New Plans Laid For Adjournment

PRESIDENT IN HUDDLE WITH COTTON BLOC

BULLETIN
WASHINGTON, Aug. 26 — A two hour conference between President Roosevelt and senate leaders broke up at 2 p. m. with Senator Joseph Robinson, stating "There is no announcement to be made as yet."

By United Press
WASHINGTON, Aug. 26 — President Roosevelt and senate leaders toiled at the White House today over plans to end an agrarian revolt and send congress homeward tonight.

With adjournment blocked by the senate cry for government loans on cotton and wheat, the president backed up the house opposition and conferred with Senate Democratic Joseph Robinson and others, including those wanting the loans.

The senate stood in recess until 5 p. m. to prevent raising of other issues which might delay adjournment.

The house, determined to block the loan demand, laid its strategy to force the senate to act. It appeared likely a compromise putting the loan issue over would result.

Resolution Passed
A new adjournment resolution to end congress by midnight was passed in the house after Rep. Carl Vinson dem., Ga., moved to table the resolution and a vote was ordered.

SIX SENATORS CONFER WITH ROOSEVELT
WASHINGTON, Aug. 26 — Six senators, including leaders of the cotton loan bloc, met with President Roosevelt today to seek a way out of the congressional deadlock and speed adjournment.

In the conference with the president was the democratic senate leader, Joseph Robinson, and Senator James Byrnes, Fat Harrison, dem., Miss., Tom Connally, dem., Tex., and Hugo Black, dem., Ala.

MANN HOPING NEW ACT WILL STOP CON MEN
AUSTIN, Aug. 26 — With the hope of driving swindlers and racketeers from the state, Texas, youthful secretary of state is waging a campaign of disseminating information on the new securities act.

"I feel that this legislation, which is designed to further protect the public from the depredation of racketeers and swindlers, is one of the most meritorious laws enacted in recent years in Texas," Secretary Mann said today.

He explained that securities laws in other states had driven swindlers and racketeers from other states into Texas to continue depredations upon the "unsuspecting and unwary public."

"There is no way of computing the amount of money that has been sucked from Texans in the past few years by these high binders and fast talking boys," the secretary added, saying that the Department of state has a record of one deal alone in which swindlers took $300,000 out of one Texas city.

This, Mann declared, is not an isolated case.

"One of the first deals investigated by this department and which convinced the legislature and other officials that the passage of the law was imperative involved a known sum of $500,000.

"This money should have been used in the legitimate channels of Texas business.

"It went, instead, to high-binders and gypsies and in the wake of their depredation hardships, heartaches and suffering followed."

Texas investors are advised to determine whether the man who proposes to sell them securities is registered with the secretary of state.

WORK STARTS ON SURVEY OF SITE FOR PARK

First state work on the canyon state park site northeast of Cisco began today when George Bringhurst, state park board engineer, began a survey of the area.

The survey will require from four to six weeks, it was said this morning.

The city will furnish one regular worker to accompany Bringhurst and help in the survey, Street Superintendent Joe Clements said today.

In addition, six or eight other workers will be used, but these will be rotated, he said.

"Mr. Bringhurst needs one man each day and we are going to furnish him one regularly," the street superintendent said. "The others will be furnished as they are needed."

He pointed out that the city would keep on seeking a CCC camp to build the park.

"The park engineer told us that the CCC camp is the way we should build up the park. He said that the state has no money for the project but that we should keep working until we get the CCC camp," Clements said.

Organizations here today were understood to be preparing papers for submission to Congressman Blanton and Senator Connally, urging that they use their influence to secure the location of a camp here to construct the park.

At the same time, it was understood that they would keep in mind the plan for securing an auditorium at the park entrance and present it as a part of the project.

SUPREME TEST FOR TREATIES TO BE SOUGHT

By United Press
LONDON, Aug. 26 — Great Britain's diplomatic and military activities in the Italian Ethiopian crisis are aimed at forcing a supreme test of treaties guaranteeing territorial integrity, it was indicated today.

The immediate diplomatic activity is to find where France will take its stand as between Great Britain and Italy and to seek in the League of Nations world support for inviolability of territorial treaties.

Militarily the immediate task is to strengthen defenses on the route to India, Australia, and New Zealand by way of Gibraltar, the Mediterranean, the Suez Canal and the Red Sea.

To this end, after ordering a "summer cruise," which will put the fighting ships of the Mediterranean force at points calculated to be of greatest strategic importance, the war office is sending 1,200 soldiers to reinforce the Malta garrison and will increase the garrison at Aden, its protectorate at the southern entrance to the Red Sea, across from Italian territory.

ADDIS ABABA STIRRED BY FALSE REPORT OF EVACUATION ORDER
By United Press
ADDIS ABABA, Aug. 26. — Government officials today were astonished at wide dissemination of a false report by a news association other than the United Press that Emperor Haile Selassie had ordered his people to evacuate the capital city because of the possibility of an air raid.

As correctly reported by the United Press, the emperor issued instructions to his people, telling them what steps to take in event of an air attack. These instructions were similar to instructions now being given in European capitals.

As hinted by her Victorian coiffure, Miss Harding was on the set, at work, when the family treasure paid her a visit.

