GIANT GAME TO BE PLAYED IN HUGE FIELD

SAN ANTONIO, Feb. 9.—A game with 4,400 players and a playing field of 100 square miles will get under way southwest of here in mid-May.

It will be a war game played by the ground troops and air squadrons of the United States Army.

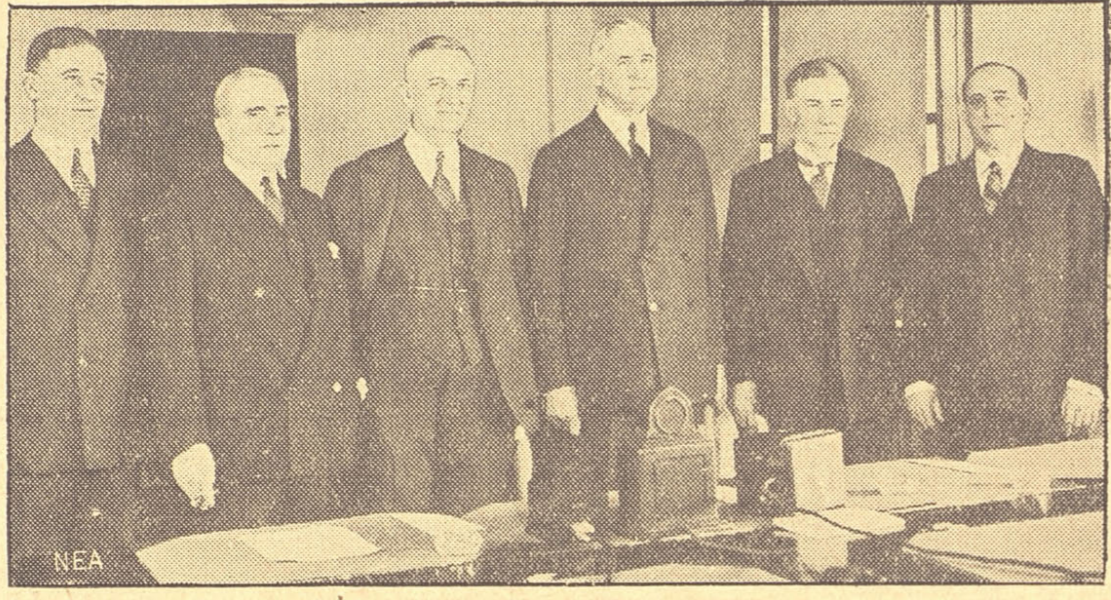

The game will have a wonderful playing field. The Frio river will form part of what will be designated as the frontier between enemy countries.

On one side in the battle of wits and simulated destruction will be the Third U. S. Infantry, the Second and Third U. S. Infantry, the Second ordnance companies, and the Second Medical Regiment.

Whether there will be a referee's decision has not been announced. One thing looked for in the game is a practical test of cavalry in modern warfare.

FEDERAL LAW ENFORCEMENT COSTS OVER 100 MILLIONS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—The federal government's efforts at law enforcement cost the people of the United States $101,612,362 a year, according to the budget statements for the fiscal year ending last June.

Bureau of Prohibition The Bureau of Prohibition, now a part of the department of justice, spent $9,436,646 last year, but this is far from being the total cost of federal administration of the liquor laws.

But the total is not yet reached. The coast guard spends much of its time and appropriations in anti-running activities. It is estimated that two-thirds of the coast guard's appropriation, or $20,362,994 should be charged to law enforcement.

Bookkeeping Riddle The fact that the government's system of bookkeeping is not devised so as to make things easy for those who want to argue either wet or dry. In fairness to the drys, however, it should be pointed out that the $26,265 spent on the enforcement of the caustic poison act last year was not a prohibition expenditure.

THE HIGH CALLING.—Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect.—Matthew 5: 48.

TAXES! TAXES! TAXES!

On January 18, Senator Watson broke a thirty-year rule of the senate by asking that a petition be read. The petition, presented by the Federation of American Business, said: "Today combined American governments are spending one-quarter or more of our national income. No nation can stand that drain and continue to function. . . . The business men of the country, regardless of party, demand that government cease its policy of meddling and repression and perform the political functions for which it was created."

