Daily News To Furnish Election Returns

BAND TO PLAY SATURDAY AT MOBLEY PARK

Ciscoans will learn the results of next Saturday's election through special arrangements made by the Daily News today.

The Daily News today announced that it will sponsor an election party, to be in Mobley Park Saturday evening. At which time returns from the Texas election will be furnished.

Early in the evening the Cisco Locho band will play a concert in the park. Director Robert L. Maddox has announced.

Everyone invited.

Every citizen of the Cisco territory, every voter, and everyone interested in the election is cordially invited to attend the election party next Saturday evening.

Special arrangements have been made with the Texas Election Bureau to furnish the Daily News returns from the voting over the state. These returns, then, will be announced to the people of Cisco who gather in the park.

An amplifying system has been secured, so that everyone will be able to hear the returns clearly.

The park was chosen as the site for the election announcements rather than immediately in front of the building in the interest of safety and as an aid to traffic on the highway. City police have promised their cooperation to carry out the traffic safety aim in a smooth manner.

Bulletins By Wire

The bulletins on the election will be announced as soon as they come in by wire, rather than all together. Totals will be announced every half hour.

County returns, which will likely be before the rest of the state totals, will be furnished by a special arrangement.

Full results of the election will be published in the Sunday morning issue of the Daily News.

The extra coverage on the election and the election party are a part of the Daily News policy to give the people of this city the very best in news and to reach them before any other paper.

Baby Bond Sales More Than Double Last Three Weeks

Sale of baby bonds at the Cisco post office has more than doubled during the last three weeks, it was announced by Postmaster Luther McCrea.

A total of $29,212.50 worth of the bonds have been sold, McCrea said. Three weeks ago the total was only $14,625. This represents a gain of $15,187.50 sold in three weeks, or as much for this time as for almost five months immediately after the bonds were placed on sale.

Upon maturity the bonds sold thus far will have a value of $38,950.

"We're proud of our bond sale record," McCrea said. He had previously pointed out that this record indicated a decided change for the better of Cisco financially.

There has not been any great increase in recent weeks, however, in postal savings accounts, McCrea said. The slack season was blamed for this. Previous gains had been reported in the accounts.

McCrea recently announced that postal receipts for this year had shown a substantial gain over last year's figures. "Just better times," he said when asked for the reason.

Mussolini was cheered by the troops as he left to inspect other units.

Hargrove also of Dallas, prominent prohibition speaker, delivered the principal addresses over an amplifier.

The Flying Squadron is making a tour of more than 300 cities and towns of Texas.

Judge Otis also called for the April grand jury to reconvene Aug. 26 to consider evidence in the assault on two federal agents Thursday.

The demonstrators at Maysville and Plattsburg, members of the Farmers Protective association, said they would block scheduled sale of farm property to be held at Maysville later this month.

The project would cost $17,000, estimates indicate.

It is estimated that the garden would produce enough foodstuffs to absorb the greater part of relief roll costs during the coming year.

Cotton Picking In South Progressing

AUSTIN, Aug. 17 — Cotton picking progressed rapidly in the southern districts this week, according to U. S. Department of Agriculture reports.

The crop is about two weeks late in northern sections and the yield will be "fair to good," the report said.

Temperatures were above normal over the state during the week and showers were widely scattered. The hot dry weather tended to retard insect activity.

Although some sections report boll weevil, army worm and flea infestations, it was believed that no great damage would be done, except perhaps in small areas.

WILL ROGERS LEAVES WIDOW FIVE MILLION

By United Press
HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 17 — Wealth of Will Rogers, "a shrewd business man," was estimated at between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000 here today.

His assets were understood to consist chiefly of real estate, government bonds, and 1,000,000 or more in life insurance policies.

The depression had meant little to Rogers, his friends said.

Currently his income from motion pictures, radio, and syndicate writing was estimated at $500,000 per year. In 1928 when his wealth was figured at $4,000,000, his income was reportedly only $380,000.

Most of the cowboy-comedian's $1,000,000 worth of insurance was said to be divided into straight life, health, and accident insurance, with his widow as beneficiary. Whether the policies contained disclaimer clauses in event of death or accident resulting from air travel could not be learned.

Our Friend Crashes

We all knew him. He was our friend. Many of us had never met the man, shaken his hand, but we knew him, nevertheless, knew that he was human, one of us, and remained so until the crash that ended his life Thursday.

It was entirely fitting that he ate his last meal with a group of common people in one of America's faraway spots—with a group of Eskimos in their camp just a little while before taking off for the last time in the ill fated plane. That was like Will Rogers, and like his friend, Wiley Post, crack Tier of a flying nation.

Beloved by millions of Americans and by people of the entire world, the cowboy-humorist-actor, was one of the greatest figures of his time. He was more than a cowboy, more than a humorist, more than an actor. He was all of them and more—he was the philosopher of the common people. He wisecracked his way through life, but although he often criticized people in high places, his criticisms never carried a sting. They were meant to help guide someone to a better way or to smooth over a rough spot another had created.

During his life Will Rogers gave more to charity than perhaps any other man of moderate means. Everywhere that funds for sufferers in some disaster were needed he showed up and put on a performance, at his own expense. Four years ago he made a tour to raise money for a Red Cross drive, making the trip by plane and taking his quartet with him.

Will Rogers had gone to Alaska to look over the great experiment in "pioneering in spinach," as he termed it. Much has been said lately that has been of an unfavorable nature to the federal farm colony in the Matanuska valley, and premature judgment has been passed. Will Rogers went there as a messenger of good will, not so much from the people of the United States as of the people of the various factions to one another. Perhaps his work there will not be in vain. His last special dispatch to American newspapers pointed out the need for hurry in the providing homes for the Alaskan pioneers. Very likely the American people will take up the cause he gave his life for and go forward wholeheartedly with the great experiment.

