If the pleasant weather of the past few days could not induce contributions to the Cisco Charity and Welfare association's old clothing campaign, today's raw north wind and mist ought to stir the languid imagination and cause a wave of public sympathy for conditions that are known to exist among the poverty-stricken of the city. People living in houses with great cracks through which the wind sifts with utter contempt for the papers and stow-sacking that are tacked up, with inadequate wood stoves, and ragged quilts flung on the floor in lieu of better bedding—such homes are quite beyond the ken of the average citizen who goes at night to dry, warm room, good food, comfortable chairs and beds. None of us appreciates what we have. It is a human trait that stirs us to constant effort to get more and thus produce more, and for that reason it is a valuable trait. But a few moments spent in thoughtful reflection will convince that the conditions of which we complain are insignificant compared with those that many less fortunate people have to contend with.

The charity association has made appeal after appeal for unused garments, for shoes, bedding and other articles of household use that may relieve suffering. With the sudden approach of winter the association has been left in an embarrassing position, to say the least. Faced with the necessity of providing for the needy, it has little to provide. It has been given a mandate to represent the community as its charitable agency, and the citizens on the whole seem to have rid themselves, then and there, of any individual responsibility and left the association to shift for itself.

That is certainly no way to cooperate with the relief agency. It will not solve the relief problem in Cisco.

Doc Graham told about his trip to Rochester, Minn., where he attended the Mayo Brothers clinic, and to Detroit, Mich., where a great annual international convention of physicians and surgeons was held, at the Rotary club yesterday. His talk revealed that the great Mayo Brothers institution is one of the outstanding philanthropic institutions of the world.

All the wealth that the famous surgeons accumulated has been placed in a trust fund for the treatment of human ills and the banishment of suffering. It makes no difference what the class, social standing, wealth or condition of the knocker at the doors of the Mayo clinic, its science and genius are at his service without distinction. None is turned away if money is the deciding element.

There is less selfishness per square inch in great institutions and among great men than anywhere in the world. The Mayo clinic is not alone in this great work. Many other such institutions provide an equal inspiration to the person who, battling obstacles and selfish interests through life, is led to believe that it is a cold, unfeeling, venal world.

Jewel Thief Suspect

Lulu Mae Bennett, 23-year-old former night club dancer (above), was held by Washington, D. C., police as a suspect in what police branded a nationwide ring of jewel thieves. Police found gems valued at $30,000 in her possession.

No Successor in Mind for Place Vacated by Bird

No successor is yet in the mind of the Cisco school board and chamber of commerce directors to J. M. Bird, Cisco vocational agricultural teacher, who yesterday, announced acceptance of an appointment to the United States soil conservation service, to be stationed at either A. and M. college or the state office at Temple.

Bird's appointment, pending for some time, is effective November 4. He will remain here for a month, or until a successor is elected by the school board. Dividing time between the school and the chamber of commerce, the position of vocational instructor is customarily filled here by the school board, the chamber of commerce acquiescing in its selection.

Mr. Bird came to Cisco from Dublin in September 1933, succeeding E. H. Varnell who preceded him into the soil conservation service. He previously had served in the same capacity at Post, Texas. A meats expert, Bird did graduate and post-graduate work at Texas A. and M. college and Iowa State college.

He has been active here in the promotion of extensive soil conservation program through the medium of his Future Farmers club, the chamber of commerce and Cisco Boosters club, and has also placed considerable emphasis upon a meats and livestock program.

Conscience-Smitten, Letter Writer Will Pay Back $150 Illegally Taken from Bank

RISING STAR, Nov. 1.—That written notice to stop payment. A troubled conscience will often cause a man to right a wrong though many years has elapsed, is borne out by a letter recently received by the First State bank enclosing $45 to apply on an amount of $150 wrongfully secured from the bank 12 years ago. The sender pleads for the forgiveness of the bank officials and ask their prayers in his resolution to go straight and live right.

