DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

GOD IS TRUSTWORTHY:—Behold, God will not cast away a perfect man, neither will he uphold the evildoers.—Job 8: 20.

THE CRIPPLED NAUTILUS.

No one likes to be pessimistic about a great sporting venture. No one wishes the Nautilus and her gallant commander and crew any worse luck than they have had. But it may be that Sir Hubert Wilkins and his men have not fully realized the kind of craft they were counting on.

"Those who saw the Nautilus when she was at New London are rather glad that if her engines were going to break down and she was to have trouble, it was in the broad Atlantic and other craft were near enough to go to her rescue.

"The Nautilus may get to the other side. She may get a lot of publicity and she may get further north. But those who know her and have seen her rather feel that that is about as far as she will get—'farther north' and not 'farthest north.'"

PUBLIC-SPIRITED TEACHERS.

Official Chicago made a discovery the other day. It was that there are 11,000 hungry school children in the city who are being fed by public-spirited teachers out of their own pockets.

In another industrial city where there has been much agitation for teachers' salary cuts, the superintendent asked for a report from principals as to charitable work done by teachers during the school year.

It was found that many children who came to school breakfastless because their families could not feed them were given milk or hot soup or vegetables by teachers. Youngsters who couldn't afford lunches were helped. Now and then a child inadequately clothed received stockings or shoes or a warm sweater from teacher.

It might be well if a good many communities planning to cut teachers' pay this year would investigate the extra service their teachers have been giving all through the depression.

This country is beginning to go in for history. There are numerous movements in different states and sections to restore or preserve historic landmarks and to assemble, before it is too late, records and information in danger of being permanently lost.

One such movement is directed toward the preservation of old forts in the Middle West and West, dating back to the time when the Lewis and Clark expedition first opened that vast new region to settlement.

It is a new phase of American development. For many years we were so busy growing that we had no interests in or patience with the relics of the past. Everything had to be cleared out to make way for the new construction which represented progress.

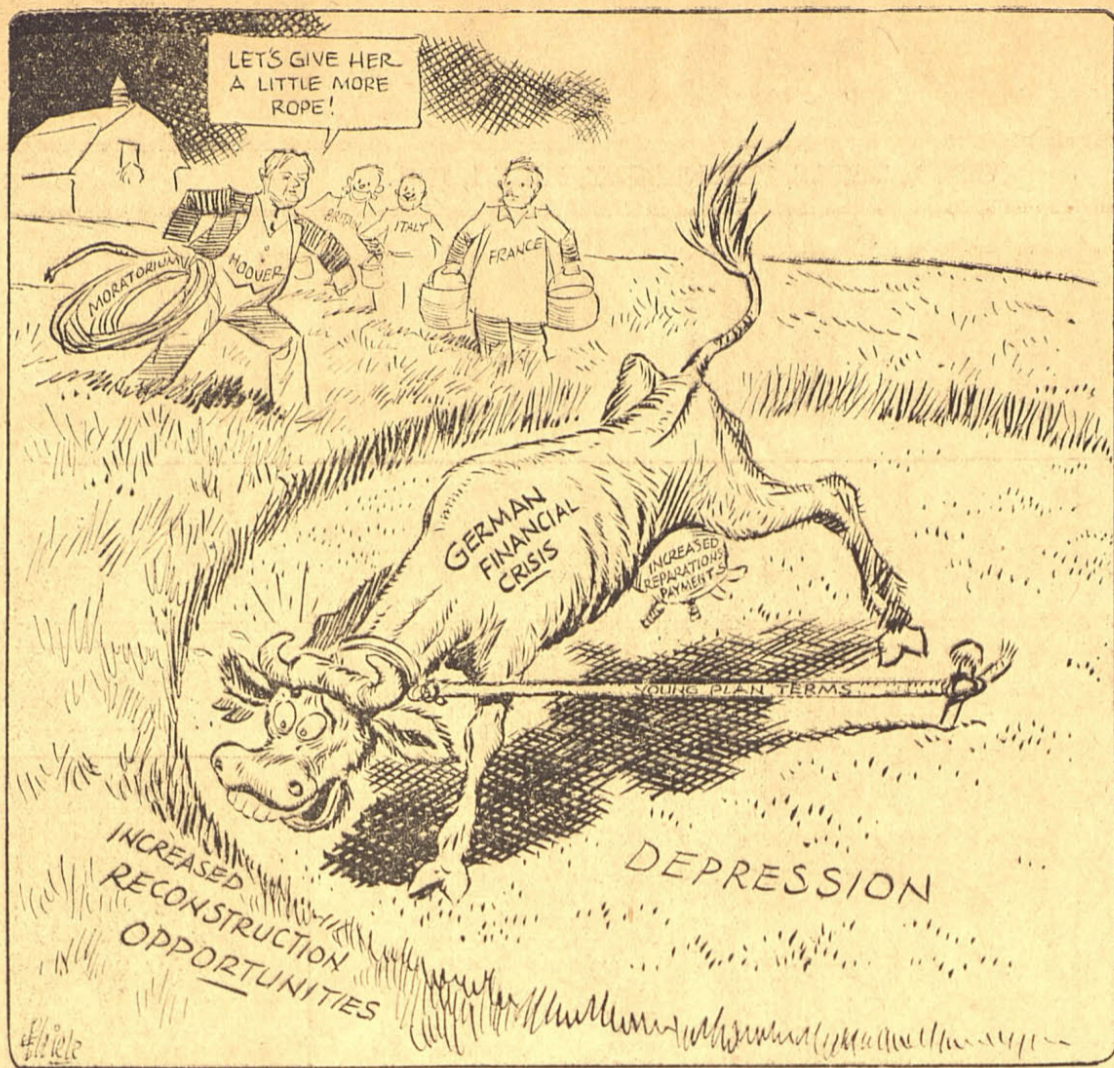

MYSTERIOUS MEDICINE MEN.

