Allotment for Paving Highway 23 Made by Comm'n

ACTUAL WORK ON STRIP IS DUE SHORTLY

Actual work upon topping Highway 23 northwest of Cisco to and across a section of Callahan county to join with the paved section of the same highway in Shackelford was brought nearer realization yesterday when the highway commission allotted $25,877 for the work. A double bituminous surfacing will be given this road. It was promised a short while ago that the commission would endeavor to begin work upon this project within 60 days and, with the allotment made this appears to be the prospect. Efforts to have the paving of Cisco and Lake Cisco laid first so as to cause the least interruption of vacation and holiday traffic between these two points will be made, it is likely. The paving of this route will bring to a successful termination more than 10 years of efforts to secure a road leading directly northwest of Cisco via the dam at Lake Cisco to Albany. Such a route opens up, not only to Cisco, but to all Eastland county a large trade territory with magnificent potentialities.

A few miles from Calvert the two bandits splashed gasoline on their automobile and set a match to it, planning to transfer to another machine. Cantrell's son, Clifton, 16, had parked at an appointed spot. Earlier Sheriff J. H. Reed, of Brazos county, had passed the youth on the highway and becoming suspicious, took him in custody. Escape cut off, Cantrell and Emmons chose to shoot it out with a posse of about 25 men. Cantrell was killed by a bullet wound in the head. #### SACK REVEALS NEWS SECRETS AT MISSOURI

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 5. — Leo R. Sack, Scripps-Howard Newspapers Washington correspondent, told a university of Missouri Journalism Week audience today some of the secrets of reporting the news of the United States Senate. Sack said the outstanding factor in reporting Senate activities for American newspapers was the cooperation between Senators and reporters, especially the Senatorial appreciation of the value of publicity. "In its fight for democracy," Sack continued, "in its fight against corruption in high places and questionable methods of government, the Senate finds the Press Gallery its most valued ally. The floor and the gallery work hand-in-hand. Popularize Senate. Without the aid of the Senate Press Gallery the Senate would not be half so important in the public estimation, while the individual reputations of many Senators would not be as great as they are. The Press Gallery has constituted to many reputations, and it has inspired the making of much legislative history." Illustrative of the effect of alert reporting at the Capitol, Sack told of a few men and stories of importance. He said William C. Murphy, recently of the New York World and now a United Press reporter in Washington, wrote the story which last winter obtained a Senate investigation of reports of an unnamed Senator had accepted $100,000 for lobbying in behalf of a sugar tariff. That investigation still is under way. Forced Open Sessions. Paul R. Mallon of the United Press and Frazier Edwards of Universal Service "forced the Senate to abandon secret executive sessions thereby inspiring one of the greatest legislative reforms in Senate history." Mallon and Edwards reported the secret roll call on confirmation of Irving L. Lenroot to the Court of Customs Appeal. Secrecy thereafter was abandoned after a Senate investigation had failed to obtain from Mallon the source of his information. Sack said he had been credited with causing the investigation which ended with refusal of the Senate to seat Senator-elect William S. Vare, Repp., Pa.

CISCO HOTEL SUCCUMBS TO FLAMES TODAY

Flames early this morning took toll of one of the most familiar boom landmarks of Cisco when fire destroyed the Cisco hotel, two-story frame structure of about 20 rooms located at Sixth street and the Katy railroad. The fire department, arriving at the scene shortly after the alarm was received about 12:50 a. m. found the center upstairs section a roaring furnace with the flames spreading through the wooden structure at a rate that rendered saving the building a feat almost impossible. There were between 12 and 15 people in the building at the time but no casualties were reported although firemen were forced to rescue one guest who was trapped in an upper room. He was "Uncle Dan" Thompson who was cut off from the stairway by the fire. Fireman Allen Farley carried him from the building down a ladder while hosemen on the ground played streams of water about them to keep back the flames. The building was owned by Mrs. Ella Kennedy who moved from Cisco about a year ago. For the past two months it had been operated by Mrs. Ada Stuart who owned the furnishings. Insurance in the amount of $5,000 was carried on the building while $1,000 was carried on the furnishings. The fire was discovered by Dr. M. C. Carlisle, who was passing the building while making a professional call, it was reported. He roused the inmates and turned in the alarm. The hotel was built during the boom days period by W. A. Cunningham. During those years it did a grand office business, housing in the course of time thousands of transients who visited here during the crowded days.

DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

GREAT POWER FROM GOD:—Behold, I give unto you power to tread on serpents and scorpions, and over all the power of an enemy; and nothing shall by any means hurt you. Luke 10: 19.
Delight thyself also in the Lord; and he shall give thee the desires of thine heart. Psalm 37: 3, 4.

SAVING THE SPOILS FOR THE REPUBLICANS.

"Away down East," meaning the New England states where the Goddess of Liberty is said to have first opened her eyes, democrats have been making frightful inroads in the Gibralters of the G. O. P.

Wilbur L. Cross, democrat, is the governor of Connecticut. He is one of the famous scholars of Connecticut and New England. Now a republican state boss is alleged to dominate the Connecticut public utilities commission. There was a vacancy. Gov. Cross sent to the Connecticut senate the name of an eminent authority on public utilities, a professor in the Yale law school. Republicans control the senate. They rejected the nomination. All the governor's recommendations were rejected.

A certain democratic commissioner was due to take office on July 1. Republican legislators removed all six inspectors from the jurisdiction of this commissioner where it has been for years and gave it to the head of another commissioner. Seventeen years ago, republican lawmakers decreed that the judges of the city court of New Haven should be appointed by the governor and ratified by the senate. Just the other day the republican legislature, without consulting the people of New Haven forced through a bill taking the power away from the governor, alleging it to be unconstitutional.

It is much the same in Rhode Island. Providence is the chief city of Rhode Island and in recent years has become a democratic stronghold. All municipal departments of Providence have been removed from the jurisdiction of the city and a state public service commission created to take over their administration. All democrats holding municipal jobs were ousted. Republicans were given the plum.

Massachusetts has a democratic governor. His hands have been tied on the congressional redistricting bill. In the long ago the late Col. Webster Flannagan of Texas startled the delegates of a national republican convention by asking this question: "What are we here for?"

A high-brow delegate had the affrontery to ask for the incorporation of a civil service plank in the republican platform. Col. Flannagan's words captured the convention. Delegates and spectators howled down the civil service reformer and the "what are we here for" slogan of the grim old Texan was accepted as the spoils distributing policy of the republican party of ancient days.

To be brutally candid as well as strictly impartial the admission must be grudgingly made that where the democrats control they are just as ravenous for the pies on the political counter as the practical republicans of the New England states where the democrats are hopeful of changing republican Gibralters into households of Thomas Jefferson.

ALLRED AND PRICE FIXING PLANS.

Attorney General James V. Allred passed this on to the people of Texas: "I am not going to stand for price fixing in any line of work since the public foots the bill." And then he warned the pressors and cleaners of the state that their price fixing plan was unlawful.

It appears that "a gentleman's agreement" is a violation of the trust laws of state and nation.

SPRING POTATO CROP IN TEXAS.

Texas is getting to be a potato growing state. G. D. Clark, a noted truck crop estimator, reports Texas' earliest Irish potatoes are being shipped from the lower Rio Grande river valley and from the 13,650 acres of the valley Expert Clark estimates the production will be 778,000 bushels. Acreage in the territory east of San Antonio, he says, will be 18,650 and Clark estimates this will make a total of spring potatoes of 32,300 acres in addition to the winter crop. He added this is all commercial acreage in addition to gardens over most of Texas for home consumption.

There was a time when the farmers of Texas were cotton growers. Now they are diversifiers. They have abandoned the policy of placing all their eggs in one basket.

PERMITS FOR NEW TEXAS RAILROADS.

Railroad building is on in Texas. Now the Fort Worth and Denver Northern Railway company has applied to the interstate commerce commission for permission to build two short branch lines in Gray county. The two lines total 10.41 miles, one of them starting near Lefors and running seven miles to the north, and the other starting at a point near Pampa and running three and a half miles to the north. Both are to serve industries. Texas has a greater number of miles of railways than any other American commonwealth and rail extension is the demand of the hour in many sections of the west and the southwest.

