MORE GAME AND FISH

For several years Texas has been building up a chain of fish hatcheries. These, now in operation, are serving some sections by restocking streams with fish.

Wild game, notably deer and turkey, have spread and developed with the aid of a comparatively effective degree of work by the state of distributing the wild game for propagation.

Texas emphasis, due to the immense area of the state, has had to be laid on protection and conservation.

Satisfactory laws for both landowners and hunters have made it possible for other than rich sportsmen to hunt.

The outlook is fine for future better supplies of fish, fowl and game.

FARMERS RATIFY

Minnesota, one of the great wheat producing states and having, in consequence, a large rural population, has ratified the child labor amendment to the federal constitution.

The plain English of the Pierson decision is that a contract cannot be arbitrarily voided in Texas.

AN AMERICAN CITY SKYLINE

Sen. Hiram Johnson "Knows Where to Find His Hat"

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD

Sen. Hiram Johnson has returned to Washington from his California home. He is a native son of the golden west.

Hiram Johnson is the son of a farmer. Old Groves Johnson represented a California district in the national house of representatives for more than 30 years.

He believed "in the rule of the few with incidental protection of the many". He passed out of the picture.

He will be a candidate or re-election in the near future.

This is what he said to the Washington correspondents who are ever close to the Californian and have intense admiration for the man.

This newspaper does not concede the point that the republic is going to hell economically or otherwise.

There is a vast army of republicans who do not belong in the party of Ogden Mills, Herbert Hoover and the standpatters of the nation.

There is a vast army of democrats who did not belong in the old bipartisan organization which controlled the democracy or rather the democratic machine, in bygone days.

Evolution is the order of life. Bogus party trademarks are dead in America.

They are living in a new civilization and the adjustment process is hurrying on regardless of the effect it has on the individual or the human organization, industrial nor financial, in the social order.

PENNSYLVANIA LEADERS KNOW PROTECTION GAME

Many years ago the lawmakers of Pennsylvania crystallized into law a state protective tax on anthracite coal.

Read this from the land of William Penn and that distinguished reformer, Gifford Pinchot: "The senate has passed and sent to the house a bill prohibiting all outdoor advertising of liquors, wines, cordials and malt beverages manufactured outside of Pennsylvania."

Pennsylvania has wineries, Pennsylvania the land of the Joseph R. Grundy is for "home first."

Through the Editor's Spectacles

The Daily News will have to call old Santa's special attention to this afternoon's pages which contain requests from his young friends that the old gentleman expected yesterday.

The printers had too much type to put in a limited space and in the course of the problem they overlooked these letters which, however, are appearing today.

Old Santa Claus is mighty real to them. We should be much better off were he that real to us.

Which reminds me that the Cisco Charity and Welfare association is offering each of you opportunity to play Santa Claus in your own right Thursday afternoon and Friday.

Mrs. Philip Pettit and Mrs. Charles Brown, secretaries of the association, are arranging Christmas parties for all of the children of destitute families which are being assisted by the association.

Fruit for the youngsters and stockings in which to place their gifts have already been obtained through the help of the high school students and the home-making department of that school.

The home-making (or domestic science) department of the school under direction of Miss Juanita Bounds, is making the net stockings as a part of their projects.

Here is the problem, however:

There isn't enough candy. About 10 pounds is available. Forty pounds is needed.

You folks who want to play Santa Claus in a really effective way dig up a pound or two of candy each and some toys and send them to the welfare headquarters in the Simon building at once.

Incidentally five of the domestic science department girls will help Mrs. Pettit and Mrs. Brown entertain their young guests with songs and games.

It promises to be a really satisfactory way of spending an hour with old Santa Claus.

For the past three days I have been trying to get in touch with J. A. Bearman without success.

Where in the Sam Hill, Jake, are you? Why don't you come up and see me some time?

While the new government long-range protection-distribution planning is being shaped up, the basic difference between this plan of governmental control and other plans is becoming distinct.

As explained in this conference, such a super-district could administer policing, health sanitation, engineering, welfare and charity activities, relieving simplified city and county set-nups of all this.

It was clear that the powers of the new Texas county home rule amendment would permit people now supporting conflicting and duplicating city and county services to adopt this metropolitan district plan.

Texas Topics

By RAYMOND BROOKS

AUSTIN, Dec. 20 — A new concept, partially parallel to the merger of city and county governments, but with greater simplicity, was studied in the University of Texas conference of 11 metropolitan districts, held in Austin yesterday.

The idea is the superimposition of a metropolitan district administration over the existing city and county governments and placing in its control some of the important functions common to both.

Now when Maury Hughes at Dallas, Claude Follard at Austin, Walter D. Cline and Charles I. Francis at Wichita Falls, and Speaker Coke Stevenson, have their yes or no, the early crop will be a little nearer rounded up.

