Joint Resolution to Amend State Dry Law Is Offered

PROVIDES FOR POPULAR VOTE JUNE 29, 1933

AUSTIN, Jan. 14.—A joint resolution for submission of a state constitutional amendment to permit liquor sales in a way that will not violate the federal constitution was offered in the Texas house of representatives today by Weaver Moore, of Houston.

The proposal is to amend the present state constitutional prohibition against beverages of more than 1 per cent alcoholic content to allow alcoholic content of an amount permitted by the federal constitution as it now is or as it may be changed.

The proposal places regulation of the liquor traffic in the hands of the state legislature.

A second clause prohibits sale for consumption on the premises where sold, but permits the legislature to authorize sales in restaurants and dining cars.

A third clause provides for local option in any political subdivision on whether there may be sales within that city, county, precinct or district. A majority vote is to decide such an election.

It is proposed the election on the amendment shall be held July 29, 1933.

Without discussion the resolution was referred to the committee on constitutional amendments yet to be appointed.

The committee recommended that nine county officials at large be elected for a term of four years; County Judge, attorney, sheriff, school superintendent county manager, and four commissioners.

County commissioners, the committee voted, should be elected from their own respective precincts instead of by vote at large, as provided in the proposals yesterday.

PROGRAM FOR SMOKER WINS MUCH PRAISE

An attendance of approximately 130 business men and their guests enjoyed what was declared the best program ever put on for a monthly meeting of the Merchants Smoker Friday evening on the roof garden of the Laguna hotel.

The meeting was devoted almost exclusively to entertainment, with four bouts of amateur boxing and one exhibition bout, acrobatic dancing and music by the American Legion Novelty orchestra featuring.

The dancing by Miss "Boots" Gray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norton Gray, of Cisco, was a novelty that evoked the admiration of the crowd. Miss Gray has done considerable professional dancing, appearing on the San Francisco stage. By a coincidence her first professional work was done with the Harley Sadler shows when they appeared in Cisco.

Legion Orchestra. The American Legion orchestra provided the music for the evening playing popular numbers and interspersing quartet offerings.

This group of Cisco business men in bizarre costumes are making quite a reputation for themselves in their "opera bouffe" appearances at various Cisco entertainments and in communities surrounding Cisco. Harry Schaefer is director.

Five Cisco boys and three Eastland boys participated in the amateur bouts. Each bout was three rounds of two minutes with a minute intermission.

Benny Lindsey, professional boxer and for two years Southern A. A. U. undefeated champion prior to turning professional, was referee. Two judges assisted the referee. After the amateur bouts Lindsey and his younger brother fought an exhibition bout of three rounds.

Ace Hudkins, who won national fame for the ring name of "The Nebraska Wildcat" officiated in the exhibition bout. Hudkins, reduced to a "has-been" because of a fractured collar bone suffered several years ago, was making his way back to his California home and chanced to be in Cisco for the evening.

Bout Winners. In the first bout Audrey Brown, 154, Cisco, and Delbert Myers, 154, Eastland, fought to a draw. Both boys were handicapped during the first round by a loose floor, canvas which was removed.

T. Cotton, Cisco, took a decision over Glenn Snell, Eastland, in the second bout.

Argel Curtis, Cisco, was awarded the decision over Van Cleave, Cisco, in the third bout.

The fourth bout between Earl Cotton, 160 1-2, Cisco, and Doc Alford, 163 1-2, Eastland, went to Alford, who took the decision in a slashing third round finish after Cotton seemed to have had the edge in the preceding rounds.

A. D. Anderson was toastmaster during the program. J. A. Bearman, general chairman of the Smoker, turned the program over to him with introductory remarks after the dinner.

Chairman of the program committee was Donald Burger, Laguna hotel manager.

BRECKENRIDGE DOWNS LOBOES FRIDAY, 24-13

Coach Shotwell's Breckenridge Buckaroos took a slow cage game from the Cisco Lobos here Friday night by a count of 24 to 13. The game was marked by perhaps the smallest attendance at a Cisco game this season.

Fambro, Buck center was high point man with 4 goals from the floor and a free throw, a total of 9 points. For the Lobos Harrison led in the scoring with 5 points.

Leonard Latch, breaking into the starting lineup for the Lobos for the first time, played a good defensive game at guard. J. L. Cearley, moved back to center, was outstanding on both offense and defense.

The score was tied at 8-all at the end of the first half, but Breckenridge came back to score 8 points before the Lobos could find the basket in the third quarter. During the last quarter the game was played on even terms.

Using an unbalanced formation on the tipoff, the Buckaroos were able to stop the scoring threat of Rutledge and Harrison. They set a defense nearer the center of the court than did the Cisco team, making it difficult for the Lobos to work the ball across the center line in the allotted ten seconds.

Both Ray of Cisco and Pitzer of Breckenridge served their teams well as feeders to the forwards.

Today he declined an invitation from Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson to participate in her inauguration as his successor.

Ship Is Sought to Take Texas Goods On Display Cruise to Latin-American Ports

DALLAS, Jan. 14.—Seeking to enlarge the market for Texas-made goods, directors of Progressive Texans, Inc., have voted to investigate the feasibility of chartering a ship, to be loaded with Texas goods, for a voyage to Latin American countries where the articles will be displayed at ports.

W. R. McBride, Sugarland, was named chairman of the committee to investigate the chartering of the ship. His findings will be reported to the board of directors at a meeting in Austin, W. C. Edwards, managing director of the group, said. The meeting is called for early in February.

Tentative plans call for the ship to sail in the early spring.

Other trade development plans include a meeting of business men of Texas with industrial leaders of Mexico. The purpose of this gathering would be to create greater goodwill between manufacturers and merchants of the two countries.

W. T. Ladd, Fort Worth, was named chairman of the committee to investigate plans for holding this meeting in Mexico City. It is possible that the delegation of Texas business leaders will go direct to Mexico City by train.

Others on this committee are Malley McDonald, Houston; Walter Walthall, San Antonio; Fred E. Johnston, Dallas; William Breckhausen, San Antonio; and Frank Stevens, Waco.

Managers of the East, West and South Texas chambers of commerce will act as members of the committee investigating each of the trade expansion trips.

Professor Will Attempt to Develop Utopian Farm Community on 503 Acres

HOUSTON, Jan. 14.—Dr. John Willis Slaughter, professor of sociology at Rice Institute and director of the Houston Foundation has purchased 503 acres of rural land which he will attempt to turn into a Utopian community.

On this land, 25 miles southwest of Houston on the Angleton road, he hopes to "give a demonstration of practical welfare."

Dr. Slaughter for years has had ideas and ideals for unemployment relief through the formation of agricultural communities. He is not a believer in the "back to the land" movement.

The latter kind of movement is impractical, he believes, and says proof lies in the fact the Houston emergency relief committee still is feeding 60 families placed on farms many months ago.