BUILDING HIGHWAYS IN GRAND OLD TEXAS.

In its May meeting the state highway commission awarded contracts for road and bridge work estimated to cost $1,439,000. List of projects called for construction of 124.5 miles of concrete and other paving and 114.4 miles of grading and drainage structures. Seven bridge projects were included in the list. Sixteen of the 28 projects will be carried out with federal aid. Proponents of the road bond issue and all friends of progress under the skies of Texas should put forth renewed efforts to bring about the submission of the amendment to the qualified voters. Do it now.

OTHER OPINIONS

PLAYING THE GAME

Although the legislative session is nearing an end and much important business is yet to be given attention, some valuable time has been wasted during the past few days with an entertaining an exhibition of monkey business as one could wish to see. It all started when some of the best minds among Austin business men, fearing that something or other might happen if they did not use their well known influence, petitioned the three Austin legislators to refrain from exerting themselves in connection with any highly controversial matters pending before either house, with particular reference to the proposal for submitting the highway bond issue.

In answer to this petition, a bill was promptly introduced in the House, providing for the removal of the Highway Commission's headquarters there of a handsome office building at a cost of about half a million dollars. Naturally, consternation reigned among Austin business men as soon as this proposal was made.

There is no likelihood that the highway commission is to be moved from Austin, of course, and the threat of such a thing as a means of whipping into line the three Austin legislators who have vigorously opposed the highway bond issue is merely a revelation of the methods that can be employed in the merry game of politics as it is being played during the present session of the legislature. — Brownwood Bulletin.

In the Political Arena

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD
Sen. Edward P. Costigan of Colorado is as progressive a democrat as Sen. George W. Norris of Nebraska is progressive as a republican. Sen. Costigan was one of the surprises of the 1930 elections. Running as a democratic liberal he won a magnificent victory for his party in the commonwealth of Colorado. He was invited to come to Texas and address democrats of all types and shades by a legislature made up exclusively of democrats of all types and shades. He accepted and he materialized.

Sen. Costigan is a scholar in politics, one of the economic experts of the country. He is classed with the progressive liberals of the La Follette - Norris - Wheeler school of thought. He was for 11 years a member of the federal trade commission, a commission created by Woodrow Wilson and a democratic congress "to take the tariff out of politics." He won national renown as a tariff commissioner and was acclaimed as one of the most influential and most impartial thinkers connected with the commission.

Then came Calvin Coolidge. Calvin did his level best to make the commissioners rubber stamps. Coolidge struck back at the president and branded him as a nullifier of the law which created the commission and its intents and purposes in adjusting the differences which would constantly arise in tariff schedules.

Calvin was accused of packing the commission, placing thereon or thereabout the rubber stamps. Coolidge rather the work of the special interests which dominate the republican party. Costigan resigned. He would not take orders or do the bidding of the then president or his advisers. Now Costigan is a United States senator from the republican state of Colorado. He is scholarly, is eloquent, he is a master of language, he knows the fundamentals as well as the economics of governments and he made a powerful impression on a Texas audience. He has been in public life many years and the four great Americans of his school of thought he classified as William Jennings Bryan, Theodore Roosevelt, Robert M. La Follette, and Woodrow Wilson.

placing Wilson as the greatest of all. A master of the English tongue this Colorado leader knows how to marshal his facts and figures and his indictment of the policies of the republican party and the disasters which have followed to the farmers and wage workers of America captured his audience and held that audience until he closed with a powerful appeal for a united democracy in 1932 and the relegating to the rear of all sham issues unpunct since Woodrow Wilson ceased to hold the reins of government.

His visit was personal. He did not enumerate democratic presidential possibilities. He did not suggest platform planks. He threw no firebrands but he did urge the followers in other years of the four distinguished dead American statesmen whom he had named to unite under the democratic banner in 1932 and restore the government to men and women who believed in the tradition of the early fathers, the cardinal tenets of Jeffersonian democracy and banish from control of government in this republic special privilege laws and special privilege classes or beneficiaries. It is safe to predict that Sen. Robt. P. Costigan of Colorado will be one of the leaders of the coalition of southern national lawmakers and western and Rocky mountain progressive republicans in the national halls of legislation for six years to come.