The UNKNOWN BLOND

BEGIN HERE TODAY DAVID BANXISTER undertakes to find out who killed TRACY KING. He works on the King case with GALEY, star reporter on the Post.

Among those suspected are JULIET FRANCE, blond, pretty and known to have visited KING shortly before his death; HERMAN SCRILLACH, a former King vaudelle actor. It is also known that MELVINA HOLLISTER, mid-level spook, had been untraced with KING recently.

AL DRUGAN, friend of King's, is dead in a wrecked automobile. Banxister persuades the police chief to let Juliet come to his aunt's home, ostensibly as a guest, on the theory that if the girl believes her free they can learn more about her.

DAISY CONNOR, maid in the Coleman home, tells Banxister and Banxister that on the night King was murdered his fiancée, DENISE LANE, telephoned PARKER COLEMAN twice between 8 and 9 o'clock, although Denise told police Coleman was at home at that time.

Banxister arrives home and finds a letter waiting for him. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXVI

THE handwriting was unfamiliar and the postmark blurred. Banxister was trying to make it out when he heard footsteps and turned.

"David!" Kate Hewlett exclaimed from the doorway. "Is anything wrong? Aren't you feeling well?"

Banxister laughed. "Why, of course. I'm all right."

Mrs. Hewlett looked relieved. "Oh," she said, "I saw you coming up the walk and it gave me a start. It's been so long since you've come in at this hour I thought something must have happened."

Banxister slipped the letter into his pocket. "Can't a fellow knock off early just one afternoon," he asked, "without breaking a leg or something for an excuse?"

"Of course you can," his aunt agreed. "Come on into the living room. I've been showing Juliet some old pictures—"

She led the way into the adjoining room. Juliet France sat on a low stool before the davenport, a half-old-fashioned photograph album in her lap. She looked up, smiling, as Banxister appeared.

"I've just been seeing the cutest picture of you," she informed him. Banxister took one look and stopped, horror-stricken. "Aunt Kate," he demanded, "I thought you promised me you'd never show anyone those baby pictures again? You said—"

Kate Hewlett's manner was unruffled. "Did I, David?" she asked. "Well, I must have forgotten. It was showing Juliet some of the old styles that used to be fashionable and we happened to come across those others. She agreed with me that they're real sweet."

He'd try not to show it. HIS aunt asked a question or two and he answered. Juliet France arose and went to the window.

"Why, it's snowing!" she exclaimed. "It started just before I caught the car to come home," Banxister told her. "It's not very cold, though."

"I love snow," the girl said. "I'd like to see it in it." "Well," Mrs. Hewlett suggested crisply, "why don't you and David go for a walk?" She turned to her nephew. "You could take her over to Winthrop Park. It's real pretty with the snow on the trees. I've been wanting Juliet to get out and see more of Tremont."

Banxister looked at the girl. "Would you like to go?" he asked. "I'd love it!"

Banxister got to his feet. "You'd better bundle up," he warned. "It's not cold but after being in the house all day you'll feel the difference."

"She can wear my sweater under her coat," Kate Hewlett said practically. "And my galoshes. I'll get them right out!"

Five minutes later they set out. The air was filled with the soft snow flakes, swirling and dancing. The prim row of houses on either side of the street with their prim trees and shrubs looked friendlier, more attractive through the faint haze of white.

"See," Banxister said, "it's not cold. The snow melts almost as soon as it touches the ground."

The girl caught several snow flakes on the green wool of her sleeve. "Aren't they beautiful?" she asked, holding the arm up.

They were, but Banxister was surprised to realize how long it had been since he had considered that. He remembered as a small boy in his first years at school discovering the intricate patterns of the snow flakes. Elaborate designs and each one different. He remembered a song they had sung in school about Jack Frost who came in the night and painted the window panes. It made him feel unaccountably young, younger than he had felt for years.

BANXISTER said on impulse, "I'll race you to the corner!" It was more than half of a long block but he finished only a step or two ahead. She came up, laughing and breathing deeply, her cheeks pink.

"Oh!" she said, "that was fun!" "Exercise is what I've been needing, I guess," he agreed. "Now that you're warmed up we can walk!"

Banxister adjusted his long, swinging stride to the girl's. "Let me know if I walk too fast for you," he cautioned.

"You won't!" Juliet set off briskly. The girl seemed content not to talk, as was Banxister. Presently they passed the corner lot where, in school days, his gang had played baseball. He remembered an amusing incident and told it. Then he went on, talking about kid stunts, about the good times and trials and heart breaks of those days. There was the time he and Bill Schwartz staged a turtle race and his turtle wandered into church. There was the time the whole gang worked for weeks, trying to save money for the circus, and then, the day before it opened, three of the boys came down with measles.