On January 19, Senator Borah said that a reasonable reduction of salaries of governmental employees would save the taxpayers some $200,000,000 or $250,000,000 a year. He introduced a bill to reduce salaries of $5,000 or more by a 6 to 2 per cent, with the exception of the judiciary.

On January 19, Governor Moore of New Jersey presented a plan for reorganization of the state government, the abolition of 42 commissions and other measures designed to reduce governmental expenditures by millions of dollars. He said that the taxpayer needs aid and must be helped.

On January 19, J. A. Emery, representing the National Association of Manufacturers, in testimony before a house committee, said total expenditure of the states and federal government and local units was $13,500,000 to $14,000,000,000 in 1930, of which $10,250,000,000 was raised by taxes and the rest borrowed, representing deferred taxes. He urged broadening of the tax base and advocated that government abandon all unnecessary expenditures, adjust compensation in the government service, and eliminate unnecessary new projects.

On January 19, the New York Times, in a long lead editorial, said: "If the lavish measures proposed and backed with so much passionate and demagogic appeal were allowed to go through, they would ruin our public finance, and bring on disaster greater than any which the depression has led in its train. . . . Americans may as well make up their minds that they have no Great Father at Washington to relieve them from all their distresses."

Thus, taxation is becoming our foremost national issue. Excessive taxes threaten industrial development, home building, employment, the investment of capital, progress of all kinds. Those who are fighting against it are fighting in the interest of every citizen, no matter what his station in life may be.

ANOTHER RECORD FOR ELECTRICITY.

During 1931, the electric industry enjoyed a better year than did most other businesses. Its total sales of power were but slightly more than 4 per cent under 1930.

This record is pleasant for the industry itself to contemplate and it is likewise of importance to the public which is the principal beneficiary of stable conditions within a public service organization. Low priced power—during 1931 the rate continued to drop, as in other years—is made possible by the fact that the industry is responsibly assured of a steady market. It cannot lose any large percentage of its customers as can businesses selling a commodity less necessary to life as we know it today. It is, therefore, better able to uphold a uniform level of employment and wage scales.

This condition has likewise made the electric industry a favored investment. Its seasoned securities are not usually subject to fluctuations as violent as those of more speculative types of business, and the fact that utility bond and stock issues are subject to public regulation, strengthens the public's faith in their essential soundness. All in all, there is cause for general rejoicing that the electric industry survived as bad a year as 1931 without more serious damage.

RELATED PROBLEMS.

The silver problem has become inextricably involved with most of the other economic and social problems now troubling the world.

It is an amazing situation. Millions of people, in many countries, have seen their buying power drop to a fraction of its former level, purely because of the decline in the value of silver, caused by the general shift of nations to the gold standard. Now it has been found that the commerce of the world cannot be carried on with gold alone. There is not enough of it, and furthermore, the great bulk of the existing supply is controlled by two countries, the United States and France.

