YOUNG BOB LA FOLLETTE AND THE R. F. C.

Sen. Robert M. LaFollette, Jr., will reintroduce in the lame duck session of congress his bill to provide unemployment relief for states and cities "without the red tape of the R. F. C."

Isn't it true that there must be red tape regulations? R. F. C. contributions to states and cities are loans. They are not gifts. They must be paid. Taxpayers must pay them. Regardless of this the hungry must be fed; the shelterless must be given roofs; the ragged or semi-naked must be furnished clothing until jobs are provided for the jobless when "the happy days return." Uncle Sam is a pauper. He hasn't a dollar of his own. Every dollar he appropriates or spends for any purpose must come out of the pockets of the American people. It is impossible for a nation to exist on credit alone. Pay day always comes. It is "pay or repudiate" and Americans are not repudiators.

PROFESSOR HAS A RECOVERY PLAN.

George R. Roraback is professor of foreign trade at Harvard. He is an Academy of Political Science speaker. As a prerequisite to the restoration of international trade, he advises that modification of war dabs and tariff barriers with the United States leading the way, must come without delay. Frederick E. Murphy, publisher of the Minneapolis Tribune is another Academy of political science ace. Col. Murphy in an address pictured American agriculture as steadily sinking to the low level of peasantry. He said inter-government debts are at the bottom of the difficulty and the fundamental cause for the stoppage of international trade. If the growers of the world produce more cotton than the mills of the world consume or the buying trade takes, how will it be possible to pay the grower a price above the cost of production? How will it be possible to pay the grain grower a price above the cost of production? How will it be possible in this machine age to create jobs for ten million men and women who are idle? Colonels and professors of economy are very glib and very fascinating talkers, but the question is are they "bringing home the bacon?"

WOLL SPEAKS FOR LABOR.

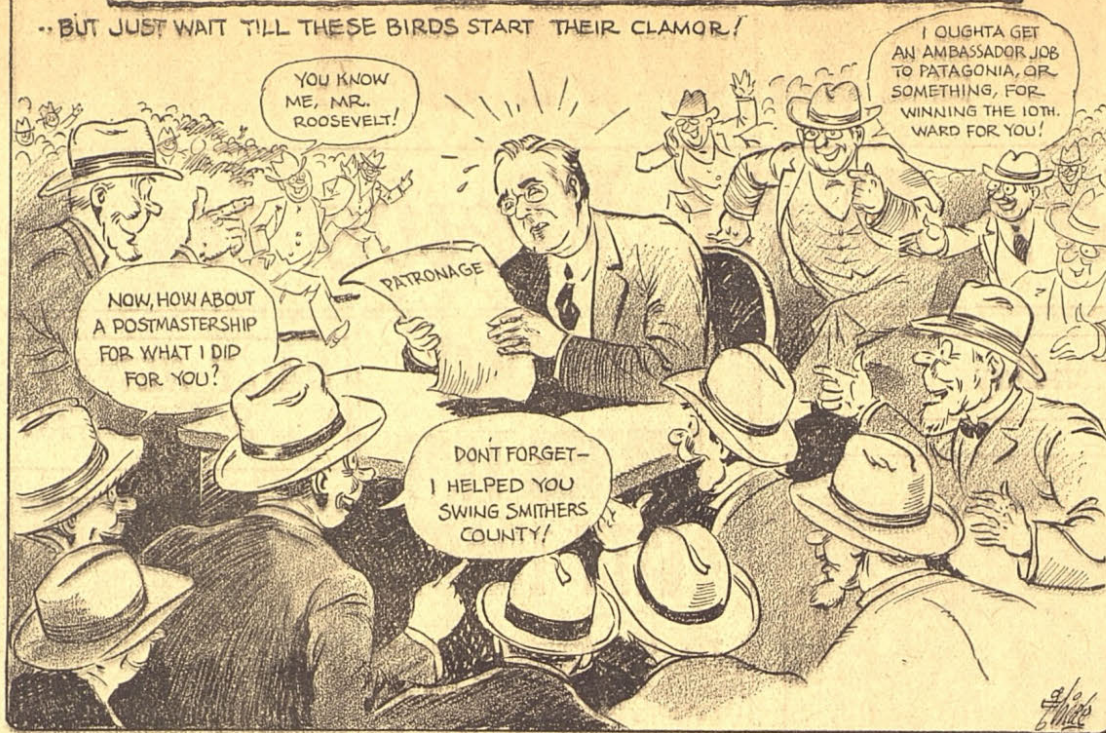

Matthew Woll is one of the big shots of organized labor. He is a fascinating talker, a most imaginative writer. He is not a radical. He is for the constitution as it is written and believes that a real civilization will provide jobs for every man and woman as well as maintain high standards of living for those in gainful employment.