The winner of tonight's game will play Garner's for the 1935 city championship in a series of games to begin tomorrow night. An even greater crowd than the championship fans, however, is expected to be on hand to watch the fireworks tonight.

The following probable lineups for tonight's game have been announced:
Nance — McCall, c; Riese, p; Thornton, 1 b; Taylor, 2; Allen, 3; Barnhill, s; Philpot, lf; Perot, sf; Brandon, cf; Hughes, rf.

Writer Interested In Rustling Report

DALLAS, Aug. 26 — Westmoreland Gray, sometimes referred to as the "Zane Grey" of Texas, reads with interest news dispatches concerning cattle rustling activities in West Texas.

"Looks like my yarns are becoming more and more authentic," he grinned, as he read the account of cattle raids in the cow country.

Gray writes fiction for a dozen magazines of the "Western" and "Adventure" type, and his published books, all of them with a setting in the Texas or New Mexico cattle country, feature range riders and cattle thieves of the old and the modern types.

ATTORNEY GENERAL DUE TO MAKE RULING TODAY; LIQUOR RETURNS TO FRONT OF BARS

By UNITED PRESS
Flags and bunting decorated beer taverns in Texas cities today as they shoved schooners of "extra strong beer across the counter.

The enthusiasm of hard liquor was dampened, however, by Attorney General William McCraw's warning that repeal Saturday of state prohibition was not yet effective.

Results of Saturday's repeal election, tabulated a lead of 54,000 votes as returns accounted for 240 of the state's 254 counties, including 53 complete.

Little Change On County's Vote Is Seen Today

Returns from a single box, today failed to change the general result of the Eastland county vote in the Saturday election.

Kokomo, the only box reporting this morning, showed cast 20 ballots against repeal and none for the measure. At the same time, it showed 20 votes cast for the old age pensions measure and two against it. Three persons there voted for the free textbook amendment and 17 against it.

At 2:30 today there were still four boxes unheard from. They were Alameda, Nimrod, Cook, and East Rising Star.

Incomplete totals for the county today were:
Pensions, for, 2,614; against, 395.
Insanity, for, 1,749; against, 984.
Repeal, for, 1,278; against, 1,705.
Amendments, for, 1,158; against, 1,345.
Sentences, for, 1,315; against, 1,280.
Fees, for, 1,682; against, 969.
Text books, for, 1,197; against, 1,684.

The county accepted the old age pension measure, the commitment of insane preliminary to trial by jury, suspended sentences, abolition of the fee system of compensation for public officials. It rejected repeal, submission of amendments at special sessions of the state legislature, and free text books for private schools.

U. S. DELIVERS PROTEST NOTE TO RUSSIANS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26. — The United States and Soviet Russia stood today at the parting of the ways in their official relations.

A series of broken promises serve as milestones marking 22 months of troublesome relations.

In what was considered one of the most sharply worded diplomatic notes sent from Washington since the United States broke off relations with the Central Powers, in 1917, this government warned Russia that "the most serious consequences must result unless Moscow smother its activities of the Communist International organization insofar as it affects the United States.

The warning and the demand were contained in a note delivered to the Soviet foreign office by William Bullitt. It called attention to activities of the Soviet communist organization and to the promises made President Roosevelt on Nov. 16, 1933, by Maxim Litvinov, Soviet commissar of foreign affairs, as the basis on which diplomatic recognition was accorded the Soviet.

Early Special Session Foreseen

An early special session of the state legislature is predicted following the results of Saturday's election.

Several of the amendments passed at that time will require legislation, and the governor has indicated that a session likely will be called. At the same time, however, the governor has indicated that he will ask the views of legislators on an appropriate time for the special session.

The repeal amendment certainly will call for legislation before it goes into effect. The amendment read "prevention of return of the open saloon." The state legislature will have to make some provisions to prevent the saloon's return, as well as to make other liquor laws. Then, too, there is another election coming on an amendment to allow a state monopoly on the sale of liquor.

Perhaps more important than legislation on liquor sales, however, is that upon the old age pensions. Numbered first on the ballot, the amendment was the strongest in the voting.

The pension amendment did not give anybody anything. It simply provided that the legislature might set up such laws as to give a pension to persons over 65 years of age. Persons eligible to the pensions would be those not habitual criminals nor habitual drunkards nor inmates of state institutions. Their pension would be a maximum of $15 a month. It might be less.

There is no provision for the funds for an old-age pension. That would be left to the legislature. If they set up a pension system, as they undoubtedly will, they will have to create a fund for it. The method for this would be left to their discretion.

Free Text Book Amendment Defeated

Amendment Number Seven, that of providing free text books for private and parochial schools as well as the state public schools, was defeated in Saturday's election by a majority of 30,000, according to fairly complete returns so far tabulated.

The amendment was of the catch-question type. It was believed that many would vote for it without realizing what it actually meant. As a matter of fact, many did. Many persons voted for the amendment in the belief that they were voting to continue furnishing free text books to all public school children, when that had nothing whatever to do with the situation.

The amendment provided that free text books be furnished pupils in all private and parochial schools, which would have meant a return of the school system to the churches and meant chaos when the churches could not agree. It would have thoroughly decentralized the school system of Texas.

At the same time, the amendment would have given the state legislature the power to set up a new form of distribution of the available school fund. It is believed that there should be a new basis for distribution of the school fund, but to turn it over to the legislature would have been to make a political football of the education system of Texas.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third of a special series of stories telling exactly how lobbies work and what part they play in the government at Washington.

