LITTLE GIRL VICTIM OF AUTO

A Surface Fleet Courts Destruction Without Protection From Aircraft Says Major Brant Of The Air Service

SUICIDE ON THE EVE OF AN INHERITANCE

FORT WORTH, July 20.—SIX hours after Sam Zumalt, thirty-five, committed suicide here today because he had no money and no prospects of havin money, his father-in-law, Frank A. Matranza, died, leaving $10,000, of which Zumalt's wife is to get a large portion. Zumalt ended his life by shooting himself through the breast with a shotgun.

ENGLISH PRIME MINISTER HERO OF HIS COUNTRY

LONDON, July 20.—The most popular man in England today is not a prize fighter, cricket player or movie actor. He is the prime minister. I had no idea of this until I came here, writes Norman Hapgood. Most of my friends are not in the Tory party. Most of them do not agree with Mr. Baldwin in political outlook. It can hardly be said that anybody enjoys paying debts, and of course it was Baldwin who made the settlement with the United States. His popularity is based on his personality, which is simple, tactful, without personal ambition, with a strong devotion to public duty. Nothing that he does gives offense. In the house of commons the opposition parties, instead of making the most of his difficulties or errors, help to smooth them over. In the press, whatever may be said against the government, Mr. Baldwin himself escapes. Among people in the street one can hear plenty of grumbling at the situation, and at the failure of those in power to change it, but not a word against the prime minister. Among critical observers the impression is growing that he is one of England's big men, the biggest for a long time. His departments are extremely well run. He bosses them all, without ever suggesting the exercise of power. When he turned around the policy of his party at one swoop, in his refusal to fight the right of the trade unions to make levies for political purposes, there was not another person in the cabinet who agreed with him, and yet there was not a ripple in the peace and harmony of his leadership. I imagine most of his cabinet today would praise the act which they thought an error at the time. Here is another side of his popularity. It is felt that he is sure-footed, and there is no quality the Englishman likes better in his leaders. Mr. Englishman does not care for brilliancy. He rather distrusts it. Something tells him that to be brilliant is to leave out too many facts. A member of parliament the other night expressed the same idea to me when he said that the prime minister has the wisdom of a peasant. He means what we would mean if we said he had the wisdom of a man of the people. As a matter of fact, Baldwin does not come from the poor but from a successful business family. It is a family, however, that has always kept in close touch with its working people. Baldwin does not have to guess when he considers the mentality of a working man. He has known it since he was a boy. The popularity of his party will go up or down with conditions. His own popularity seems to be independent of them.

GERMAN SCIENTISTS SEEK DATA IN SOUTH

BERLIN, July 20.—The German ship Meteor has left Buenos Aires on a scientific cruise—the first German expedition of the kind since the world war. The Meteor left Wilhelmshaven April 16 and is due back in February, 1927. In her absence the ship will cruise mostly in South Atlantic waters. A German scientific society raised the money for the cruise and the German navy provided and partly equipped the ship.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—The real lesson of the Hawaiian maneuvers is that any surface fleet unprotected by aircraft courts destruction from the air, if it tries to approach a coast adequately guarded by aviation forces, according to Major Gerald C. Brant of the army air service.

Contradicting the general impression that the navy was successful in its attack on Hawaii, Major Brant asserted bluntly "that the first and primary line of defense of our coast lies in the air." As one of the air service officers who participated in the aviation defense of Hawaii, Major Brant's declarations, made public today in the Army and Navy Journal, created a sensation among "the desk hardened bureaucrats," to whom he made pointed reference. He said: "There were several serious lessons drawn from the maneuvers, most of which have been explained in confidential reports to the war department and to the chief of the air service. Some deductions can be drawn which are not secret: "That bad weather offers no unsurmountable obstacle to successful air operations; in fact, bad flying weather may well facilitate the attack.

"Darkness no longer offers an impenetrable cloak of secrecy. Our present flares light up the sea and landscape with surprising detail. "It is believed that larger carriers or a greater number of them are necessary with the fleet if it is ever to have any superiority in the air."

"That even with a number of carriers a land base is absolutely necessary for any extended operations. It is, of course, possible to secure limited air supremacy in and particular area for a limited time by the simple expedient of concentrating air units there. This superiority is of limited duration, however, unless the hostile air force is practically destroyed. The answer is an increased force of fighting planes and pilots for both the army and navy.

"It must be obvious nowadays to all except the most desk-hardened bureaucrats that our own United States has not that grand isolation, which it has enjoyed in the past. The airplane and its carrier can bring an aerial menace, very quickly to any place on the globe not adequately protected by its own air forces.