He is chairman of the labor committee for modification of the Volstead act. In a statement he said that labor sees "no excuse for violation of the law until congress has amended it." Interpreting the November election as clearly against the Volstead act and the 18th amendment this labor chieftain declared to rush forward under the assumption the law had already been changed was "not the way of Americanism and not the road to true temperance." Matthew Woll thinks before he talks.

WHERE THE MORON HAS THE BEST OF IT.

Yes, the depression has been hell. Now another affliction is about to fall upon American humanity. Dr. Carroll C. Turner of Memphis told a group of the Southern Medical association that 1,000,000 students now in college faced the prospect of becoming inmates of hospitals for mental diseases and among them one-third will be classed as incurable. This ratio is 7.5 per cent higher than for tuberculosis, according to the distinguished medical scientist, and one type of mental disease alone "takes more beds than are used for tuberculosis and its complications." Dr. Turner appears to be a lightning calculator. He has his figures: There are about 300,000

Speaking of Debt Problems---

EDITOR'S NOTE: Clarence Hawkes, 63, of Hadley, Mass., widely-known as a poet, lecturer, and naturalist despite the fact he has been totally blind and a cripple for 50 years, has written for the United Press the following Thanksgiving poem.

Thanksgiving Hymn

By CLARENCE HAWKES
"The Blind Poet of Hadley"
(Written for the United Press)

Our father's God and God of ours,
God of the grain, the fruit and flowers,
Whose gracious smile on every hand
Doth wake to life the sleeping land;
God of the Summer and the Spring,
Who taught our hearts like birds to sing,
We thank Thee, God, at this great feast
For care of man and bird and beast.

We thank Thee, Lord, that through this year,
With all its hardships and its fear
Thy sovereign will didst lead us higher,
A cloud by day by night a fire,
With chastened heart and eyes oft wet
In opulence we soon forget;
With pomp of power and gain of gold
Our civic virtues rust and mold.

We thank Thee for our "Ship of State,"
For those great men who made us great.
We thank Thee, for each Church and School—
Earth's greatest menace is a fool.
We thank Thee for the Pilgrim's faith,
Sublime in life serene in death.
We still transmit that vital blood
So we can stand as they have stood.

We thank Thee, God, that fairer skies,
Above depression now arise.
This passing year so full of wrath
Hath garnered much of wheat and chaff.
From deepest depths we now must climb
Through great ideals to heights sublime.
We praise Thee, Lord, show us the way,
We thank Thee for "Thanksgiving Day."

mental hospital patients with about 75,000 new admissions each year. One-half of the 15,000 actual suicides and 35,400 attempted suicides each year represent preventable types of mental disorder and, listen to this. "Statistics indicate that at least 20 per cent of jail and penitentiary inmates are mentally ill and about 40 per cent are mentally defective." Let us battle for the return of "the good old days," or give the American world back to the Indians. However, the eminent scientist-surgeon-physician may have muddled his figures. If he hasn't the so-called moron has the best of it in this vale of tears. He is not to be afflicted with these ghastly or ghostly mental disorders turned loose upon a weary world.

PRODUCTION OF GOLD IN AMERICA.

Gold mining shows renewed activity in the United States. South Africa and Canada, the two largest producers in the world, showed a decreased production for September as compared with August. Production in the United States during September reached another high for the year, or 246,000 fine ounces, valued at $5,034,820. Yes, speaking of this republic, "thar is gold in them thar hills."

Did You Ever Stop to Think?

By EDSON R. WAITE
Shawnee, Oklahoma.

Joseph J. Cannon, editor of the Salt Lake City, (Utah) Desert News, says:

"It is easy to feel the romance that illumines the lives of past generations. The story may be of plain living, sober fashions and hard toil, yet even these, which would be dreary now, quicken us, because they touch life as we live it in the higher perhaps truer, consciousness of the imagination. It is not difficult, either, to anticipate the romance of the future, when new experiences only suggested now by advanced thinkers will be realities to those who live after us.

"If then the past and the future are both glorified by romance, it follows that to our descendants looking backward historically, the present would be a romantic era also. So that it falls generally to seem so to us is due to our letting the sense of reality suppress the sense of the imagination. The 'now' should be of deeper significance and stimulation to us than what was 'now' to our fathers or what will be 'now' to our children. Yet because of being with us from the cradle to the grave it has grown to be commonplace tiresome, to some even ugly.

"The really useful newspaper not only tells the story of the present with stark truthfulness but makes its readers feel genuine pity for common suffering, indignation at usual injustice, cheer before the unfolding comedy of life and happy surprises in the discovery of every-day beauty. In other words, the good newspaper dramatizes the present and makes its readers feel the romance of today."