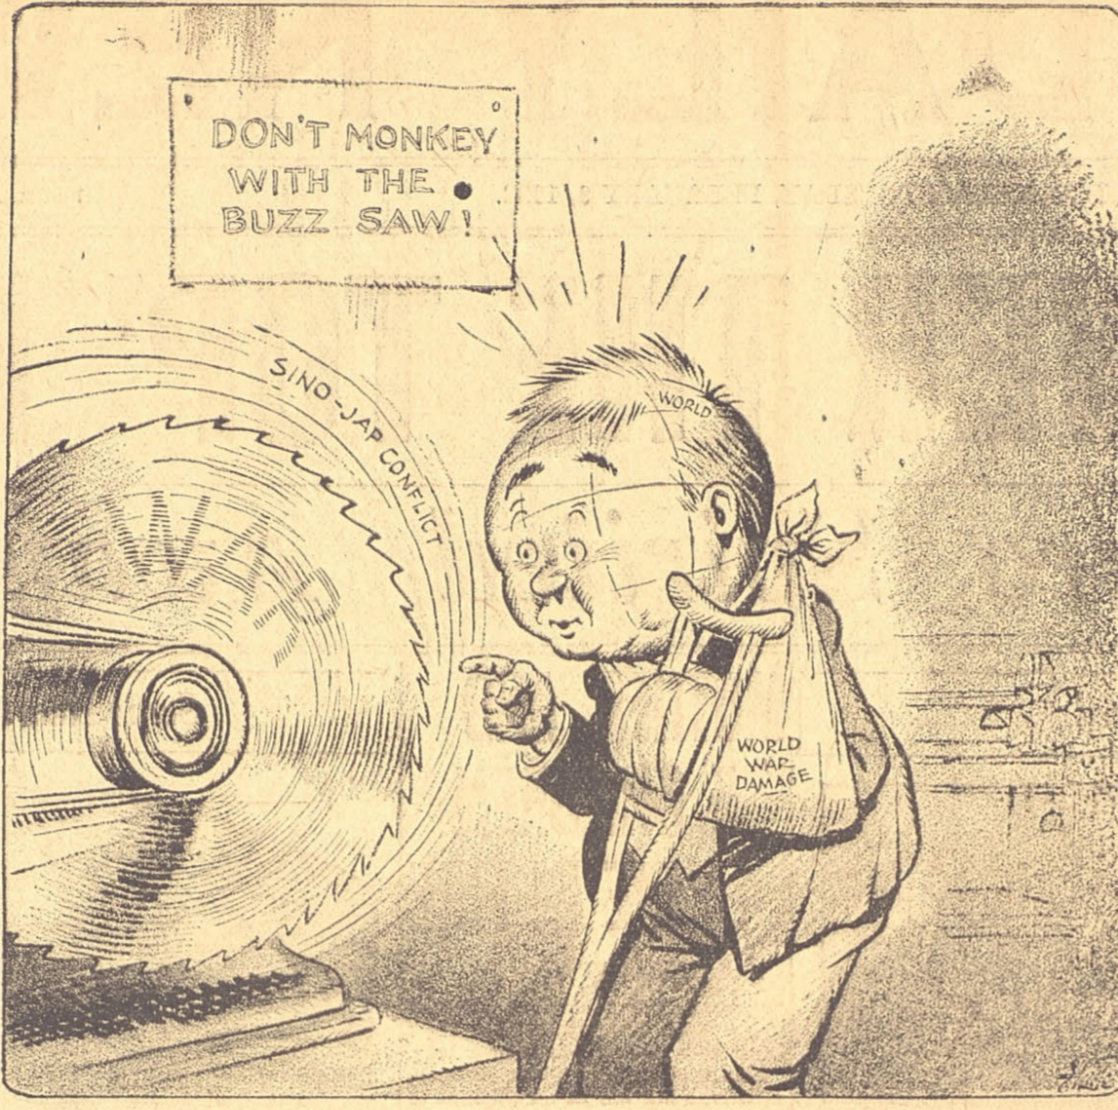

It is encouraging that many economists, in all countries, are now working for a solution. Various conferences have been held and others are planned. The public itself is gradually learning that depressed silver is an enemy of employment, trade and industrial activity.

The 4-H pantry has become the Texas symbol for living at home with its inclusion of product of garden, orchard and livestock. Far from stopping with demonstrators, thousands of cooperators picked up the idea to see the extension of living at home reach four out of five farm families, it is estimated.

The home raised and butchered and canned or cured meat supply, symbolized by Pork, last year reached the greatest proportions, probably, that Texas has known in this century. Estimates based on surveys indicate that 75 per cent of farm homes supplied their own meat this year.

Vegetables produced in 208 home demonstration gardens in Taylor county made an average profit of $78.50 per garden.

Have We Forgotten So Soon?

OTHER OPINIONS

SOME TEXAS HISTORY

The editorial product of Arthur Brisbane is widely read and according to rumor is abundantly paid for, but its inaccuracy is painful especially in some instances in which the distinguished editor attempts to discuss domestic history. Peter Molyneux, editor of the Texas Weekly and a militant Texan as well as a thoughtful writer, has discovered a misstatement in one of Mr. Brisbane's recent columns, and has used it as a text for a double-page discussion of Texas history and incidents pertaining thereto. Mr. Brisbane recently said, in a column published by several Texas newspapers: "Japan is only doing in Manchuria what the United States did when it took Texas from Mexico. We decided that we wanted Texas, and that we could make better use of it than the Mexicans."

