DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

WARNING TO MEDDLERS:—He that passeth by, and meddleth with strife belonging not to him, is like one that taketh a dog by the ears.—Proverbs 26: 17.

HARD YEAR ON STATESMEN.

It's a hard year on the statesmen. Premier Inukai, of Japan was shot to death Sunday by a gang of young military terrorists who crashed into his home shooting down guards, while the 77-year-old head of the Japanese government was talking with a visitor. The terrorists, some of them young naval officers, were dissatisfied with the way in which foreign and internal affairs were being conducted. They concluded to remedy the situation with pistols. Japan, like other nations, is between the devil and the deep blue sea. The devil is the difficulties in China and Manchuria where the national weal demands that Japan have peaceful opportunities for trade expansion and economic intercourse. The deep blue sea lies all around the Nipponese islands where heavy population pressure and economic distress are problems that baffle the government. It looks like it means war at home or war abroad and Japan is in no position for either.

Ten days ago President Paul Doumer, of France was shot to death. The motive was different but the underlying causes are the same. International unrest in large quantities is making for turbulent conditions in even the most secure of nations. Our own country and Great Britain have been more fortunate but not because they are more free of dissatisfaction and the revolutionary spirit. In America radicalism has a better opportunity to blow off the steam and relieve the pressure. In Great Britain Hyde Park is the safety valve.

HOOVER AND THE TARIFF BILL.

A democratic house and a coalition senate enacted a tariff bill and sent it to the White House. It stripped the president of his power to revise schedules "whenever necessary." A veto was anticipated when the bill was enacted. Well, the expected happened. The veto was sent in, the house sustained it, and that's that. Indeed the veto message was a vigorous defense of the Hawley-Smoot tariff act with the advice given to the democratic leaders the higher the tariff the more secure the protection for the American people.

SUMNERS FOR THE DEBENTURE PLAN.

Rep. Hutton W. Sumners of Texas has revised the old scheme of export debentures for farm products as a remedy for agricultural conditions created, he contends, by an arbitrarily sliding tariff. The sliding export debenture plan was killed by an American congress in the days of the lame ducks after the president had promised a veto. Now many republican senators and representatives from the West are clamoring for the plan which had the endorsement of the national grange. By the way, the president of the national grange, a republican dry, was defeated for the United States senate in the Ohio primary by a republican wet and this too by a very large majority.

WHERE SMITH TOOK IT ON THE NOSE.

Peter Witt of Cleveland is a very noted Ohio democrat and in days ago was a lieutenant of Newton D. Baker and the lamented Tom L. Johnson. Witt is a Smith enthusiast. He had been a power in Cleveland politics. He went out to capture six delegates in the three congressional districts in that city pledged to the candidacy of the New York stopper. His slate was smashed to fragments. Governor White won the delegates, with the understanding that if Governor White failed on the fourth ballot and the deadlock continued, Newton D. Baker of Cleveland will be trotted out to break it. This is the open season for smashing deadlocks and stoppers as well as the plans of the bi-partisan board of control with headquarters on Manhattan island.

Calvary Officer Likes Aviation But He Is Still Faithful to the Horse Service

By W. W. COPELAND United Press Staff Correspondent FORT WORTH, May 16.—Aviation would be the choice of Col. Selah R. E. (Tommy) Tompkins, once known as the "cussingest" Cavalry officer of the United States army, if he were entering the service today. The 68-year-old bearded idol of the seventh Cavalry is nursing a broken leg in a hospital here. The circumstances of the accident cause the famous officer to draw heavily upon his drill ground vocabulary to express his feelings. After 43 years of Indian wars, Philippine insurrections and Mexican border warfare without a scratch he broke his leg spitting from a window. "There's nothing like feeling a good horse under you but aviation offers the thrills today," said Col. Tompkins. "This may sound funny from an old bloke who fell only nine feet out of an apartment window and broke his leg." He inserted several man-sized "cuss" words. "Yes, I guess I was the cussingest officer in the army," he said. "I fought in the days when officers gave orders out in the open, not by telephone in dugouts. 'I had a reputation of being pretty hard boiled. When I spoke to the men they didn't need an interpreter. I didn't wet nurse them. They all like me

In the Political Arena

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD

Damon and Pythias were never closer than Franklin D. Roosevelt and Alfred Emanuel Smith and this for a period covering more than 30 years. Roosevelt was born into an aristocratic home up state while Smith first opened his eyes in a tenement building on the famous East Side of Manhattanville. Roosevelt had all the advantages that family prestige and finance could bestow while Smith fought his way from the sidewalks of New York to the governorship of that state and in time become the national standard bearer of the democratic party for president. These widely known leaders first cemented their friendship under the dome of the capitol at Albany where Roosevelt was a state senator and Smith a state representative. Roosevelt is neither an autocrat nor a hide-bound aristocrat. He has all the simplicity and democracy of Thomas Jefferson and he is as close to the people of his state as if he had begun life a street seller of newspapers in the metropolis of New York.