Just as we thought doctors were trying to make their work popular and understandable to the layman, members of one branch of medical science met in convention and disillusioned us.

A session with the dictionary might clear up some of these mysteries, but why should the physicians compel the public to such drastic measures in mid-summer? Why be so mysterious?

Now let's all of us declare a debt moratorium, then everything will be all right.

OTHER OPINIONS

HECTIC TIME AHEAD

Indications are that the congress which assembles in December will have rather a hectic time among the divergent and contradictory views of the Executive branches of the government as to the proper method of handling the deficit, which today amounts practically to a billion dollars.

The insurgent wing of the Republican Senators if Brookhart of Iowa and Couzens of Michigan are to be accepted as their spokesmen, apparently intend to demand that the national revenue be increased by levying higher taxes on the big incomes; probably asking for progressive increases in proportion to the magnitude of these incomes.

A democratic view, as expressed by Senator Harrison of Mississippi, is that the people of the United States are today in no shape to stand an increase in taxes. His view is that the Treasury should take care of the deficit by the usual process of issuing short-term obligations, which he argues it could very readily do if the procedure laid down by congress for the retirement of the national debt is observed.

Where the standpat Republicans will go as between the president's declaration against any increase in taxes and the treasury's indicated demand for that very thing is an interesting question. The general surmise is, however, that before December either the president will take heed of the Mellon philosophy or that the treasury official will explain that the Mills and Mellon speeches were merely academic discussions of the problem. The latter alternative appears the more probable. With an election coming on, political expediency is more likely to guide the policy of the administration than the Mellon philosophy. No administration relishes the idea of going into a campaign with an increase in taxes. This circumstance suggests, according to most of the skilled political observers in Washington, that the treasury will ride over the deficit, probably with the expedient of short-term securities, until after the 1932 election. If, as now seems probable the congress which will be chosen at that election is democratic, the Hoover administration might then be able to point with pride to the circumstance that it had avoided increasing the tax burden during the period of depression and had not challenge the incoming democrats to match that record.

This suggests the usual alibi of the executive that congress is the wicked partner in government expenditures. The validity of such an argument is questionable at least, for as Representative Oliver of the House Committee on Appropriations, recently presented there has not been a budget since the budget system was adopted that was not cut down materially by congress. Aggregate appropriations made by congress have been $413,000,000 less than the budget estimate submitted and approved by the white house. In the matter of the present administration, congress has appropriated $30,000,000 less than the president asked for the conduct of the government.—Paris News.

Did You Ever Stop to Think?

By EDSON R. WAITE Shawnee, Oklahoma.

S. W. Mitchell, editor of the Fort Madison (Iowa) Democrat, says: That the merchant who looks ahead is the one who quits thinking destructively about his competitor's business and starts thinking constructively about his own business. If one's competitor hurts him any it is his own fault. There must be some weak places in one's business bulwark or the darts of the competitor would never find a place to enter.

There never was a time when there was so much genuine thinking required in the business world as today, although there are indications that the need along this line is far from met. There are hundreds of so-called 'merchants' who still measure their every move from the standpoint of their competitors. They do nothing as the result of original thinking. They do not look ahead. As a result they never get ahead.

RECIPE FOR HAPPINESS

Happiness in this world depends greatly on our association with other people. We do not stand alone in the world. Unless we feel the obligation to try and make others happy and contented we can not be happy ourselves. No happiness exists in ourselves alone, it must always be in association with others, our friendships and connections. Service to others helps to make us happy. It is our duty and obligation to be kind and helpful to those in our surroundings, to care for our families and our dependents to share with others, to be interested in the success of our city and of our nation, and to use our accomplishments for the benefit of our friends and associates. If we feel kindly disposed to others we gain their confidence.

It helps to make us happy if we have attained the approval of those who surround us. To share with others is a great step toward happiness. I always feel that wealth and success when attained are lasting and beneficial only if we feel that we hold our wealth and success in trust to those who love and to those in whom we are interested. Even after we are gone, a good reputation will be well deserved lives forever.

In the Political Arena

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD Col. Clarence Ousley was for years a notable figure in the galaxy of newspaper writers in Texas. An Alabamian by birth, his college days over, he came to Texas. This was in the long ago. He has been on the firing line ever since. He was the editor and publisher of the Galveston Tribune, an afternoon newspaper. Came the great hurricane that killed the Caribbeans that gathered a toll of 10,000 lives, piled up property losses of millions and reduced Galveston from its once proud estate as the great Texas seaport and the wealthiest of all Texas cities. Col. Ousley became the managing editor of the Galveston News. He is one of the few survivors of the Belt organization. Later, he founded the Fort Worth Record and was its editor and publisher until 1912. He was an assistant secretary of agriculture when Woodrow Wilson was president. He is a student of economics, he has travelled widely and has been connected with every farm movement in the South and the Southwest for a period of 40 years.