"The first thing I will do with my project," said Dr. Slaughter, "is to get some tenants, teach them teamwork among themselves, and after about two years of training start them off on pieces of their own with a financing plan to carry them through."

The property he has purchased already has a number of tenant houses on it. He intends to build a large barn and, eventually, his own home as well as model tenant cottages.

OBSERVERS SEE LIBERALISM IN COURT RULINGS

By JOHN A. REICHHMANN United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Observers of the supreme court see in recent decisions a growing liberalism in interpretations of the national prohibition laws.

Whether this liberalism actually exists, starts a debate that probably will remain undecided forever. Certainly as yet the court has not reversed itself in any prohibition ruling, not even the much criticized decision in the famous wiretapping cases.

Those who claim to note a growing liberalism attribute it to one of two things. First, that the court is responding to growing public sentiment in favor of modification of bone-dry prohibition. Second, that the liberal school of thought, sponsored by former Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, has extended to the point where it includes a liberalism toward prohibition.

Holmes' Contention. The latter assumption is accepted more generally. It was one of Holmes' primary contentions on the bench that the Constitution and the law in a democracy must reflect public sentiment. He was staunch in a rigid literal interpretation of the 18th Amendment and the enforcement acts.

The chief opinion cited by those claiming to perceive a growing prohibition liberalism was in the recent entrapment case. There the majority of the court sharply excoerated a prohibition agent who spent four hours persuading an old war "buddy" to buy him some whisky and later arrested him.

Two Other Cases. Two other cases have been decided this term which resulted in the condemnation of irregular enforcement methods.

One of these involved William Graub, whose home near Cincinnati, O., was searched by agents without a warrant because they smelled the fumes of mash proceeding from it. The search revealed a well established alcohol distilling plant.

There appeared to be a commercial violation of the law, but the court upheld the search and seizure laws and set his conviction aside because it was a dwelling and could not be searched without evidence of an actual sale of liquor.

In the case of William Sgro, of Bouckville, N. Y., the court held that a search warrant, which had been issued more than ten days before it was executed, was invalid. A United States commissioner had sought to bring a warrant to search Sgro's hotel up to date by changing the date of issuance.

$2,000,000 PAID BEAUMONTERS FOR LEASES

BEAUMONT, Jan. 14.—Forty-nine residential Beaumonters have been paid more than $2,000,000 within the past 60 days by oil companies for oil leases, according to estimates of some local oil men.

The influx of oil lease money is believed to be a major reason for an increase of approximately $250,000 in bank deposits here within the past 90 days.

Major oil companies are leasing land at an unprecedented rate on the Conroe "trend." The "play" extends from Conroe, miles east of Houston in Montgomery county, east through Jasper, Hadden's Ferry, Leesville, La., Alexandria, La., and up to Vicksburg, Miss.

The strip of land is approximately 350 miles long and 90 miles wide. The Humble Oil and Refining company, Standard of New Jersey subsidiary which has headquarters at Houston, has spent approximately $1,500,000 in leases and outright purchases of land in the Conroe "trend" during the past two months.

The land is leasing for $1 and $5 an acre for five and ten-year periods. The entire "trend" is regarded as potential oil producing land, with certain "high spots" regarded as sure producers. Several independent companies are sinking wildcat wells near DeRidder and other Louisiana points, with the major companies holding off drilling operations and concentrating on building up their lease interests.

Gas Fire Burns Fatal to Worker

FORT WORTH, Jan. 14.—Burned when gas flared from a boiler at an automobile laundry here, Donald K. McCray, 29, died today in a hospital.

Physicians said carbon monoxide gas poisoning probably caused death. Other employees at the laundry said McCray had worked there only a few days and believed his inexperience caused the accident. He was lighting the boiler at the time.

Reversing the former plan of having West Texas dominate the livestock sanitary board, two from East Texas were named because calling the sick eradication work now centers there. MOTOR OWNERS AND GASOLINE TAXES.

According to official records more than $3,000,000,000 was taken from the pockets of motor vehicle owners in 1932, ostensibly for highway purposes, but in many states large sums were diverted from the highway building scheme of things to the general revenue fund. A reminder that Frederick E. Everet, president of the American Association of State Highway Officials, passed this nugget of information on to the American people in the not distant past: "The gasoline tax was created as a road toll and as such met with favor by a majority of the motorists; for such a tax, if reasonable, is both equitable and fair. It is not fair, however, to use these funds for other purposes or for unemployment relief. If you do, you are then taxing only a certain class, that is, the automobile owners, to pay for things for which it was never intended they should be taxed. These funds should be left intact for the construction and maintenance of roads. By so doing, as much is being accomplished for unemployment relief as in any other way. Approximately 90 per cent of the money so used goes directly to labor." Washington reports that house leaders are planning to kill the projected one hundred million dollar outlay for highway aid in the coming fiscal year. Their argument is that it would increase their budget balancing program. As for the senate leaders, Pat Harrison of Mississippi has announced the program of lawmakers who think as he thinks: "We are going to actually await the economics before we enact taxes." The plain English of this is that high cost of government must be reduced to low cost before the job of raising the revenue will be tackled by the national lawmakers.

THE WORLD NEEDS REFLATION.

Sir Walter Salter, a famous British economist, is in hearty accord with the reflation proposal of Sen. Borah of Idaho. It is the viewpoint of Sir Arthur that if a world policy of reflation or some alternative measure could be achieved "every problem with which we are faced would be lightened." This is his advice to Americans: "The weight of inter-governmental indebtedness left by the war has certainly been one of the chief causes of the whole financial crises. One part of this reparations problem it was in the power of Europe to settle and Europe has done so."

A reminder that the move for reflation as a stimulant for economic conditions has drawn into its ranks Chm. Reed Smoot of the senate finance committee, who believes remonetization of silver at a specified price would turn the trick. He is preparing legislation looking to aid the silver industry. This is the bald statement of the distinguished senator from Utah who has been relegated to the lame duck class by a democrat who saw the light of reflation far in advance of the veteran from the land of the Mormon: "There has got to be some form of reflation very soon if we are to improve conditions."

COL. WENTZ AND GOV. BILL.

Col. Lew Wentz, a republican, is one of the three members of the Oklahoma state highway commission. He is a man of millions. He is a philanthropist and civic worker. He has been a thorn in the side of the two democrats and Gov. Bill. Ever since Gov. Bill's induction into office he has been bombarding the colonel. Well, as the British big game hunter said, speaking of tiger hunting, "It is fun to hunt the tiger but it is hell when the tiger hunts you." Gov. Bill has been hunting Tiger Wentz for a long time. Gov. Bill failed to bag Wentz. Now the tiger is hunting the governor. He tells the reasons or the alleged reasons why his two democratic colleagues and the governor want his scalp.