Wiley Post, too, was known and honored by the world. Twice, facing handicaps that would have stopped an ordinary man, he had circled the globe in record time. He did more for aviation in modern times than anyone with the possible exception of Charles A. Lindbergh. He was at the time planning a hop for Siberia and would have been given a reception there that would have done honor to any ruler. Like Rogers, Post had climbed to the top of his profession.

The death of the two men will be a blow to aviation. Post was one of the crack fliers of the world and the former mayor of Beverly Hills was "the world's foremost aerial commutier." Both men literally gave their lives for aviation and it is for others to pick up where they left off.

But they gave their lives for more than that. For the human race would be nearer the truth. They died as they had lived, each trying to serve.

The Free School Book Amendment

Voters who go to the polls next Saturday will be asked to decide whether free text books shall be furnished by the state to pupils in all schools, private and parochial as well as public.

At present the state furnishes free books to pupils in public schools only. Amendment Number Seven, last on the list, if passed, would require the state to furnish free books to pupils in the other types of schools as well.

Every child in Texas has the right to free text books. But when he leaves the public schools which the state furnishes him and enrolls in a private school, he forfeits the right to state-furnished books.

To give private and parochial schools free text books would be to take the first step in a move to turning education back to the churches. What churches? There is no state religion or church here and likely never will be. That is a part of fundamental Americanism. Each church would have a big say not only in its own members' education, but also in that of every other child in the state. Each private school would have the same voice, and there could be no centralized educational system in Texas.

This is no place to discuss the relative merits of public and private schools. In the past, certainly, private schools have been very beneficial to the nation. But it certainly would be a bad move to use public funds to supply private institutions with text books.

At present Texas furnishes state colleges and a university and pays the professors' salaries. No one has ever asked, however, that the state pay the salaries of professors in church and private colleges and universities. It is not expected. To ask free text books for private and parochial schools would be no more unjust than to demand that the state of Texas pay the salary of every professor of Randolph college.

A little discussed part of the amendment is the part which would set up a basis for apportionment of school funds than that of the scholastic census now in use. Many of us long have wanted a new apportionment basis, especially West Texans, but certainly would not want the free-public-school-books-for-private-school-pupils law tacked on any sort of setup.

Two Kinds of Military Reports

Amarillo Meeting Sept. 3 May Mark End of Confederate Organization

AMARILLO, Aug. 17. — When the United Confederate Veterans meet in Amarillo, Texas, September 3 to 6, for their 45th annual reunion, it may mark the closing of this once mighty organization composed of those warriors who followed the Stars and Bars in the War Between the States.

Recent years have taken a heavy toll of the one grey lines that followed Lee and Jackson of the Confederacy. Only a trace of those grey waves of Southern men remain. Many, of course, are too feeble to attend a reunion of their comrades.

1,000 Expected

However, in spite of the great inroads which death is making in its ranks, General Harry Rene Lee, Nashville, Tenn., commanding the veterans, expects at least 1,000 members to meet in Amarillo, about 300 more than assembled at Chattanooga last year.

Amarillo came forward with an invitation only when it was evident the Confederate veterans would not have a place in which to hold their reunion this year. Other cities, having invited them, later failed to raise a sufficient sum to stage the affair.

While entertaining Confederate veterans will be a new experience for Amarillo, those attending are assured of every consideration and a full program of entertainment. The United States Marine Band is being sent here for the four days. Many state delegations are bringing many Eastern states will be represented at the reunion. Scores of camps are sending organized delegations and several state bodies have chartered special trains. Those include Mississippi, Tennessee, Georgia, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Texas and Louisiana.

Members of the Texas Division, United Confederate Veterans, will assemble in Amarillo, September 2 for their annual reunion.

West Texas Hospitality

All veterans and their attendants will be guests of the host city. Free meals and lodging are being made available in barracks, made possible with equipment borrowed from the United States Army, and in Amarillo homes. That Amarillo is determined to entertain the veterans and visitors with true West Texas hospitality is evidenced in advance preparations.

All railroads in the South and East have given special reduced rates for veterans and others attending the Reunion. A cent a mile rate will prevail for veterans. A reduced rate of one way fare for the round trip has been authorized for Sons of Confederate Veterans and members of the following bodies: United Daughters of the Confederacy, Children of the Confederacy, sponsors, chaplains, matrons, maids of honor of the U. C. V. and S. C. V., members of officials bands in uniform and members of official Boy and Girl Scouts.

From Entire South

Selling dates will be August 29 to September 4, inclusive. Final limit of tickets is 30 days in addition to the date of sale. Stop-over schedules will be allowed.

Advance registrations indicate that every state in the South and the information as each race is being run, etc., Everett L. Looney, one of the special counsel, said. Mr. Looney said the injunction proceedings were not intended and did not have the effect of preventing newspapers from receiving and publishing such news of racing entries and results as they have been accustomed to publish.

It seems there are many people in this country who are willing to accept the taxpayers' money without doing anything in return for it.

Some merchants seem to think that what is wrong for the public is all right for them to do. They should practice what they preach and buy at home.

Passenger buses, vans and trucks are getting bigger and wider — much to the dismay of the motorists. Some of them are so fat and wide that it is becoming an engineering feat to pass them safely.

Cities get reputations the same as people. Guard the good reputation of your city!

A lot of people seem to think that what we need is for our lawmakers to repeal half our tax laws and then take a long vacation.

Newspaper advertising is the best window display for the man who has something to sell.

A disliked man does not get very far.