In discussing the matter a day or two ago W. E. Tyler, president and Fred Tunnell, vice-president of the bank, showed the letter to the publisher of the Rising Star Record and stated that in 1923 a young man, whose name is deleted, walked into the bank and presented a check for payment in the amount of $150. The check had been given for a gambling debt, but in the meantime the giver of the check had given the bank

LOBOES AND MAVERICKS TO MEET AT 3:30

Hardest Fought Game of Season Expected to Take Place

The Cisco Loboes and the Eastland Mavericks will renew their long football rivalry at Chesley field this afternoon when the teams clash at 3:30 in what promises to be one of the hardest fought engagements of the current Oil Belt district campaign.

The teams appear to be evenly matched. Against the Buckaroos here last week, the Loboes showed to better advantage, scoring a touchdown and holding the touted Green machine to three touchdowns and a safety in spite of their full strength. But earlier, against Brownwood, the Cisco boys were less impressive than their Eastland rivals.

The game is called for 3:30 and the lineups will probably be: Cisco: Wagley, lg; Page, lt; Merrett, lg; Ivie, c; Rainbolt, rg; Barnes, rt; Wende, re; Stansbury, q; Rylee, lb; McCanlies, rb; Burman, fb.

Drug Company Is Fined $20,000 in Liquor Violation

SAN ANTONIO, Nov. 1. (AP)—The San Antonio Drug company was fined $20,000 and assessed an $800 penalty by Federal Judge McMillan on a plea of guilty to eight counts on an indictment alleging falsification of records in connection with interstate transportation and sale of liquor in a dry state.

Federal District Atty Smith said the drug company had liquor for Jake Korman, liquor dealer, transferred into the state under its medicinal liquor permit.

Extradition of Wm. Shearer Granted

AUSTIN, Nov. 1. (AP)—Gov. Allred today granted the extradition of William Shearer, held at Fort Worth in connection with a $24,000 shortage in the California state treasury.

Shearer probably will be returned in a few days.

PLANES BOMB REBELS. MEXICO CITY, D. F., Nov. 1. (AP)—It was reported that two federal planes had bombed rebels in Jalisco, killing or wounding 25.

"Come On, Get 'Em Up!"

Following intermittent outbreaks of gangland executions in the wake of the slaying of New York's leading racketeer, Dutch Schultz, police were stopping all suspicious looking persons in the

JUDGING DUE TO BEGIN AT 2 PM TODAY

Beef Cattle Judging Saturday; Old Fiddlers Contest Due

The vagaries of Texas weather interposed objections to the Eastland County Livestock show today in the shape of a cold norther and a chilly mist, and the number of entries this morning was much below what had been expected. However, exhibits continued to arrive and, in the event of fair weather tomorrow, the big day of the show, a satisfactory climax to the two-day event was expected.

Judging was to begin at 2 this afternoon, with dairy cattle, sheep, hogs and goats first to the arena. Beef cattle are to be judged tomorrow together with horses and mules.

Judges will be Dr. Verne A. Scott of John Tarleton college, Stephenville, and Mark Buckingham, Erath county agent. C. Metz Heald, Eastland county agent, was to judge an exhibit of grain sorghums prepared by FFA boys of the Cisco and part-time chapters from grain grown with seed that the Cisco chamber of commerce supplied.

In the dairy cattle division this morning there were entries by A. Z. Myrick, who had six Jersey head; Dr. F. E. Clark, two Jersey heifer calves; J. C. Thurman, one Jersey and Billy Dawkins, one Jersey.

In the beef cattle division the grand champion cow purchased by G. P. Mitcham from the Wyoming Hereford ranch, and her heifer calf, were a center of interest. The blocky, almost perfect type animal was grand champion cow at the American Royal at Kansas City, the International at Chicago, and shows at Denver and other important northern points. She came from Cheyenne, Wyo. Mitcham and Dr. F. E. Clark dominated first arrivals in the Hereford division. Clark brought 14 head, including three prize bulls. He and Mitcham together own Superior 65th, purchased last year on the Diamond ranch at Albany. Mitcham had 10 head in his exhibit.

Clark was also exhibiting a pen of mohair goats, while Mitcham entered 10 ramboillet sheep.

Seven goats had been entered by J. C. Thurman. F. E. Harrell exhibited a pen of ten Duroc Jersey hogs. Pigs were entered by Lavon Dill and J. C. Thurman.