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON.—In any administration, with the New Deal far from an exception, you will find that the most successful "fixers" are or have been members of the Democratic or the Republican National Committee. During Hoover's time, you hired James Francis Burke or C. Bascom Slemg today you'd be likely to retain J. Bruce Kremer, Arthur Mullen, or Robert Jackson.

The reason is that such men, when their party is in power, are supposed to have an exceptionally large influence with the administration—with the White House itself, with officials with whom they have long associated in politics, with officials whom they helped place in federal jobs and with senators and representatives from their home states for whose nomination and election they may also be responsible.

MANY lobbyists, though they may control few if any votes in Congress, have found it valuable to have friends on congressional committees who tip them off to developments at secret sessions.

Somehow, the names of Mullen, Kremer, and Jackson pop up in any discussion of lobbying here. They were Democratic national committeemen from Nebraska, Montana, and New Hampshire until about the time pressure was brought on Roosevelt to cause them to resign from their party posts. Old-time politicians, each had had enough to do with Roosevelt's nomination to place the president under some obligation when jobs were handed out.

NEXT: The social lobby.

Wonder What a Presidential Possibility Thinks About?

Saturday Cisco voters went to the polls and cast a big majority against it. The Daily News is glad to have had a part in defeating such a measure.

The Vote Upon Repeal

Texas Saturday joined the wet parade of states who have voted for repeal. The Texas vote, however, was not for repeal of national prohibition, for that was unnecessary, the required number of states having ratified that, but upon repeal of its own state prohibition law.

Eastland county, on the other hand, voted dry. Stephens county voted dry. Cisco voted dry, but by the narrow margin of 11 votes.

Contrary to reports circulating freely Sunday, it was believed that the sale of liquor would have to be regulated before it could take place in Texas.

At the same time, it was understood that counties and precincts dry under local option before would remain dry until otherwise decided under another local option vote. Cisco was dry.

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

AUSTIN, Aug. 26.—No one was more surprised than Governor James V. Alford to read that PWA offices at Fort Worth had received application for funds to build the Panhandle - Detroit natural gas pipeline.

SHEARER

The governor has no idea of resubmitting the project to a special session of the legislature. After the regular session of the legislature, after the regular session refused to pass the pipe line act, he considered it dormant if not dead.

Disinclined to discuss the matter, the governor apparently feels that authorities in Washington failed to give it proper consideration when he originated the pipe line project.

There was difficulty about a bill to set up a state authority to act. Many feared a large grant to one project would militate against many small projects.

Washington was asked for assurance that Texas would be charged only with the part of the project resulting in Texas employment, but the assurances did not come.

The Brazos River project encountered much the same difficulty but finally passed the legislature. The Colorado river project now is being blamed, although members of its board say unjustly.

Highway Commissioner D. K. Martin told road delegations that one reason Texas road expenditure is put so low per man is that a high ratio of $5,000 to a man was used in the Colorado River project which requires large cement purchases. To offset this, Martin understood, the other expenditures per man were reduced.

Some state records may be hard to trace but the state never forgets a tax record. In the capitol basement, under the state comptroller's office, are stacked tax records running back to the beginning of Texas as an independent government. They are arranged by years in tiers of neatly bound and labeled rolls.

The basement is like a labyrinth. It would be as difficult to get about in it as to find the way through a maze without benefit of the key.

Huey Figures in Their Run-Off

The report that there will be two new federal judgeships in North Texas has started much political speculation. One report was that an important purpose of Lieutenant Governor Walter Woodul's recent visit to Washington was to boost Governor Alford for one of the places. Questioned about it, Governor Alford said he did not know there was to be a new judgeship. He displayed no interest in it.

Edna Fragonet's expression did not change. "Suppose," she asked, "that Peter and I stay in Hollywood—where we belong—and you leave?"

"I'll leave Hollywood when I'm ready, Mrs. Fragonet, and I don't believe you or anyone else can make me leave until then."

Fragonet's wife was silent a moment. Then she advanced toward Jo, her fists clenched and her eyes pin-points of anger. "I wouldn't be too sure of that, if I were you. Would it interest you to know that after tomorrow you won't have a job?"

Watching the effect of this question, the woman relaxed, smiling. "And jobs are hard to find here. I think you'll decide you'd best go home."

At first Jo could hardly believe what she had heard, but as she gazed at the cold, venomous glimpse of the other woman she knew that Edna Fragonet would attempt just what she had promised.

"What if Maisie refuses to fire me?" Jo asked slowly.

"I hardly think she'll be able to afford not to, Miss Darien. But if she wants to be a fool, and you attempt to stay on here, I'll raise a row that will be heard from here to New York!"

"But—here that wouldn't be fair to Boleson, and it would ruin your husband," Jo protested.

The other nodded quickly. "You pretend not to be interested in Fragonet—let her go, you want to be so sure his career isn't spoiled?"

Jo was about to answer when she heard the front doorbell, and before she could move from the spot she saw the landlady hurrying past the door on the way to answer it. With a frightened glance at Edna Fragonet, Jo heard Peter's booming voice ask, "Is Miss Darien at home?"