SUN-TAN

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JO DARIEN breaks her engagement to BRIT PAUL FRAGONET, film actor, who has just returned from his summer resort owned by wealthy DOUGLAS MARSH. Jo goes to Crest Lake and later Bert arrives as a life guard.

Douglas Marsh's eccentric mother dislikes Jo. FRAGONET, film actor, says Jo marked attention and asks her to marry him as soon as he can get to take her to dinner.

Prompted by his mother, Marsh asks Jo to leave Crest Lake. She decides to go to Hollywood to look for a job and Fragonet persuades her to go with him by plane. He takes her to an attractive hotel, promises to call later to take her to dinner.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXVI

TRUE to Fragonet's promise, Jo's telephone aroused her in the early evening. When she had bathed and changed into a kimono, she opened the door to find her old friend Peter Fragonet leaning against the door. "He's here," she thought, "he'll surely come," she thought. "He'll surely let me down like this the very first night." Some thing unavoidable has happened to make him late.

But still another hour passed and Peter Fragonet had neither appeared nor telephoned. Really worried now, Jo thought of telephoning the famous "Chinese." A hurried voice answered her after a short wait.

"I'm interested to know if Peter Fragonet is attending the premier tonight," Jo said, her voice trembling.

The voice replied as if it had answered hundreds of similar questions that night. "Yes," it said. "Mr. and Mrs. Fragonet have a box with a party of friends."

"I see. Thank you very much."

JO sank back in her chair, bewildered beyond thought. Some how she had believed that Mrs. Fragonet was not in Hollywood at all, and certainly Fragonet had been emphatic enough in his statements that he would have nothing to do with her again. And now Edna Fragonet was not only in Hollywood but Fragonet was with her in a box at Grauman's Chinese theater!

Suddenly Jo wilted. Suddenly she felt more tired even than she had that morning upon her arrival. With a choked sob she flung herself on the bed. How long she lay there, fully clothed, she did not know—but when the telephone rang it roused her from a troubled, dream-haunted sleep. She responded drowsily. It was Fragonet, speaking in a low, guarded voice.

"Jo? . . . Jo, darling, I'm terribly sorry."

"It's—it's quite all right," Jo managed to say. "After all, what's more right than that you should attend a premier with your wife rather than take me to Coconut Grove?"

"Then you know what happened?" he asked, after a pause.

"I—I thought something had happened to you. I telephoned the studio and they told me about the premier. So I called to make sure you were there."

"Jo, I've got to see you right away. I've got to explain how it was."

"Explanations aren't really necessary."

"But I'm going to make one, if you'll believe me. I'll be over right away."

"It's too late. I've been in bed for hours," Jo lied. "Can't you tell me over the telephone?"

"Not very well. I'll be over right away."

"Please don't—"

But already he had replaced the receiver at his end of the wire. He would be at the apartment, as he'd said. Jo was sure of it. Hurriedly she bathed her face in cold water, rearranged her hair, dusted herself with rouge and powder. She mustn't let him see how disturbed she'd been. She mustn't let him know it could matter.

WITHIN a few minutes he was at the door. When he saw her fully dressed for the evening his face showed his astonishment.

"I fibbed a bit about being in bed," explained Jo lightly. "The truth was that I'd been asleep. It's fortunate we didn't go to Coconut Grove, really. I'd have fallen asleep at the table."

But Fragonet was deadly serious. "Jo, I couldn't help what happened tonight. I'd no idea Edna was in town. I thought she was in the east. But tonight, just as I was about to leave, she came to the house with Boleson, the big chief at Atlas. He said there'd been gossip and that I'd better appear at the premier with Edna. They had it all arranged—the party of friends and all. I couldn't telephone you until just a few minutes ago." He stopped. "What are you smiling at, Jo?"

"Was I smiling? I didn't mean to. But I was thinking about how you said you'd be so quick to give up pictures." Jo shook her head slowly. "You couldn't ever do that. You'll always jump when they crack the whip—because you've built up somebody called Peter Fragonet, and you aren't ter him down."

He took a step toward her. "I will give pictures up, Jo. I swear it! . . . Only I can't afford to have trouble now, just when they're about to release a new picture of mine. When that's done—then I'll tell Boleson and Edna where to go."

"I think it was decent of Mrs. Fragonet to help you save your reputation after . . . what's happened," Jo said.

"Decent?" cried Fragonet. "She doesn't want my new picture to be a flop—because she knows that the more I've got the more she can bleed me for in the divorce settlement."

Jo was silent a moment. Then, slowly: "One thing is certain, Peter. I've made a terrible mistake in coming here at all—but now that it's done I must forget to forget it. I know me. It just won't work, that's all."

"It will, Jo. When this is over . . ."

"No . . . Tomorrow I'll move into a cheaper place and start hunting for a job."

"Jo darling, please listen a moment. In two months at the most you and I can dash over to Las Vegas and be married secretly. And as for your moving away from here—that's utter nonsense. I've leased this apartment for you, and all the bills are to come to me."

Jo stepped back as if from a blow. For the first time she realized that she had allowed Fragonet to rush her headlong into a position almost certain to mean disaster for them both.

Weekly Sunday School Lesson

MARTHA (A Home-Maker)

Text: Luke 10:38-42; John 11:17-28

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for August 18.

BY WM. E. GILROY, D. D. Editor of Advance

MARTHA is offered for study in our lesson as a type of home-maker. With all justice to a woman who may be greatly wronged in a contrast that our narrative has made between her and Mary, one may question just a little her right to the title.

Our homes would be much poorer and probably less comfortable without the Marthas with their care for many things, with their concern for dust and disorder, and their worship of broomsticks and dust cloths—to say nothing of their zeal for cooking, and seeing that we are well fed and, in general, well cared for.

But such zeal at times does not tend entirely to the making of the home. The rigid discipline of too efficient housekeeping may be apt, on occasion, to break, rather than make, the home.