Among the entertainment features prepared for the show will be an old fiddlers' contest at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Arrangements are in the hands of a committee consisting of Harry Schaefer and Ernest Hittson.

CISCO POSTAL RECEIPTS IN OCTOBER UP 13 PER CENT

An increase of 13 per cent in Cisco postal receipts during October, 1935, over those of October, 1934, was reported today by Postmaster L. H. McCrea. A great increase was registered over the total for the preceding month.

Total receipts were reported at $2,162.99 as compared with $1,911.44 for October 1934, or an increase of $251.55.

LIVESTOCK SHOW NOTES

W. I. Connell, Olden, is exhibiting a pair of as pretty young Jerseys—a bull and an 18-month-old heifer—as have ever been entered in the Eastland County Livestock show. Connell, who is an employe of the Magnolia Petroleum company and has been stationed at Olden for eight years, raises Jerseys as a hobby. Well finished, with sleek fawn coats, the two animals showed a showman's care in their handling. Due to the coolness of the weather, Connell brought them to the show wearing blankets.

Two 16-month-old Hereford heifers are being exhibited by H. A. Bible, city commissioner. Bible sold the Hereford bull he exhibited last year.

In Dr. F. E. Clark's Hereford exhibit, he pointed out a calf his records show to have gained 6 1/4 pounds daily over a period. The calf was fed by his daughter.

The FFA grain sorghum exhibit will not be in place until tomorrow. The exhibits will be entered by members of the Cisco and Part-time chapters from grain which the boys grew with seed furnished by the Cisco chamber of commerce.

T. L. (Till) Wheat, of Eastland, has entered a Largent bull, Prince Domino 50th, in the show. The bull has not been kept up and "pampered" but he shows his distinction.

REV. JAMES' FATHER DIES

Rev. and Mrs. E. S. James of the First Baptist church left hurriedly for Butler, Okla., this afternoon in response to a message that the minister's father, A. D. James, had died suddenly. The message ascribed no cause for death, which supposedly occurred from heart trouble. The elder James had been inactive for a number of years.

EAST SHAKEN BY TEMBLOR

NEW YORK, Nov. 1. (AP)—The East's most serious earthquake in many years rolled across 17 states and three Canadian provinces early today, but the damage was trifling.

Thousands fled their homes, fearing a temblor like Helena, Mont., received.

The quake apparently centered in Canada near Lake Ontario. Swinging mirrors, clattering dishes and swaying buildings were reported from the Bay of Fundy to Lake Michigan and from Canada's capital to the District of Columbia.

Helena marshalled reconstruction forces after a night made miserable by a dread of further shocks and sub-zero cold. Roosevelt ordered the Red Cross, the army and FERA to speed relief.

HALLOWE'EN UNEVENTFUL

"Thanks for the nice way you folks acted during Hallowe'en," said Chief of Police Purdue this morning, surveying the aftermath of last night's frolic with the net result of one suspect held in city jail for investigation.

Crowded streets for the Hallowe'en carnival and dances at Lake Cisco and the Country club featured the night's merriment.

Masons from 12 counties in this area were here last night to listen to an address at the city hall by S. P. Sadler of Dallas. Attendance was estimated at 350.

Earlier, the Masons were guests of the Cisco lodge at a barbecue supper in the relief building across the street from the fire department.

Farmers Have Money

INCREASING bank deposits in rural communities indicate a better condition among the farmers this year than in several.

Good Men Are Hard to Keep

IT is becoming increasingly difficult for Cisco to keep a good man. This is said out of sincere respect for the abilities of those who have served this community in the capacity of vocational agriculture instructors, and, coincidentally, as agriculture secretaries of the chamber of commerce.

BIRD followed E. H. Varnell, who went the same route of promotion to broader opportunities and bigger jobs. Varnell began the service in Cisco and his able handling of the work over a period of seven years made it practically indispensable.

The National Whirligig

THE NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

A discussion of events and personalities in the news, world and national, by a group of fearless and informed newspaper men of Washington and New York.

WASHINGTON
By RAY TUCKER

CAUTION—You have to go back to Woodrow Wilson days to understand the Roosevelt-Hull inside strategy against American participation in Europe's war-torn affairs.

