TRUE DEMOCRACY

It is to be regretted that the democ- rats of Texas are not able to solve a problem so great as the selection of a governor and reach a conclusion other than by a long and tiresome campaign of personalities and abuse of the candidates, overlooking any real issue.

There has been a wonderful de- parture from the "good old days" when Texas stood forth to the world, the banner democratic state, and purity of whose democracy was un- questioned. Then it was the mentor of all democratic states.

That it has departed from its ideals and ideals in democracy was apparent every day of the campaign just closed.

A campaign in Texas is no longer conducted along the lines of those principles on which the democratic party was founded and maintained for more than one hundred years, the party of the people and the bulwark for their safety in government. New issues, new fads, too many of them tending to a centralization of power at Washington, have led the democ- rats of Texas chasing after false gods, to an extent that a campaign for the selection of the chief execu- tive of the great state, reaches a point, finally, where the choice may be determined solely upon a question of no more importance than the age of one candidate and whether his op- ponent falsified about it.

The principles of Jefferson and Monroe and Tilden and Cleveland, ap- pear never to have been thought of in the voting.

While government in this coun- try has reached a point where "court made law" denies to the peo- ple of the state the right to regulate the great question of transportation within the boundaries of their own state, and many like problems, which by such acts as the Eighteenth and Nineteenth amendments the right to vote directly on these momentous questions is denied the people, yet the people go to the polls and vote for a candidate, basing their prefer- ence on a trivial matter of person- ality, forgetting the great issues, issues which will call them to account later, striking at their pocketbooks, their homes, the education of their children, their right to the "pur- suit of happiness," even their liberty.

The country is passing through the reconstruction period following a des- troying war and it is shown daily that now, to an extent greater than ever before in the history of the country, there are thousands of men, firms, companies and corporations, ready to take advantage of the times and spread oppression to all the peo- ple. Yet with this condition con- fronting them, they allow themselves to be led away from the real prin- ciples of a great party, a party that has been their defender always, and select a governor of the state, de- ciding the choice on a personal prefer- ence, forgetting the principles for which they must fight, if they would survive.

Probably either Mr. Bailey or Mr. Neff would make a good governor, as governors go, or have been going for the last twenty years, but that is not the point. It is the fact that the voters of Texas go to the polls and select a candidate for governor, as was done in the cam- paign just closed, without any thought or reference to the principles of the party of which they claim to be a part.

GAS THE IDEAL FUEL

Gas is the ideal fuel. It is the cheapest. Even at the increased price asked by the local gas company it is cheaper than coal or wood, cleaner, less trouble in every way. But even with all this, the people of Cisco cannot see why they should pay more, or even as much, for gas as do cities hundreds of miles from the gas fields, when this city is in the very heart of the supply, with plenty of gas right at its doors.

An application for an increase of gas was made to the city commission of Dallas as far back as last spring and it has not yet been granted, un- less it has been done today, as this was the date fixed for final consid- eration of the application and this, too, after a large amount of evidence, bearing on the question, has been taken.

In that city, the company is asked for a rate of sixty-seven and one half-cents. It was not granted at the time the application was made by reason of the fact that a majority of the commissioners were opposed to it. Since that time one of the commis- sioners has resigned, another has been appointed in his place and while the mayor refused to talk on the proposition, there is a general believe that a majority of the commission will now vote to raise the price to sixty-seven and one-half cents.

But what stands forth boldly in Dallas, and should be the case in all cities, the commissioners are placing emphasis on their demand for an assurance of an adequate gas sup- ply. If it is necessary to increase the rate, to give to the company sup- plying the gas the 10 per cent return on its investment, which the statute provides for, the rate must be raised accordingly and the people cannot be heard to object. It is the law. But there is nothing to keep them from demanding and insisting upon gas sufficient to meet the demands and that they shall not be made to pay for gas they do not receive, at the pre- sent rate, or a higher one, and they shall not be discriminated, dam- aged and put to extra expense in providing other fuel when the gas sup- ply fails.

When a rate at which the people must pay for gas is increased, the payment should be made contingent upon an adequate supply of gas and this falling, the increased rate should not apply.

The people of Cisco are looking to the city commission to protect them in this matter.