Smith served four terms as governor. He had broken all records in the history of the state. Those who know best say that no man was closer to him in the bonds of friendship than Roosevelt, and no man put greater efforts to place the name and achievements of Smith before the American people as a man who had all the qualifications of a statesman and leader fitted in every way to be chief magistrate of the nation. Roosevelt made the three nominating speeches submitting the name and urging the candidacy of his fellow New Yorker. First in the city of San Francisco in 1920; second in the city of New York in 1924 at the famous Madison Square Garden convention; and again in 1928 on the sacred soil of Texas in the city named for the Texas liberator. In that year Franklin D. Roosevelt was drafted for governor. He was drafted by Smith. He was drafted from a sick bed. He finally yielded to the personal pleadings of his friends of the years and accepted a democratic nomination in order to assist in carrying the state of New York for the Happy Warrior of his dreams and his tongue. Smith lost New York. Roosevelt carried the state by a large majority. Roosevelt served two years and was given a second nomination. Again he swept the state by 775,000 majority and carried up-state, which is staunchly republican, as well as all the boroughs of Greater New York by a heavy majority. Then the parting of the ways came. Roosevelt's victories and Smith's defeat for president had a vast deal to do with it. Naturally Roosevelt listened to his friends of years friends who were loosed to him then they were to the Happy Warrior. Smith's advisers were not the advisers of Roosevelt. Politically speaking, they were in another camp. John J. Raskob and his coterie of financiers or captains of industry the nation over never did take kindly to Roosevelt in his policies of government or his altruistic ideas and ideals relative to the forgotten man "or the dog in the ditch." Roosevelt permitted his friends to enter him as a candidate for the democratic presidential nomination. This the country over. Those who are close to Smith saw their opening. They forced the issue. They advised the man who had become a noted national leader that his was the voice that should be hearkened to by the democrats of the nation and not the governor who had carried New York in the campaign. Where Smith went down in defeat and then carried it a second time by the largest majority ever given a democratic nominee for office. It must be true that from the beginning of time the ambitions of men have wrecked friendships and organizations and governors while the rivalries and jealousies of men have even been found among the greatest minds as well as the greatest leaders of all the ages.

It is ancient history to recite what has taken place since the parting of the ways of the former Damon and the former Pythias of the empire state of the East. It was very late in the day when Roosevelt was away out in front that Smith entered the campaign as an active candidate bent upon stopping the rising Roosevelt tide and to prevent if possible the nomination of the New York governor. He carried certain New England states. He picked up a handful of delegates in Pennsylvania. Beyond this he made no showing the nation over. His plunge into the contest in California was

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

By RODNEY DUTCHER NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—The one sure way to get the prohibition issue out of politics would be to get a Prohibition Party organized to contest the Democrats and Republicans. That is a course which leaders of dry organizations have been threatening to take, more or less openly, in case both major parties lay moist planks in their 1932 platforms, and the wets are enthusiastic over that idea. Leaders of the wets would like nothing better than to segregate under one political banner all voters who consistently vote dry, ahead of everything else. Such a move presumably would further weaken such hold as the Anti-Saloon League and affiliated organizations still have on Republicans and Democrats.

Nevertheless, if both Republican and Democratic parties "go wet," it would seem to leave the dries rather in a hole, with little to do except to confine themselves to an attempt to hold their lines in the congressional elections—unless they formed the threatened new party.

Might Lack Leaders

IT is more or less amusing to speculate on what sort of a party the dries would have and how far it might get. Few important officeholders or other politicians would be lured in, although some of the "Hoovercrat" leaders in 1928 might report for duty.

The miserable fate of most of the Democratic leaders who bolted Smith for Hoover would be an adequate object lesson, if any were needed, for such officials now politically dry as might be asked to give up their political affiliations and firmly entrenched, machine-backed positions to follow the new party.