So it is with President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull. Though they can't afford to say so publicly, they secretly approve the League's maneuvers for peace.

Development of a prosperous livestock industry in this section is one of the answers to its opportunities. Mr. Bird was able to exercise a great influence upon the development of that industry through his able training of the boys who are to make the livestockmen and the farmers of the future.

THERE are good men to be found to take this place, but as we congratulate Mr. Bird upon his promotion we do so with the knowledge that Cisco is losing services that would be of great value to this community.

Multiplied Benefits

WINTER season business prospects for Cisco have been materially brightened by recent WPA projects and highway construction approval.

THE biggest item, of course, and the most encouraging, is the $162,000 Highway No. One relocation project over Eighth street. This will probably release $100,000 in wages during the winter.

OTHER WPA projects on which approval is anticipated are the water treatment plant at Lake Cisco, involving $25,000 and several other public school construction.

THIS is work that will be done in Cisco exclusively. In addition to it, Washington has recently allocated and released to State WPA Adm'r H. P. Drouth $142,000 to be used on lateral or "farm-to-market" roads in Eastland county.

ASIDE from the WPA projects to be undertaken, there is the state highway department's project for paving the Leary highway, work upon which is virtually under way at this time.

THE many thousands of dollars in wages that these projects represent will not remain in one hand. They will be circulated among several and often many people before leaving the community and each turnover doubles the size of the fund.

ON the whole, the outlook for Cisco this winter is mighty encouraging.

from sales to belligerents. The people don't want war at any price or profit. Congress refused to give Mr. Roosevelt discretionary power in naming treaty-breakers, because it feared it would lead directly to American embroilment.

Lately administration sounders of sentiment think they detect a new note in the chorus. They suspect the people want this country to cast its influence for peace more actively than it can under existing neutrality legislation, with the League if necessary.

PROFITS—Trade statistics show that American business men don't take too seriously the president's warning that shipments to belligerents would be made at their own risk.

In the four weeks before the keep-off-the-seas pronouncement exports of cotton to Europe averaged 70,000 bales. For the next four weeks they averaged 150,000 bales. Grains of all kinds were shipped to Europe at the rate of 700,000 bushels for the three weeks before Mr. Roosevelt spoke out, but they jumped to 4,000,000 bushels a week in the month after the proclamation. Pork shipments increased from a weekly average of 800,000 pounds to 1,070,000 pounds.

Most of these shipments went to Great Britain, but some were destined for Italy. Though not a belligerent under the terms of the presidential proclamation, England was on the verge of war several times during the period of increased exports.