President Hoover and Andrew W. Mellon are in the picture as the originators of the moratorium plan. Col. Ousley was the first to fly the danger signal in this country. Indeed Peter Molyneux of the Texas Weekly tells it thusly: 'Clarence Ousley summed up the situation a full 10 days before President Hoover's proposal was announced when he told the editor at San Anelero that Germany would default on her reparations payments in December, that then the other European governments would refuse to pay the annual installments on their debts to the United States and asked his hearers whether the United States would loan the German reparations to England, France and Italy to enforce collections. Mr. Ousley was right, of course, and it is altogether probable that the American people are going to be face to face with this question before the next presidential election rolls around. Particularly so if he is right when he says that the German reparations are linked with debts of the European nations to the United States. Germany is footing the entire bill and something else besides. He is right, therefore when he says that if Germany defaults on her reparations payments the other nations cannot pay us.

Alanson B. Howerton of Michigan, a distinguished statesman of the republican party, and a former ambassador to Germany, has given his viewpoint. He very bluntly told the American world that Germany could not make the payments, that the economic conditions as well as political in the German republic made it financially impossible to get blood out of a turnip. Chairman Jovett Shouse of the executive committee of the democratic national committee has given a sweeping endorsement to the moratorium plan of the president calling for a year's truce in all national debts, with this crisp comment, speaking of President Hoover, 'his position shows statesmanship, courage and decision.'

Sen. Pat Harrison of Mississippi is one of the outstanding statesmen of the South and high in the councils of the democratic party. He has given sweeping endorsement to the Hoover plan as originally announced. He is a ranking minority member of the finance committee. He expressed confidence in the German people and declared them to be fighting a good cause for a republican form of government. He believed the moratorium proposal would benefit the farmers of America and lead to employment generally. Indeed he said the farmers of America and all the holders of property in the United States were enriched by more than a billion dollars in the rise in the values of their holdings. He called bluntly on the French government and its people 'to meet this crisis as have the

Iverness Course Scene of National Open Golf Tourney for Second Time

By RALPH TEATSORTH United Press Staff Correspondent TOLEDO, O., July 1. — The 1931 National Open golf tournament will be played July 2, 3, 4, over the Iverness Country Club course, one of the country's finest, and the only course to have been awarded the championship meet twice.

The National Open was held at Iverness for the first time in 1920 and was won by Ted Ray, English golfer. Ray beat out Harry Vardon, a fellow countryman, to win. Since that time no British golfer has won the biggest of American tournaments.

British Threat. When the world's leading golfers meet here to renew the championship fight, the fear of another successful British conquest will be present. Bobby Jones is out of the running, and there will be several of England's best in competition. Jones was making his debut in the open tournament when Ray won the championship. Experts have pictured a severe jolt to the Yankee spirit of independence should Abe Mitchell, Archie Compson, Henry Cotton, or some other Englishman walk away with the championship. Iverness, unlike most British courses, is laid out over rolling prairie land. There are some uphill and down-hill lies, but the course is not difficult to play, or particularly tiring. It is well suited to straightaway golf. Its traps and hazards furnish grave penalties for the wayward shot, but there are immense rewards for a straight ball and consistent golf. The wind is mild. A general description of each hole follows: No. 1.—392 yards (par 4)—An excellent hole, straight with out-of-bound to the right and high, rough grass to the left. It has an elevated tee which requires a long first shot. The green also is elevated and trapped. A pitch shot is required to land on the green.

No. 2.—388 yards (par 4) — This hole is much the same as the first. Out-of-bound is to the right and also directly back of the green. An over-pitch may penalize. Hence, the tendency to hold back, which if short of the green finds deep sand.

No. 3.—156 yards (par 3) — A picturesque hole which should hold no terror for contestants. A large soft green catches and holds the ball nicely.

No. 4.—431 yards (par 4) — A lot of trouble here. The tee is in a woods, with large trees to the right and left of a narrow fairway. Traps are scattered here, making a 250-yard drive essential. The green is a rolling knob, sporty and difficult.

Natural Hole No. 5.—420 yards (par 4) — A hole recalled by golfers who participated in the National Open 11 years ago. It is natural and has no traps. It appears from the tee to have three ways of play. Yet golfers have learned there is only one sure way. The ball must have distance and must be straight. The green is elevated.

No. 6.—350 yards (par 4) — Easy for par figures. Care must be taken to avoid an over approach on this tightly trapped green. A straight, long ball must be sensibly combined with a well executed mastic pitch shot.

No. 7.—316 yards (par 4) — The first 'dogleg.' This hole appeals for golf stunts. It must be carefully played and the fairway must be followed to avoid punishment. A proper approach is demanded. A topped drive straight for the green, in view of the tee, sends the player into trouble—usually into a deep gully.

No. 8.—210 yards (par 3) — A first class par three hole. The opening to the green is 53 feet wide and demands accurate shots.

No. 9.—492 yards (par 5) — An interesting hole, presenting several lines of play. A second perfect wood shot promises a birdie four, or a possible eagle three. Trouble awaits the hawks and slices.

No. 10.—348 yards (par 4) — A controlled drive both as to distance and direction is needed on this hole, which parallels No. 1. A 225-yard drive sets the player off to a nice start and position for a mastic pitch to a high green.

No. 11.—380 yards (par 4) — This hole has a newly built green. It has been lengthened from 358 to 380 yards. The green is tightly trapped.

No. 12.—516 yards (par 5) — The longest hole. Two hard, straight wallows will reach the green. A missed second shot will cause trouble. A water hazard crosses the fairway. This hole calls for complete mastery of shots.