Sam Hawks is a member of the Oklahoma commission. He is the chairman. Tiger Wentz makes the direct charge that he "rowed with the governor and the two commissioners on the useless expenditure of $175,000 wrongfully to re-route three roads through Clinton for no other purpose than to pass the Sam Hawks hotel. He refused to agree to the building of a duplicate road between two important Oklahoma towns at a cost of $175,000. He refused to agree with the majority on the manner of buying cement. He placed this in the record: "Had the state bought its year's supply last January or February we could have saved possibly $300,000." It will be recalled that Gov. Bill named a successor to Col. Lew. Col. Lew advised the governor "to go to." An appeal was taken to the supreme court and the supreme court judges of Oklahoma, to a man, declared that Gov. Bill was wrong and Col. Lew all right, and to clinch it, that it was a rank violation of the constitution to seek Wentz' removal from office on the flimsy pretext that Gov. Bill had the power of removal. This is a grand old world.

G. B. S. AND SELF-GOVERNMENT.

George Bernard Shaw is in India. He is very free with his tongue work. He told a group of Indian intellectuals that brain power is not needed by a country destined self-government. This is what he said, "England has got on very well for years without brains." This Irish-English satirist and iconoclast remarked to his audience, "Gandhi is the clearest-headed man in India but he is so tired of you all that he goes on a fast to death. Enlightened Indians have a great power of speech. Scotch an Indian and he reels off 17 volumes of Herbert Spencer. The first thing a self-governing Indian must do is to make public speaking a capital offense."

George Bernard is coming to America. He will visit the capital of the nation while congress is grinding. Perhaps he will visit many state capitals. Of course. In the United States we are governed by mighty brains. Indeed, most Americans are of the opinion that if this were not true self-government would perish.

Norman Thomas is going to Washington to enlighten the elected rulers or lawmakers of the nation. He is of the Gandhi plan but he is well groomed, patronizes the most fastidious and artistic tailors, and enjoys the good things of the table as well as of life and living. He is a disciple of Herbert Spencer, Karl Marx, and the dictator who rules 150,000,000 Slavs, Siberians, and other Asiatics.

Humorists are needed in these days of depression. Will Rogers furnishes the real sport for his countrymen. He is not a follower of Gandhi. He is not a follower of Karl Marx. He never kneels at the shrine of Lenin. And as for dictators, he only recognizes one in the wide world. She is Mrs. Will Rogers and she was born in Arkansas.

Cave Reveals Large Ancient Indian City

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Jan. 14.—Evidence of an Indian city, having an estimated population of several hundred thousand, has been discovered near here by Rev. S. P. Newberry, an archaeologist.

Rev. Newberry found traces of the city while exploring a cave in which were a group of ancient stone idols. In the opinion of the archaeologist, the city definitely is connected with the cave, as he found blocks of stone of the same shell formation as that of which the idols were formed. The stone is not native to this region. The blocks found were about 12 by 14 inches in size, and easily could have been carried by a man.

Rev. Newberry estimated the number of mounds at about 1,000. He opened none on his first exploration trip, and was unable to state the percentage which were burial mounds and those which were formed by the crumbling of the adobe lodges, which he believes formed the principal structures of the city.

The city is about four miles long and a half mile wide, with the mounds placed closely together. The mounds are about 50 feet in diameter and four feet high.

Electric Refrigeration Will Protect His Health

Only mothers know how constant are the demands for between-meal snacks... how often that growing son demands something to eat! A glass of milk, a sandwich, some cheese and crackers... something from the refrigerator.

Those foods he so confidently accepts... Are they safe? Are they health-building, or dangerous to health?

Scientists have found that any food is exposed to bacterial action when the temperature rises above fifty degrees. Thus it becomes unfit for use long before its taint is recognized by the normal senses.

There's one certain and dependable day of eliminating this spoilage danger from your home — Electric Refrigeration. The modern Electric Refrigerator guarantees a constant cold, always below the fifty degree mark... And Electric Refrigeration is just as economical and just as convenient as it is healthful! You owe it to yourself and to your family to investigate without delay. Call in at the Merchandise Show-room or see your Electrical Dealer.

Convenient Terms

Do you know that your increased use of Electric Service is billed on a surprisingly low rate schedule... and adds only a small amount to your total bill?

By FRANK LANGSTON
 Vicings the sentiment of those who believe there is something wrong with football as it is conducted in Texas at present and who are trying to do something about it, comes the following dispatch from Austin, proposing a new third or C class of teams, taking care of schools with an enrollment of 150 or less:

Small high schools of the state have been requested by the University of Texas Interscholastic League Bureau to express their views on the proposal to establish a third class in Interscholastic League football, to accommodate schools of some 150 enrollment or less. Roy Edebeck, chief of the University League Bureau, has the following to say about the proposal:

"Class C football is being advocated by many principals and superintendents in the smaller centers. It is pointed out that small schools often compete in this sport against schools so large as to render the competition far too strenuous, and there is much in this contention. The temptation to a small school to recruit when it is compelled to meet larger and stronger schools year after year is sometimes irresistible. Hence, in many high schools of 150 pupils or less there is a demand for more evenly matched games.

"Some contend that there is too much football now, but the creation of another class makes less football for the individual school, because in each class there will be fewer schools among which to determine a given championship. For illustration, a district containing ten teams requires a minimum of nine games on a round-robin basis for district championship, whereas the division of the schools into two classes containing five schools in each class may determine a championship with a round-robin schedule of four or five games as a minimum.

"There is no doubt that in a big sport, requiring many players, it is a sound principle to match schools of nearly equal size. Distance is, of course, a prime consideration. In many portions of the state there are not enough small schools in an area of reasonable size to warrant the organization of a Class C football district. In other portions of the state such districts may be easily formed without requiring long trips. Hence, it is suggested that such districts be formed only in those sections containing enough schools of this class to furnish competition close at hand."

A good deal is to be said for each side of the question. Certainly if this plan were carried out it would lessen the breach between the big school with plenty of material and the little school that needs material. At the same time it appears to take care of the too-strenuous schedule for a high school team now caused in certain districts where there is a large number of teams.

But will it actually work? A lot of people would like to know that.

There will always be the school that prefers to be the big frog in the little pond. At the same time there will always be the school that wants to be the little frog in the big pond.

Many of the schools "on the fence," perhaps that are in reality in the C class, will look down upon their lowly rivals and refused to be helped by the rule, straining to hold the pace of Class B competition.

 PARIS, Jan. 14.—For the holiday gala at one of the smart night clubs, the Countess Caraman-Chimay wore a Schiaparelli model in pumice gray jersey with a band of dark red Fremont ribbon across the top, tied in a bow at the side of the shoulder. The band passes under one of the shoulder straps at the back. In the Schiaparelli collection this is No. 428 and one of the loveliest evening gowns.