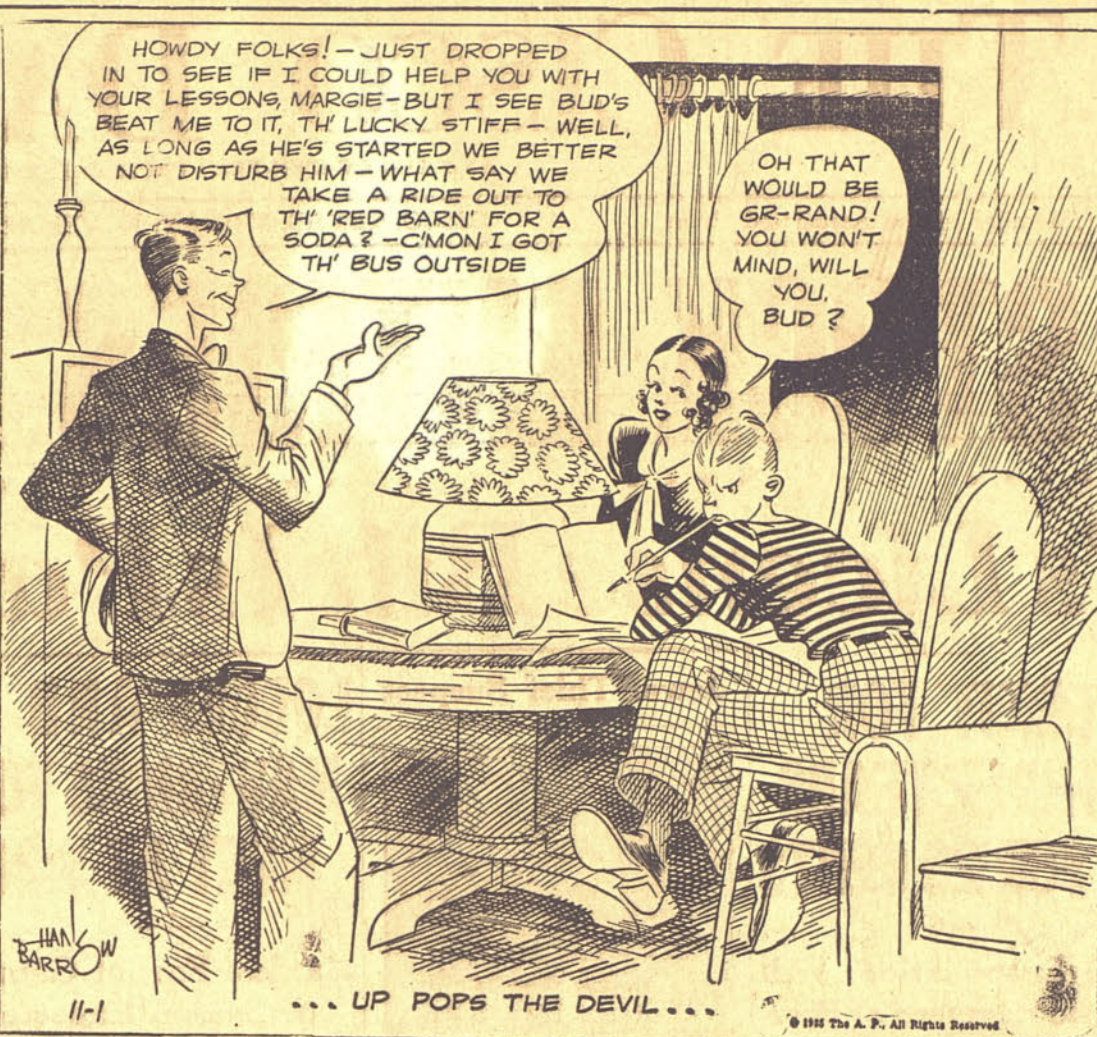

POLITICAL—The acquittal of Abe Shushan broke a key link in the chain which the administration hopes to use in smashing the political ring the late Huey Long built up in Louisiana.

conference to press pending indictments and ask for new ones against Long lieutenants.

The late Kingfish dominated the Shushan trial. His death helped the defendant by arousing sympathy. There was nobody to be cross-examined on testimony in which he figured.

Six other Long men now await trial and the outcome may have tremendous political significance outside Louisiana. A succession of acquittals could bolster GOP charges that Washington is not averse to using the legal arm of the government for political purposes.

Man About Manhattan

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK, Nov. 1. (P)—The real compensation for being a columnist in the world's busiest metropolis isn't always regarded as such at the time.

Idling about the studio of Larry Thyme, the artist, on a recent morning I thought of this and then a host of observations, mostly made by outstanding personalities, came flooding back.

There was the time Grace Moore confessed her philosophy on the eternal feminine, in casual conversation at a party just after she had scored her first stunning success in pictures.

"For me, life begins at 7 p. m.," the damsel Moore said. "After work I always rest an hour and then don the most glamorous evening gown I own. Blue, black and white are my favorite colors. I think every woman should spend a generous amount of time in front of her mirror. It's good for her."

Then there was the time in a Greenwich village cafe when George Biddle hailed the Depression as the fuse to a real Renaissance in American art.

Human and Other Nature

By W. F. BRUCE

It gives a person self-congratulation to have his own town host to other places for miles in every direction. It makes him feel that after all perhaps he is somebody to have his schools in the receiving line for representatives of many other schools.

Not long after this I talked with Ernest Dryden, the Viennese illustrator, who looks to America as the ultimate savior of the world culture. "It is traditional to speak of Europe as the cultural stronghold of the world," he went on in what seemed to me a singular vein for an European.

Other moments that ring like bells include a September noon, when your weary correspondent was slipping out of the office, after an all-night assignment, for a shower and some much needed sleep.