A CANADIAN artist, who attained some fame, once contrasted the conditions in his home with those in the home in which he was brought up.

In his early childhood he was in a house where the costly furniture was covered lest the children should scratch or mar it. The home was not a place of enjoyment where things were used for their intended purpose, but a place where discipline and restriction were evident at every turn.

He determined that when he had a home and children of his own, the home should be a place where furniture was used and enjoyed—a place where normal and joyous life was lived by the family insofar as he could arrange and encourage it.

GOOD home-making must take into account the sentimental Mary as well as the practical Martha. It was Mary's glory, and her fault, that she forgot some commonplace duties and contemplation of their guest and all that he had to teach them.

Here was opportunity incomparable with matter-of-fact routine. It was, perhaps, ungracious that she should not have assisted her sister Martha.

Perhaps, however, the Master would have enjoyed the hospitality of the home just as much if the meal had been very simple, and Martha, instead of being so fussy about much serving, had also sat at His feet.

There is an innate richness of good home-making and of hospitality in receiving guests that cannot be translated into terms of mere preparation and serving. A home is first of all a place in which to live.

After we have developed in our home Martha-like efficiency we need something more. In fact, perhaps the only way to insure a good home and good home life is to begin with the one thing needful that Mary chose. It gives us the right sense of values and saves us from the consequences of too much discipline and efficiency.

Gov. Allred pointed out those who placed their bets through the bookie shops could not get reasonable treatment in that in Dallas, some of the operators regularly having been paying $1500 a month in fines; the special wire printer service has been costing about 15000 a month; and further, that arbitrary limits are put on the odds paid through the bookies, regardless of the actual odds of the races.

Gov. Allred also pointed out that the legalized track operators had insisted, defending bills to repeal the racing law, that the bookies were the sources of the evils causing public complaint.

Irvin McCreary, Gatesville banker, will take over his new duties at the end of this month as banking commissioner of Texas. He will succeed E. C. Brand of Sweetwater, who became commissioner just after the worst days of the "bank holiday" period two years ago, and piloted the state banking system through dreary days at first to much pleasanter times recently.

The state banking system is intact. Texas has escaped the scourge of branch banking. State and national banks function in harmony. Administration will pass from capable hands to the hands of a commissioner widely known among bankers and in whom both bankers and business men and the executive officials of Texas have the fullest confidence.

U. S. MERMAIDS FAIL TO REACH OLYMPIC FORM

By HENRY SUPER United Press Staff Correspondent NEW YORK, Aug. 17 — America's mermaids must speed up in the next year if they expect to retain their swimming championship at the 1936 Olympic Games. Although the back-strokers and middle distance swimmers have improved since the 1932 games at Los Angeles, the sprint star and breast-stroke aces are slowing up. A line on America's chances was gained during the recent National A. A. U. championships in New York, and some prospects are none too bright.

Perhaps in another year many of the newer stars will improve their speed but based on present comparisons America is weak in the sprints and breaststroke.

Clocked Seconds Slower In 1932 Helene Madison, now a professional, captured the 100-meter freestyle in 1:06.2. Eleanor Garatti finished third in 1:08.2 and Josephine McKim came in fourth with 1:09.3.

These three joined with Helen Johns and captured the 400-meter relay in 4:37.7.

At the recent A. A. U. tournament, Olive McKean of Seattle took the 100-meter freestyle in 1:10.2. Adding her time to the next three finishers, brings a total of 4:44.6 or approximately 4:43 for the 400-meter relay.

Thus it takes no mathematical expert to see that a free-style individual and relay team which the United States could now marshal is far slower than that of 1932.

Holland Has Stars Chief competition in the sprints will come from Holland. Leading Dutch star is Miss Willy den Ouden who holds the world's 100-meter record of 1:04.8. Miss Rie Mastenbroek of Holland has done 1:05. And these two teamed with Misses Selbach and Timmermans, hold the world record of 4:33.3 for 400 meters.

Other foreign aces are Jeanette Campbell of Argentina who has churned 100 meters in 1:08 and Renee Blondeau of France, 1:08.8. The backstrokers have improved. The Misses Erna Kampa and her sister Elizabeth, Alice Bridges, and Anna Mae Gorman rapidly are approaching the marks set by Mrs. Eleanor Holm Jarrett, Olympic champion, and at their present rate should be close to Mrs. Jarrett's best times when the Olympics roll around.

Week in Breaststroke Events The breaststrokers are weak —

SOCCER SPURS CHINA TO NEW SPORTS FEATS

By ROBERT H. BERKOV
United Press Staff Correspondent
SHANGHAI, Aug. 16. — Association football, or "soccer," has captured the imagination of all classes of Chinese.

Ten years ago there was no such thing as a Chinese soccer team. Six years ago the few teams which competed with foreign aggregations were the laughingstock of the spectators, and when any Chinese group won a game from a weak foreign opponent it was cause for editorial comment in newspapers.

Today Chinese dominate the sport. Tung Hwa, the most renowned eleven in China, consistently defeats all comers, but dozens of other teams, in Shanghai and other ports, have won league championships, and the most doughy foreign teams are unable to win more than a chance game from them.

Athletic Rise Marked
The rise to eminence of the Chinese teams is only part of the amazing advance in which has characterized Chinese athletic activity in recent years, but it is by all odds the most spectacular.

The movement started in the schools. Under the influence of teachers who had attended colleges and universities in America and Europe and acquired some of the athletic traditions of such institutions, young China became sports-conscious. Tennis, basketball, swimming, track and field events, and baseball were taken up enthusiastically, but it was in soccer football that Chinese supremacy first made itself manifest.