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

Today is Thanksgiving day, in case you folk haven't heard about it. In the event you have I herewith wish you a fat turkey, or better still, a nice, thick sirloin steak, to fill "the bag that contains you and make you prosperous, at least for a day."

Besides being Thanksgiving day today will be football day. Over at Ranger, if it doesn't rain, the Buck-aros of Breckenridge will engage the Bulldogs of Ranger in a game that will have much to do with who will be the schoolboy football champions of the oil belt district. If it does rain the game will be played anyway. The crowd will probably be less, however.

The day is important for another reason. The sale of Christmas seals will begin. These seals, sold at a penny each, are the means of getting funds with which to fight tuberculosis, that plague which has cost humanity so much in suffering and misery, ruined more fine talent and cost more happiness than perhaps any other affliction. Thanks to the Seals and to the consecration and heroism of many fine people the scourge is being slowly but surely eradicated from the world.

If it hadn't been for the White Plague thirty or forty years more might have been added to the life of Robert Louis Stevenson with a consequent great increase in the volume of his masterful contributions to English literature. One can find many other instances where the world has lost much because of its affliction.

In Cisco the seals will be sold by the West Ward Parent-Teacher association.

Price Rainbolt, hobbling about on a foot and a half, isn't going to be satisfied altogether with this Thanksgiving. He still has a couple of good heels left but the ball of one foot is a mighty sick member. The reason is a nail wound.

Price, hastening about the interior of a burning residence the other night giving orders to the firemen who were dragging lengths of hose to fight the flames, drove a 16-penny nail through the sole of the foot. The nail penetrated the leather of a fireman's boot at least half an inch thick.

But the pain of the wound he, confided yesterday morning, was secondary to the technical interest of the physician who treated it. The doctor was obsessed with the belief that a bacillus tetanus had established a residence at the farthest recess of the wound and went in after it. Price hopes that he found the invader.

Austin is Host to History Commission

AUSTIN, Nov. 23.—The Historical commission of the Texas Knights of Columbus convened here today for a two-day session at St. Edward's University.

The commission for six years has been engaged in compiling data of the early missions in Texas. Spanish, Mexican and Early Texas records have been gathered in connection with the work.

Members of the commission are: The Revs. Joseph G. O'Donohue, Sherman; John S. Murphy, Galveston; M. S. Gariga, San Antonio; Constant Glein, O. M. C. Carlisbad; and Arnold A. Boding, Beville.

Most Rev. Francisco Orozco y Jimenez D. D., Archbishop of Guadajajara, Mex., and Dr. Joseph I. Driscoll, El Paso, former state deputy of the Knights of Columbus are expected to be here to participate in the conference. Dr. Carlos E. Castabeda of the Garcia Library of the University of Texas is also assisting.

SPECIAL ADULT CLASSES.

DETROIT, Nov. 23. — Special courses for adults on the visual arts, contemporary literature, understanding of music and art appreciation are offered here in a school conducted by the Young Women's Christian Association. The courses, taught by college and university instructors, began Sept. 28.

WHITTLES FOR LIVING.

DETROIT, Nov. 23. — A gassed World War veteran, Fred Pilielta, is whittling a living out of old telephone poles to provide for his wife and six children. Pilielta spends 10 to 12 hours a day fashioning wooden ducks, known as decoys, from the old poles. He sells the ducks or trades them to merchants planning a hunting trip in exchange for clothing and food.