For less formal occasions, Schiaparelli has designed a close fitting dress of that dusky dark hyacinth shade that is so good this year. The material is a lacy wool jersey. The accompanying jacket favors originality not only for its material, which is thick "les Feuilles" ribbon in periwinkle blue and white, but also for its sleeves, which are huge and wide and ever so slightly stiffened to set off the slenderness of the waistline.

An evening gown featuring the new reversible bustle, which is made by a gather of straight folds or pleats at the back of the waistline, just below the end of a deep square decolletage, is numbered 445 in the Schiaparelli collection and is a great favorite.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

SHEILA SHAYNE, 18, whose parents were well known vaudeville actors, is in New York looking for a job. Sheila is a dancer. In spite of the fact that she has spent almost her entire life on the stage her ambition is to marry and have a home like those she has seen in small towns in which she has played.

On a few hours' notice she is hired to take the place of DAISSY GLEASON, another dancer, who has sprained an ankle. Sheila goes to JOE PARIS' office in "Tina Pan Alley" to rehearse. There she meets TREVOR LANE and DICK STANLEY, both rich. Lane asks Sheila to dance at a party he is giving but she refuses, knowing she must rehearse a day of rehearsal and the performance that night she will be too tired.

She goes to the theater and there meets PHIL SHORT, an old acquaintance. The show begins and Sheila wins applause with her dancing. Suddenly she discovers Dick Stanley in the audience.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER VIII

"You aren't angry with me for coming, are you?" Dick asked pleadingly.

Sheila's voice was level. "Angry? No. But you shouldn't have done it." Now that she knew he cared enough to want to see her again she could seem casual. Her heart exulted but no one, seeing her, would have guessed that.

"I thought you were giving a party tonight," she went on. "Hamlet with Hamlet left out! Why aren't you at home entertaining your guests?"

Hamlet with Hamlet left out! That was an odd remark for a chorus girl to make. This little dancer in a cheap suit and tiny hat that had obviously seen wear continued to surprise him.

"Oh, Trevor's there," Dick responded easily. "Besides I came to get one of the guests. One of the most honored guests, if she will accept the invitation." His eyes mocked the humility in his words but his voice was pleading. Then he changed his tone as Sheila's attitude did not soften.

"Please come along and sing your songs," he urged. "Dance, too, if you will, but sing anyway! Those dances you did in the show were knockouts!"

The girl's smile showed that she was pleased. "I'm glad you liked them," she said conventionally.

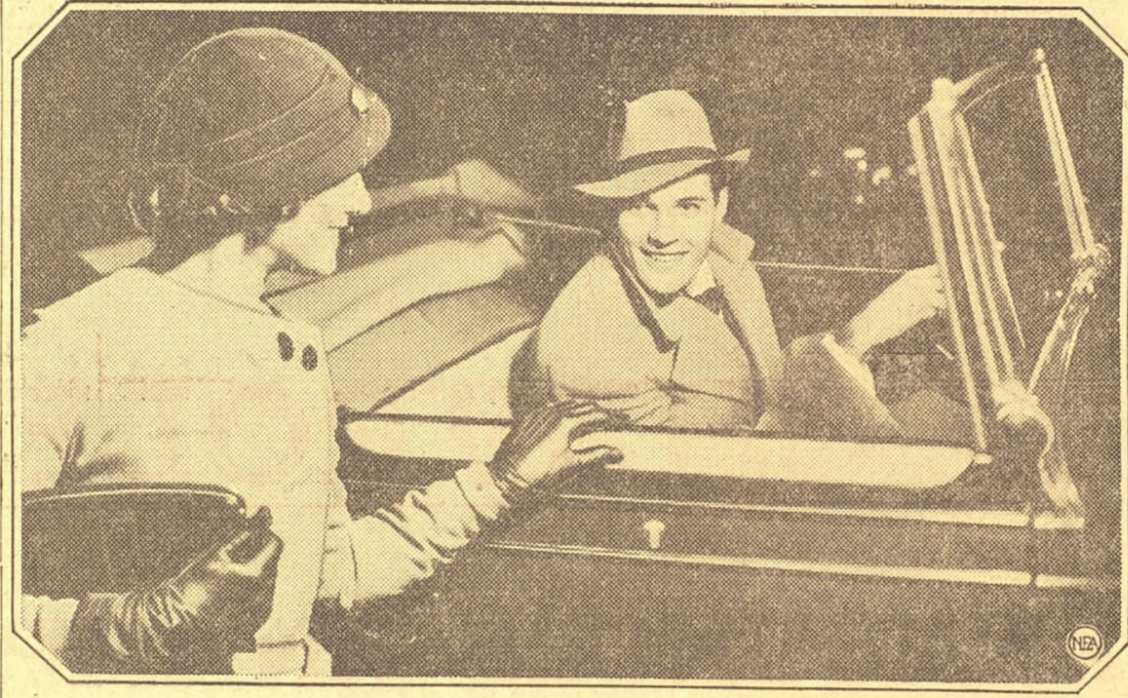

Dick Stanley moved nearer. "Then you'll come?" He lowered his voice. "I have my car. It won't take us 15 minutes to cross the bridge and then we're practically there. I'll take you home whenever you say. Please come!"

The evening was over. Sheila had hung away her last costume, had wiped off the last vestige of make-up, had shoved her little hat down over her head carelessly, wearily. In spite of Miss Kilcoyne's limousine and friendly ministrations she ached in every joint.

Still, most of the company would go back to town on the bus. That meant walking at the other end of the trip. Phil Short had offered to see her home. There would be crackers and milk—coffee for the venturesome—at the little restaurant on the corner near Ma Lowell's rooming house. They would all talk shop. Sheila loved to talk and listen to talk of the theater.

OR if she preferred she might ride back to town in a smooth rolling car such as this boy would drive. If only everyone at the party would make her as welcome as Dick Stanley! Then her lip curled suddenly. The men, of course, would make her welcome. The women would treat her coolly. "I ought to get some sleep," she began uncertainly.

"But you can sleep tomorrow! I'll call for you whenever you say

"I'll be back in 15 minutes to pick you up," Dick said. "Is that all right?"

and drive you out here for the performance. Maybe you'll lunch with me first."

"Breakfast," she corrected, without committing herself. Lunch was a rare thing when Sheila was working. A late breakfast and dinner were all she had time for.

Stanley laughed delightedly. "Breakfast, lunch and dinner! All three if you will. Just say the word—but do come to the party! I'll take you home, you can dress in a jiffy and we'll be there in no time. We could have been at your house, wherever it is, by now if you'd agreed earlier."

She found herself gently urged toward Dick's car, a smart roadster parked on the farther curb. Presently they were skimming noiselessly along the street leading to the bridge. The air, warm for so late at night, gently caressed her cheeks, blowing her hair into disarray. Oh, yes, this was better than waiting for a bus, crowding aboard and swaying, lumbering along across town, then down Fifth Avenue.

"How did you know where to find me?" Sheila asked curiously.