Who Would They Nominate?

PRESUMABLY the party's presidential candidate would not be Bishop Cannon, Dr. Clarence True Wilson or F. Scott McBride. On first thought, at least, the business of nominating a candidate who would accept and who would have an extraordinary gamble but he won his point. He prevented his former friend and leader from winning a victory on the Golden Strand. He made it possible for the 44 delegates to be planted in the bag of a Texan. He was exultant in the hour of the defeat of Roosevelt on the Golden Coast and blithely announced that the stopping game had been successfully played and that a deadlocked convention was in sight.

Theodore Roosevelt made William Howard Taft a republican president of the United States. This in 1908. Then it was that the famous Roosevelt of the family of the elephant made his trip around the world. It was conceded by all familiar with the facts that Taft owed his nomination and election to Roosevelt. Then what happened? Taft in office listened to friends and advisers who were not the close friends and advisers of the republican warlike of that period. Roosevelt's conservation policies were sidetracked. Perhaps all this was as it should have been. Roosevelt returned from his trip around the world. His ambition was boundless. He had been a king-maker but he could not control the king of his making and soul and mind. His heart became saturated with envy or hate as well as disgust and distrust. He sent the order down any strong personal popular pull as against the ramified political machinery of the major parties seems to present little difficulty. No presidential nominee of the old Prohibition Party ever drew more than 260,000 votes. A 1932 candidate probably would do much better, even in proportion to the total vote, but it is hard to believe that he could carry a single state. The Prohibition Party used to have platforms covering most of the day's important issues, often endorsing advanced progressive legislation aside from dry measures. But the dry cause was its chief stimulus. Platforms called for "righteous uprising and indignant and effective rebuke" for presidents who drank or served wine in the White House. Many of the foremost progressives of this day are dry, including Norris, Borah and other western senators. But it is to be doubted whether any joint program of prohibition and progressivism could ever be worked out to the satisfaction of both groups. A lot of progressives are wet and many dries are reactionary.

You Can't Laugh It Off

ORGANIZING a third party also costs plenty of money and the bigger a party you try to organize, the more it costs. The dries have been having money trouble, as have most other groups trying to raise cash.

But if a dry third party really is established, it probably won't do to try laughing it off. Even though the effect would be almost certainly damaging to prohibition through final loss of the dry dictatorship over major parties, a dry ticket might draw off just enough votes to change the normal result in some contests between the two parties.

That sort of thing has been tried in several state contests, sometimes successfully against Republicans, and if Hughes could have had the prohibitionist vote in California in 1916 he would have carried the state and been elected president over Wilson.

Some such similar fate might fall to either the Republican or Democratic nominee in case a dry party should be organized for the election this November.

the line that Taft should not be given a second term. He made good his threat. In the city of Chicago in 1912 he organized his famous bull moose party and led the history-making bolt which is memorable in the annals of the political life of America. He split the republican party from end to end. Woodrow Wilson walked in. Any respectable democrat would have walked in so large was the opening made by the leader of the bull moose republicans who turned upon Taft and politically destroyed him. Taft ran a miserable third. He was not only defeated but humiliated. Damon Roosevelt threw Pythias Taft to the wolves in the scramble. Now Franklin Delano Roosevelt and Alfred E. Smith the Damon and Pythias of the democracy in recent years are said to be as wide apart as the poles and ready for the combat to come in the closing days of June. A fourth of the series of articles will be devoted to the extraordinary entrance of Speaker John N. Garner in the free for all race for the presidential nomination prize.

TEXAS TOPICS

By RAYMOND BROOKS

AUSTIN, May 16.—Slighting disregard for state rights and the ultimate death blow to the state banking systems of the nation are seen by Texas Banking Commr. James Shaw in the Glass bill before the United States senate—a bill he does not believe will be permitted to become a law.

The bill would allow federal reserve banks to establish branches, even in states whose laws forbid branch banking, and across state lines.

Texas prohibits branch banking, and the wisdom of its course has been fully sustained.

Then the bill would tend to spread federal supervision to all banking, and thus centralize and dominate the banking of the nation in the hands of a small group in Washington.

If Mr. Shaw doesn't blame the federal reserve system with destroying the values of American land, livestock and property, there are plenty of Texans who will do it for him.