"It is the consensus of opinion in all the air units that took part in the joint exercise that the first and primary line of defense of our coast lies in the air. It is inconceivable that such an attack was launched against Oahu could hope for even a measure of success unless and until air supremacy is assured. "So far as is known, there is no way to avoid a gas attack from fast planes delivered at night. We should think about this in the air service as to the use of gas from airplanes in the next war."

Major Brant said he believes the navy is trying to "get on the band wagon" and will endeavor to include army coast defense with naval aviation.

39 YEARS AGO IT WAS VERY WARM IN EASTLAND CO.

"Sunday was one of the warmest days of the summer," said Dr. W. E. Mancill, who keeps a record of weather observations. However, thirty-nine years ago Saturday, was perhaps the hottest day ever recorded in this section. The mercury registered 110 in the sun and little birds died of heat. I recall that I made a professional visit several miles in the country on that day, nearly killed a pair of horses, and came near fanning myself.

MRS. HOLDEMAN VICTIM OF AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT

Telephone information reached Cisco this morning that Mrs. J. H. Holdeman was pretty badly cut by broken glass in an automobile accident near Cross Plains. Details are lacking. It was said she was in a hospital at Cross Plains, and could not be removed till late this afternoon.

RIFFIANS ARE PREPARING FOR FRENCH IMPACT

PARIS, July 20.—Preparations for a new drive on the Riflians, tribesmen being made while General Petain completes his strategy plans and his demands for new troops believed necessary have made an impression on Abd-El-Krim, the Robin Hood of Morocco. He has withdrawn men from the most advanced positions and has straightened his line to meet the impact of the French attack.

PAUL DENISON HELD IN JAIL AT ELDORADO

Constable Looney stated this morning that he had just been informed that Paul Denison was in jail at El Dorado, and is being held for Texas officers. Looney stated he would go to the Arkansas city for Denison and bring him back to Cisco, where he is charged with the burglary of the Shepherd grocery store at Humboldt town several weeks ago. Looney stated that he believed Denison was implicated in the robbery of the City grocery during the same night, and possibly the Piggly Wiggly.

JOE BURKETT INSPECTS NO. 23 HIGHWAY

RISING STAR, July 20.—Hon Joe Burkett, member of the state highway commission, spent last Friday in the city meeting friends and making an inspection of the state highways in this section. Judge Burkett expressed himself as highly pleased with the work on highway No. 23, the pike between Rising Star and Coleman, which is now being gravelled preparatory to topping with asphalt the entire distance. Judge Burkett stated that it was the purpose of the department to make this one of the finest roads in this section of the state.

Lies In Graham Sanitarium Suffering With Brain Concussion And Fractured Collar Bone; W. R. Kleiner Driving Car

GOV. FERGUSON CHEATS CHAIR OF ITS VICTIM

A sad tragedy interrupted a pleasure trip of Mr. and Mrs. McDaniel and party of near Sweetwater, when their little daughter, Maurine, was run down on the Bankhead highway just east of Cisco Sunday shortly after noon. W. R. Kleiner was driving the car which struck the little girl, who is now in a local hospital suffering from a broken collar bone and concussion of the brain. The McDaniel party were enroute to East Texas for a visit, and were camped out east of the city, when the accident occurred. The mother stated that she had sent the little girl across the highway to borrow some spoons to use at their luncheon, an the passing car struck the child with the above results. The attending physician stated that the injured child would likely recover, though she was dangerously hurt. In the mean time the party's held up here, where Mr. and Mrs. McDaniel are watching by the bedside of their little one.

R. L. AND EDGAR ALLAN

Cisco News: R. L. Poe makes the excellent suggestion that the Cisco chamber of commerce map the highways leading out of Cisco, plat a large number of acres of land, here and there, into parcels of ten and twenty acres, and then have the owners of said land place an equitable purchase price thereon. This map and the records pertaining to the parcels of land would be kept at the chamber of commerce for ready reference when home people or strangers desired data relative to poultry farms.

Dallas News: A practical suggestion. Mr. Poe appears to be a practical man, much practicaler than Edgar Allan Poe, the poet. Edgar Allan Poe wrote "The Raven," which proves that from the first the Poe family have been interested in fowls. At Cisco we observe that R. L. Poe is sponsoring more poultry farms on Eastland county acres. We can imagine the Cisco Poe writing a poem with a refrain something like Edgar Allan Poe's famous composition:

Once upon a noontide fancy,
 While I pondered, proud and prancy,
 O'er many a catalogue of chickens—
 Suddenly there came a crowing,
 As of someone's horn a blowing,
 Blowing at my office door.
 Quick I called out to the blower,
 Through the keyhole of my door,
 "Have you seen her, seen my white hen called Lenore?"
 Quoth the rooster, "Nevermore!"