Chance for Birdie. No. 13.—146 yards (par 3) — Short hole with green centered among pine trees, sided by deep sand traps.

A straight mastic pitch will put the way for a birdie. No. 14.—416 yards (par 4) — It has not been changed since 1920. It is a fine hole of good length and easy for accurate shots. A pull slice causes trouble. The green well guarded.

No. 15.—441 yards (par 4) — One of the most beautiful holes on a course. Tee is in woodland. This hole calls for the strongest dry down hill progress goes all the way to the green. A long drive entitles the player for an extra long iron shot. The green is tempting an deserving of accuracy.

No. 16.—398 yards (par 4) — This hole demands steadiness in scoring. It has no special features. It is simple par four for the careful, but disastrous to the careless.

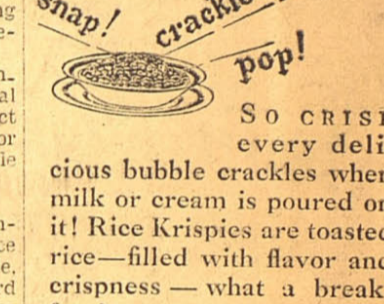

No. 17.—404 yards (par 4) — A fine hole, demanding that every shot be well placed. A water hazard crosses its fairway. A long and well placed drive nicely starts the play. If whose second shot must have plenty of carry, Harry Vardon took a six here in 1920 and lost the title to Ted Ray.

No. 18.—325 yards (par 4) — It demands an ideal test of golf. It demands accuracy, a straight drive and pitch to a fairly trapped green.

Gates of Auburn Prison Closed to Women as Those of Bedford Open

ALBANY, July 1.—Today marked the beginning of the end of Auburn State Prison for Women, present home of Lillian "Cat-Eye" Annie McDowell and other international, known criminals of her sex, after more than 35 years' service.

By act of the legislature, women felons from now on will be sentenced to Bedford Reformatory, in Westchester county. In a few months the women now at Auburn, numbering approximately 120, will be transferred to Bedford, where every effort will be made to straighten out their "crime kinks."

More Liberties.
At Bedford they will have more liberties. The prison atmosphere will be less oppressive — if their behavior is good. They will live in cottages and dormitories. And when they are released it will be easier for them to "go straight."

That is the hope of Dr. Walter N. Thayer, commissioner of correction, and his department.

Incorrigibles like "Cat-Eye Annie," of course, will be given no more latitude than they deserve. "Cat-Eye" is quite a jail breaker. She is almost as adept at that as at gem thieving. She escaped twice from Auburn, which is no mean feat, and once from Erie county jail, in Buffalo. On each occasion she was recaptured within 24 hours.

She is serving ten years now for stealing $75,000 worth of gems from a Buffalo home in 1925. Two years have been added to her sentence for jail breaking. Her record at Auburn is bad. She has served time in Joliet, as well as in Ohio and Pennsylvania prisons.

Other "Celebrities"
But "Cat-Eye" is not the only "celebrated" woman criminal at Auburn. There is Cecelia Cooney, the "original bobbed-haired bandit," who terrorized Brooklyn chain storekeepers with her "wicked eye" and her automatic pistol back in 1924; there is Ruth St. Clair, the first woman to be sentenced to life imprisonment under the Baumes fourth offender law, and there are others.

There are two murderers. One of them faced the electric chair ten years ago but was saved by Governor Miller. Hattie Dixon is her name. Back in 1917 she persuaded her son and another boy to kill a girl so she could collect a $500 insurance policy. She didn't get the money and for that reason has never been able to understand why they should keep her in prison. She is a nigger. The other murderer is Augustua Metz, of Erie county, who killed her husband 11 years ago.

Then there is a red haired tempestuous former night club hostess who killed a bus driver in Nassau county last year and was sentenced to from 10 to 20 years on a manslaughter charge. She is Margaret Coogan.

Baby Bandit
A couple of youngsters who gained some notoriety by trying to escape last spring are Sally Joyce Richards, "Blonde baby bandit" of Buffalo, and Amelia Bascen, from New York City. Newcomers, they wriggled out of their cells, slugged a matron and fled to the prison yard, only to be captured and hustled back again. Both were sentenced on holdup charges. Sally Richards, which incidentally is not her real name, was a circus rider before she turned gun woman.

A woman who served three terms in London prisons is Marie J. Leslie. After coming to the United States Marie stole $173,000 worth of jewelry from a New York City department store and was sentenced to Auburn. Cleo Heaton has been around quite a bit too. She and Ruth St. Clair are the only two sentenced to life under the fourth offender law. Cleo robbed, stole, assaulted and pick-pocketed her way to prison in Ohio, New Jersey, Baltimore and finally to Auburn.

Storm of Criticism
Ruth St. Clair's life sentence drew a storm of criticism. Her fourth offense was the theft of some baby clothing from a store. Last May she jumped from a fire escape and sprained her ankle. It was not known whether she was attempting to escape, or to kill herself.

From Albany there is Jeane Cameron, whose principle trouble is that she is "too pretty," according to George W. Jones, assistant commissioner of correction. Jeane is known as an "institution girl." She has been in various institutions most of her life, beginning with an orphanage. She is serving five years for theft.