National banking has not made as much progress as state banking in recent years, according to figures Commissioner Shaw quoted:

In March, 1931 the 15,985 state banks had combined capital accounts of $5,950,000,000, while the 6935 national banks had $3,778,000,000. The combined deposits of the state banks were $34,268,000,000, against $22,344,000,000 for the national banks.

The records show that from June 30, 1919, to March 25, 1931, the total assets of state banks in the United States increased by $16,721,000,000, and during the same period, the assets of national banks increased $7,327,000,000.

"It is therefore apparent," he said, "that the public of the United States has complete confidence in the state banks of this country."

JUMPS INTO BOAT

GRANT PASS, Ore., May 16.—A large Chinook salmon actually leaped into the rowboat of J. Schwartz of Klamath Falls, as he rowed down the Rogue River, near here. Schwartz leaped astride the fish and subdued it after taking a good thumping.

GREAT FISHERMAN.

GRANT PASS, Ore., May 16.—One of the confirmed salmon anglers of this section is S. W. Phillips, 85-year-old veteran of the Civil War. The "Dean of Rogue River Fishermen" caught the limit of three Chinooks, one of them weighing 35 pounds, on a recent half-day trip.

TURKEYS INCREASE.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal. 16.—Wild turkeys "planted" in Northern California a few years ago are increasing rapidly, according to reports received by the division of fish and game. On one ranch, where they were completely protected, they trebled in number each year, one report said.

the MAN HUNTERS

BY MABEL McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Susan Cary, 30 and beautiful, has become engaged to marry Ernest Heath, her former employer. She is secretly in love with Bob Dunbar who is said to have an "understanding" with Denise Aokroyd, a girl of his own set. Heath's wife has just secured a Reno divorce, Susan's chief motive in promising to marry Heath is the desire to provide for the future of her aunt Jessie, who has cared for her since childhood. Her aunt is ill now and Heath has arranged to send her south. Susan is staying with the Miltons, old friends. Ben Lampman, an old suitor, shoots at Heath one night in a fit of jealousy, injuring him slightly. Lampman then turns the gun on himself. After several days of illness the doctor announces that Lampman will recover. Heath takes Susan to the theater.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXVIII

The curtain had risen on the first act when Susan and Ernest Heath drifted down the aisle of the theater. More than one head turned to look at the tall girl in the regally simple wrap of brown fur. There were one or two whispers as Heath was recognized. He had forgotten his original caution and desire to avoid publicity in his eagerness to take Susan about. Although impatient for the marriage to take place he had agreed to wait for her aunt's return.

Now conscious of the craned necks and the whispers, he felt only a glow of pride. The girl was so beautiful! She had a look of race about her.

Susan leaned forward absorbed in the play, and the man watched her with interest. It was not until the curtain dropped again and the lights came on that Susan drew a deep breath and returned to reality.

"Oh, so much!" The color came up in her cheeks and her eyes were starry. "Don't you?"

"Well, it's all right, only all these British comedies sound alike."

"They may to you but I've never seen one before and I think it's wonderful," she confided with a happy little laugh.

Susan loosened her wrap and leaned back, looking about her for the first time. As by a magnet her gaze was drawn to a little group in the box just to the left. Irresistibly her eyes clung to the three people balancing on the little gilt chairs. She knew that girl in black, with her bright hair combed demurely back from a brow of camellia whiteness. Susan's heart thumped as she realized the identity of the fair-haired young man whose head was turned away from her. Try as she might, she could not take her eyes away.

As though impelled by Susan's gaze the man turned and stared at her. For the fraction of an instant something quivered between them. Then the girl inclined her head with dignity and looked swiftly away. Her pulses were racing now. This was just as she had dreamed.

"Someone you know?" Heath asked curiously, noting the quality of her bow.

"I never knew her," she answered him. She was fighting desperately for control. All her hair defenses seemed shattered by this encounter.

Meantime, in the box another little drama was being acted. The bright haired girl in black had followed the direction of Bob Dunbar's glance and had seen him flush. She laughed coolly.

"Oh—ho, your little friend turns up again!" she said. "Who's that with her?" Denise leaned forward, frankly staring at the glimpse of Heath's aristocratic profile she glimpsed softly. "As I live and death!" she muttered, "she's bagged Old Propriety herself!" She saw Bob's nose stiffen and return with zest to the attack. "Look what she's wearing," she said, enjoying herself thoroughly now. "Sables! Mother said when she was in Madame Eliza's the other day the talk was that old Heath had a girl around town now."