We can conceive of Mr. R. L. Poe indulging his poetic inheritance and his poultry predilection while drowsing after lunch time. But outside of that there is no doubt that his idea for encouraging chickens and eggs in the Cisco community is one worthy to be adopted.

PEACE ACROSS THE PACIFIC

"There is now no possible cause of war between America and Japan," says Michemasa Soyeshima, Japanese statesman, to a Chicago audience.

"I feel convinced that America and Japan will never fight, and must never fight; for a war between these two countries would be a crime against mankind and a sin against God."

Almost every war is that. But calmly considered, war between Japan and America is more than usually unthinkable, for the reasons given by the visiting Japanese gentleman, and for others.

The two countries have always been fast friends, until certain little unpleasantnesses developed in connection with the immigration problem. Old friendships are not wiped out in a minute. Japan does not forget the benefits derived from America, and America does not forget her admiration for Japanese courage, industry and honor.

Peace sentiment, moreover, is growing throughout the world. And there is the practical consideration that effective warfare between these two countries, across the wide Pacific, would be a difficult matter, even if either country wanted it, and with all the aid that could be given by aircraft.

WASTED GASOLINE

How much of the potential energy is obtained from the gasoline burned in the 20,000,000 or more internal combusted engines used in this country? About 5 per cent of it, says C. F. Kettinger, president of the General Motors Research Corporation. "The other 95 per cent is thrown away."

This is an almost incredible waste, which belies the vaunted efficiency of our gas motors. The steam engine burning coal or oil does far better.

It is a waste, too, which Mr. Kettinger pronounces unnecessary. He declares that motors can be built which will give at least 50 per cent efficiency.

The public naturally wonders, then, why such motors are not built and why the inefficient motors are not scrapped. The change from 5 per cent efficiency to 50 per cent efficiency would be equivalent to multiplying the gasoline supply—which means the petroleum supply—by ten.

VACATION FOR WORKMEN

An industrial commissioner suggests that the lure of the "white collar job" isn't necessarily its gentility, but may be the two weeks' vacation with pay that is frequently given large office workers.

He has been looking into this vacation business and the effect it has on employees. In a survey of 1,500 factories, he found that 90 per cent of them gave vacations with pay to their office men but only 18 per cent were equally generous with their "production workers." He also found that in the factories allowing annual vacations to the workmen as well as white collar people, there was no difficulty in getting good help, and the men were more contented, more faithful and loyal, and kept their jobs longer, thus amply making up for their vacation.

CLIMBING

Danger crops out in the new "super-power" electric systems, in an unforeseen way. Boys just will climb the steel towers, at risk of their lives. Within two days recently, in the same community, one young lad was instantly killed and another terribly burnt by shinning up to the lofty tops of such towers and coming into contact with high-voltage wires.

It might be possible to keep the kids off by barbed wire, but that is not at all certain, and the wire would interfere with the legitimate use of the towers by electric linemen.

What, then, is to be done as these dangerous wires spread and form a network over the whole country, in the process of natural electrification? Boys not only will climb, but boys ought to climb and have a right to climb. It is a deep-seated human instinct, especially strong in youngsters, and it serves a useful purpose in developing their strength and self-confidence.

Why not give them better facilities for natural and comparatively safe climbing? It is evident that a lot of boys are climbing electric light poles and high tension towers because they have no trees to climb. Any normal boy would rather climb a tree than anything else.

There ought to be more trees everywhere, especially trees suitable for children, little and big, in home yards and in parks, and the kids should be encouraged to climb those suitable to their size and strength. That will take care of the wild instinct and make them healthier, happier children.

CONTACT WITH THE LEAGUE

Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, who has been visiting Geneva, makes an interesting suggestion for American contact with the league's useful and nonpolitical activities. This may receive all the more consideration because President Butler has not been regarded as showing any undue sympathy for the league, politically or otherwise.

He is surprised, he says, at the range of activities he finds under way at Geneva, many of them affecting the United States and touching on problems in which this country has a deep interest. He mentions especially organized efforts to promote commerce, make navigation safer and fight disease. So he proposes that the United States send "a man of ministerial rank" to Switzerland, stationing him perhaps not at Geneva, the capital of the league, but at Berne, the national capital, "to observe the league's work and report its activities to Washington."

Such a regular observer would serve the same purpose as the "unofficial observers our government has sent to Geneva on various occasions. The step would not mean joining the league, which this country obviously is not prepared to do, and would not mean even formal recognition of the league. It might, however, serve a very useful purpose by enabling the United States to carry on less awkwardly various international activities in which it is now engaged, and to keep track of American interests affected by league work.