Old Type Woman Prisoner Gone

EL PASO, May 4. — Women prisoners in the county jail today aren't the "refined ladies" that used to be incarcerated according to Mrs. Margaret DeCourcy, matron in the El Paso county jail for more than 14 years.

"About 10 years ago the women prisoners were more refined," she said. "Then the prisoners were women of 20 or 30 years age. There were not merely so many insanity cases."

"But now we get young girls that start out in life when they are nothing more than babies. They range from 15 to 25 years of age."

"Disrupted families and unwise parents are the cause of it all. I believe. I don't think cigars, booze or automobiles have much to do

THE MELODY GIRL

by RUTH DENVEY GROVES

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Beryl Borden, secretly in love with Tommy Wilson, discovers that he is planning to elope with her half-sister, Irene Everett.

Beryl and her "gang" kidnap Tommy and take him into the country where she gets him to continue in college and not break the heart of his aunt, Mrs. Hoffman, who is financing him. Failing to convince him, Beryl lets Tommy return to her sister, Irene, enraged at the long wait, refuses to listen to his explanation and postpones the elopement.

Next day Tommy goes fishing with his uncle and is surprised to find Beryl and her gang at the beach. One of the boys, Angie, slips away from her, goes into the water and is carried out by the tide. They search frantically and then Beryl sees Tommy swimming to shore with a burden. She swims out and helps him bring Angie in, and then goes for a doctor.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER V

It seemed ages to Beryl that she waited for help but in reality it was not more than 20 minutes before the officer returned, followed by a physician in a new coupe. Without thought of damage to the upholstery Beryl hurriedly took a seat in it. Her hair had dried but her bathing suit still held considerable moisture. Just when and where she had discarded her beach robe she did not remember. The doctor was as oblivious to possible damage to his property as she.

"Which way?" he asked tersely. "First turn to the right."

He drove with the fullest exercise of his right to speed while Beryl sat beside him in silent gratitude that he knew no timidly. But little was required of them as they reached the scene of the accident. Tommy had brought Angie round and except that he was suffering from the effects of submersion he was no worse for his experience.

The doctor ordered him taken home and put to bed. Beryl suggested that she send a check to the doctor or his medical services and he gave her his name and address. Tommy sniffed when the doctor, a nice looking young man, had left them. "A check! You mean a postoffice money order?"

"What's the difference?" Beryl retorted, and then: "Say, how are we going to get home?" She looked at Tommy blankly.

"Here comes a guy who'll tell you," Tommy answered, eyeing the approach of the motorcycle officer.

"I'd have been here sooner," he explained with a firm look for Beryl, "if anybody hadn't turned all the lunatics loose today. Well, whens the kid?"

Angie spoke up with a touch of pride. "I'm all right," he declared. He was beginning to like the special attention he was receiving.

"How'd it happen?" the officer inquired.

It was Tommy who answered him. "A sea kitty got him."

"What's that?"

"A whirlpool or waterspout without the spout or something like that," Tommy explained. "They're hard to swim out of if you lose your head. The kid here had got out in clear water and the kitty was bringing him back to the shore but it was too far for him. I saw him go down and guessed he had enough water in his lungs then to hold him under. I wasn't so far away but I had to do some diving to find him. Miss Borden," he turned to Beryl, "brought him in."

The officer shook his head at her, but there was a twinkle in his eyes. "Just the same," he added, "ought to give you a ticket for having that three-legged omnibus on the road."

"It's not so hot," Beryl agreed. "to look at, but it's a genuine Early American antique. A family relic, you know. Sir Walter Raleigh gave it to Pochahontas. . ."

She paused. Pigmy was whispering sibilantly:

"Captain John Smith, Captain John Smith."

"It doesn't matter," the officer broke in. "I've heard of both of 'em."

Pigmy bristled. "Where?" he challenged.

"Maybe it was in school," the officer grinned.

Pigmy was plainly distressed. "Aw shucks," he said, "and I been wantin' to be an officer."

"Well, that's sure callin' us dumb," the officer commented. Then he became serious. "How you going to get this boy home?"