Hustling a cab, I streaked through town to the Greenwich street spot where the gloomy station rests. Newspapermen were pouring in from every direction. We fought and scrambled our way into the high court yard, now a-jitter with rumor and speculation, clamoring for news.

A few moments later the world was uttering a new name — a name it hadn't heard before but one which soon was to become a household word. The name of Bruno Richard Hauptmann!

Human and Other Nature

By W. F. BRUCE

I have just been to town and walked up and down the sidewalks elbowing town and country people, exchanging the time of day and the looks of the weather, and maybe entering further into affairs with this one or that one of my acquaintances. I am doing my home town the honor of calling it a country town. It is all right to insist that everybody remember that we have city delivery, and gas facilities for every home and office that wishes them, and electricity for light and power, and a city school system, and real city water, and a big hotel, and daily papers, and other certified ways. But we are not far away from the rural districts, we count the rural folk as a part of us. So I can't see but that I am right in calling us a country town, with an apology for the term. When I was living in Indianapolis with many of the facilities and the ambitions and the meannesses even to the gang district of a metropolis, some one asked me if the city did not seem like a big country town. And it did have direct access to as well as dependence upon the Hoosier farms that lay around the city in every direction and fed it to a considerable extent.

Of course I may be biased in my point of view. For I have had the privilege of being at both ends of the country road, not at the same time of course. I used to live three miles and a half west of a small Kansas town; I know what it is to change overalls and shirt, maybe for a clean garment of the same name, and drive behind a pair of farm plugs equipped in jingling chain harness, into town for the Saturday trading. I also know something of staying dressed up, and following a profession, or putting on some other kind of airs, in a city. Of the two the most enjoyable was the first. Perhaps one may find a compromise in being suburban; than he can go either way as fancy, or need, may prompt him. He can have a city bath, and lights, and taxes, and opportunities to spend his money; and at the same time he can breathe country air, can eat vegetables of his own raising, milk his own cow (I don't mean instead of a neighbor's), can see grass and weeds growing from his own doorway (can see from his doorway I mean), and can have the disadvantages of both.

"This Is a Home Owned Store"

HIGH COURAGE

By Jeanne Bowman.

SYNOPSIS: Now that Anne Farnsworth has found refuge in the home of her old Finnish nurse, Tecla Sorki, near Astoria, she feels safe from her "relatives." These last are apparently the heirs of Luke and Lucinda Farnsworth; Anne has learned that she is not their daughter after all, and that she was not even adopted. Instinct tells her that Tecla knows at least part of the secret; now Tecla has asked if she may tell John Neuman Anne's story.

Chapter 18 NEW PLAN

Anne looked at the man standing before her and surprised something in his eyes she had never seen in Rob's during the weeks of her bereavement, a tender compassion without pity.

"I'd like to tell him," she agreed, wondering at the sudden trust she was placing in this stranger.

"Always, we tell John," Tecla declared.

Anne remembered Tom Farley's ridicule of the fishermen's trust in John Neuman. She realized now that it was not because he was a college man, and spoke both the language of the fisherman and of the cannery owner, but because there was a sympathetic wisdom about him which invited confidence and trust.

"You need food, first," interposed Tecla, and ladled the fish stew into heavy crockery bowls, cut thick slices of home made bread, disappeared into a dark closet to return with a jar of huckle-berry jam.

Anne surveyed her bowl with apprehension, as she sat down at the table in response to Tecla's order. She dipped a spoon into the savory mess, toyed with cubes of red salmon, onions and potatoes which floated about in the creamy liquid, then tasted it.

"Why . . . it's good," she exclaimed with such surprise that both John and Tecla laughed aloud.

"You think Tecla give you something not good?"

Heartened by the food, Anne turned to the fresh ordeal of retelling her story. But somehow, with the attentive John as listener, her troubles seemed of less and less importance.

"And so," she concluded, "now that I know that I'm neither the daughter nor the heir of Luke Farnsworth I want to hide away until I can decide what I'll do with my future."

"And this man, this Rob Crocker, what will he think of your running away?"

"Mr. Crocker understands," Anne said tonelessly, "he . . . that is, we are not going to be married."