"Paris mentioned Bailey's theater. Don't you remember? I looked it up in the telephone directory and asked the way. Simple enough!"

Yes, it had been simple. But behind that simple deed lay the wish to see her again. He had not forgotten her in the whirl of other interests.

DICK left her at the door. "I'll drive around the block," he said as he helped her out, "and be back in 15 minutes to pick you up. Is that all right? Time enough?"

"Plenty," the girl assured him. Instantly she was gone. The dark door seemed to swallow her. The car moved slowly to the corner.

Dick had waited hardly five minutes when Sheila—a different Sheila—appeared. In what seemed a very short time she had changed amazingly. A smarter, more sophisticated brush to her hair. Pendulous earrings, swaying as she moved. Brighter lips. Her figure exquisite in an inexpensive evening gown that had earned the adjective "smooth" when displayed to other roomers at Ma Lowell's. How would that dress compare with the gowns worn by Stanley's debutante friends? Sheila vaguely hoped the lights at the penthouse would be softly flattering.

"I suppose you are one of our best and hardest working little play boys," she hazarded, as with a deft motion Dick Stanley headed the car across the park toward Trevor Lane's apartment house.

He seemed surprised. "It hardly! I'm a hard worker—that is sometimes I am. The difficulty is, I do hard work which for the moment, at least, wins no acclaim or results."

"Song writer?"

He laughed. "No. But you aren't so far off. The fact is, I'm writing a play. The great American play! I work afternoons and Sunday mornings."

"A play!" Her eyes widened. "But you have money. I thought only poor men wrote plays."

"Starvation in a garret, eh? Well, starvation in a penthouse isn't much better. Trevor has the money, you see. Of course, I'm not starving but if I existed on what was truly mine—that is, what I earn—I probably would be. My father gives me an allowance, rather grudgingly, because I'm not following him in his business in Fall River. Oldest son, you know. He'll never forgive me, I suppose. But—"

and Dick's eyes shone. "I want to write! Trevor was lonely. He's my cousin, you know, and he asked me to bunk with him. Here I am."

"Tell me about the play," Sheila responded uncertainly. Poor boy—didn't he know that everyone wrote plays? The trick was to sell them!

Dick laughed. "Oh, that! It's still in the early stages. But I've put in a lot of thinking on it."

THEY entered the little elevator which bore them swiftly to the top of the apartment house where Trevor Lane had his penthouse. Kato, the Japanese boy, admitted them.

Sounds of merriment issued from the living room. Someone, a professional, Sheila decided instantly, was playing the piano. As she slipped off her wrap in the silken bedroom there was a burst of applause, a murmur of voices. Talking, laughing, gaiety. But even here Sheila could sense the difference between this party and those to which she had most frequently been invited, parties of professional people. Here was luxury. The air was scented rather than laden with exquisite perfume. Silken women, exquisitely coiffed and groomed with soft, modulated voices. Girls from Dick Stanley's world! Here in the bright dressing table light her gown looked shabby. Once more Sheila told herself she should not have come.

"Ready?" Dick's eager voice sounded from outside and resolutely Sheila turned from the discouraging reflection in the mirror. Framed in this luxury she looked and felt badly dressed. Dubiously she left the security of the dressing room.

But there was no dubiousness in the eyes of the young man who waited for her. Nothing but delight, mingled with friendliness and joy at the sight of her.

"They are dancing now," he said as they walked toward the huge living room. "Let's find Trevor and after that I'll show you the orchard."

"Orchard?"

"That's what we call the terrace outside. After all it has more than one tree!" They laughed together, Dick with easy assurance, Sheila nervously.

Trevor Lane welcomed her gravely. He had turned from a laughing group of young women whom he presented. The girls seemed cool and Sheila set it down as that "society chill." Suddenly she recognized them. The Taylor girls—the Tapping Taylors! Perhaps they thought her one of the society girls ready to snub them and were merely heating her to it. That was funny!

On Dick's arm she moved through the softly lighted room. Groups were standing, sitting, looting on huge chairs and divans covered with gayly colored cushions. At the farther end of the room stood the piano, a slim, patent-leather haired gentleman swaying slightly before it, liquid jazz pouring from his softly weavering fingers.

There were ripples of talk. Laughter. Greetings tossed Dick's way. "Ah, there, Dick!" "Hey—we missed you!"

And then Sheila heard a feminine voice. The words reached her clearly. Lightly spoken, taunting words. The voice was saying, "—but Dick's girls are always pretty, aren't they?"

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

By GORDON K. SHEARER
United Press Staff Correspondent
AUSTIN, Jan. 14. — Coke Stevenson's selection as House Speaker of the Forty-Third Texas legislature is more significant than a mere personal victory. The Junction lawyer defeated A. P. Johnson, Carrizo Springs attorney.

Stevenson is not what is generally termed politically a "Fergusonite", but he was the choice of both Mr. and Mrs. James E. Ferguson for speaker.

His election with their backing and pressure means the House has decided not to "fight the Fergusons" and to try to cooperate with them. Johnson sensed the feeling several days before the election of a speaker and publicly assured the governor-elect and her husband that as speaker it would be his effort to cooperate.

In the meantime Ferguson headquarters learned an effort would be made to remove Mrs. Ferguson. Many of Johnson's supporters were anti-Ferguson, so naturally with Stevenson in the chair the Fergusons feel more at ease.

The election, however, does not mean the House is pro-Ferguson 82 to 68, which was the vote for Stevenson. Several close observers of the House declare that on a strict Ferguson and anti-Ferguson vote the body would be Anti-Ferguson by four votes. Stevenson tremendous personal popularity accounted for many of his votes. There were many, too, who agreed with J. J. Goodman, who declared the people expect this legislature to do something constructive.

Johnson's candidacy was inseparably associated with the Sterling administration. He had been an administration floor leader. He had fought for the Sterling $300,000,000 road bond plan. Coke Stevenson was one of its opponents. He so admired Governor Sterling he named his son Ross Sterling.

C. B. Bradley, of Groesbeck, attorney for Governor Sterling in his attempt to contest of Mrs. Ferguson's nomination, was at Johnson headquarters the day before the speaker election. The headquarters were in the hotel that had been Moody and Sterling headquarters. Stevenson's were in the hotel where past Ferguson headquarters have been and just around the corner from the Ferguson Forum office. Helping lead the Stevenson speakership fight was Preston L. Anderson of San Antonio.

How hard the fight had been was shown by the statement of one of Johnson's seconders that Johnson between sessions had visited the home of each member personally.

An amusing part of one of the arguments made on the floor for Johnson's election was a declaration that Southwest Texas never had a speaker.

How short is memory! Speaker R. L. Bobbitt came from Laredo and witnessed the voting on the speaker. "That shows I wasn't a sectional speaker," he laughingly said.