Becomes Sandlot Game
Soon every school and college student seemed to be playing the game. It assumed the proportions of an epidemic. Street urchins played it in streets and empty lots, much as American youngsters play baseball. Improvised fields and improvised balls made no difference in enthusiasm. Every spare moment was utilized by young China to gain proficiency in kicking, passing, goal-tending and penalty shots.

As the schools turned out their graduates, club teams sprang into existence. Such groups, maintained intact over a number of years, soon became formidable contenders for honors previously held by British elevens of Shanghai, Hongkong, Tientsin and other treaty ports in the last few years Tung Hwa, playing with a lineup virtually the same from season to season, has become the greatest team in China, capturing trophy after trophy and defying the best efforts of British, French, Portuguese, Indian and German opponents to mar its record.

Builds National Morale
The result of the victories of such teams as Tung Hwa, Three Cultures Chinan University and others has had a tremendous effect on Chinese morale. Triumphs of Chinese teams over strong foreign opposition has convinced the Chinese that as a race they are not inferior athletically to any people.

Another aspect of the sensational Chinese success in soccer is the economic one. When a Chinese eleven turns out, thousands of spectators turn out and the grandstands are packed. When two foreign teams meet, only a handful of followers is on hand, but Tung Hwa is the greatest drawing-card in China.

As a result, the financial success of the soccer season in Shanghai and other treaty ports has come to depend on the Chinese elevens.

Surf Bathing Is Seven Stories High

PARIS, Aug. 17 — Wait till the famous bearded traffic cop at the Porte St. Denis stops the taxis dash through the thick walls of traffic across the street, turn into a doorway out of the busiest, noisiest, dustiest section of Paris, and you're all ready for a little surf-bathing.

The ocean in the heart of Paris is provided by Neptune, a new bathing pool nearer to the center of the city even than the bathing houses anchored in the Seine, with the advantage of not being provided with the Seine's collection of floating sewage.

Neptune provides artificial waves for its clients, kicked up by a gigantic paddle-wheel, which has any number of pees, and can provide to order anything from a mill-pond calm to a tempest in mid-Atlantic.

No ocean is complete without a beach, so Neptune has a beach, with real sand. A swimmer enters by elevator. It's seven stories up, on the roof.

Thus the athletic have their exercise brought practically to them. There is even provision for non-athletic companions — one bar on the beach, one tar at the pool.

Illinois Keeps Its NRA Experiment

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 17 — Illinois is continuing its own experiment in NRA wage fixing despite the United States Supreme court decision voiding the Recovery Act.

The state, however, is acting under provisions of the minimum wage law for women and minor employees, which was passed by the Illinois General Assembly in 1933 and was extended indefinitely by the recent regular session.

The laundry industry is the latest to come under the state's wage fixing program. The first was the macaroni industry and the next to be placed under its provisions will be the beauty culture profession.

New regulations governing working conditions and a schedule of wages to be paid in different sections of the state were put into effect for all laundries recently by the state department of labor, which has charge of enforcement.

In the Chicago and metropolitan area the wage scale for women and minor employees of laundries was set at 23 cents an hour, while the central and northern portions of the state will have a 25 cent rate and the southern section of the state a 23 cent rate.

The regulations, together with possible penalties to be inflicted for failure to follow them, have been placed in every laundry in the state. Workers have been notified to report any violations.

HOOKS AND SLIDES

THE Southwestern Conference will be one of the fastest in America this fall. Rice Institute will have one of the nation's three outstanding teams. Such a statement may sound rash, but you are privileged to see me if I'm wrong. I happen to know what the capable Jimmie Kitts has up the sleeve of his jersey. He has some very fine football players and plenty on the ball.

Ohio State, of the Big Ten, in my opinion, will be another of the three foremost creations in the country. I doubt that I will be accused of being giddy-headed for saying this. The Bucks were just about the best of the lot at the wire last November, and they're practically all back with four or five sophomores certain to crack the varsity wide open.

Francis Schmidt is my candidate to succeed the late Knute Rockne as the general public's conception of a gridiron magician. And you've never seen a harder driver than the intense Nebraska man who came up from Texas Christian to take charge at Columbus a year ago.

Wallace and McCauley
BUT to get back to Rice, not the least reason why Houston and vicinity is already talking of filling the Rose Bowl with it is that its touchdown twins, Bill Wallace and Johnny McCauley, will be back. They are rangy triple-threat All-America prospects. So dangerous was Wallace at returning punts last season that opposing coaches often ordered their kickers to boot the ball out of bounds rather than risk a long return. Wallace and McCauley are the most famous football warriors ever to wear the Blue and Gray, and should be even more formidable this autumn.

The football enthusiasm of the southwest matches that of the south and California. Andy Anderson, sports editor of the Houston Press, informs me that Kitts has some exceptionally fine freshmen coming up, and insists that it isn't home town pride which prompts him to remind me gently that the Rice team of 1936 also will be nothing short of ignited infantry behind tanks.

Rice captured the championship of the Southwestern Conference last season, losing only to Texas Christian. The Owls early showed their caliber by repelling Purdue at Lafayette.

It's the Old Hoop Game

IN addition to its pigskin prospects, Anderson is positive that Rice will show New Yorkers a thing or two when they play basketball at Madison Square Garden in February. Everything at Rice seems to improve, and as remarkable as was its hoop array of last season it is expected to be better the next time out.

It is significant in these years of highly specialized forward and lateral passing that both Schmidt and Kitts were better and more highly regarded as basketball coaches before they accepted their current assignments last season.

It perhaps would be advisable for colleges that haven't been doing so well over chalked lines to take the matter up with their basketball coaches. They know how to chuck that elongated spheroid hither and yon, which now seems to be the main thing.