Juliet smiled and shook her head. (To Be Continued)

More Miles Per Gallon - More Power, Speed and Efficiency with Dual Carburetion - Greater Oil Economy

The performance and economy of the 1933 Ford V-8 have been the talk of thousands of motorists. Owners said: "Leave it alone, don't change it." Dealers said: "Impossible to improve it!" But we have improved it - in every direction. We started with the engine. The Ford V-8 for 1934 is more powerful, more efficient, easier to start in cold weather, yet it is the most economical Ford to operate ever built - largely because of the new Dual Carburetor and Dual Intake Manifold. Even in the coldest weather the V-8 engine warms up quickly and maintains an efficient operating temperature because of new thermostats in the waterline. Added engine refinements - get the details about all of them from the nearest Ford dealer - reduce oil consumption and further reduce operating and maintenance costs.

Clear-vision Ventilation - and the Windshield Opens

There's nothing to obstruct the view in the new Ford system of Clear-vision upholstery, new mouldings, new cove-type headlining, new instrument panel, new arm rests and new hardware. Swivel-type sun visors in De Luxe bodies prevent glare from front or side.

Fenders on all De Luxe cars are in color to harmonize with body colors. New enamel finish on all bodies and fenders has greater wearing quality and more enduring luster.

4 Transverse Springs - Comfort with Stability and Safety

Ford transverse springs provide the utmost stability and safety. Placed crosswise, they tend to prevent the body from tilting on uneven roads, and turns can be taken safely at relatively high speeds. Free and easy action of all four wheels is permitted because the outer flexible tips of the springs are attached to the axles. Thus the most sensitive parts of the springs receive road shocks first and absorb them before they reach the body. The advantages of the solid axle are retained.

Ventilation. It's built-in - simplicity itself. The same handle that raises the window glass also slides it back horizontally to the ventilating position, and then the forward motion of the car draws the air out of the body. Drafts are eliminated, passenger comfort is assured, and windshield will not fog in cold weather. Another interesting feature of the Ford system - the windshield can be opened! This, and the cowl ventilator, provide the additional air needed for hot-weather comfort.

LADIES AID ENTERTAINS. The Ladies Aid of the First Christian church entertained last evening with a supper at the church, honoring husbands of the Aid members. The bountiful feast, with turkey and accessories, was served in the banquet room of the church. A program was given, which included songs, prayers, a talk by Dr. David Tyndall, a vocal solo by Mrs. H. V. House, and talks by Aid members in which activities of the society were explained. A short business session was held, and proceeds from a "patch apron," which has been passed among members throughout the month of December, were announced. BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER NEA Service Staff Correspondent. WASHINGTON—The senator's most sensational Senate investigation—if it comes off—will probe the secrets of the munitions industry. The peace lobby is quietly working for it. Many in the administration's liberal group that you've been hearing so much about just would adore it. Roosevelt is a big navy man, but he also remembers that the munitions lobby licked his arms embargo bill—the one piece of legislation he asked for last spring and didn't get. (Hoover wanted it, too, though his secretary of war, Hurley, and Chief of Staff MacArthur lobbied against it.) The investigation would delve into: Stock ownership among public officials and guiders of public opinion. Financial support of militaristic organizations. Lobbying. Any efforts that may have been made to defeat the Geneva arms conference similar to those in 1927. Contributions to political parties. Volume of sales to Japan, China, and South America. Profits. The State Department would like to know more about the industry. Sometimes it receives reports of salesmen abroad believed to be stirring up wars. Recently it was discovered that Sir John Simon, representing the British at the disarmament conference, owned 1000 shares of Vickers' stock. Peace societies would anticipate interesting personal disclosures over here. There's dynamite in his effort. SISTER MARY'S RECIPES BY SISTER MARY NEA Service Staff Writer FOR centuries, rich foods and feasting have been traditional with the holidays, but too much sweet and rich food soon palls and plain, everyday fare must be forthcoming if a nourishing and adequate diet is maintained. New England boiled dinners, sauerkraut dinners, hearty soups, stews, plain salads and simple desserts will make the sumptuous holiday dishes doubly appreciated. Oysters are ideal for supper and luncheon parties. They are full of food value and very easily digested when properly cooked. Salt codfish is another possibility. In a chowder, made into balls with potatoes and baked in the oven or in a cream sauce garnished with hard cooked egg, its salty tang furnishes a pleasant contrast with the flavor of other foods. Navy bean soup, baked marrowfat beans and dried beans of all varieties in numerous dishes and combinations provide substantial and appetizing dishes for winter meals. Shredded cabbage with a French or sour cream dressing, carrot straws, crisp celery and new onions and radishes as the market offers them, make a welcome change from the regulation salads. Apples in almost any fashion make satisfactory desserts for such dinners. Apple sauce with ginger bread, baked apples with cream, apple snow, apple pie with cheese or one of the many apple puddings make an agreeable choice. Indian pudding, poor man's rice pudding and bread pudding are honey desserts that prove most acceptable by way of contrast with plum puddings and mince pies and fruit cakes and