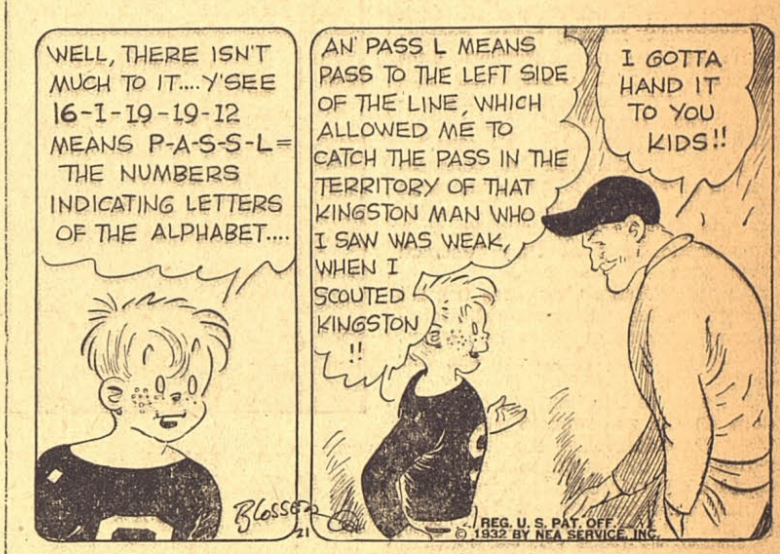

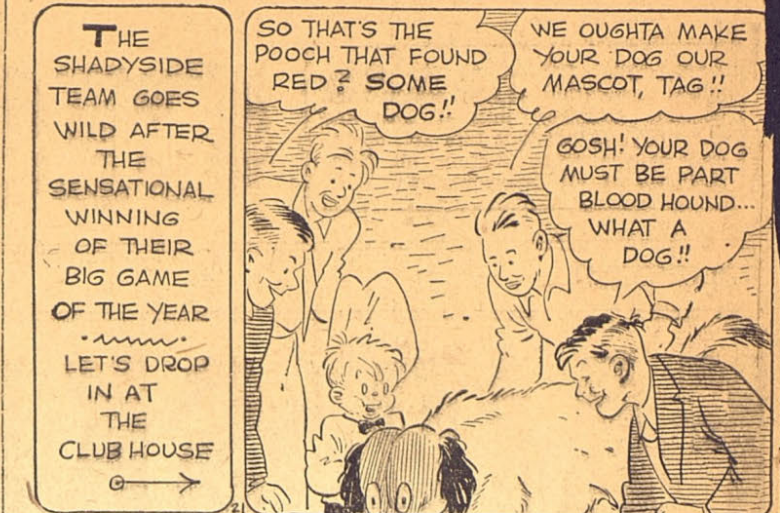

One Sure Way to End Coughs and Colds

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (Adv.)

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON.—There is no public question which can be described as messier than that of the war debts and if there are some who may have a full grasp of the situation at the moment there is none who can forecast its future consequences.

Only the possibilities of the immediate future, as they affect the mechanics of the state of affairs created by European demands for moratorium extension pending a re-examination of the question, may be discussed with any certainty.

One certainty is that President-elect Roosevelt finds himself "on the spot" more definitely than at any time in his recent career. Months before his presidential term begins, he must decide whether he wants to force the debtor nations to choose between default, with all its destructive possibilities, and making the hard cash payments on the present schedule to which they so strongly object.

IF Roosevelt joins Hoover in using their united influence on the two parties which they lead, it is possible that Congress will reverse its position of last year, when it turned down Hoover's recommendation for revival of the war debt commission and flatly declared against "any manner" of cancellation or reduction.

But unless Roosevelt goes strongly to bat for new debt negotiations the present temper of Congress is such that the allies will be called upon to start paying again on Dec. 15th.

Default might easily be the first step toward repudiation and the effects of repudiation, other things being equal, would be more serious than those of default. The attitude of those who defy default is that the debtor nations presumably would resume payments sooner or later.

THE question of payment or default is being considered especially with regard to England, which will be scheduled to pay $95,000,000 on Dec. 15th, whereas France must pay only $19,000,000 if Congress fails to act. France has plenty of gold and could pay easily. It would be far more difficult for Britain.

But Britain is a great creditor nation and presumably doesn't want to default. A large part of her national income comes from her financial services and her debtors over the world might regard her war debt default as an invitation to follow suit. Also, she is as interested in stabilizing the structure of international finance and trade as we are.

Consequently, there is much doubt here whether England is willing to default at this time, regardless of what Congress does before Dec. 15th.

TO USE RADIO IN ARMY ONLY IN EMERGENCY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23. — The army has decided to restrict the employment of radio to emergency use for all arms of the service that can use wires, it was revealed in the annual report of Maj. Gen. Irving J. Carr, chief signal officer.

Carr cited two reasons for this new policy. First, "lack of a sufficient number of channels to permit the simultaneous operation of more than a small fraction of the authorized number of sets, without interference." Second, "the apparent impracticability of furnishing the necessary number of qualified radio operators within a reasonable time in an emergency."

New Policy

The new War department policy toward use of radio was laid down as follows:

1. Except for aircraft, mechanized forces and other rapidly moving units which are unable to install wire communication only such numbers of radio sets will be authorized as are essential to provide the minimum instantaneous communication necessary.
2. All other units will depend primarily on wire circuits for electrical communication. Radio will be considered available for emergency use only.
3. The paralleling of wire circuits by radio channels will be considered abnormal.

Carrier Pigeon
Despite new means of communication, Carr indicated, the carrier pigeon is still important as a messenger.