Fiercely Bob interrupted her. "Don't be a fool," he said. "You know Susan Cary isn't that kind."

Denise shrugged. "You know more about her than I do, Smarty." She turned her attention to the other member of the party, a youth who looked like a professional tango dancer.

During the second interval Susan determinedly kept her eyes away from the box, but just as the lights went off, quite against her will, her

YOUNGEST ASPIRANT

SHERMAN NELSON, twenty-five, of Comroe and Houston, today announced his candidacy for Congressman at Large, subject to the Democratic Primary in July.

He states that his platform will be "Give the little man a break," and that he is well qualified to wage an intensive campaign, in the House, for unemployment insurance, bonus payments immediately, more rigid enforcement of the immigration laws, and legislation in general, designed to help the small business men out of their present dilemma and at the same time looking forward to drastic tax cuts, as well as lowering tariffs, which are seriously hampering our foreign trade.

His interests are broad enough to give him a keen insight into the present troubles, of small and large business enterprises alike, being an editor by profession and having an interest in the lumbering, farming, construction and oil industries.

Nelson is an ardent supporter of John Garner, for president.

Letters From Our Readers

To the Editor:

Governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed, to the end that every citizen shall have equal opportunity to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Only when the people are in control of their government is this true! Men and women, are you in control of your government here in Texas?

Gigantic combinations of wealth have wrested that control from you so completely and thoroughly that today the people of Texas have little or nothing to say, or do about their government. They tell you what price you are to receive for every iota you produce. They likewise tell you what share of the taxes shall be, and that share has become such a burden that you can't pay it any longer. Do you know that the expenses at Austin have gone from something like eight million dollars a year in Jim Hogg's time to more than a hundred millions a year now? Do you know that, only approximately 40 per cent of the highway funds ever reach the road-beds in Texas? Do you know that last year it cost the taxpayers approximately $15,000 a day to operate its fleet of trucks and autos alone? Many of the highway department agents ride in $5,000 Lincolns and the department pays for everything. People can you stand it any longer? You have surrendered your control of government to the special interests who escape their just share of taxation until the common people of Texas pay approximately 80 per cent of all expense of government, that falls utterly to govern, so far as you are concerned, but grants special privileges to the rich and powerful.

Small farm and city property, your homes and mine continue to bear the burden of taxation, when two-thirds of the wealth of this state go free? Shall we continue to support more than eighty commissions, bureaus and overlapping departments of government, who are in no way responsible to you or me, as to what they do or how they spend our money? Shall we tamely submit to the plunder of our natural resources by foreign corporations, who are daily sucking the very life blood from us? These contemptible, conscienceless, cold-blooded monsters are robbing us of our natural resources and go free from all obligations that you and I are forced to assume. Shall we lie supinely on our backs and allow this thing to continue? No! A thousand times No! We cannot do it, if we would. I can't pay, you can't pay any longer. Then what are we going to do about it? One thing alone can be done, that is go to the polls 100 per cent and turn the rascals out. Let the people of Texas take charge. That's what must be done!

I have the utmost confidence in the final decision of the people. Aroused, they always meet every crisis, they will meet it now. Permit me at this time to bring to your thought the name of a man who stands four square for the return of government to the people of Texas. That man is Tom P. Hunter, of Wichita Falls, democratic candidate for governor of the greatest state in the United States. Think, as you have never thought before, you must redeem your government now. A year, two years, will be too late. Consider well the men you send to the legislature, make them tell you what they stand for and then see to it that they live up to their promises. Select with great care, men to fill all the offices at Austin. Clean house from top to bottom this year. The new crowd will respect you then. The old guard have no respect for you or anybody, other than their big bosses. Let the people of Texas take charge.

JUDGE J. W. RADCLIFFE, Moran, Texas.

ALBINO DEER SEEN

PORTLAND, Wash., May 16.—An albino deer, quite tame, was seen in the Home Valley district, near here, recently, by Postmaster H. A. Miller and others. It was not a perfect albino, as the head was natural colored. The body was snow white.

ANGLER HOOKED SELF.

PORTLAND, Ore., May 16.—Robert White crept up on his favorite fishing hole on the opening day. He carefully flipped his hook into the water. He felt a sharp tug on the line snapped in his left eyelid.