"But—" Neuman was interrupted by Tecla, who spat out a word.

Weeks later, Anne was to find that phrase in the little English-Finnish dictionary she was studying, but by then some of the heartache had been numbed by time and she knew Tecla had been right when she classified Robert Crocker as a "gold-digger."

"But of course Farley and the Farnsworths are going to want to know where you are," observed Neuman, after a pause. "They'll probably start a search for you if you don't tell them something."

"I hope not," Anne said, "and I don't believe they will. They're going to be so glad to be rid of me without my demanding any more of their worldly goods that they'll leave me alone."

"I don't agree with you," he countered, frankly. "I believe they are going to want to know where you are so they can watch you. You don't know the entire contents of the will. Of course they believe they can cut you off from a daughter's share, providing you haven't been adopted as a daughter."

"What do you mean?" queried Tecla with interest.

"When people adopt a child, they go before a judge, and papers are drawn up."

"You see, Tecla," Anne explained further, "Tom Farley says there are no papers and none can be found, so it can't be proved that I'm legally adopted. Of course that won't matter for five years, and within that time I may be able to learn something more about my parents."

"So, murmured Tecla.

"Not that I care for the money," Anne hastened to say, "and if I have to fight for it, I don't want any of it. Now all I want to do is rest and forget about everything that's happened. But if you think they'll trail me here I'd better go away."

"No," Neuman answered, too hurriedly, "No, you're going to be safer here than almost anywhere else. Tecla, you had a brother south, or east or somewhere, didn't you?"

"Yes," answered Tecla, "he is far away, why?"

"Couldn't you intimate that Anne, here, was his daughter? Our people would probably know it wasn't true, but should anyone ask questions, they'd identify Anne that way."

"We're clannish people," he explained, apologetically, "but if you'll study our history you'll understand. From earliest times we were so surrounded by enemies we learned to trust only our own people and to build up fortifications of silence against outsiders. They'll protect you with these."

"Now the Lee Farnsworths, I understand, have moved to Portland and I imagine the Tom Farleys will spend their time there, also. Do you know many Astoria people?"

"No, I've scarcely been here since I was a child."

"Then we have only your car to consider. Of course they could trace that. The woman at the service station had an inkling of who you were when you screamed. She'd gladly tell everything with elaborations." He thought a moment.

"How does this sound? You say you were born in Crescent City.

Wouldn't it be the natural thing for you to go there in an effort to trace your parents? Then suppose I drive your car down there right away, tonight, or rather this morning, as it's past midnight now. I have a friend in the garage business there. He can either leave it in his garage, or drive it back to Portland over the inland route.

"In this way, if the car has been traced they will believe you drove along the coast road to Crescent City, and disappeared from there."

Anne didn't need words to express her belief in the plan. She leaned back in her chair, suddenly tired. This man who had saved her from the river by his quick thinking, would handle this new dilemma with equal skill. She need worry about nothing for a time.

"Better you go to bed," observed the watchful Tecla, and hurried away to prepare her room.

"I don't know how I'll ever thank you," Anne ventured, as she accompanied John to the door, "and I do so need to be free of those people."

"You can thank me by not worrying while I'm away," returned John. Then he smiled, caught her hand in a firm clasp, and hurried down the stairs.

Anne stood at the door a moment, looking down on Union Town, scattered lights blinking in the darkness. A far away clock chimed the hour of two. At two o'clock last night she had been lying in her bed, reading to fill the empty hours.

But she had not been altogether unhappy. Rob and security lay ahead. Now she had nothing, and despite Tecla, she was nobody, just Nikki. But Tecla had said she was never to say that again, and surely with John Neuman willing to spend the night driving south for her she wasn't without friends.

Without friends? She turned as Tecla came into the room, a hot water bottle in her hand. She filled this a t t h e stove then motioned Anne to follow.

Wearily Anne obeyed, climbing steep wooden stairs, turning down a hallway and into a cubicle-like room where Miina, smiling sleepily, was spreading the bed with fresh linen.

Anne couldn't help noticing the linen, hand woven, the edges of the pillow case and sheet frosted with hand made lace, inches wide.

As soon as she had slipped into her night robe, she found Tecla waiting, hot water bottle disguised in a knitted wool bag. This was arranged and rearranged until the nurse was satisfied.