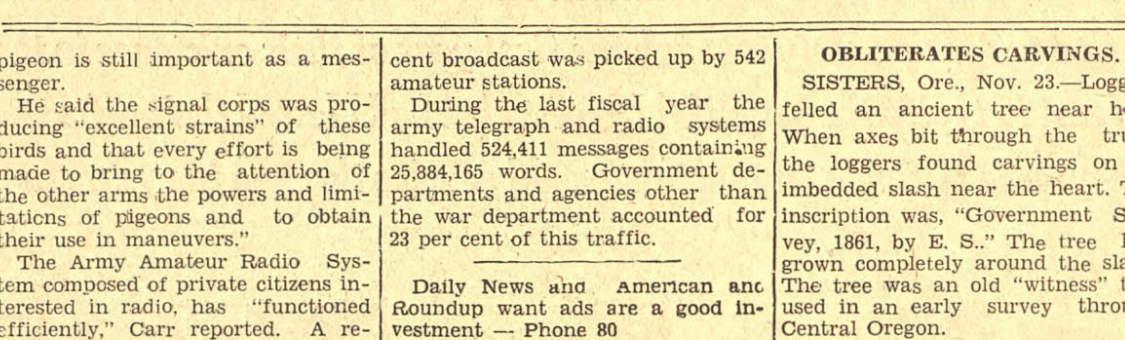

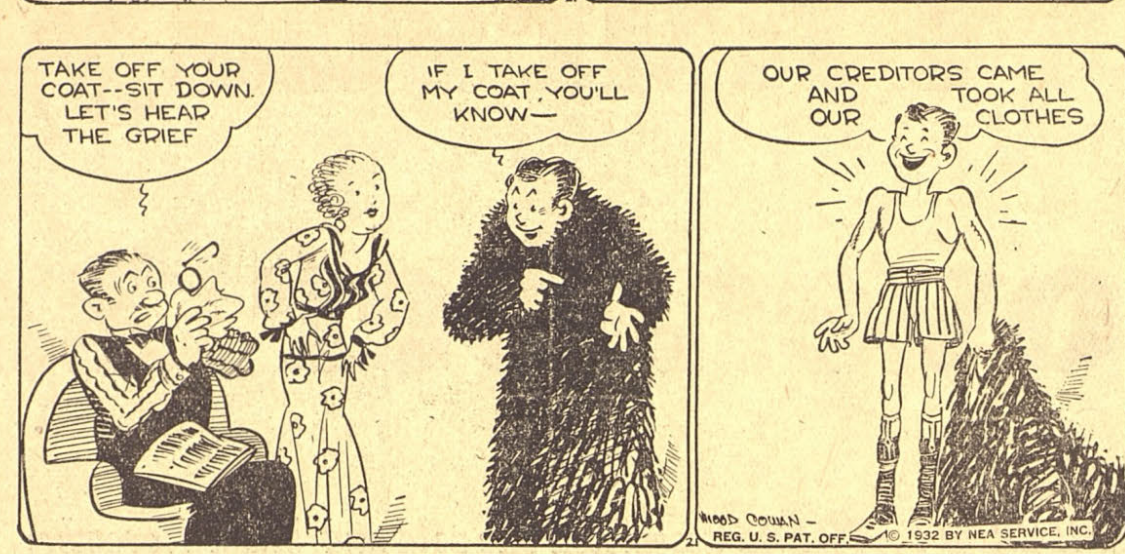

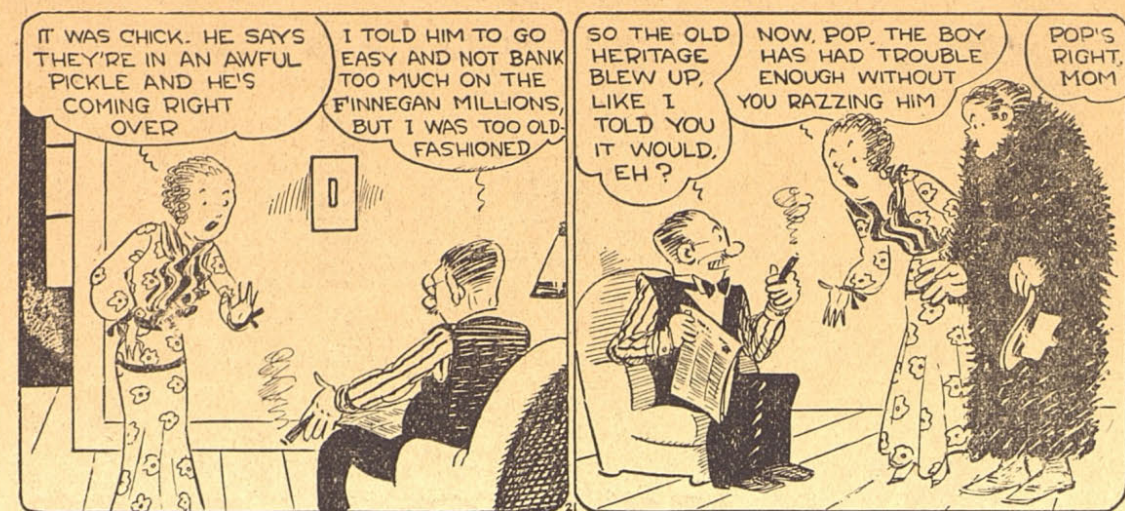

He said the signal corps was producing "excellent strains" of these birds and that every effort is being made to bring to the attention of the other arms the powers and limitations of pigeons and to obtain their use in maneuvers.