He stopped dead still in the doorway; then, mastering himself as he might for a scene before the camera, he came into the room and walked straight toward his wife.

"What's all this, Edna? Making trouble again?" Her answer was cold and lifeless, but Jo sensed that there was hurt in it, too. She sensed that Edna Fragonet loved this man in her rigid, possessive way and that she would fight senselessly for him until she died.

Did you ever stop to think

Governor E. W. Marland, of Oklahoma, says: "The governor of Oklahoma is directly or indirectly responsible for the operation of over fifty State Boards—38 institutions—and many important commissions—school land tax, etc."

"Every minute of his day is needed by the business of the state. Your best interest as a citizen demands that he be permitted to do his work without unnecessary interruption.

"When you call upon him personally or by telephone to ask for a job for yourself or your friend, you are unnecessarily interrupting his work—your work—the work of the state."

"In order to save his time—your time—the state's time—he has set up a department to which all applications for state jobs should be addressed. Such application will receive prompt consideration if addressed to 'State Employment Service, Governor's Office, Capitol.'"

"Your cooperation will be appreciated by the governor in his effort to bring efficiency and economy in the operation of the various departments of the state government."

Texas Topics

By RAYMOND BROOKS

AUSTIN, Aug. 26.—Representative C. M. McFarland's recommendation that tax assessors either comply with the law or face ouster suits has brought a prompt response of evasion and denial of responsibility.

The county commissioners are the responsible ones, collector-assessors generally have said. "Custom decrees violating the law," others exclaimed.

Whoever is responsible, Representative McFarland has shown that land and realty are assessed for 55 per cent of the total ad valorem tax, and that personal property varies 1,700 per cent in the rate of assessment, and in many counties no livestock, automobiles, store goods, wholesale supplies or manufacturers' goods are assessed for a cent of tax.

Representative McFarland shows the attorney general longer continuing the right and the duty of filing suits for removal of whatever responsible official fails to enforce the full rendition law. He shows that 245 assessor-collectors report they are not complying with that law now, regardless of whether they are final or the county commissioners, as boards of equalization, are final.

"If all property were assessed for taxation on a full value," Representative McFarland said, "the state property rate could be cut from 77 cents to around 11 to 15 cents, and would not therefore continue the burden that has crushed the life out of small property owners, who are paying the debts of somebody else. The state school fund, the pension fund and general revenue would be no longer continuing to be robbed of their just revenues from various classifications of personal property."

Comments by State Auditor Orville S. Carpenter, upon a recent survey made by him on taxes and indebtedness of local units of government in Texas for 1934 touch high points of a subject of wide concern. From his comments come the following:

"Texas has nearly 9,000 local taxing authorities bearing heavily on the taxpayer."

"In spite of the present trend toward efficiency in government and elimination of duplication between departments, we find in this state cities, counties, schools, water districts, drainage districts, road districts, irrigation districts and many others, all assessing and collecting taxes on the same property."

"As a result many property owners must render the same property to several assessors and pay taxes to several collectors."

"The number of local taxing authorities seems increasing. A similar survey made by Moore Lynn, former state auditor, for the year 1932, showed at that time 8742 tax districts. He called attention to the 'present chaotic conditions' then existing in local taxation matters."

"The survey just completed for the year 1934 shows 8936 local taxing units, an increase of 194 in two years' time.

"In the 8936 districts an enormous taxpayers' debt of three-fifths of a billion dollars has been built up. The actual figure in 1934 was $670,442,179, with sinking funds deducted."

"Nearly eight billion dollars worth of property was listed on the 1934 tax rolls of the 8936 local units of government in Texas."

"Each person in Texas would owe $115.10 if this debt were distributed evenly. Some counties have a much larger debt: that of Hidalgo is $595.14 per person. (i. e. "this debt" $670,442,179.)

"Bonds warrants and bonds (sinking funds deducted) to be paid by local taxpayers amounted to $670,442,179. Self-liquidating bonds for enterprises, such as waterworks, were not included in this survey. Also, PWA loans were not part of the three-fifths of a billion debt."

"From the eight billions worth of property, taxes of $135,209,997.82 were collected, with the all-time total $148,972,894.67 delinquent on tax rolls. Figures include state taxes for general purposes of $27,969,648.07, and state delinquencies of $25,535,085."

"Individual debts (sinking funds deducted) run from $200.02, the lowest for Glasscock, to $62,873,536, the highest, for Harris county. "State average in dollars of debt to $100 of true valuation of property is $8.44. Hidalgo county has an indebtedness of $73.39 to each $100 of true valuation. Totals for Glasscock county show that the debt is only 20 cents for each $100 worth of property."

"Loving county, with a population of only 195, at time of this survey owed no bonds or time warrants whatever."

"Please don't look so astonished, Miss Darien," Edna Fragonet said, her voice heavy with sarcasm. "Surely you must have expected to see me some time during your stay in Hollywood."

"I'm afraid I didn't," Jo hoped her words were steady. "But now that you're here . . . won't you sit down?"

"Thank you, no. I'll be only a moment, Miss Darien. I want you to know I don't intend to give Fragonet up."

"I had no idea that you did, Mrs. Fragonet."