G. A. R. POST TO QUIT.

ALBANY, Ore., May 16.—With only seven members left alive, and only three of those able to attend meetings, McPherson Post of the G. A. R. will surrender its charter this summer after the state encampment at Corvallis. Several hundred men once were members of the half-century old post.

BAUGHMAN IS CANDIDATE FOR CONGRESS

Chas. E. Baughman, former state commissioner markets and warehouses has announced as a candidate for congressman-at-large, place 3.

Mr. Baughman was educated in Lamar county, taught school in the same school where he finished, engaged in the cotton seed oil mill and cotton gin business as auditor, being promoted to the management of a number of cotton gins. He was with United States government during World War as recruiting officer-state commissioner markets and warehouses 1923-25 and grand chancellor knights of Pythias 1924-25.

During his two terms of office he was successful in putting into operation a goodly number of important and new phases of departmental work. He was instrumental in having the federal reserve system reorganized, the receipt of the state bonded warehouse on an equal basis with the receipt of the federally licensed warehouse as a basis for credit with the intermediate credit banks. He was also instrumental in having the state fire insurance commission authorize a fifteen per cent reduction in the state bonded warehouses. The number of the state warehouses increased from 52 to 557 during his administration.

He instituted the Texas radio market news service.

He was successful in having the governor and the prison management accept the services of his department in the grading, classing, weighing and sale of prison farm cotton. The first year's efforts in this phase of cooperative work resulted in approximately $100,000 profits on the prison farm cotton, this above the spot cotton quotations for like grade and class.

Platform: The United States should enter into Reciprocity Trade agreements with other nations to the end that we may be enabled to more profitably dispose of our surplus agricultural products.

All national banks should guarantee, by good and sufficient bonds, all depositors against loss through possible failure of the banking institution. The National Banking Act should further be amended so as to provide for the appointment of Liquidating Agents by the Federal Reserve banks, each district bank to supervise liquidating work.

The national houses of representatives should be reduced to one-third its present number, the salary cut to $7,500 the present twenty cents per mile, to and from the sessions, cut to five cents and the term of office made four years.

The income tax law should have three amendments tacked to it. First amend so as to simplify the blanks used in making reports of income make them so a citizen of average intelligence may read and understand how to fill out. The law should further be amended so as to require income tax authorities to report income for taxes where such reporting a citizens having failed to report income fortaxes, where such citizen may have received money from questionable source. The salaries of all state officials, and employees, throughout the nations, should be subject to the provisions of the income tax law on annual basis with the salaries of private citizens.

Federal injunctions should never be granted in cases where the state exercise any manner of administrative jurisdiction until the highest court of the state shall have had opportunity to rule on the merits of the case.

CISCO GIRL IS WINNER IN RADIO CONTEST

GAINESVILLE, May 16. — Miss Lela Mae White, of Cisco, Texas, was winner of third prize, a $100. scholarship to Brenau college conservatory, in the Brenau radio scholarship contest, sponsored by Brenau college. The announcement was made over Atlanta Journal Station WSB, last Wednesday afternoon, at 5 o'clock Central Standard Time, the regular weekly Brenau hour. The awards were made to writers of the best essays on the subject: "What I Have Learned About Music Over Radio." There were four others who received third prize of $100-scholarship each.

The Brenau radio broadcasts on Wednesday afternoons are conducted by Brenau Music Conservatory faculty or student members. An unexpectedly large number of essays was received from twelve different states.

Miss White is a member of the graduating class of Cisco high school this year. The essay on which the award was made is:

"WHAT I HAVE LEARNED ABOUT MUSIC OVER THE RADIO."

The person who goes to hear Grand Opera today and falls into blissful slumber at the beginning of the second act is no longer excused. His radio is willing to give him an adequate knowledge of classical music, if he'll only "tune in."

I must confess a lack of interest in good music until three years ago when I first heard Walter Damrosch over the radio. On that first day Mr. Damrosch introduced his instruments by name as if they were individuals. He spoke in a unique voice, as vibrant and distinct as was any of his instruments. He told of the themes to be found in the Nut-Cracker Suite. He told of the story to be found in the playing of the number. I had never thought of music representing a story. To me it had been a mass of incoherent notes, causing many unpleasant hours of work and taking me nowhere in particular. My radio and Mr. Damrosch that day taught me music was something living.