Sun's Surface Is Recorded For Data

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 17 — A Canadian government physicist, sitting in the Dominion Observatory here, is recording minute details of disturbances on the sun's surface in the hope of some day making "long range" weather forecasting possible.

The scientist is Dr. Ralph E. DeLury, assistant director of the observatory, who has compiled thousands of records and observations on weather disturbances. Although he has been keeping the records of years, they are still too incomplete to draw definite conclusions.

Dr. DeLury believes that the storms that occur in regular phases across the sun's surface have a definite effect on the earth and influence rainfall, temperature, plant growth, and even the lives of insects and mankind.

He revealed that observations made at the Toronto bureau of the Meteorological Service of Canada have shown that approximately 30 per cent more thunderstorms take place at the sunspot minimum than at the maximum.

FORD V-8

You ride in safety with the Ford V-8

SAFETY comes first in designing a Ford car. The people look to us to make the safest car it is possible to make. Cost doesn't enter into that.

Long ago we decided that the all-steel body was the safest type of automobile body. It cost us more, but it was the right thing to do. So we put it into production.

Safety Glass was another important step forward. As far back as 1927 we began using it for the windshields of the Ford. Now all Ford body types are equipped with Safety Glass throughout. It costs us more to provide this extra protection, but you do not pay extra for it.

Ford brakes are another important safety feature. They are powerful and quick-stopping and we believe they are the safest and most dependable type of brakes for motor cars. Cost isn't a factor here — Ford brakes are the same design as those used on the most expensive automobiles.

The idea behind the Ford V-8 is to bring a constantly higher standard of motor car value within reach of every one who drives. That applies to safety as well as performance, comfort, beauty and convenience.

CARDINAL FOE PROLONGS NAZI FIGHT 11 YEARS

By ERNEST FALKNER
United Press Special Correspondent
MUNICH, Aug. 17.—Only two people in Bavaria today can afford publicly to be known as opponents of National Socialism—Cardinal Archbishop Michael Faulhaber and Crown Prince Ruprecht.

They oppose the Nazi regime on different grounds; the Archbishop resists the Nazis' attempt to obtain for their racialist philosophy a predominant position over and above religion; the crown prince is an adversary of political centralization under the Hitlerite regime. There is, however, an intimate link between the two anti-Nazi leaders.

The Archbishop and his followers are adherents of the Bavarian monarchy. That is the reason why the crown prince's children have been baptized and confirmed by the Cardinal; why Ruprecht invariably listens to the Cardinal's sermons; why the vast community assembled in church always demonstratively cheers the crown prince.

Nazis Discard Colors
The Nazis have practically discarded the colors of the Bavarian monarchy, blue and white. Blue and white flags, however, fly from Bavarian farmers' houses whenever religious ceremonies are celebrated.

Cardinal Faulhaber's association with the Wittelsbach monarchy is not of recent date. It is still remembered in Bavaria with what fearlessness he denounced, in his New Year's Eve sermon on Dec. 31, 1919, the Bavarian republic established by the Jewish socialist leader Kurt Eisner.

Three years later, at a Catholic gathering in Munich, he shocked the republican Catholic party by declaring:

"The revolution was tantamount to perjury and treason. It will go down in history bearing Cain's mark."

Cardinal Faulhaber, however, has taken just as firm a stand against the Nazi movement from the beginning.

Early Foe of Hitler
A few months after Hitler's first abortive coup d'etat in Munich, on Feb. 15, 1924, he declared that the Nazi movement was "incompatible with the principles of religion." On this point he never yielded. Shortly before Hitler's assumption of power, in July, 1932, he suspended from the Catholic parish priest Senn and forbade him to carry out any ecclesiastical function because Senn had publicly embraced Nazism.

Faulhaber's sermons on "Christianity, Judaism and Germanism" during Christmas week, 1933, in St. Michael's church in Munich created a sensation throughout Germany. He passionately denounced the Nazi theory which places race and blood above the spiritual principles of religion. Faulhaber's attack provoked violent retorts from several high Nazis, including Alfred Rosenberg. There were repeatedly noisy demonstrations before his palace; Nazi radicals urged his arrest. The government, however, did not follow this advice.

Ardent German Patriot
Opposed as he always has been to Nazism, Cardinal Faulhaber never professed internationalistic ideas. On many occasions, he manifested his German patriotism. It was as a champion of defeated Germany that he visited the United States in 1923.

Faulhaber's journey to the United States was described as "the first happy move of the German government since 1918." In seven weeks he visited 25 bishops and spoke at 78 meetings. It was the inflation period in Germany. Faulhaber told his audiences that the charge for a funeral of the simplest kind in Germany was 60,000 marks, and that a single candle for the churches cost 10,000 marks. He then added:

"Here in America, in the land of work and freedom, you must understand that the Germans want to earn their bread as free workers, not as slaves."

He appealed to American mothers to realize the situation of German mothers and children.

Faulhaber also saw President Harding.

The Cardinal's origin was humble. He was born on March 5, 1869, as son of a poor artisan in Klosterheldenfeld near Wuerzburg. He was consecrated as priest in 1882.

By STANLEY MORGAN
Staff Sergeant, U. S. Army
At 10 p. m. Thursday night I was attracted by a group of natives on the beach and, walking down there, discovered that they were crowded about one native who was out of breath and jabbering in pidgin English, "Airplane, she blew down."

After questioning the native I found that he had witnessed the crash at his sealing camp some 15 miles south of Barrow and had run the entire distance to bring help. He said that the plane, flying very low, had suddenly appeared and, sighting the camp, had circled several times and landed in the river near the camp. Two men climbed out, one wearing a rag on his sore eye (Post) and the other a big man with boots (Rogers). The big man had called the natives and inquired the distance and direction to Barrow, and after being told he and the other man had climbed into the plane, taxied to the runway along the bank, and tried to take off.

