewn along it—one in particular upon which she liked to perch and stare at the lights twinkling across the sound. But tonight she found it occupied, and by Irene and Tommy.

They did not see her as she approached in the darkness, nor did she see them until she was close enough to overhear their conversation. They were arguing and what Beryl heard Tommy say set her heart singing with happiness. He did not apparently agree with Irene that she had ruined her sister's chances at the broadcasting station. He seemed to think Irene's surmises were absurd. "Gosh, Irene," he said, "Beryl wouldn't deliberately do a thing like that."

It wasn't a very warm defense, and it was made with a bit of reluctance, as though the defender were loath to make it by an admission of which he was not proud. Beryl knew that he was taking her part against his will and for a moment she loved him without reservations.

"He has to be fair," she exclaimed. "He can't help it!"

What Irene was thinking of him was distinctly different. To make sure of his allegiance she had made herself as irresistibly attractive as she could. Tommy had been impressed—she had seen that at once—and he had begun again urging her to marry him. She had felt certain that he would be as furious with Beryl as she was.

And he had dared to differ with her.

As her hot words poured out into the night Beryl turned away with a tender smile in the corners of her mouth. An impulse toward joyous expression sent her cartwheeling down the beach where the sand was smooth and hard.

From that night she did not mind the attitude of Irene and her mother. Nor did she tell them of her prospects. But they felt a suppressed glow about her and Irene resented it as a manifestation of envious satisfaction.

As the time Beryl expected she must hear from Mr. Barnhoff drew near her excitement grew until she found it difficult to keep from speaking of her secret.

And then suddenly one day she realized that it had been quite a while that she'd been waiting. After that, as day after day went by and no word came from the studio, she began to wonder if Irene were right and someone had been fooling her.

That didn't seem like Mr. Barnhoff, she told herself. "I guess they didn't like my voice so much, after all," she decided.

From that moment it became hard to endure Irene's continuous taunts about the result of her test.

Keeping Up With the Boy Scouts

Breckenridge Scouts in Clean Up

The scouts of Breckenridge are assisting the city in a clean up campaign by distributing circulars announcing the campaign, asking the citizens to clean up their yards, vacant lots and alleys and to place the rubbish in places where a city trash wagon can collect it. The scouts are to make an inspection later. Mayor Chas. H. Clark is asking that each citizen and the scouts cooperate.

Ranger Troops On Hike

Friday evening Mr. Murray of the Burton Lingo Lumber Co., carried our troop out on his truck to Tiffin canon. After arriving Scoutmaster Powers asked the patrols to divide and cook their supper by patrols. After supper we were given instruction in building a lean-to. Then followed the camp fire. Troop 10, arrived for the camp fire and patrol stunts and songs were enjoyed. Troop 10, went home after the campfire program and our troop spent the night. Cooked our breakfast and arrived home about 10 a. m.—Jack Mooney, scribe.

Gorman Scouts Take Hike

Our troop took a hike the other night and had a very interesting time we found a turkey buzzard's nest and she was sitting on two eggs. We took them home and found that one wasn't any good and put the other one under an old hen and patiently waited to see the results—we only waited one week and there was the little downy turkey buzzard—but alas an industrious hen came along and tried to get in the nest with the mother hen and stepped on the little buzzard and killed him dead—so that's that. We found two perfect good heads which we put in our window. We have a window down in town that we are displaying our collections.—Reporter.

Origin of Seal Sale Described

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 13.—How the first Christmas seal sale in the United States twenty-four years ago under most discouraging conditions was told here during the annual meeting of the National Tuberculosis association, by Emily P. Bissell of Wilmington, Del., who promoted the idea of using seals to raise money to fight tuberculosis.

"Every advertising man I meet," said Miss Bissell, "prophesied failure. They could not see it despite the fact that Christmas seals had been successfully used in Denmark, nobody thought they would find a sale in this country. At that time everybody believed that tuberculosis was hereditary and fatal."

Miss Bissell described the difficulties she encountered in the work of financing a sanatorium on the banks of the Brandywine river in Delaware. The Delaware Red Cross had no funds to finance the project, so she drew the design herself and had the printing of the seals done on credit. This first seal sale raised $3,000.

STATE TAXES ON AUTO GAS VARY GREATLY

By STU HAWLEY, Director Texaco National Road Reports

NEW YORK, May 13. — Probably every motorist breathed a prayer of thankfulness that he didn't live in England when he read their budget proposal to levy a 12 cent tax on gasoline. This levy is to be made with the frankly expressed intention of increasing revenue for other purposes than road construction.
Recent legislative enactments have increased the gasoline tax in several of the states. This summer tourists may expect to pay a two cents tax in Missouri, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York and the District of Columbia, Minnesota, Iowa, Illinois, Michigan, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware the tax is three cents.

A Four Cent Tax
Oregon, Nevada, Utah, Wyoming, Colorado, North and South Dakota, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Texas, Wisconsin, Indiana, Ohio, West Virginia, Alabama, Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, and Maryland have decided to assess a four cent tax.

The five cents rate applies in the several provinces of Canada, as well as in Washington, Montana, Idaho, Arizona, New Mexico, Louisiana, Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi and Virginia.

This leaves Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, North and South Carolina who have placed the tax figure at six cents.

An additional tax which ranges from one cent to three cents a gallon is levied by counties and cities in some of the Gulf and Rocky Mountain states.

The division of the sums derived from this tax on gasoline varies in nearly every state. In some states the entire amount is applied to the new and reconstruction of roads and highways. In others a portion is applied to the retirement of existing indebtedness incurred by the sale of highway bonds while the balance is used for current construction expense.

Varied Programs
The construction programs are nearly as varied as are the divisions of the tax. Some states require each county to pay a definite percentage of the costs of the state highways and in return contribute nothing toward the building, or maintenance of county roads.

A few of the states contribute in various ways toward county road maintenance. A few require no co-operation from the counties excepting rights-of-way for new constructions. Some require no co-operation whatever.

All states are required to contribute a definite portion of the roads embraced in the Federal Aid System.

Also only roads of a type approved by the Federal Bureau of Roads can be constructed under this program.