Of the lot, only Cecelia Cooney has much chance of being released before the transfer to Bedford is made. She is eligible for parole Oct. 23, and her record has been good. With her husband, Edward, who is serving time for aiding her in her criminal exploits, she plans to start life anew.

Oil Man Offers Control Plan

OKLAHOMA CITY, July 1. — A unique plan, devised to save the nation's crude oil production industry, has been formulated by E. J. Stump, Wichita Falls, Tex., independent producer.

Stump would allow production on a basis of three barrels for each 100-foot depth of the well. His plan does away with proration, umpires and red tape, he said.

Enforcement of the system could be effected easily, Stump maintained but a binding penalty upon violators would be provided. Violators would be restricted to a production rate of one-half the rated yield for a year.

But when statisticians applied estimates to the plan, it was found

Bronco Busting?

It's just a lot of "hokey" any way you figure, but someone proposed a "hog rodeo" on the grounds that prize porkers should do something more than grunt to win blue ribbons at the Los Angeles county fair in September. And so here you see Ernestine Driscoll trying out one of the prospective "broncos."

that present potential production of some of the best wells in the Mid-Continent area would not produce as much oil as the allowable flew under the Stump plan.

For instance, the plan would allow a 4,000 foot well a daily flow of 120 barrels. Many such wells cannot produce more than 50 barrels wide open.

Thus, the proration "red tape" would be removed.

CARRYOVER.
SOKANE, Wash., July 1. — The Pacific Northwest's wheat carryover for 1931 will not exceed 18,000,000 bushels and may be as low as 15,000,000 bushels, according to estimates made by Chicago officials here in conference with Spokane authorities. In 10 days more than 1,000,000 bushels of wheat was sold unmilld in the Orient, it was said.

Japanese Schoolboy's 70 Yen Buy Memorial for Heroic American Flier

WASHINGTON, July 1.—A kindly gesture by a Japanese schoolboy has inspired plans for a formal ceremony where high officials of the United States and Japan will meet in a spirit of friendship to honor Lieut. William Caldwell, U. S. A., who died while performing a service for Japan.

Caldwell was killed in an airplane crash, October 15, while accompanying another plane carrying the Japanese ratification of the London naval pact across the United States. He undertook the flight so the document might reach New York in time to be carried on a steamer to London before the ceremonies there promulgating the pact ended.

When Shigeyoshi Fukushima, sixth grade pupil in Tokio, heard of Caldwell's death, he was grieved. Some memorial, he thought, should be erected for this man. The boy had only 70 yen (35 cents), but he sent this to the American embassy in Tokio as the nucleus of a memorial fund.

The embassy forwarded the money to the state department. Secretary Stimson, touched by the spirit of the boy's offering, talked with the war department, which supplemented the gift, and officials decided that a bronze wreath, inscribed with the Japanese boy's name, should be placed on Caldwell's grave.

Lately officials decided the wreath-placing should be made an international ceremony to cement friendship with Japan. So the Japanese consul at San Francisco and other high officials, including Maj. Gen. Malin Craig, commander of the Presidio, will be invited to meet at the grave of the fallen flier.

Designs for a suitable wreath to be permanently attached to the marble monument over Caldwell's grave now are being studied and officials say one will be adopted soon.

One requirement, particularly, the war department makes: The wreath shall provide a smooth space large enough for the engraved story of Shigeyoshi Fukushima, his 70 yen and his noble impulse.

Indians Plan Ancient Rites

SEMINOLE, Okla., July 1. — Members of the Five Civilized Indian Tribe will reign supremely, free of white man's domination, for a day, July 3, when tribesmen assemble here for the greatest all-Indian day in Oklahoma history.

More than 2,500 Choctaws, Chickasaws, Chickasaws, Seminole, Chickasaws and Creeks, scions of a once numerous race, will pay tribute to their primitive ancestors with tribal rituals, songs, dances and a feast.

A ball game, played in the original Indian fashion—the forerunner of the national pastime—will provide the only test of athletic prowess. Both men and women participate in the Indian ball games.

At nightfall, members of the world champion stomp dancers, by the Indians, who will encircle a huge campfire to break the bread of their ancestors.

Indian dignitaries will lead the celebration. Among them will be Chill Fish, a Seminole, who proudly refused the appointment of President Hoover as chief of his tribe. The only woman chief of the Seminoles, Mrs. Alice B. Davis, will lead the parade.

Chieftains and sub-chieftains mounted on horses, will assume their tribal authorities in the parade.

A ball game, played in the original Indian fashion—the forerunner of the national pastime—will provide the only test of athletic prowess. Both men and women participate in the Indian ball games.

At nightfall, members of the world champion stomp dancers, from Chillico Indian school, will reproduce tribal war dances and love dances.

Ironically, the fete will wane, at midnight, into white man's celebration of the nativity of a nation—July Fourth, Independence Day.

Piece of Steel Reports Quakes

BELLAIRE, O., July 1. — A butcher's steel which possesses the capabilities of a seismograph is puzzling Ohio scientists, who have examined it in the basement of Mrs. Charles Bickmeier's home.

The steel, which in no way differs from that used by butchers in sharpening knives, hangs on a nail driven into a heavy post which is embedded in the concrete floor of the basement. Observers report it will not sway when the house is jarred. As a test, a charge of dynamite was touched off near the house, but the steel did not swing.

On the first tremor of an earthquake, however, the steel will sway and jangle against the pillar. The recent earthquake in New Zealand was reported to the Bellaire Daily Leader seven hours before the tremors were recorded on the St. Regis college seismograph in Denver.