She turned off the light, dropped the lone window of the room, letting in a gust of rain-washed air, then with a pat on Anne's shoulder and a "sleep well," she tiptoed out as though her charge had already obeyed her command.

"Sleep well," echoed Anne, to herself. As if she could ever again sleep at all. Bits of sentences, spoken that day (or was it the previous day) spun through her consciousness. The loyalty and love of the servants, the triumph of Sharlee, the queer hatred of Charlotte and poor, troubled Lee, who had defied his wife, probably for the first time in his life, to safely convoy Anne out of her home.

Rob! But she must not think of him. Only, how could she help it? He had been shocked by what she had told him.

SPORT SLANTS

By PAP

A year ago Fred Jacoby, Jr., of North Bergen, N. J., was the ranking professional outboard motorboat driver in the country. That was fine until he noticed that an amateur, Joel Thorne, of New Rochelle, N. Y., topped in the national high point scoring.

After a vigorous campaign in 1935 Jacoby reversed the position and today finds himself sitting on the top of the national ranking while Thorne occupies the runner-up spot. Jacoby scored 32637 points to win the medal put into competition in 1932 by George Townsend when he was president of the American Power Boat association. Jacoby enjoyed a margin of more than 6,000 points over his nearest rival.

diligently the young New Jersey scenic artist campaigned this past season when you note that he won 51 races and scored points in 32 others. He won the Albany-New York marathon and a couple of weeks later finished fourth in the Delaware river long distance event. His consistency also won him the Stanley W. Ferguson diamond-studded medal for the best average.

New World Mark.
For three years in succession Georg Reis has won the Gold cup with his El Lagarto without pressing his 13-year-old craft to the limit. No one knew exactly how fast El Lagarto could cut through the water. She was pushed fast enough to win the Gold cup but that was all.

Now the secret is out. Reis turned the craft loose on Lake George recently and opened the throttle wide. The frail shell with its six cylinder motor of something like 320 horsepower skimmed over a measured mile in 49.2 and 49.3 seconds, or at the rate of 72.727 miles an hour. That's a new world record for a boat of El Lagarto's class. The former record for boats of this class was almost ten miles an hour under El Lagarto's new figure.

Gar Wood holds the record for hydroplanes of the unlimited class with a mark of 124.82 miles an hour. His boat was equipped with four 12-cylinder engines turning up to 7,000 horsepower. Relatively, Reis' mark compares well and at least indicates that he drove with great skill and got every bit of speed that his boat was capable of.

Now that limits have been removed from the Gold cup class Reis will install a more powerful engine in El Lagarto and the famous old craft may go on to higher speed and greater accomplishments.

Like Father Like Son.
The reference to Gar Wood and his record brings to mind that his young son, Gar, Jr., is making considerable progress following his father's steps and racing motor boats. Gar, Jr., led the middle west in the compilation of points for the national ranking of out-

NANKING, China, Nov. 1 (AP)—An assassin's bullets wounded Premier Wang Ching-Wei, pro-Japanese leader, and three other officials of the Nationalistic government, who had gathered today to consider Japan's advance in north China. NORTHER HITS TEXAS TODAY

(By Associated Press.)
Cold, rainy weather, with freezing temperatures in the north, invaded Texas today. It was 32 degrees at Amarillo last night as the norther entered the state. Drizzling rains were general over Texas. Freezing weather was forecast for northwest east Texas and board motorboat drivers with a total of 11,703 points scored in regular regattas.

The senior Wood tried to discourage his son from the racing game but when he saw that the youth was determined to go along on his own he weakened and tried to help the boy. In the Albany-New York outboard motor marathon the elder Wood followed his son down the Hudson in an air-plane.

Italian Envoy Is Expected to Bear Offer For Peace

(By Associated Press)
Baron Aloisi was expected today to protest against the "cruel injustices" of the League of Nations sanctions as he returned to Geneva. It was believed he would bear a definite offer of peace. An Italian spokesman said that

Italy would not refuse to negotiate peace, but that it must get military security in Ethiopian provinces bordering Italian colonies and actual territory "needed for expansion."