REIGN OF CRIME

Never in the history of the country has there been so many crimes re- ported as now are recounted in the columns of the newspapers daily, nor ever before were there so many dar- ing robberies. The man who picks a pocket or does a small holdup as some belated business man finds his way home at night, is now only a "piker." The successful criminals ride in high power automobiles and take by the thousands, bank messen- gers and paymasters with large sums of money being their particular de- light. Murder follows in nearly every case.

But petty crime has lessened none. In fact it has increased and according to an aged peace officer of Ft. Worth, it has multiplied many times since prohibition went into effect.

"Uncle Tom" Maben, justice of the peace in Ft. Worth, who became a po- lice man in that city in 1878 and has held office ever since, the last sev- eral years as justice of the peace, now 80 years of age and who will retire Saturday from which the following is an extract:

"Yes, I want to get out of of- fice because I've been in long enough. Things are getting mighty bad in Ft. Worth. How many pleas of guilty of viola- tion of the law have we had to- day, Miss Mabel?" he said ad- dressing his secretary.

"Twenty-five! Think of that all in one day. I'm going to tell you something that will surprise you," he continued. "You're a prohibitionist aren't you? Most every woman is. But what I want to tell you is the truth and my docket will prove it. Since the close of the saloons in Fort Worth there has been ten times as much crime in this city. And you are going to see more of it," the aged justice predicted.

This is a remarkable statement, but coming from a man who for forty-two years has commanded the highest respect of the entire commu- nity in which he has lived, it must be given consideration.

He does not say, nor is it to be deducted, that prohibition has caused this increase of crime, but it does go to prove, beyond a doubt, that prohibition has not been the cure-all for crimes it was promised to be.

KANSAS LEGAL EXPERIMENT

Columbus (Dispatch)

Kansas has stood to the other states of the union, not only as a sort of legisla- tive proving ground or experiment sta- tion. It is serving in that capacity again with the trial it is now making of the industrial court law. And the test seems likely to be complete and thorough, for whatever differences of opinion regarding the industrial court law may exist elsewhere, the people of Kansas seem to be standing firmly behind Governor Allen in the matter.

Fortunately in this respect Kansas is an agricultural rather than an indus- trial state; otherwise there would be danger of the law being thrown aside before a thorough trial had been made of it. For among the so-called laboring classes—certainly among the organized element of those classes—the notion prevails that the law is to be the entering wedge in a movement to deprive labor of some of the rights it had fought for and won.

Governor Allen has given abundant proof that he has the courage of com- plete conviction that his industrial court law contains a principle that will cure the evils of labor disputes from which society everywhere suffers—and evils too that affect labor or less than the employing classes. The governor has not hesitated to defend his measure both in his own state and outside of it.

He had challenged its opponents to meet him in joint debate with argu- ments in support of their contentions. He has journeyed far to meet in that manner, Samuel Gompers, head of the great federation of labor and the most distinguished of the opponents of the industrial court law and anything that would curtail the right of workmen to strike. And no doubt the courage and frankness with which Governor Allen has advocated and defended his law has brought the people of his state generally to his side in the matter.

The fact that Kansas is not largely engaged in industrialism will hardly con- stitute ground for argument for its op- ponents, in case it does succeed there, that it would not work well in an indus- trial state, and if Kansas makes good with it, it will be difficult to prevent it from extending into other states.

EVERY MAN HIS OWN PONZI

Leave America with, say, $400. Change it into 100 pounds sterling pres- ent exchange, in London. Cross to France and exchange it for silver coin (it pound equals 42 francs and you have 4,200 French francs.

Smuggle these coins into Switzerland. Here they attain twice the value they had in France, owing to the fact that the silver French franc is normal in Switzerland, but the paper French franc is worth but half of its face value in exchange. Change the silver francs into Italian paper lire, then pass on into Italy and cash into Italian silver lire. You now have 21,000 Italian silver lire. Take these back into Switzerland and you have 21,000 Swiss francs. Now purchase French paper money and you will receive for it 42,000 French francs. Return to France, there buy English notes and proceed to London with 1,000 pounds sterling instead of 100 pounds you set out with.

Change these into American money at present exchange and you have about $3,500 instead of about $400 you pos- sessed at the beginning of the journey. This profit of $3,100 should be enough to pay your expenses for the trip. Of course, you have to do a bit of smug- gling, but that should add to the novelty and interest of the trip.

WHY KEEP ON IN SCHOOL

(Kansas City Star)

High wages, it is predicted, will keep many boys from continuing in school this next year. When they can earn so much why should they fool around get- ting more of an education?