TEXAS TOPICS

By RAYMOND BROOKS

AUSTIN, Feb. 9.—State Commr J. E. McDonald of the department of agriculture will not appeal from C. Davis' decision holding Texas as an independent nation in 1837. France recognized it in 1839; Belgium recognized it in 1840; and Great Britain recognized it in 1842. This last date was nearly three years prior to the annexation of Texas to the United States, and nearly four years prior to the Mexican war. Texas achieved her own independence and maintained it for a nine year period, the Lone Star flag being lowered on February 16th, 1846, and Texas going into the union at that instant. It probably was the patriotic spirit of Sam Houston that finally brought about the accession of the state. Houston was one of the first to urge that Texas join the United States, but there was opposition within the Union itself as well as within Texas. On one occasion the hero of San Jacinto wrote to his old friend, Andrew Jackson, "Texas could exist without the United States, but the United States can not without great hazard exist without Texas." It was largely due to Houston's influence that annexation was finally arranged.

So, Mr. Brisbane is all wrong and inexorably so, in referring to Texas as having been "taken" from Mexico because "we could make better use of it than the Mexicans." And this error by the distinguished writer leads to the question, are his rather cogmatic statements about other lands and countries, nations individuals and conditions equally erroneous? And the still further question, who has ever gotten anything good from reading Mr. Brisbane's opinions any way?—Brownwood Bulletin.

Rev. I. Tennant of Austin got a gratuitous boost for governor, as a result of his jocular sidebar remark that if somebody didn't run for governor, he might do it himself. The remark was taken seriously by some of his hearers. . . . It is a fact that a goodly number of people personally have urged Mr. Tennant to be a candidate for governor and some of his good friends circulated a petition to that end. . . . But he insists he is going to stand by his original purpose and make an aggressive race for the present Chmn V. Terrell's place on the state railroad commission.

Warm support at Sweetwater and Nolan county generally for Rep. Andrew M. Howsley of Shackelford county in his race for the state

UNITED DRIVE ON WEEDS IS FARM NEED

STEPHENVILLE, Feb. 9.—If farmers would wage a united campaign against weeds, they would eliminate losses through at least a dozen channels according to Neal Gearhead, director, School of Agriculture Job, Tarleton college.

"Weeds cause heavy losses to the farmer every year, by using soil water which cultivated plants need, by using plant food from the soil, by reducing the yields of crops, by lowering quality of hay and forage, by lowering quality and selling price of grains, by flavoring dairy products and lowering their value by giving a farm a shiftless appearance and hence lowering its value, by closing up terrace drains and causing soil erosion, by causing hay fever, by poisoning livestock and by harboring insects and diseases," he says.

Mr. Gearhead suggests five methods of weed control: cultivation, use of clean seed, grazing, smothering, and spraying. "Weeds are most easily controlled while they are young," he says. "If land is thoroughly harrowed with a disk harrow, and later, just before planting, harrowed with a spike-tooth harrow, the young weeds will be destroyed. Cultivation must be kept up late in the season to prevent maturing of seeds."

"All planting seeds should be carefully examined for weed seeds for nearly all of our bad weeds have introduced in the seeds of crops."

"Grazing is another means of weed control. Lambs may be turned into corn fields after the corn is too cultivate; they will consume weeds without injuring the growing crop. Geese may be turned in cotton fields to control crab grass and other grasses. Johnson grass will practically be eliminated if grazed constantly for two or three years without cultivation.

"Some weeds may be controlled by growing a dense cover crop which will outgrow the injurious plants. Cow peas, Sudan grass or sorghum may be used thus."

"Some chemical sprays used extensively in weed eradication are copperas, iron sulphate, carbon disulfide, calcium chloride, and sodium chlorate. The most economical and effective spray used at Tarleton has been calcium chlorate, one pound per gallon of water, applied in sufficient quantities to saturate foliage."

Paris Styles

By MARY KNIGHT

United Press Staff Correspondent
PARIS, Feb. 9.—The Paris couturiers seem to be remembering that 1932 is Leap Year and have designed their models with the idea in mind that worn with the proper "style" there is absolutely no resisting the wiles of the wearer.