"Then what's your game?" asked the other woman. "What did you expect to gain by flying to Hollywood with him, by hounding him—"

"Just a moment, Mrs. Fragonet!" Jo interrupted quietly. "I'll answer your questions—and I'll answer them truthfully." Her voice was steady now, she knew, and it was steel-edged with pride and hatred. "My game in Hollywood is simply to earn an honest living. My reason for coming in your husband's plane was to save the fare, I suppose. And because he invited me. As for hounding Peter Fragonet, I'd be eternally grateful if you'd take him to Europe and keep him there!"

Edna Fragonet's expression did not change. "Suppose," she asked, "that Peter and I stay in Hollywood—where we belong—and you leave?"

"I'll leave Hollywood when I'm ready, Mrs. Fragonet, and I don't believe you or anyone else can make me leave until then."

Fragonet's wife was silent a moment. Then she advanced toward Jo, her fists clenched and her eyes pin-points of anger. "I wouldn't be too sure of that, if I were you. Would it interest you to know that after tomorrow you won't have a job?"

Watching the effect of this question, the woman relaxed, smiling. "And jobs are hard to find here. I think you'll decide you'd best go home."

At first Jo could hardly believe what she had heard, but as she gazed at the cold, venomous glance of the other woman she knew that Edna Fragonet would attempt just what she had promised.

"What if Maisie refuses to fire me?" Jo asked slowly.

"I hardly think she'll be able to afford not to, Miss Darien. But if she wants to be a fool, and you attempt to stay on here, I'll raise a row that will be heard from here to New York!"

"But—here that wouldn't be fair to Boleson, and it would ruin your husband," Jo protested.

The other nodded quickly. "You pretend not to be interested in Fragonet—let her go, you want to be so sure his career isn't spoiled?"

Jo was about to answer when she heard the front doorbell, and before she could move from the spot she saw the landlady hurrying past the door on the way to answer it. With a frightened glance at Edna Fragonet, Jo heard Peter's booming voice ask, "Is Miss Darien at home?"

He stopped dead still in the doorway; then, mastering himself as he might for a scene before the camera, he came into the room and walked straight toward his wife.

"What's all this, Edna? Making trouble again?" Her answer was cold and lifeless, but Jo sensed that there was hurt in it, too. She sensed that Edna Fragonet loved this man in her rigid, possessive way and that she would fight senselessly for him until she died.

"Suppose you explain to me, Peter. You and Miss Darien here."

"There's nothing to explain," Fragonet said quietly. "You've been yelling divorce until my ears are ringing. And I want to marry Jo." His lips curled in a smile that froze Jo's heart. Here was a Fragonet she had never seen.

His wife turned swiftly to Jo. "You hear? You deny that—"

"What?" "What's a scream, that single word crowding from Jo's nerve-tightened throat. "I heard it. I heard what he said—but will you hear what I'm going to say?" She faced them both, holding to a chair, holding because she was weak with anger now. "I—I think you're both fools, and I never want to see you or hear your names again as long as I live! I've had nothing but trouble since the day you came to Crest Lake."

She turned on Fragonet. "Why do you think that when you love a woman it turns something on inside her, like an electric light? What makes you think that all you have to do is say, 'I love you and want to marry you,' and I'll jump at the chance? It must be because you always win in the pictures you make, or maybe it's because of all the foolish letters you get, what crazy women say when they see you in public—"

"Jo!" Fragonet raised a protesting hand. "I'm not going to stop until I'm finished. This is what I planned to say to you tonight, and I'm glad your wife is here to hear me say it. . . . Jo stopped, breathless, then plunged on again. "I did like you at first—but never told you I loved you. I never told you that, no matter how you tried to make me believe I did. I liked you at first because . . . because once there must have been something about you that was honest and decent. That must be what they see on the screen, the part of you I saw—before I really knew you."

Mrs. Fragonet moved toward the door. "I see no reason to listen to ravings like this," she said.

But Jo slid between her and the door, tossed back her hair with a nervous hand. "Maybe there's no reason to listen, but you're going to. I want you to get this straight, once and for all—I don't want your husband, and I never did!"

Mrs. Fragonet's smile was cold, but unbelieving. "Really," she said, "you're quite a little actress. I'm surprised you haven't tried the studios." With that she swept past Jo and out of the room.

Fragonet stood looking at Jo, his mouth almost comically agape. "You—you really feel that way, Jo?" he asked slowly.

Jo nodded. "That's the way I feel. And I want you to go, please . . . and not bother me any more, ever."

Dully she heard the outer door slam. Then she stumbled weakly into the half-lighted hall, felt her way along the wall and up the stairway to her room.

NEXT morning Maisie Lester was at the bungalow almost before Jo was out of bed.

"Say, kid," Maisie greeted her, trying to hide a troubled countenance with one of her wide smiles. "when I hired you I didn't know you were homes in high places. Loila told me that Fragonet was crazy about you and had been pestering you. But last night I was yanked out of my downy couch by a telephone call from Mrs. Fragonet, and—"

"I know, Maisie. She wants you to fire me."

"That's the dope, all right." Jo looked at Maisie questioning. "Do you have to do what she says?"

"Do what she says? Of course I don't! I own my place and I'll run it the way I like. Only—"

"Only what, Maisie?"

"Well . . . she can make it tough for me, all right. And she can make it tough for you, too."

Jo looked hard at her slippers. "Maybe we ought to hoist the white flag, Maisie."