But after all, that is the shortsighted view, due to an extraordinary and tem- porary situation. You can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear, and an educa- tion won't convert bone into brains. A man of ability will make his way with- out an education, as Lincoln did. But experience has demonstrated in the long run education does pay.

The army, it must be remembered, had to turn to high school and college graduates for most of its officers.

Life, of course, educates us all more or less, whether we go to school or not. But its education is apt to be hap- hazard, and it takes an unusual person to develop in well rounded fashion from it. The school tries to systematize training and cut out the superfluous things.

It took primitive men hundreds of thousands of years of aimless experi- menting to learn to make a fire. That was the education by the experience of living. But Edison worked out the in- candescent light in his laboratory in a comparatively short time. That is the sort of directness education seeks to achieve.

In the announcement of courses for freshmen at Harvard college a brief de- scription is given of why each course is valuable. These summaries of the rea- sons for studying various branches were printed in the Star Thursday. They are worth the attention of young people who are asking themselves why they should give more time to school.

The study of language, for instance, it is pointed out, "has great power of giving precision and force to thought," a student who wishes to "understand the modern world and make himself a power among men" should know some- thing of the facts, methods and prin- ciples of the natural sciences; history, political and social science "give breadth of view, knowledge of men and their thoughts, equipment for modern life."

These subjects are not set up as something remote from living, to be studied as a man might study a puzzle. They are held to be real helps in fit- ting a man to understand his generation and take his place in it.

The world is a complicated affair, and the business of living is perplex- ing at best. We need all the help we can get from the experience of the past and from the systematized wisdom of the present to enable us to get our bearings, determine our goal and set out in its pursuit.

The Horco club of Humboldt entertained with a very delightful dance Friday evening. Quite a number of young ladies and the young married set of Cisco attended and pronounced it a very successful dance.

One of the dance numbers was very interesting and unusual. As the dancers started into the dance the music was suddenly changed into Mendelssohn's wedding march and a shower of rice fell on Judge and Mrs. McMeans, who have recently returned from their wedding trip.

GAS COMPANY SEEKS AN INCREASED RATE IN CITY OF DALLAS

DALLAS, Aug. 30.—Final action on the gas proposition will probably be taken when the board of commissioners meet today to vote on an ordinance which is being drafted by the city attorney, James J. Collins, city attorney.

The board was in executive session for more than an hour, going over the testimony presented at the hearings, together with the report of J. W. Everman, supervisor, and outlining the provisions of the ordinance that is being drafted.

Although Mayor Wozencraft admitted that the commission has decided upon its course of action, he would make no statements other than that several legal points will have to be worked out before the board can take final action. Commissioners Blaylock and Appel, however, said that the ordinance was being drawn and that the vote would likely be taken at the regular meeting Monday.

How the commissioners will vote on the increase will not be known until the ordinance comes up for passage, but repeated statements from the several members practically assures the granting of the 67-1-2-cent rate to the Dallas Gas company.

The last proposal of the company fulfills every requirement of the minority proposition favored by the mayor and Commissioner Moseley during the negotiations last spring, which was opposed by Commissioners Reppert, Appel and McGee at that time. Since then Reppert has been succeeded on the commission by Louis Blaylock, who has said that he would vote for the increase. Commissioner Appel stated recently that he had no objection to granting the increase now if a reasonable assurance of an adequate supply was given and the evidence brought out at the hearing, and in the supervisor's report seem to indicate that this assurance has been given.

The position of Commissioner McGee is not so well known, he having held different views on the gas problem at different times, but it is thought now that he will vote with the balance of the commission.

NEGRO IMPRISONED WRONGLY FOR EIGHT YEARS TO BE AIDED

Associated Press.
DALLAS, Aug. 30.—To atone for miscarried justice, subscriptions to a fund for Ben Perry, a negro who served eight years of a life sentence in the state penitentiary for a crime of which he was innocent, are being daily received by Dan Harston, sheriff of the Dallas jail. Sheriff Harston obtained a confession from Green Hunter, another negro who was hanged in the jail here recently for attacking an aged white woman near Dallas, that he was guilty of the crime Perry was convicted of—an attack on a young white girl at Bryan, Texas. The sheriff hopes to raise a considerable portion of the fund in Brazos county, where Perry was tried.