Those who have investigated the "instrument" offer a possible solution in the situation of the Bickmeier home, which is on top of a hill and perhaps a rock that extends far into the ground. Any earth vibration might shake the rock, they said, and thus produce a vibration of the log pillar.

Heart of Liane

by MABEL McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Liane Barrett, 18 and beautiful, lives in a cramped New York apartment with her mother, Cass Barrett, a rather faded actress. One hot night Liane goes to dinner with Molly Cronin, a neighbor, and two of Molly's men friends. The two men quarrel and one is shot. Liane, frantic, sends for her mother who arrives and convinces Shane McDermid, the young policeman in charge, that the girl is innocent of wrongdoing. That night at the theater where Cass appears Liane encounters a handsome stranger who speaks her name.

Cass receives an offer to play summer stock at a Long Island theater of which wealthy Mrs. Cleespaugh is a patron. Liane is to work in the box office, sharing duties with Muriel Ladd, pretty society girl. Elsie Minter, ingenue, introduces Liane to Clive Cleespaugh, son of the theater patron. Shane McDermid comes to tell Liane the man wounded in the gun fire will recover.

Muriel Ladd invites Liane to her home and there the girl again meets the handsome stranger. His name is Van Robard. He takes Liane home. When Cass learns this she is excited and makes Liane promise to have nothing more to do with him. Mrs. Cleespaugh asks Cass to let Liane spend the winter with her and Cass promises to consider this. Chuck Desmond, newspaper man and admirer of Muriel, calls at the theater and he and Muriel drive away. Van Robard declares they have eloped, and starts after the couple, taking Liane with him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER VI

"Where's that girl? Where is she?" raged Mrs. Ladd, storming up and down the little Louis XV sitting room. "Ingrate, wretch!" The words tumbled from her twisted scarlet mouth. Her long, jeweled fingers wove in and out of the chain of glittering stones she wore, torturing it, threatening to tear it asunder. Liane stood in the doorway with Van Robard behind her, watching Mrs. Ladd with a kind sort of fascination. Up and down she stormed, the petals of her leaf-green frock billowing out before her, her auburn hair, curled and crinkling like Bacchus' locks, topping her tall figure absurdly.

"When I'd warned her—she screamed, her breath coming now in gasps. "When I'd expressly forbidden—" "She sat down abruptly in a pale gold chair. "Then, to come home unexpectedly tonight," she cried, fixing both people in the doorway with that baffled, pallid glare, "to find Grimes all dithering and muttering about her having gone off in the roadster with that fellow. No word in any way, if you please. Supposed to be at her grandmother's, and no one there knowing anything at all. Idiots, all of them!"

Van Robard advanced. "We've scoured the shore road," he told her. "We've been everywhere. No trace of the car."

Mrs. Ladd drummed on a marble topped table with vermilion-tipped fingers. The emeralds on her bosom flashed balefully as her breath came and went. "And it's—what? Half-past one?"

"Nearly that," Van corroborated solemnly, consulting his wrist watch.

"Oh, do something. Do something!" the woman wailed, collapsing suddenly. "There must be something. Why can't I think what to do?"

"The papers'll have it tomorrow," she muttered, lifting her head again. "Nice, slimy mess they will make of it. And what's her father doing? That's what I'd like to know. Oh, yes, if he'd spent a bit of his time at home, instead of trailing chorus girls, it mightn't have happened. HE was supposed to be looking after the child."

Van looked uncomfortable. Liane ventured to say timidly in the pause. "Would you mind taking me home now?" My mother will be terribly worried. I didn't have time to leave her a message. We rushed off so quickly."

"Yes, yes, go, all of you. Of course. The sinking ship," cried the woman in the gold chair, wretchedly. "You, Van, run along and forget me and my troubles." She lifted streaming eyes to his concerned face.

"I had no business, Adele, in the first place, to drag this poor child into it," he began uncomfortably. "Only, I thought she might be able to help us, give us some clue."

"I'll come back," he said, in a lower tone. "Never fear, I'll not desert you."

He took Liane's hand. She was trembling now, with anxiety and excitement. When she had rushed off into the stary night at Van Robard's side she had completely forgotten the promise given her mother not 24 hours ago. What was it she had said? Oh, yes, "I'll cut him dead if I pass him on the road." Well, those had been light, witt words, lightly spoken. Because of course she could not treat this handsome man so cavalierly.

However, now it was well past midnight and her mother probably lay shivering with dread, waiting for news of her.

"I was a wretch to drag you off that way," Robard said contritely, settling her in the car. "But I was sure Muriel had stopped to see you, probably had confided her plans. I couldn't think what else to do."

"It's all right," Liane said uncomfortably. She knew it wasn't

A. E. F. LEADER STILL AFFORDS FRENCH THRILL

By SAMUEL DASHELLE
United Press Staff Correspondent.

PARIS, July 1.—General John J. Pershing, whose whitening hair and erect military figure still afford a thrill to Frenchmen and foreigners, is occupied with postwar services which make his day a round of arduous duties here.

With Poch, Joffre, Haig, Wilson, Clemenceau, Serrail and Marguin gone, Pershing's easy gait and familiar face, grown softer and more amiable with the years, recall memories of more than a decade ago.

Pershing spends much of his time these days with the officials of the American Battle Monuments commission and in lending a guiding hand to the completion of the 14 notable memorials which commemorate America's participation in the war. His services are sought for almost every important Franco-American activity, and he must exercise the greatest tact in accepting places on committees.