Maisie sat beside Jo on the edge of the bed, put a plump arm around her shoulders. "If you say we fight, then it's okay with me, Jo. If you can stand all the fireworks, I can stand to lose a little business."

Jo shook her head. "That isn't all there is to it, Maisie. And she gets so wildly jealous that she raises a row it'll make bad publicity for Atlas. It'd ruin Fragonet and hurt Boleson—and it might hurt some of the people who have anything at all to do with Fragonet's pictures. And I hate messes, Maisie. I've had enough of them this summer." She turned to her staunch employer. "I know you don't like to fire me, Maisie—so I'll just quit."

"But what are you going to do! I know damn well you haven't saved any money on what I was paying you."

Jo shrugged. "I wish I knew what I was going to do."

"Well," Maisie told her philosophically. "You can always get a sandwich and a cup of coffee at my place. That's a good thing to remember in Hollywood." (To Be Continued)

SISTER MARY'S RECIPES

BY MARY E. DAGUE, NEA Service Staff Writer

MEAT is my favorite people—to cook for, anyway—because there's some substance to the things they like. And because, too, they don't bother about diets and fads.

My favorite man's favorite dinner centers around thick mutton chops, planked. For these, you need loin chops of yearling lambs. Get the butcher to take out the bone in one piece and put strips of bacon or the lamb's kidneys in the center of the meat and roll it up. Fasten it securely with small skewers or bind with a cord, then cut into steaks about one and one-half inches thick and wrap each slice with a strip of bacon or lard pork. Allow one chop for each person to be served.

To Plank Chops

To plank, first broil the chops on one side only on a hot, well-oiled broiler. In the meantime heat the plank very hot and rub it with butter or other fat. Place chops, cooked side down, on the plank and arrange stuffed tomatoes or stuffed peppers or both around the chops and put the whole thing into a very hot oven to finish cooking. Serve on the plank, seasoning the chops well and garnishing with sprigs of parsley and sprays of watercress. Potatoes au gratin are good to serve with this meat dish. If you use both tomatoes and peppers, stuff the peppers with succotash and the tomatoes with a mixture of celery and almonds.

Braised saddle of lamb is an elegant dish, too. Serve it with fresh vegetables and mint sauce. A crown roast of lamb is decorative if properly done. Usually the entire cut, known as the rack is used for it and the roast is suitable for a company affair. With its filling it will serve eight or ten persons generously and well. The ribs are separated at the back bone and then trimmed and scraped as for French chops. Shape in a circle, having the ribs outside, and tie firmly. Trim the ends of the bones evenly, care being taken that they are not too long. Wrap each bone with a thin strip of salt pork to prevent the bone from burning.

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Orange juice, cereal, cream, fried green tomatoes, bran muffins, milk, coffee. LUNCHEON: Clam chowder, salad of apples-raisins and celery in lemon jelly, toasted muffins, milk, tea. DINNER: Grape juice cocktail, canapes, roast lamb, mint sauce, potatoes in parsley butter, green peas, asparagus salad, peach mousse, brandy wafers, milk, coffee.

Fill the center with finely chopped lamb—trimmings from the roast—and finely chopped veal mixed with a little salt pork for flavor. Add a well beaten egg and mix thoroughly. Round the filling up, letting it come within two inches of the tops of the rib bones. Roast two and one-half to three hours in a moderate oven. Remove salt pork and cover bones with chop frills before sending to the table.

Philippines Plan Davis Cup Attempt

MANILA, Aug. 26 - The Philippines for the third time will participate in Davis Cup competitions in 1936, it was decided here at a meeting of directors of the Philippine Islands Lawn Tennis association.
 Next year's bid will mark the islands' first such since 1926 when Lope Yngayo, now a professional, and Guillermo Aragon, were eliminated early in European zone play.
 Presumably popular subscriptions will cover the expenses of the island's entrants. A committee, appointed by the P.I.L.T.A. and the Philippine Amateur Athletic Federation, will launch a campaign for funds.
 Although P.I.L.T.A. officials hold little hope of island representatives walking off with honors, their object in sending a team to compete in the Davis Cup series is to gain experience for Philippine stars.
 Officials pointed out that China this year dispatched two of its youngest stars to Mexico City to compete in North American zone play, not with any hopes of winning but because of their desire to give the youngsters' "big-time" seasoning.
 Philippine stars in Far Eastern competition have compared well with those of China.

PLAYERS CALL FOR NEW DEAL IN U. S. TENNIS

By GEORGE KIRKSEY
 United Press Staff Correspondent
 NEW YORK, Aug. 26 - America's disastrous attempt to win the Davis Cup from England has brought a storm of protest from tennis players and followers throughout the country.
 The main criticism of Capt. Joseph Wear's handling of the United States team is not because Wilmer Allison, veteran Texan, was selected to play both the singles and doubles in the challenge round, but because America continues to ignore promising young players and refuses to build for the future.
 It was pointed out that even had the United States wrested the trophy from England, his country would have had trouble defending it successfully next year because of the neglect in developing youngsters for Davis Cup duty.
 Two-Year Plan Urged
 The general opinion in tennis circles is that America should select a group of youngsters and start building a team around them now for 1936. Sacrifice a victory in the inter-zone final if necessary to give the players experience and confidence for the matches two years hence.
 Henry Cullley, who recently returned from Europe after two years of play on foreign courts, believes America should take a squad of five or six youngsters to Europe next year and campaign them strenuously.
 "I'd take over Don Budge, Frankie Parker, Gene Mako, Sidney Wood, and Bryant Grant and Wimbledon championships and pick the team on their showing abroad," said Cullley. "The talk of too much tennis is all the bunk."
 Rival For Austin Suggested
 Wilmer Hines, South Carolina boy who campaigned in Europe this year, believes that America should concentrate on getting a player to beat Bunny Austin forgetting that he is at his best in