The Army Amateur Radio System composed of private citizens interested in radio, has "functioned efficiently," Carr reported. A recent broadcast was picked up by 542 amateur stations.

During the last fiscal year the army telegraph and radio systems handled 524,411 messages containing 25,884,165 words. Government departments and agencies other than the war department accounted for 23 per cent of this traffic.

TEXAS TOPICS

By RAYMOND BROOKS

AUSTIN, Nov. 23. — Beer advocates in the Texas legislature see only the forlorn hope of a peculiar wording of the 18th federal amendment.

Texas has a constitutional amendment that will not be modified for many years at least, and the stringent Dean law that imposes prison sentences in liquor cases where the federal law provides only jail sentences or fines.

The only prospect of legalizing beer in Texas a layer-member of the house has said lies in a federal court ruling on this language in the 18th amendment.

"The congress and the state shall have concurrent jurisdiction." According to his argument, if congress by definition says the 18th amendment does not include beer, that ruling will bind the state by a similar limitation.

The Texas amendment did not limit its definition to "capable of producing intoxication," but provided that any sort of spirituous vinous or malt liquor containing over one-half of one per cent of alcohol would be considered intoxicating.

Among lawmakers here in the recent special session of the legislature the feeling prevailed that Texans who have a thirst for beer will be compelled to nurse it for a long time. It was declared impossible to get 100 house members and 21 senators to vote for the submission of any other constitutional amendment to repeal or modify the existing amendment. The Dean law could be appealed or modified by a majority vote in the legislature, but any new act would be held unconstitutional because it would be in open and direct conflict with the constitutional amendment. The only possible means of practical though not actual nullification would be to modify the penalties to such nominal amounts that officers would not enforce the prohibition law.

A glimpse at senatorial deliberation during the lighter moments as a special session was ending: A senator: "I want to call up a little squirrel bill." Sen. Parrish: "We have so many of these laws now that the squirrels don't know where to operate." Sen. Parr: "I object. Anybody knows a deer bill takes precedence over a squirrel bill, and I have—"

Lieut. Gov. Witt: "We'll start with squirrel's and work up."

Sen. Joe Moore of Greenville, whose fights against the confirmation of governors' appointees in times past have been much discussed, is one of the hardest-working members of the senate, conscientiously careful in scrutinizing every piece of legislation before the body, and usually out on the firing line, for or against every measure of importance.

He has joined Sen. George Purl of Dallas in the statement to newspapers that while the discussion in committee on the confirmation of appointees should be private, he would prefer that after the committee on governor's nominations has reported, the senators take their vote in public on confirming or rejecting the appointment.

This would follow the practice adopted by the United States senate two years ago. It would relieve the senate of much criticism. The conscientious senator would cast his vote just as he casts it now in the locked-up executive sessions. Should there ever be political horse-trader senator or grudge-bearing senators in the body their activities would be less harmful, and they would be more accountable to their people by having to put their vote on record.

A private committee hearing would not be for the protection of the senate but to avoid subjecting men nominated to office from injurious and unfair public attack when they might be opposed before the committee.

Week-end MURDER

BEGIN HERE TODAY

The story opens with a prologue in which a murder is committed by a homicidal maniac. Later he boards a train for Long Island, thinking of the pleasant week-end he is to have. The name of the murderer is not disclosed.

The scene shifts to the Long Island home of LINDA and TOM AVERILL, married three years and much in love. The Averills have five guests for the week-end: COUSIN AMOS PEABODY, elderly, distant relative of Linda's; CAPTAIN DE VOS, handsome Belgian representing a European perfume manufacturer with whom Averill hopes to do business; MR. STATLANDER, middlewestern manager of the firm Averill works for; MARVIN PRATT, former suitor of Linda's; and LIAN SHAUGHNESSY, Irish writer on a lecture tour.

Cousin Amos immediately makes trouble. He quarrels with Shaughnessy because the Irishman holds liberal political views; plays golf with Statlander and infuriates him by criticizing his game; discusses prohibition with De Vos and declares De Vos is "no gentleman." It is finally agreed that Cousin Amos is to leave early the next morning.

The others go to the Country Club dance. Just before leaving Marvin Pratt goes to Cousin Amos' room and they are heard quarreling. The dance is uneventful but when the others are ready to leave Shaughnessy can not be found.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER X

WHAT could have become of Shaughnessy? Linda frowned. "No, he hasn't been with us," she said. "We thought you had him."

Ella Mondell turned uncertainly and it was at that moment that Tom, looking intently toward the thinning row of cars, shouted: "That must be he! Oh—Shaughnessy!"