Not the least important part of Pershing's time is that spent with his old comrades of the war, with the statesmen and leaders who are still liquidating the aftermath of the war.

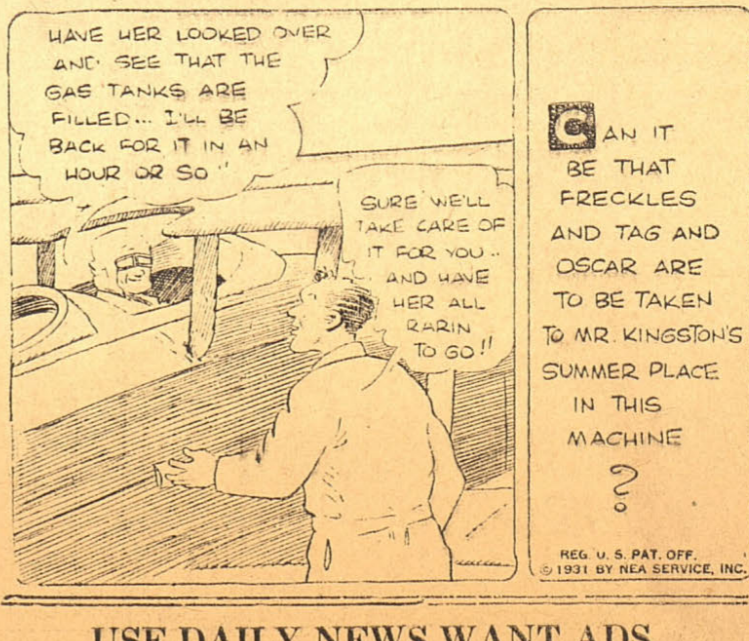

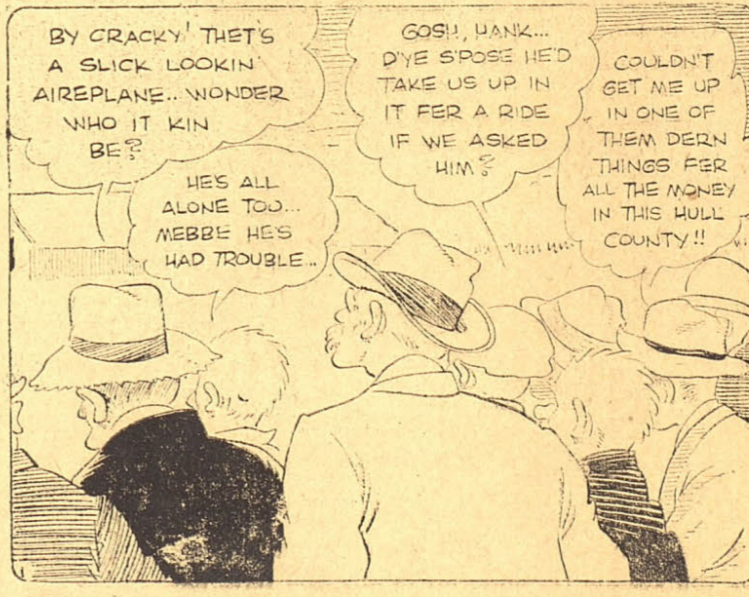

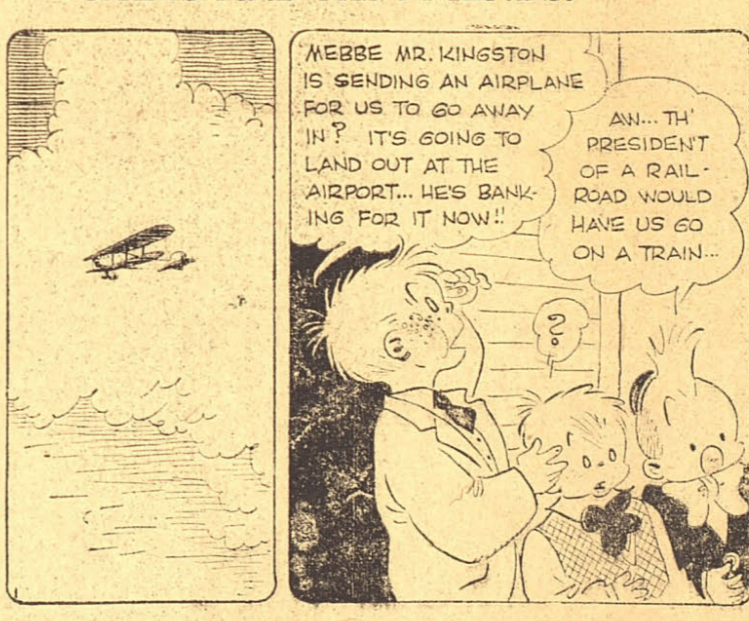

One of President Doumer's first luncheons was given in Pershing's honor. The American has infinite respect for the venerable Frenchman white-bearded aristocratic Senator, who lost three sons in the war. At this luncheon were many of the great soldiers about whom Pershing spoke frankly in his war book. There were General Weygand and General Gouraud, Minister of War Maginot, former French Ambassador Berenger and Colonel Benjey McEt, associated with so much of the Herclie regime in Paris and biographer of the late ambassador.

General Pershing's prestige seems to increase in Paris as years roll on. The tough job he had during the war required a tough, unflinching soldier. They said Pershing was too much of a disciplinarian; that is, those who needed to be disciplined.