Dull Explosion
When the plane was still very low the motor failed and it fell. As it fell, banking to the right, there was a dull explosion inside, the native said. Most of the right wing fell off, they said, as the plane fell into the river.

The natives had hurried to the plane, and after calling to the men inside and receiving no answer, this one had run to the station at Barrow.

From the natives' description of the plane and its occupants we immediately knew that the men were Post and Rogers. Getting together 14 Eskimos, Frank Dougherty and I left for the wreckage in a whale boat.

We arrived in the semi-darkness of dawn and even before we reached the ghostly remains of the wreck, I knew that the occupants of the plane were beyond human help, as no one could have withstood the terrific crash.

Natives Sing Hymns
We found that Rogers' body was easily freed from the wreckage, but that of Post could be removed only after we had pried away much of the plane. Then it was taken away also and after both bodies had been wrapped in sleeping bags we found in the plane, they were laid carefully in the whale boat.

It is believed that the natives felt the loss of these two great men as deeply as did all of America, for on the way back to Barrow one of the Eskimos began singing a hymn in Eskimo and soon all of them took it up and sang the rest of the trip.

When we arrived at Barrow, we silently bore the bodies to the hospital and turned them over to Dr. Griest who, with some friends, prepared them for shipment or burial.

It is doubtful if a person in Barrow slept that night. All sat around the hospital with bowed heads and little or no talking.

DIETETICALLY, fruit and meat combinations are good, especially in spring. The acid of the fruit acts upon the fat particles, breaking them up and making them easier to digest. The mineral salts of the fruits are valuable in sustaining the balance of a meal rich in protein and in counteracting the effects of meat in the diet.

Here are some meat and fruit combinations: Ham and pineapple. Frenched pork tenderloins with apricots, lamb chops with orange slices, roast beef with browned pears, veal and raisin loaf with bananas, hamburgers steak with broiled bananas, beef roll with apricots, and beef and raisin loaf. Fish with pineapple sauce are even more unusual and good, too.

Bananas in Blankets
Peel well ripened bananas of good size and divide in three equal parts crosswise. Drench each piece with lemon juice, wrap with paper thin bacon slices and broil under the flames or bake in a hot oven (425 degrees F.) until the bacon is crisp. Serve with cream sauce, sprinkle with chopped Brazil nuts and garnish with a sprig of parsley.

The next time you make a beef loaf add 1 cup chopped seedless raisins to each pound and one-half of meat.

LUNCHEON: Clear tomato soup, asparagus salad, hot ice-box rolls, caramel custard, milk, tea.

DINNER: Filet of fish, Waikiki, browned potato marbles, buttered new beets, spinach and egg salad, apricot sponge, milk, coffee.

1-2 teaspoon mixed dried herbs, 1 cup pineapple juice (unsweetened), 1 cup boiling water, 1 bouillon cube, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 egg yolk.

Tie mixed herbs in a small piece of cheesecloth. Butter a baking pan, sprinkle shallots evenly over it and place the filets of fish on the shallots. Sprinkle with parsley, salt and pepper and add pineapple juice and water with bouillon cube dissolved in it. Put the mixed herbs in the liquid, cover with buttered paper and bring to the boiling point on top of the stove. Then put into a very moderate oven (325 degrees F.) and simmer until fish is cooked.

Saute a slice of pineapple in butter and divide in six pieces. Remove fish to hot platter and on each filet put a wedge of sauted pineapple.

Melt butter, stir in flour and when bubbling add the broth from the fish and cook, stirring constantly for five minutes. Add slightly beaten yolk of egg and bring to boiling point, but do not let boil. Pour sauce over filets, sprinkle with parsley and garnish platter with more wedges of pineapple and slices of lemon.

TEXAS STEER GRIDDERS ARE HARD AT WORK

AUSTIN, Aug. 17 — How do college football stars and not-sogreets spend their summer days while the average "fan" sweaters and awaits the return of cool weather? Do the heroes of the impending season study their plays, or do they sit around on corners wondering how many headlines they will gather in the Fall?

They do neither—not if University of Texas gridders may be taken as an example. Instead, they spend the hot months in hard and gainful labor with two objectives in view... to replenish the bank account sufficiently to permit their return to school, and to build the hard shoulders needed for effective blocking and tackling and the tough biceps for drive and speed.

"Rough-necking" in the oil fields, pipe-line work, construction work, boys' camp work, and other similar types of labor in the broiling sun are included in the list of "summer jobs" being held by the majority of men who will appear in Coach Jack Chevigny's Longhorn lineup this fall.

Oil Field Work

To begin with the linemen—Harold Griffin, scrappy 170-pound understudy to Charles Coates at the center position last season, is a member of a pipe-line gang near his home town of Breckenridge. The guards, Captain Joe Cmartt and Moreland Chapman of Austin and Woodrow Weir of Georgetown are by no means taking life easy. Of the trio Smartt has the softest spot as a counselor at a boys' camp near Kerrville, while Chapman is working on a construction gang in and near Austin and Weir is absorbing the hard knocks of oil field work near Tyler.