"We'll have to go into a huddle on that," Beryl answered.

They finally worked it out that the officer should send a mechanic to put a new tire on Beryl's car and drive it to the beach. It wasn't until he'd left them that he realized the suggestion had come from the young lady. This was going to keep him from going off duty in time to get a hot roast duck dinner. But a half-drowned kid is a half-drowned kid. He could have made the younger feller with her hoof it to the nearest telephone, though. Well, the ladies, God bless 'em, she smiled over the thought of one in particular, and thought about a slightly altered version of the story to tell her. Maybe he'd leave the young lady, Miss Borden—he remembered the name—out of it entirely.

Tommy waited with Beryl until the car was brought. "But I oughtn't to," he told her. "Uncle George is probably having a fit out there now. I didn't stop to tell him what I was leaving for. He can't handle the boat and fish, too."

Beryl was too shaken by Angie's narrow escape to feel like telling Tommy to swim back to his uncle. Seeing that her self-sufficiency was below par Tommy decided it was a good time to give her a piece of his mind.

"You wouldn't get into so much trouble if you'd let other people's affairs alone," he said bluntly. "Well," Beryl bridled. "Sure, making kidnapers out of these kids is interfering with their natural lives," he declared. "Why don't you let 'em alone to play baseball and marbles?"

"Humph," Beryl snorted. "I'm teaching them a spirit of brotherhood that's a whole lot more important than marbles."

"Yes, and you nearly let one of 'em drown. What would you have done without me?"

She was looking at her with the unrelenting sternness of youth in the judgment seat, but her answering glance caused him to turn away in embarrassment. Into her clear gray eyes had crept a softness that was echoed in her low voice as she said: "I don't know," with a simplicity that disconcerted him. "You are a great help some times, Tommy," she added gently. Tommy realized that somehow he had nuffed his chance to lecture her.

"You'd better give these kids something to eat," he said gruffly and set down to amuse himself by flicking pebbles over the water. It had always been like that, he told himself resentfully. You couldn't get anywhere with Beryl Borden.

Beryl sighed. It seemed that Tommy was always on hand to share her big moments, but they were never harmonious. What a pity. As she helped the boys get the lunch spread she frequently stole surreptitious glances at Tommy's back and wished he'd be more friendly. It was such a nice back and—"Beryl Borden, you ought to be ashamed of yourself," she thought fiercely, "getting a thrill over a man's back. And Tommy isn't even a man—he's only a sappy kid."

She resolved to ignore him, and did while she looked after Angie. They'd rubbed him well and then wrapped him in the various assorted beach wraps they had among them. He was stretched out now on warm sand "to dry," as Beryl told him. And he was to lie quiet until he "was brittle." The doctor had given him something for the pain and he wasn't having such a bad time even though he wasn't fed.

Before the others ate Beryl said to him quietly: "You don't mind, do you, old man? You know I hate to impose upon you but it would be a shame to deny the others, wouldn't it? I'll keep my company and give my share to Tommy."

The spirit of sacrifice flamed high in Angie's breast. "Don't you do anything of the kind; you eat it yourself," he protested. "Guess you brought enough for him too, and I'm no cry baby."

"That's right; you're not," Beryl answered, with a pat on his shoulder. "You're a real man, Angie."

She offered him a drink of water but he made a face and shook his head. Then, having done all she could for Angie, she found herself unable to keep her mind off Tommy. He was taking no part in the preparations for lunch, but still sat, spinning his pebbles. She thought that he was thinking of Irene, and again she resolved not to give him another thought.

But presently she went over to him and offered him a sandwich. Tommy, unlike Angie, felt no call to martyrdom. He took the sandwich with a brief, "Thanks."

Beryl sat down beside him. She had had herself for the weakness but it was seldom she had a chance to sit beside Tommy nowadays, and if she covered her action with a quarrel he wouldn't suspect her real feelings, she told herself.

"I suppose," she began, "that you think you're a hero and I'm a fool. Well, you'll be a hero, all right, in the eyes of Angie's parents, but don't think you did any more than anyone who could swim would have done. As a matter of fact from its importance. You're a good swimmer and you know it. A kid in Angie's condition couldn't hamper you much."