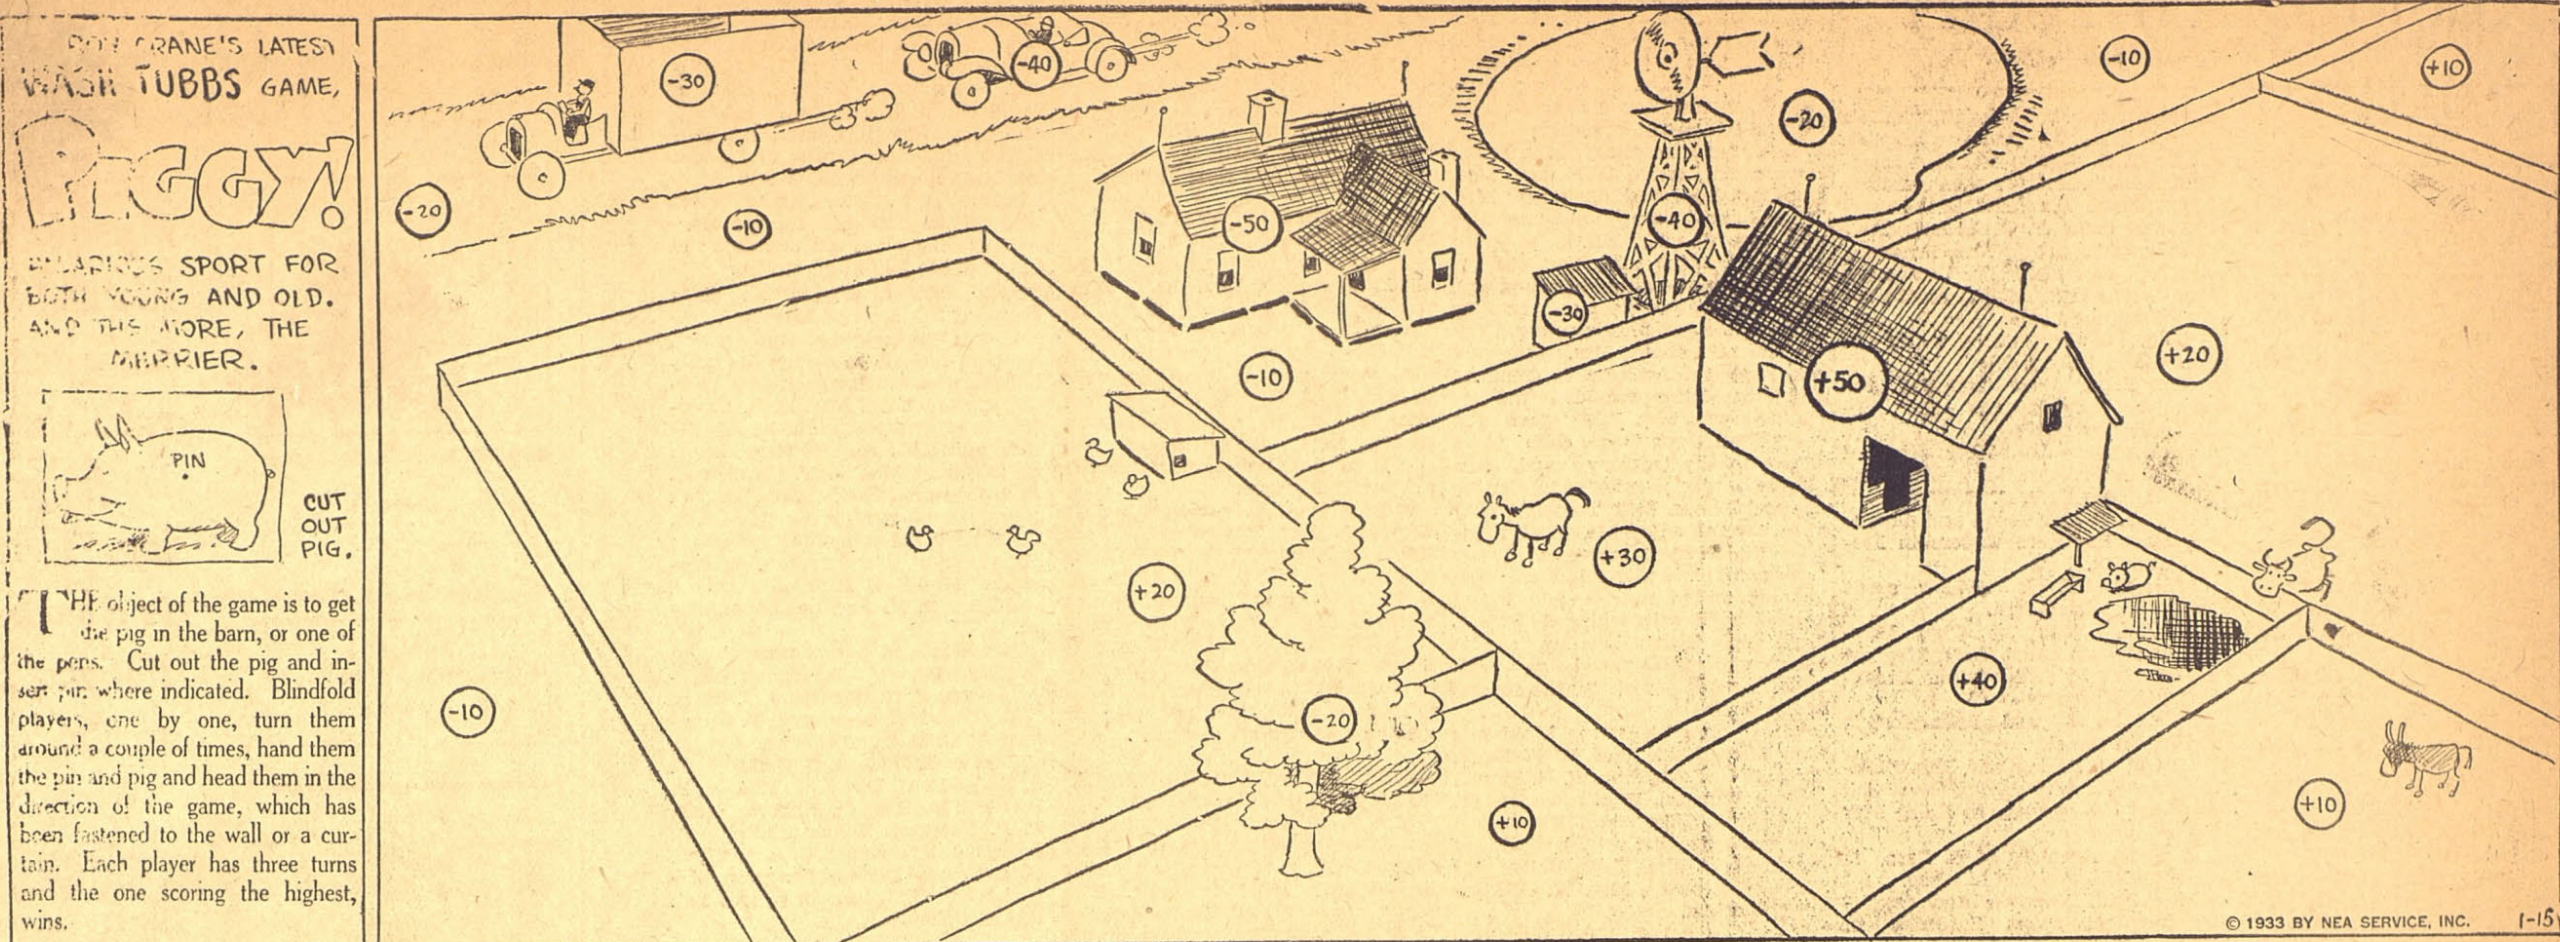

There are 84 new members and they were given generous representation on both sides in the program of seconding speeches. It revealed several budding orators. Stevenson is one of ten members returned to the House without opposition and one of the few unopposed for a third term.

Stevenson is a native Texan. His father was an early day preacher in the hill country. He has farmed, ranched, practiced law and has banking interests.

One eminent Austin judge refers to him as the "best all-round lawyer" now practicing in Texas. He is 44, brown-eyed, square-jawed and over six feet tall.

If any votes were changed by the nominating and seconding speeches, it probably was by the speech of George Moffett of Chillicothe. He recited an instance of how Stevenson in his quiet way clarified muddled situations, states a case clearly and doesn't push his views on others.