A high border of fir trees marked the edge of the club line. At the extreme end a dark figure could barely be seen. The figure turned at the hall, paused a moment, waved a negligent hand and strode toward them.

"'Twas lost entirely I was! Sure to me every car of the lot looked like another."

night before. His glum silences had proved difficult for her ever since he had arrived but after the discovery of their mutual fondness for dancing perhaps he would be a little more responsive. As the little car started after the larger one Statlander began to shoot at her an astonishing series of questions.

"Your little boy did not come up today to see you, did he, Mrs. Averill?"

"No. The old dog was a great pet of his and we didn't want to tell him about her. It would have been hard, with guests in the house, and he not even staying home so we could lead up gently. Mr. Averill telephoned his mother and asked her to keep Bingo there all day."

"From the presence of some toys in the closet of the room I occupy, I thought perhaps I had turned him out to make room for me."

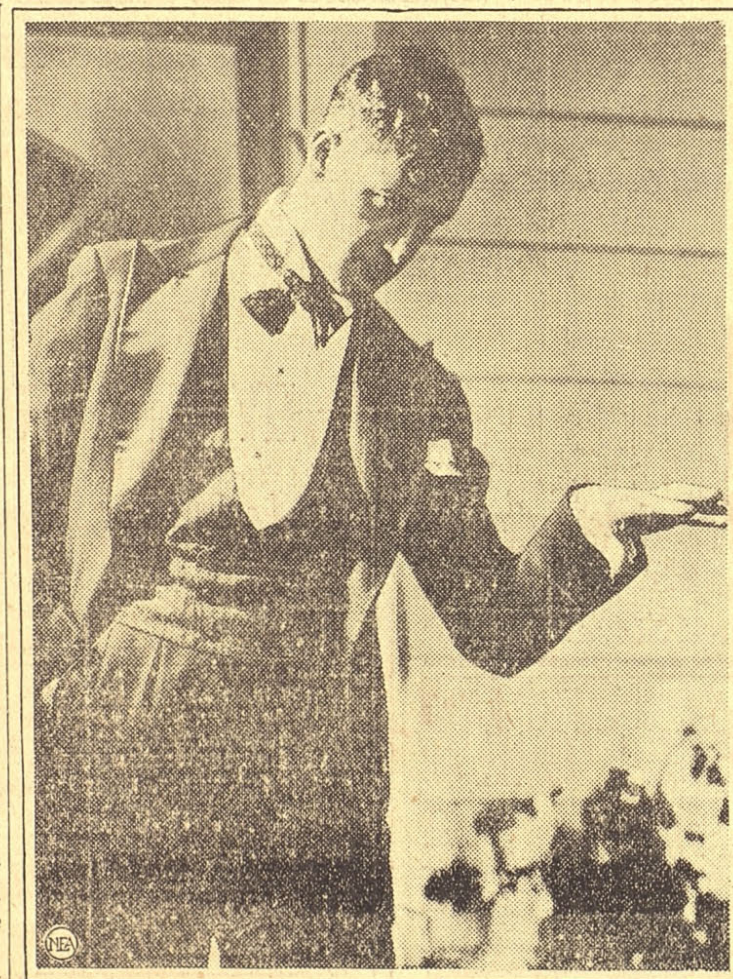

"Oh, heavens, no! I'm sorry about the toys—Rosie shall move them in the morning. No, Bingo and Nanna sleep across the hall from you."

"That is the room I've heard you speak of as the nursery? It faces the water?"

"Yes. We're not using it this week-end—the ceiling and walls were ruined by water from an overflowing tub upstairs. That's why we had to put Mr. Shaughnessy in the garage."

"Oh, then that is the room which opens on the small white porch over the central front of the house?"

Linda wondered at such persistent interest in the architecture

GABRIELLE E. FORBUSH

On the balcony makes the horrid noise and having this one shut muffs it, at least. You have everything you want? Well—good-night. You can all sleep late tomorrow morning!"

WHEN Tom finally succeeded in escaping Shaughnessy's garrulous friendliness and returned, tired and out of sorts, he found Linda sitting by the window toward the Sound. On the bed lay her corn-yellow velvet wrap, and her high-heeled pumps had been kicked off beside it. She seemed to have lacked energy to proceed further with the business of undressing and when he came in simply rolled her eyes at him eloquently and made no further move. He sank into a chair by another window and for a moment weary silence reigned.

"Did you ever know such a night!" Linda gathered her energies to speak first. "Never—never in all my born days—was I so hot and cross and disgusted. As a house party, this is the biggest washout I've ever had!"

"You're tired, Binks," her husband observed dispassionately. "I think they all had a good time."

"They may have for all we know anything about it—I hardly laid eyes on one of them all evening."