Tommy turned and looked at her. "Give me another sandwich," he said placidly, "and don't talk so much."

Beryl jumped to her feet and turned her back on him. An angry retort trembled on her lips but she saw the absurdity of giving utterance to it. Tommy had no use for her whatever she did or said. Tears of humiliation smarted for release behind her eyelids which she held tightly lowered for a few seconds while she wondered which would mean the most or tell the least—to give him the sandwich or to ignore his request for it.

She hadn't made up her mind before one of the boys shouted: "Look! Here comes your car, Miss Beryl."

MUSKOGEE, Okla., May 5. - Custom marriages among the Creek Indians of eastern Oklahoma are "too common," according to a report made by C. M. Blair, special Indian bureau investigator.

"In recent years, Indian custom marriages have meant no ceremony at all. People just start living together and break off without any legal divorce at all. This is found too often, even among the young Creeks, who have been fairly well educated and ought to know better," the investigator said.

HOOVER WILL HONOR HARDING AT DEDICATION

By RALPH TETSORTH
United Press Staff Correspondent
MARION, O., May 5. — Nearly three years after completion of the $750,000 memorial to President Warren C. Harding, definite preparations are being made for its dedication.

President Hoover will deliver the dedication address. The ceremonies have been set for June 16, although the date may be changed at the request of the president.

Former President Calvin Coolidge, who became chief executive following the death of Harding on Aug. 2, 1923, is to accompany President Hoover here for the dedication. It is probable that Coolidge will give a brief address. He is honorary president of the Harding Memorial Association.

Hoover's Itinerary
The itinerary of Hoover's trip to the Midwest probably will take him to Columbus, O., on the morning of June 16 to review a parade of Civil War veterans attending the annual encampment of the Ohio G. A. R. organization. Marion is 45 miles from Columbus.

President Hoover also is to speak at the dedication of the Lincoln Memorial at Springfield, Ill., on June 17.

Acceptance by the president recently of an invitation to participate in the dedicatory ride ended a three years' effort by members of the memorial association to arrange a date for the final tribute to Harding.

The first attempt was made in 1928. President Coolidge was asked to take part in the dedication, but was quoted as suggesting it should not be done during the presidential campaign year. Coolidge was succeeded in office before further plans could be made for his participation in the ceremony.

Although it was not officially confirmed, it was understood that Mr. Hoover was invited to dedicate the memorial soon after he became president. Delays in choosing a date were numerous, and for varied reasons.

Delays Irksome
These frequent delays became irksome to those interested in the matter. The climax was reached last October at a meeting of the memorial association when Harry M. Daugherty, attorney general in President Harding's cabinet, presented a motion impugning the motives of those who had avoided making an agreement on the date of the dedication.

As a result plans for the dedication were suspended for a time. The motion was said to have been aimed at former President Coolidge, President Hoover, and associates of the late president, who at that time had declined to take official action towards recognizing the monument.

The Ohio Republican organization became interested in the negotiations and indicated that immediate dedication should be sought. In an exchange of letters between officers of the memorial association and Republican state leaders, the former inferred that no help was needed in the arrangements and, furthermore, that it was to be a non-political event in honor of Marion's distinguished citizen.

Newspaper Comment
Newspapers over the country commented on the distasteful situation with caustic editorials. The memorial association condemned these and other published articles relating to Harding's private life.

Daugherty is a member of the memorial association, the officers of which are Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, president; J. F. Prendergast, vice-president; C. B. King, second vice-president; Dr. Charles W. Sawyer, third vice-president; Hoke Donithen, secretary, and A. W. Mellon, treasurer.

Work on the beautiful marble memorial colonnade was started in 1926. The cornerstone was laid the same year, but construction was not completed until 1929. The landscaping work and boulevard system of the 10-acre plot surrounding the memorial was not finished until last year.

When President Harding died in 1923, his body was placed in a mausoleum in the Marion cemetery. Mrs. Harding died Nov. 21, 1924, and her body was placed beside that of her husband. In 1927, the bodies of both were placed in a concrete sarcophagi within the new memorial.