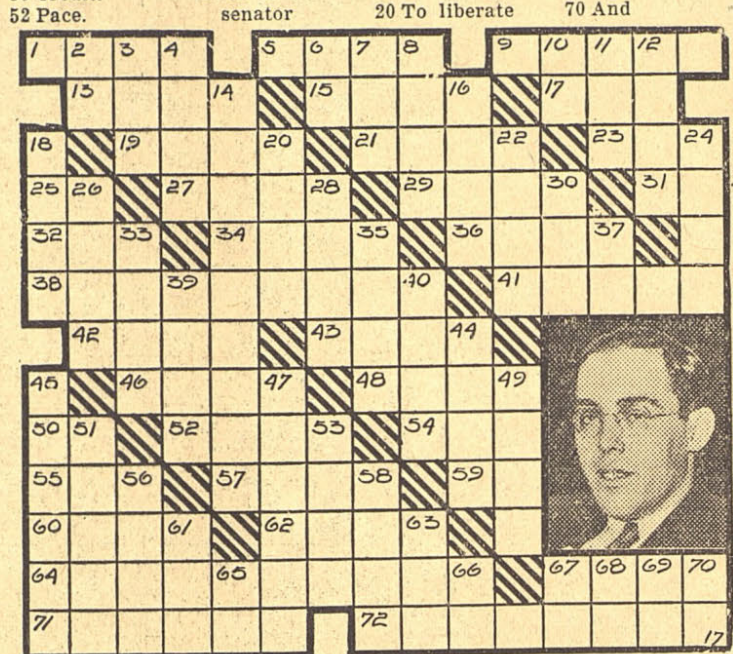

"Sunny Jim" Tolbert of Farmersville, 200-pound senior tackle, is spending his time over the books in summer school, but Clint Small, the other outstanding Longhorn

NORTON SEES BRIGHT AGGIE YEAR IN 1935

COLLEGE STATION, Aug. 17. — Returning to Aggieland Thursday from the Lubbock coaching school, Coach Homer Norton was enthusiastic over the prospects for the sixth annual coaches short course at Texas A&M college. While at Lubbock, he met several coaches who assured him that they expect to attend the course, which runs from Aug. 18-24.

Coach Norton has added a new feature for the course this year by securing Harry Viner, Houston, president, Southwestern Football Officials Association to give the coaches a talk on the 1935 rules. It is hoped that Mr. Viner can attend the banquet to be held at the college mess hall Wednesday evening, he said. The banquet is an outstanding feature of the short course each year and attracts many noted speakers and sports writers for Texas papers who vie for the honor of telling the tallest yarn of the year. Last year the "palm" was carried off by A. H. Kirksey of Waco, who is expected to defend his laurels this year against all comers: Lloyd Gregory, sports editor, Houston Post, title holder in 1933 will try to stage a come-back.

While at Lubbock, Coach Norton had several confabs with Glenn S. (Pop) Warner, head coach at Temple university, Philadelphia, Pa., whose team meets the Aggies in a return game at Tyler, Oct. 5. The two teams met in Philadelphia last year on an extremely muddy field, and the Aggies were swamped 49 to 6. "Pop" concedes the Aggies a much stronger team this year, but still is confident that his, Owls, spurred on by Dave Smuckler, stellar fullback, will again take the measure of the Aggies.

SINCERITY

This Is The BANK that SERVICE Is Building

The business of this bank is administered by men to whom banking is a life study and work. They render depositors a sincere banking service; they mean it; they are emphatic about it.

To them the enviable regard in which this bank is held, not only by those it serves, but by the community at large, is a thing of personal pride and personal honor.

And for this reason the patronage of the First National Bank has steadily increased—just as the quality of its service has been bettered month after month and year after year.

And with Collins is Buster Jurecka, senior left halfback from Robstown, who is expected to have the best season of his career.

Backs at Work

And speaking of the Longhorn backfield men—there are none who appear to be training on cream puffs. James Hadlock of Marshall and Irvin "Duke" Gilbreath of Wellington, the two who are slated for the largest share of the Steer ball-carrying duties in the 1935 campaign, are taking their seasoning in the oil fields near Tyler. Bill Pitzer, sensational sophomore fullback of last year, is keeping his weight down as a member of a drilling crew in the oil fields near Breckenridge.

Charles Johnston, who will return this year after dropping out for a season, is keeping himself busy as a counselor in a boys' camp near Kerrville. Henry Mittermayer, Judson Atchison, Nick Wheeler, Ed Strout and several other outstanding freshman back-tan are holding jobs in the oil fields in various sections of the state.

With the majority of the leading performers engaged in such heavy kinds of occupation for three months, Coach Chevigny should have few "conditioning" worries when September 10 rolls around and the Longhorn candidates—some 80 strong—report for training.

Personality Takes Couple Over Nation

TOLEDO, Aug. 16 — Hitch hikers extraordinary, Tom and Clarice Allen of New York are touring the country, staying at the best hotels and finding royal entertainment wherever they go without spending a cent.

In Toledo, they were given accommodations and meals at one of the largest downtown hotels. Then they were on their way to Detroit, confident of equally good treatment.

A jobless world holds no terrors for the young couple. Tom, who is 21, was graduated from Brown University a year ago. He majored in English and wants to act or write. Clarice, who speaks five languages and was graduated from Pembroke about the same time, wants to teach. They were married shortly after their graduation.

"The only thing we possess is our personalities," said Tom and Clarice. "Let's see how far they will take us."

So they decided to go to California, where Tom hopes to enter the movies. But they determine the lot of ordinary hitch hikers was not to be theirs.

After being given a farewell dinner by Jack Dempsey, who signed the scroll, they "bummed" to Washington. There they were entertained by the Portuguese embassy and Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York.

They presented themselves at a well known hotel, told their story and received a room and restaurant privileges.

In Cleveland they were guests of Carl Hanna, of the financially and socially prominent Hannas. Tom and Clarice found the doors of an exclusive hotel open to them. At Columbus, Gov. Martin L. Davey added his name to the rapidly growing list of well-wishers.

"It's amazing how cordially we are received everywhere," Tom said. "I was offered a position by Senator Wagner and another by Mr. Hanna, but refused because we are determined to go through with this venture—reach the coast and live there."