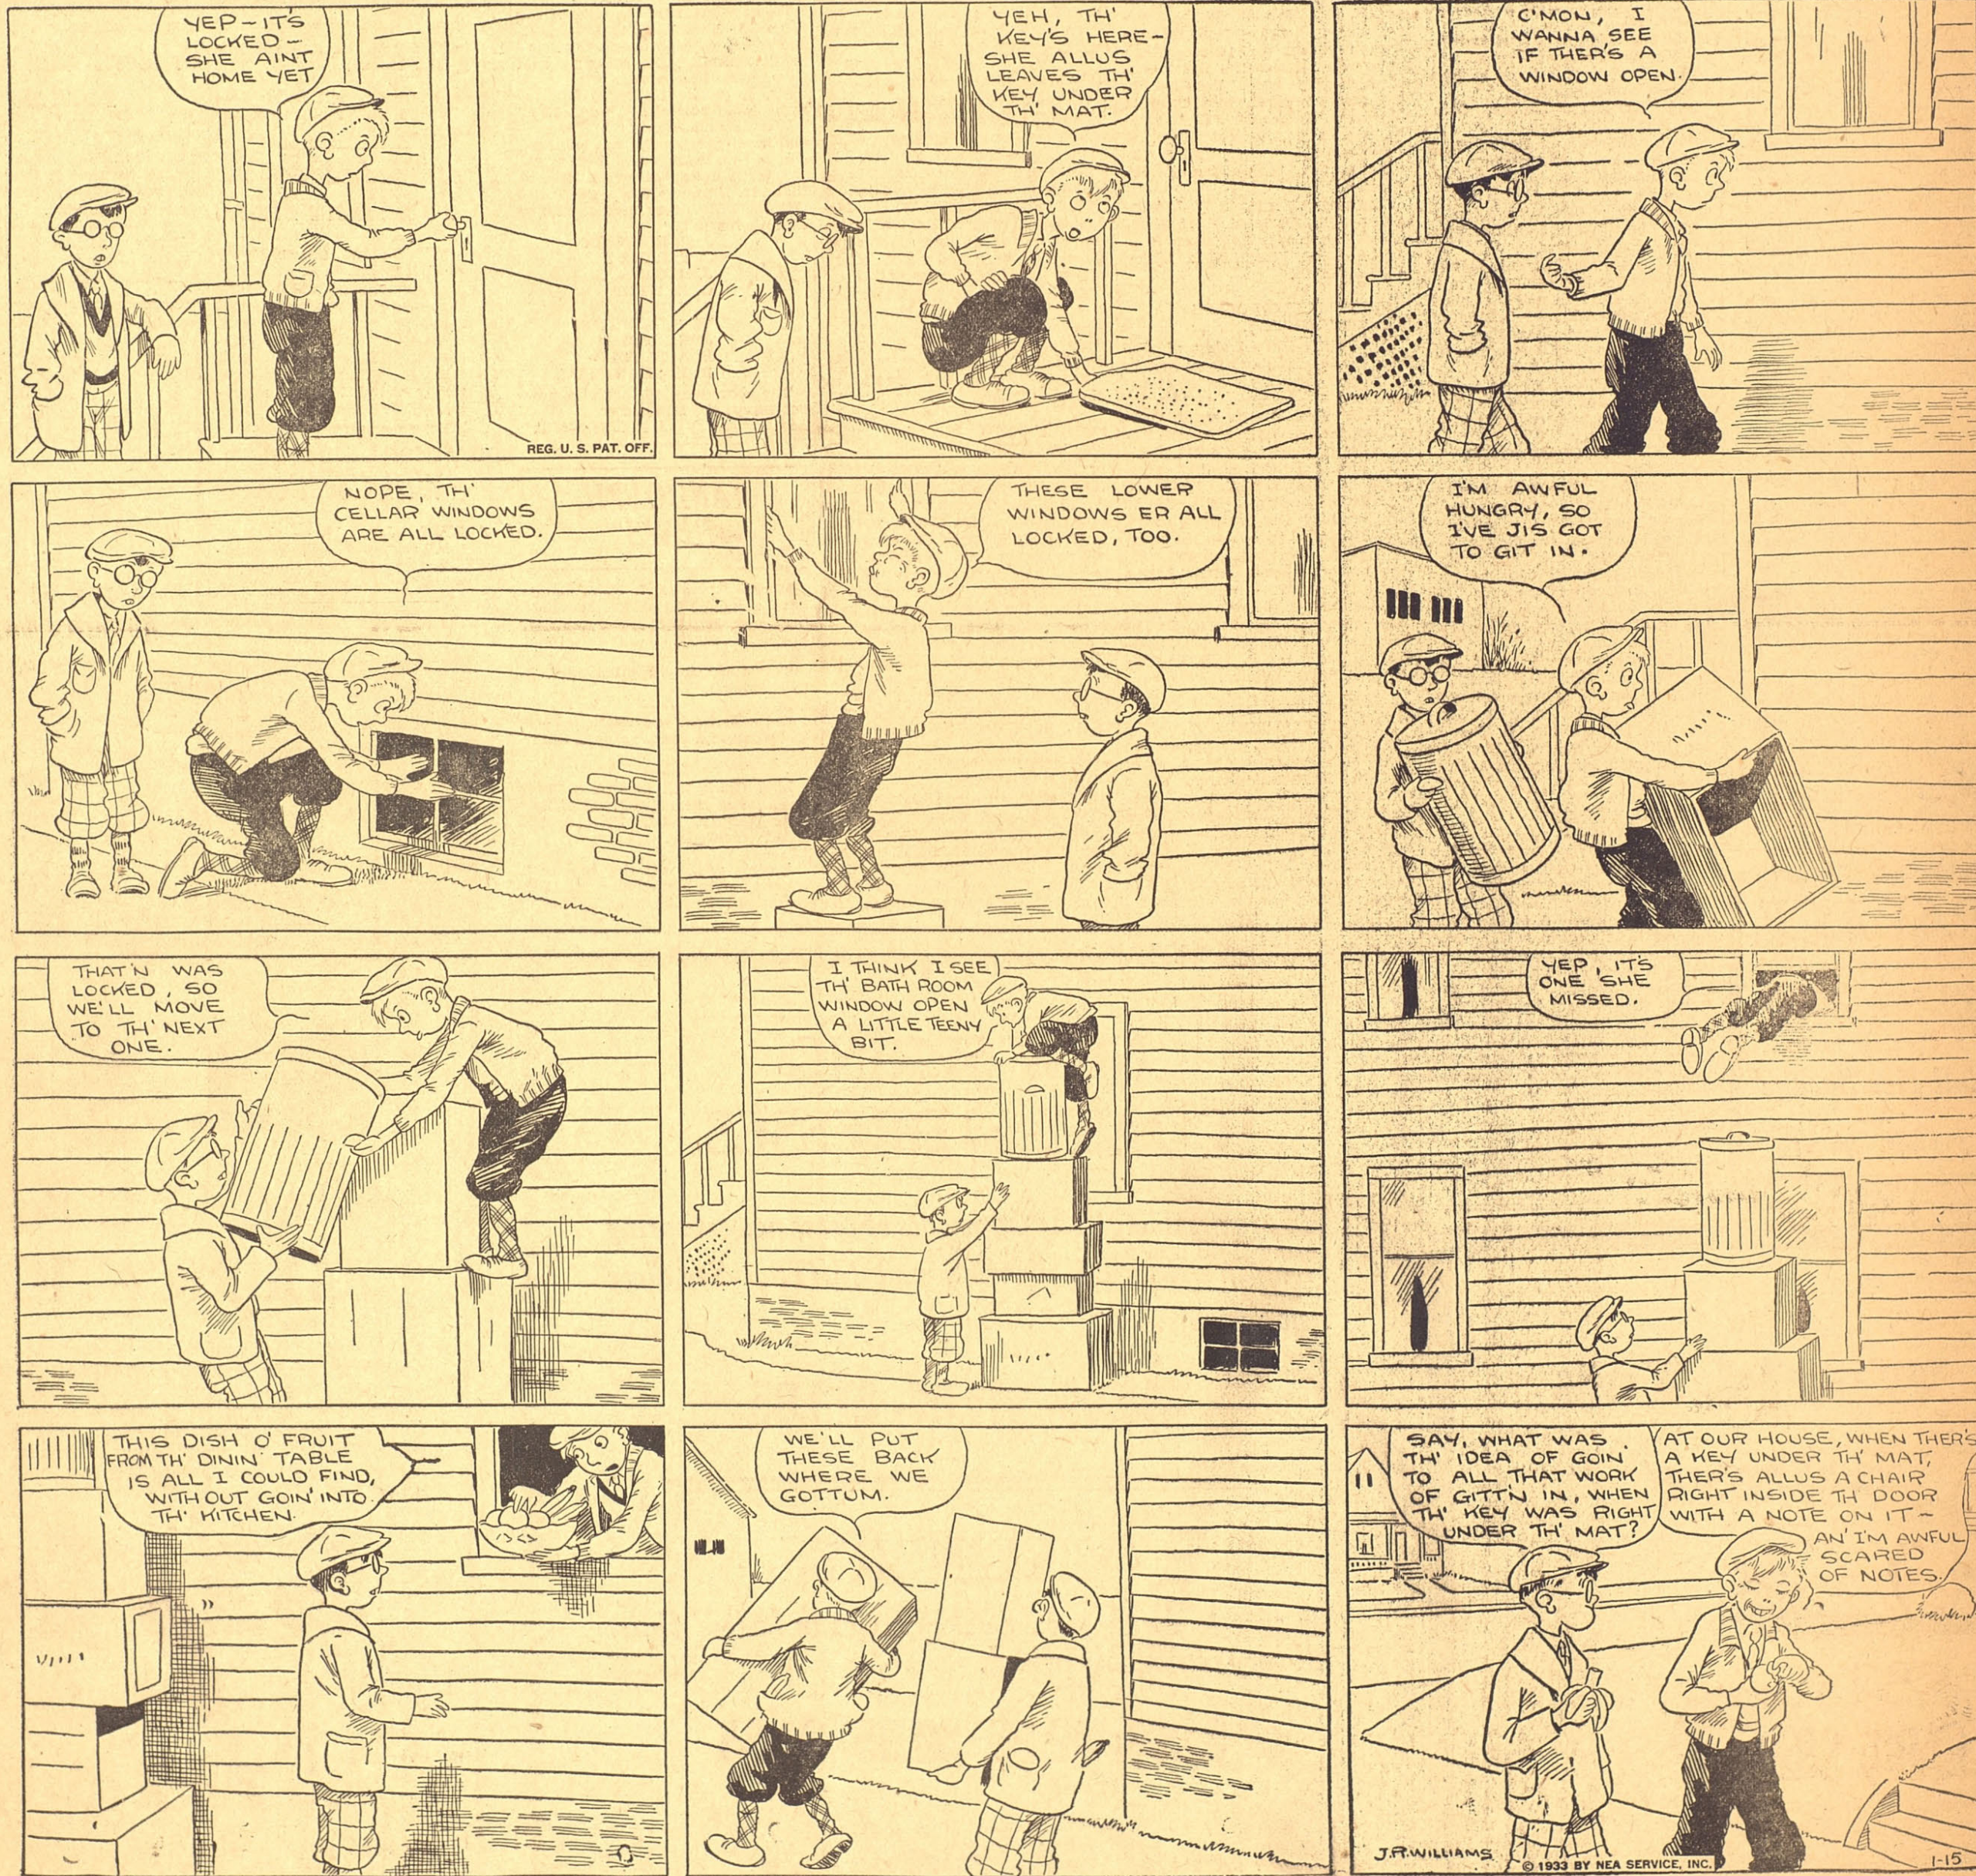

Both sides were fooled in the vote. Stevenson workers listed 89 double checked votes as sure for their candidate. Johnson forces claimed they had 91 votes for him. Ballots were secret except for those partisans who purposely left their slips unfolded and displayed them as they cast them.