But when Pershing rode up Fifth Avenue one bright afternoon at the head of the returning American Army he was not the cold disciplinarian; he was the national hero.

General Pershing, at 71 years of age, is perhaps no longer considered as a Presidential possibility, but his knowledge of national and local politics still is keen. He follows the currents and trends of the shifting political tides, and his sympathies are national and not partisan.

BIG THRILL IS PROVIDED BY UNDERSEA WALK

NEW YORK, July 1.—Undersea walking is the greatest and newest sport in the world, according to Cecil B. de Mille, motion picture producer, who is here en route to Russia.

De Mille, who is a licensed aviator and an experienced yachtsman, said that there is no thrill in the air or water that compares to a stroll under the sea.
 "I have been undersea walking for the last month," he said. "I knew that I was going to be away on this Russian trip so I did all I could of it in a month. I went down almost every day. I wear bathing trunks, a belt of lead weights, the diving helmet and 20-pound weights on my shoulders. I never go deeper than 50 feet. I carry a three-pronged harpoon as a walking stick and for defensive purposes, but I never have had any real trouble with any under-sea monsters, but I have been scared more under water than ever before in my life."
 "Undersea walking is like going on a visit to the Moon. You are in the midst of a turmoil of life that is utterly wild and strange and different in every way. The big and little fish are absolutely unafraid. They accept you as a part of the life of the sea. I have had sharks sail past within six inches of my face without giving me a glance. Everything is magnified under water and you see much that you never would see from above. Walking up and down the hills and valleys at the bottom of the sea is going to become one of the most fascinating sports as soon as its delights are understood.

Olive Branch in New Mexico
SANTA FE, N. M., July 1.—U. S. Senator Bronson Cutting, progressive leader in the senate, and the New Mexico Republican organization have forgotten their differences and the senator once again is welcomed back as the head of the party in this state.
 In the interest of placing this state in the Republican column in 1932, in the presidential election, the old-guarders welcomed Cutting at a meeting recently. Senator Cutting pledged his allegiance to the Republican party.
 Elections are won in this state, which has a small population, on two or three thousand vote majorities, so that the support of the senator behind an organization is welcomed.
 Since the 1929 legislature was in session there had been differences between Senator Cutting and the Old Guard Republicans. He made a trip from Washington to address the New Mexico senate in 1929 to admonish them to remember their campaign promises and to enact legislation that would give the state a labor commission.

 But the senate remained deadlocked for two weeks on the labor commission question, and finally defeated it. In contrast to the 1929 election, when Cutting worked in the Republican ranks and the Republicans were victorious and senator maintained an apparent "hands off" policy in the 1930 elections.
 As a result, the democrats made a clean sweep in 1930.

the fall to find out which children have received attention or advice.
 "Based upon pre-school health work done in some of the states, the summer roundup of the children claims but two original features beyond its name: (1) It secures the followup and correction of defects and requires a checkup in the autumn; and (2) it urges parents to a sense of their responsibility and brings the pressure of public opinion to bear upon the need for providing the school with as perfect material as possible upon which to work.
 "Thousands of children have defective vision, defective hearing, or other defects which can be cured or relieved by early treatment and the parent who does not take this opportunity is not doing his duty by the child.
 "In urging local units to participate in this project, the National Congress of Parents and Teachers does not desire to duplicate any effective health work already being done in a community. But it suggests that local units cooperate with agencies already at work and secure their assistance in the conduct of the campaign. For instance, local boards of health are often eager to include immunization against diphtheria and vaccination against smallpox in the summer roundup plans, and to unite their forces with those of local parent-teacher units because of their interest in these preventive measures.

 "Strictly speaking, lack of these preventive measures should be considered among the remediable defects. Parent-teacher members are in a position as are those of no other organization, to visit the homes, stress the value of sound health, both for the child and the community, round up the children for examination and urge the parents to take them to the family physician and dentist for further advice and treatment.
 "It should be clearly understood that the congress does not advocate free medical or dental service in securing the correction of defects, but refers the child to the family physician and dentist for treatment, unless it is found necessary to seek the needed service in selective cases."

Heart of Liane---

"He's the lawyer's delight. Been co-respondent three times in five years. That's Handsome for you."
 Liane feigned sleep. A sickness and misery tugged at her heart. If Van Robard were bad then the world was bad. She couldn't endure the thought.
 No one could look as Van did and be really bad. The nuns had taught her that character is mirrored in the face. Van didn't look wicked or depraved. How could what Elsie said be true?
 Liane tossed and turned. The moonlight was a torture.
 She reviewed every word which had passed between Adele Ladd and the man who searched wholehearted for Muriel. Her fevered fancy admitted that Adele seemed to have the right to order Van around. Why?

 Anguished, Liane imagined Adele Ladd laughing at her. What was it she would say to Van when next she saw him? Oh, something like, "Who's your shabby little friend? She's not much help in a crisis."
 Clenching her hands, tears on her cheeks, at last Liane slept.

A young lady was the victim of an unusual golf accident while driving past one of the golf courses near a large eastern city. . . A ball driven by a player on the golf course hit an iron hydrant near one of the greens, and revolved off in exactly the right angle to strike the lady's fingers as she held the steering wheel. . . she let go the wheel in pain and in the next moment found her car on its side in the ditch. She was far more painfully bruised than when the golf ball struck her.