Among other things, the Scopes trial proves that the literary societies of a former generation did not settle as many things as they thought they did.

DINNER STORIES

They found him wandering around in a dazed condition bearing the signs of a vigorous quarrel, a blacked eye and a gap in his front teeth.

Filled with pity, they seized him by the arms.

"Come along old chap. Let us take you home to your wife?"

He groaned piteously.

"Don't you understand?" he murmured feebly. "That's where I got it!"

A visitor to the offices of a big firm was struck by the lazy movements of an elderly member of the staff, who seemed, at all times, to be on good terms with the others.

"How long has that man worked for you?" asked the manager.

"About four hours, I should say."

"Indeed! I should have judged from his manner that he had been here longer than that."

"He has," said the manager. "He's been here about two years."

When a tactful host entertains a tactful guest, there is sure to be rewarding conversation for the on-looker and listener.

"What do you think of our place on the whole?" asked Mr. Jones, as he stood with his old school friend on the porch, waiting for the station motor which was to bear the twenty-four hours' guest away.

"Pretty nice little place," said Mr. Smith impartially. "Perhaps it bit bare now, but no doubt time will change that."

"Yes," said his host, with great heartiness and no hint of offense. "I hope before you come again the trees and shrubs will have made a good growth—then you'll see a change."

Jake, a farmhand was recounting his troubles to a neighbor. Among other things he said that the wife of the farmer who employed him was "too close for any use."

"This very morning," said he, "she asked me, 'Jacob, do you know how many pancakes you have ate this morning?'"

"I said: 'No ma'am, I aint had no occasion to count 'em.'"

"Well, says she, 'that last one was so mad I jest got up from the table and went to work without my breakfast.'"

The fair angler glanced over her on her first fishing trip, cast into the swirling pool and promptly felt a vigorous strike. She shrieked delightedly and the guide came dashing to the rescue.

"What is it?" he cried. "A salmon?"

The fair angler glanced over her shoulder. "Y-yes," she stammered. "I s-s-spouse so. At least that's w-w-what my fishing license calls for!"

Little Vally Brady and his small sister were spending the week end with their aunt. When bedtime came the aunt asked them how they said their prayers. Vally answered:

"Sometimes Lorraine says them on mother's knees and sometimes to the side of the bed."

"And how about you Vally?" asked the aunt.

"Oh, I don't need to pray. I sleep with daddy!"

Broadway Tomorrow
"The Night Club," based on the stage play, "After Five," by William de Mille, will be the feature at the Broadway theater tomorrow. "The Night Club," directed by Frank Urson and Paul Iribe, the screen's sole "team," who made "Changing Husbands" and "Forty Winks," features Raymond Griffith, the funny fellow with the high hat; Vera Reynolds, Wallace Beery and Louise Fazenda. The story deals with a young fellow who inherits a million dollars from his uncle but has to marry a certain girl to collect. He has just gone through the unpleasant experience of having "the only girl in the world" walk out of the church on him for another fellow, and his feelings toward women in general are not what they might be, so he passes up the legacy, but when he sees the girl in the case, it's a different story entirely. If you laughed at Ray Griffith in "Miss Bluebeard" and "Forty Winks," this one will tumble you right out of your seat.

Ideal Tomorrow
"A Fool and His Money," which comes to the Ideal theater tomorrow ranges from an America boarding house to a castle in old world Europe. The foreign atmosphere is authentic as has been verified by many people who watch closely the technical of pictures. The castle exterior is most imposing while the interior accurately portrays the high ceilings and big fireplaces peculiar to European architecture of the middle ages. The castle itself is an exact replica of the old Von Elm Stronghold on the Rhine. It has been reproduced from drawings and photographs brought from the original for that purpose. The picture is taken from the novel of the same name by George Barr McCutcheon and features Madge Bellamy and William Haines as the leads and supported by Stuart Holmes and Alma Bennett with a host of other stars.

LAND REVALUATIONS JOB STARTS JULY 28
AUSTIN, July 20.—Beginning July 28 State Land Commissioner J. T. Robinson will begin the work of revaluing 500,000 acres of public land in nine counties west of the Pecos river. These lands are those reverting to the state for failure of the owners to pay the interest due the state. The 36th legislature passed a measure giving the original buyers of these public lands priority rights to repurchase them when the state again places them on the market. The nine counties in which these lands are located are: El Paso, Huds-peth, Culberson, Reeves, Pecos, Terrell, Brewster, Presidio and Jeff Davis.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is messy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

Well-known druggists say it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.