"Well, didn't you plan to turn them over to the female contingent?"

"Yes, of course—and I wanted them to enjoy themselves. And you're still the best dancer in the world, my Thomas."

"Thanks—same to you. Gosh, this heat is appalling! Not a bit cooler at night."

"Morning—getting lighter every minute. That means it'll start in hot and get worse instead of better. Why does Fourth of July always mean such ghastly weather? And on top of it, every darned one of those men had been drinking—"

"Even your beloved Marvin?"

"Now don't you start anything!" Linda suddenly snapped from complete inertia to militant uprightness. "He was too queer all evening—implying he wasn't welcome—nasty way of talking without coming right out with what was on his mind."

"Well, look, Binks—what was the matter with him before we started? When he came downstairs he looked black enough to kill. I sort of hated to drive off with the others and leave you. Then everything seemed all right when we got there so I forgot about it till now. Anybody step on his toes before we left?"

"Hmp! Who specializes in toe-stepping around here?"

"Don't glare at me—he's not my cousin!"

"Oh, Tom, that's cruel! I can't help it. Why is Cousin Amos such a pest? I fished around a bit but I couldn't find out what it was he did or said. Every time I led back to it, Marvin got tired and off all evening. I'd rather have all sorts of an explosion—made me feel queer and quailish. Just wondering. You see, I know his temper of old. He holds in too much and when he does let go—well, I wouldn't want to be in the way!"

of White Haven.

"Yes."

"THAT little balcony connects also with a room on the other side? I've observed it from the front lawn."

"One of the guest rooms—yes."

"Where Mr. Peabody is?"

"Yes."

"I presume the servants' quarters are upstairs?"

"Yes—over the center of the house."

"You also have rooms in the garage—may I ask—"

The interrogation was abruptly ended by their arrival at the White Haven gate. Linda swept the little car skillfully around the curve in the road and between the posts and drove up so closely behind the other car that she had to brake hard to stop in time.

Again Tom walked to the garage with Shaughnessy. Linda watching, was relieved to see that he entered and went upstairs. He could hardly put the man to bed but at least he could see that he didn't set the place on fire or do other damage trying to find the lights. The rest of the party went up and dispersed silently. Pratt and De Vos tiptoeing cautiously with Cousin Amos' closed door.

"I told him he could leave it open for the draft through but the idea seemed to shock him," Linda whispered as they reached the little hall. Just then she heard from within a raucous grating sound which confirmed her belief that Cousin Amos had blandly ignored her earlier request. "Perhaps it's just as well—that door

INSURE NOW

Winter weather increases the danger of fires. It is well to see that your insurance does not expire and leave you without protection. It is poor economy to carry your own insurance because the average man does not lay away a reserve fund to reimburse himself in case of a loss. A few dollars will protect you from a loss of thousands.

THANKSGIVING!

Thursday, November 24th

When the PILGRIM FATHERS assembled one cold and bleak November morning to give thanks to God for their safety through the first year of their existence in the New World, and spread a feast to typify the bountiful harvest that had blessed their efforts, they did not realize that they were setting a custom that would survive through the years to come.

We Too Are Thankful

For the blessings of life, health and a measure of happiness during a year of depression and wide-spread suffering throughout the world. In addition to our gratitude to God, the Giver of all blessings, we wish to speak a word of good cheer and thanks to our friends and patrons who have enabled us to survive in business during 1932. Please accept this as our personal wish for a truly Happy Thanksgiving for each of you.

were ready to face the winter again and came together to thank God for the blessings which had already come to them.

"Mother of Day" Later the Thanksgiving observance was taken up by other colonies, though it was not on the same day in all of them. After the colonies became a nation attempts were made to have it set apart as a holiday. In 1863 through the efforts of Mrs. Sarah Josepha Hale, President Lincoln issued a proclamation appointing the last Thursday in November as a day to offer thanks. Mrs. Hale thus became the "mother of Thanksgiving Day." Thus it has come down to the present day.

In recent years Thanksgiving Day has descended for the most part to the turkey-and-football stage. The day has come to be the one for settlement of old scores. After a heavy dinner the average person either goes to sleep or attends the big game of the season, and in either case goes to work Friday morning feeling worse than he did on Wednesday. Although some of the people will gather for the religious service—and perhaps wonder if the turkey is burning—most of them will miss the true spirit of Thanksgiving.

"Nature in the Raw is seldom MILD"

THE WAR WHOOP
"Nature in the Raw"—as portrayed by N. C. Wyeth... inspired by the blood-curdling yells of war-mad savages, whose barbaric cruelty held America's early settlers in a constant state of terror. "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—and raw tobaccos have no place in cigarettes.

No raw tobaccos in Luckies —that's why they're so mild

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

"It's toasted"
That package of mild Luckies