BAER TO TRAIN FOR JOE LOUIS BY IRON RULE

By GEORGE KIRKSEY
United Press Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK, Aug. 26 — Max Baer is an earnest and well-behaved young man when his name and papa are about. That's why Alvin Hoffman, Baer's manager, is bringing them from California to be at Max's training camp during his preparations for his heavyweight match with Joe Louis.

Hoffman has frankly admitted that he can't handle the care-free Baer at a training camp when other people get around. While training at Asbury Park, N. Y., for what proved to be a tragicomic defense of his heavyweight title against James J. Braddock, Baer was completely out of control.

"Max wouldn't do anything I told him to," said Hoffman later. "I was anxious to find out just what shape his hands were in and kept telling him to try his right to the head on his sparring partners."

Wanted To Protect Hand
"I don't want to do that," Hoffman says Baer replied. "I might bust my hand up and we'd have to call off the fight. I want to give it a chance to heal."

"Well, that's what I want to find out, if your hand can stand a hard punch to the head," answered Hoffman. "If it won't, you have no business going into the ring against Braddock. We'll have the fight postponed until your hands get in shape. Now go out there and show me that your right is okay for a punch to the head."

Baer wouldn't follow Hoffman's orders and never threw one hard punch to the head during his sparring sessions.

Opposed Training Site
The Asbury Park training camp was selected against Hoffman's better judgment.

"I didn't think Max would get much rest there or tend strictly to business," said Hoffman. "But I gave in against my better judgment. This time I'm going to take him off where people won't be hanging around him all the time and there won't be anything to take his mind off training. And as a precautionary measure I'm going to have his father and mother there to keep him in line."

As an evidence of his good faith, Baer has signified his willingness to train at Speculator, N. Y., an out-of-the-way up-state hamlet which Gene Tunney discovered as a training site, or any other place Hoffman selects.

Takes Hand Treatment
Since the Braddock fiasco, Baer has sought considerable medical advice about his hands, and he is earnestly trying to cure them. He has been chopping wood, rowing and exercising his hands by squeezing rubber balls.

"There's no question about Baer's ability to fight, his punching power or his ability to take it. He has let some pretty fair punches, like Ernie Levinson and Paulina Uzcudun, bounce their Sunday punches off his chops and laughed at 'em. Baer can fight as good as he wants, or as bad as he likes. There's every reason for him to want to fight his best against the Detroit negro. If he gets into shape, and there is every reason to indicate that he is serious this time, Baer will be a far different opponent for Louis than the fear-stricken King Levinson or the glass-chinned and totally unquipped Primo Carnera.

Bedroom Furniture Dates For 65 Years

KERRVILLE, Aug. 26 — Laura Oehler, 16, Kerr county ranch girl who was one of the nine district winners of girls 4-H club bedroom improvement contests, went back 65 years in acquiring pieces for her prize-winning room.

A 16-year-old walnut bed that had been discarded by one of her grandmothers was the piece around which the girl selected her furnishings. Another piece, a dresser, she obtained from a great aunt. It had belonged to a great-grandmother. She visited 27 second-hand stores in her search for sturdy old walnut pieces to complete the set.

A unique feature of her set is the silk-mat table which was stylish several generations ago.

NO TWO ORBITS OF PLANETS LIE IN THE SAME PLANE!

USING THE ORBIT OF THE EARTH AS A STANDARD, THE OTHER PLANETS TRAVEL IN PLANES TIPPED AT ANGLES RANGING UP TO SEVENTEEN DEGREES.

© 1935 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

AUSTRALIA AND ANTARCTICA ARE THE ONLY CONTINENTS THAT HAVE NO LAND CONNECTION WITH OTHER CONTINENTS, AND ARE THE ONLY CONTINENTS THAT LIE ENTIRELY SOUTH OF THE EQUATOR!

If the planets all traveled on the same plane, we frequently would see them passing directly in front of each other. Since their orbits lie in planes tilted at various angles, this is not a common occurrence. Pluto, the last of our planets to be discovered, travels on a path which is inclined 17 degrees from that of the earth.

HOOKS AND SLIDES

WHAT a gamble baseball managers have the Old Fight. It does the veteran Charley O'Leary good to see the Detroit Tigers play baseball.

"Some of us old-timers get the habit of thinking that all the up-and-at-'em baseball was played years ago, but the Tigers would have been a great fighting team in any period of the game," says the little man who coaches at first base for the St. Louis Browns.

O'Leary shortstopped Detroit teams to pennants under the late Hughie Jennings in 1907, 1908, and 1909.

"Cochrane has the Tigers hustling all afternoon," asserts O'Leary. "They never quit."

"It's unfair to compare a team of 25 years ago with one of today, but I'm sure that the Tigers are the best club in the American League now. If they don't have too much bad luck with injuries, they ought to come down in front again."