Then came the Atwater Kent Audition! My interest had grown so that year in my piano until I had asked a voice teacher to allow me to do some of her accompanying for her pupils. She seemed glad to help me and so hard did I work that I was allowed to play for one of her students in the audition, in our home town. It was just as well that we didn't place, as I had the opportunity of listening in on that contest from Dallas and I couldn't fall to see wherein I was a miserable accompanist, a conceded student of piano and had much yet to learn. There were some lovely musicians playing for the contests that night and instead of discouraging me, they made me know I had the same right to be just as good someday. In fact, I meant to be better. Again, radio had scored! I was inspired as never before.

In March, nineteen hundred and thirty, I happened to hear Mischa Levitska from New York City in a short program. His name was new to me, but as he played I felt something in his playing—I was learning to appreciate. He played a Chopin number, I had been trying to play. What a difference! I longed to see him and imagine as to the playing of different parts of it. Little did I realize that in five weeks time he was to act as the judge of a piano contest in a city nearby and that I would play in that contest.

The contest came and went and Levitska scarcely knew I was there, but to me he was an old friend, I had known him before!

In one short year the radio had taught me music was a living thing that inspired one's soul and could be appreciated by anyone interested enough to listen.

PARIS STYLES

By MARY KNIGHT

United Press Staff Correspondent

Paris May 16. — A new pink grey called "Dove's breast" is the feature of the Vera Borea little season collection just shown here. It is that delicate shade of one of the last rays of the setting sun caught for a second near a silver cloud that casts a very faint reflection upon it.

Madame Borea uses this color to rare advantage in an evening gown that looks like dotted Swiss done in Oraniza. With it she has designed a short taffeta jacket with enormous wing sleeves — not leg o'muttons — a new kind of winged-ness with puff rising off the shoulders and extending to the tip of the ears and continuing in diminishing-scale, down the sides of the jacket back and front.

W. D. Evans of Dallas is spending a few days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Evans.

Mrs. Etna Cockran of Alvord was a Cisco visitor this morning.

Leon Henderson and J. T. Whitehead visited friends in Abilene Saturday.

MCLINTON-RICHARDSON MARRIAGE ANNOUNCED.

The marriage of Mrs. Ben McClinton of Cisco to L. E. Richardson of Longview was solemnized in Fort Worth Saturday, Rev. Johnson of the First Methodist church of Fort Worth, performing the ceremony, it was announced here today.

Mr. Richardson, a well known attorney, formerly lived in Eastland where he was associated with Justice Funderburk in the firm of Funderburk and Richardson. He now resides at Longview where he is a member of the law firm of Carrigan, King, and Richardson. Mrs. Richardson, well known here and especially prominent in musical circles, will not leave Cisco at the present time, it was stated. She will return to Cisco this weekend to resume her duties as a teacher of voice. Later, she will join her husband at Longview where they will make their home.

64 COUNTIES.

CHICAGO, May 16. — The International Students Association at the University of Chicago lists a membership of 865 from 64 counties representing 35 schools. Countries with the largest numbers are: China, 59; Philippine Islands, 51; Canada, 41; and the United States, 138. The three leading colleges, numerically, are the University of Chicago, Northwestern University.

RING FOR ANNIVERSARY.
WEST UNION, Ia., May 16.—The wedding ring of Mrs. Charles Wolf, lost 47 years ago, has been located in time for the Wolf golden wedding anniversary. Lost while Mrs. Wolf was working in a field three years after her marriage, the ring was turned up under a plow piloted by John Wenthold, who recognized the inscription on the gold band.

OLD CANNON FOUND.
PHILADELPHIA, May 16. — An old eight foot naval cannon, believed to be a relic of the Revolutionary War, was unearthed by workmen constructing the new subway and tube under the Schuylkill river. The ancient gun was found buried 40 feet beneath the mud of the river bank. The gun has a three inch bore and had been spiked.

BUSSES FOR VILLAGE.
CROWHURST, Surrey, England, May 16. — Although this village, the smallest in Surrey, is only 30 miles from London, it is three miles from a railroad station; five miles from a movie house; has no bus service; has no shops; and has no gas or electricity. But the villagers have tired of their seclusion and the annual parish meeting has asked an omnibus company to provide a service.

ANCIENT TEETH.
LONDON, May 16.—The Natural History Museum has been presented with three teeth of an ancient elephant, each weighing between three and four pounds, unearthed in a gravel pit near Gravesend, Kent. Ancient elephants roamed the Thames Valley long before the mammoth, and were ancestors of the straight-tusk elephants of Africa and India.