O'Leary is the only man still wearing a uniform who was in the American League in 1900, the year it was organized. He then was a member of the Chicago White Sox.

Hornsby "Made" Solters
An in-and-out-hitter with the Red Sox, Julius Solters was transformed into a murderous clouter with his shift to the Browns. He is an athlete that any manager in the majors would welcome to his lineup now.

All credit is due to Rogers Hornsby, declares the big outfielder. "Hornsby changed my style of hitting," says Solters. "He taught me to stand deep in the box and be prepared to come up and meet the pitch."

On top of that, the Browns' pilot corrected his slugger's diet. "You'll get no place on a salad diet," he warned Solters. "Eat plenty of steak and potatoes."

And Solters believes that has added to his clouting power.

Seek New Distance Record
The straight line distance record prize is also variable, but there is a flat award of $6,000 for any flight bettering the 5,883 mile New York-Rayak flight of Codos and Rossi. Prizes for this event total $6,750; and the maximum award is calculated for a distance of 6,780 miles.

For the Paris-Saigon flight the Air Ministry hopes that some French aviator will win the maximum of $30,000 for a flight of 48 hours, which corresponds roughly to the speed attained by the winner of the London-Melbourne race. The Paris-Tananarive flight award, of the same amount, will be calculated on a similar basis.

FRANCE POSTS CASH BONUSES FOR AIR MARK

By HAROLD ETTINGER
United Press Staff Correspondent
PARIS, Aug. 26 — In an effort to encourage French aviators to make new world's records, the Air Ministry has announced that 3,975,000 francs ($238,500) in prizes will be awarded for performances between now and the end of the year.

Prizes are offered to French fliers for three new world's records and two long distance flights between Paris and colonial capitals; a new speed mark for land planes, a new world's altitude record, a flight bettering the distance record of Paul Codos and Maurice Rossi, and flights from Paris to Saigon and Paris to Tananarive.

Bonus for Extra Speed
The awards are calculated by the ministry according to the speed or elapsed time for the flight in question, so that a flier breaking the world's speed record by four kilometers an hour will get more than he would for a new record of three kilometers faster than Raymond Delmotte's 324.24 miles an hour made at Istres in December, 1934.

For the speed mark the ministry is offering a maximum of $45,000, and it is understood that Delmotte himself will be one of the first to attempt a new record. The maximum prize is for a flight at 366.75 miles an hour.

A prize of $6,000 is offered for a new altitude record, the award being calculated on a basis of the height reached over a minimum of 14,500 meters and the maximum being for an altitude of 15,000 meters.

distance it follows the floor of a deep canyon to rise abruptly to the rim of the Great Wall, dropping into the canyons once more to join the other road at the bottom of Big Foot Pass.

The area of the park is one of the richest in the nation in geological formations. Portions of it have been discovered only in recent years, largely through work carried forward by Millard, and it is believed that there still remain certain parts into which white men never have penetrated.

Lying in the southwestern sections of South Dakota's prairie land, the Badlands rise up formidably. The area largely is composed of rock formations which resisted erosion to a greater extent than the surrounding prairie land. It is rich in Indian lore. For many years, as result of the intricate canyons and unscalable cliffs, it served as a stronghold for Sioux tribes. The Badlands area played a prominent part in the last Indian uprising in the United States, the Messiah War, in which Chief Big Foot had a leading part.

EXTRA WHITE COTTON FOUND 10 PER CENT

The report released today by the division of cotton marketing at Austin on the quality of cotton classed from the Texas crop shows that there is less than 10 per cent of extra white grades classed this week.

In the white standards only 7.8 per cent is strict middling and better, while middling is reported as 56.1 per cent of all cotton classed. White strict low and low middling is the grade of nearly one-fifth of the cotton classed this week. The proportion of cotton that was classed below low middling is less than one per cent.

Less than one-tenth of the cotton classed is in the spotted grades, 4.5 per cent being strict middling. No samples were reported in tinged or stained standards.

The changes in the proportion of different staple lengths is noticeable this week. A negligible proportion of cotton is shorter than 7-8 inch.

However, the report shows 13.4 per cent of the cotton to be 7-8 inch and almost 70 per cent to be 15-16 inch. The proportion of one-inch cotton has decreased to 15.9 per cent. Last week the percentage was 51.6 per cent. All lengths longer than 1-1/2 inch are reported as less than one per cent for the state; however, 10 per cent of the cotton classed from the Flatwoods area is 7-7 1/2 inch and longer. The largest proportion of 15-16 inch cotton was classed from the Mixed black and sandy lands.

The tenderable cotton this week is reported as 98 per cent.

Badlands Monument Will Become Park

INTERIOR S. D., Aug. 26 — Plans for converting the Badlands National Monument into a national park are virtually completed, with approximately 26,000 acres of the proposed extension purchased and other large tracts under option, according to E. H. Millard, senior investigator for the proposed park.

A new highway, extending from Cedar Pass to Big Foot Pass, has been completed and will be opened as soon as it passes inspection. Millard said, the road winds through a region of fantastic beauty, weird formations and deep canyons for 11 miles to connect with a highway through Dillon Pass and the Pinnacles.

Construction of the road required a year. For a portion of the