Take that suit at Schiaparelli's for instance, the one made of white mesh jersey that is worn with a scarf that consists of a bridged strip of Burgundy, a couple of pinks and a strip of yellow. Or take Jane Regny's ski suit of navy gabardine that is ribbed and so treated as to be water-proof. It has a jacket with incrustations and sleeves of light-weight leather dressed and in the same shade of blue. A sweater of blue and yellow is worn over this. It has straps going over the shoulders after fastening in a center front. V. Norvegian boots accompany the outfit with blue and yellow knitted bands that turn over the tops, and a scarf of the same colors in knitted wool. A funny little soldier-looking hat is also knitted in the colors and materials of the scarf and boot tops.

The dime-a-dance girl

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Beautiful Ellen Rossiter, who works by day as a salesgirl in the Department Store, lives with her mother, Molly Rossiter, her elder sister, Myra, and her 12-year-old brother, Mike. Irresponsibly, Molly has long since spent the fortune left by her English husband and the two girls support the family.

Molly, selfishly spends the precious money for her own pleasures. Ellen, who is a determined girl, has decided to work at night as a dance hall hostess until the sum is made up. She goes to the dance hall and interviews Jacob Salomon who offers her a job on condition that she supply her own evening dresses. She has no evening dress.

Back at the store again, Ellen begins to cry in her bitter disappointment. Steven Barclay, owner of the store, sees her and asks her to come to his office. When he tells her of her problems, she tells him to give her a dress but she refuses to accept it. He then offers to lend her one of the dresses worn by the models. She borrows a lovely white tulle frock. Ellen is half-pleased, half-illuminated by Barclay's obvious interest in her.

HOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER IV

When Ellen accepted Steven Barclay's offer to drive her to Dreamland she did so with the same naturalness he had shown in extending the invitation. Their friendship had made such strides that her only hesitations sprang from the vague fears which had troubled her in his office; fears that his name would be linked with hers by gossiping fellow-workers.

But Barclay himself had no such fears. He moved in a different world than his employees. He would have been amazed had he dreamed of the complicated feelings of many of them, of their bitter narrowness, of their jealousy and envy of those more fortunate. He was so naturally modest to imagine that his coming and goings, how trivial, were of absorbing interest to scores of men and women who had never met him. Nor did it occur to him that he might be subjecting a girl to the breath of scandal.

But as Ellen sank back into the soft depths of dove-gray cushions and turned her rosy face to him, she felt a pang of anticipated pain. And he believed then that she had been unwise.

He had not known until then why he had been so uneasy and so restless after Ellen had left his office that afternoon; he had not known why the routine business of the store had become so suddenly important or why the hours had dragged so endlessly. But he knew now as Ellen shyly smiled at him that he felt that same light restlessness that he thought had left him years ago.

And that was impossible. He was 37. Ellen was young enough to be his daughter. Almost roughly he saw forward and gave the driver directions for reaching Dreamland. When he offered Ellen a cigarette and pulled out the lighter for her no one would have guessed that he imagined he had, in the brief space of seconds, put away from him a small vague dream.

"I don't smoke," Ellen told him. His brows went up quizzically.

"I thought all young girls smoked nowadays."

At his look of surprise she explained: "You see, people we live among and for that matter, my family, too, are so poor that we must be respectable. On any respectable point—like smoking for women—we're all ultra-conservative. Not," she added still in that slight strain, "that I lie awake nights longing to smoke. I don't like it really. If I did I'd smoke."

"I'm sure you would. But I'm rather glad you don't. I can't get used to it."

He broke off abruptly and thought that there was no use appearing in her eyes as an old fogey even if he were old enough to be her father. With Ellen's permission they drove through Central Park before going to the dancehall. Central Park in the languid twilight was relaxed and quiet after the fierce heat of the day. On the bridge paths there were a few horseback riders, their habits cramped, their horses at an sympathetic trot. But neither the horses nor the riders appeared to be enjoying themselves.

The benches were crowded with workers who had stopped on their hurried way home to draw what solace they could from the dusty green of the park. The air was still with the confusion of childish shouts. Scores of children ran up and down the footpaths and scattered about the lake, sending out small boats on the placid surface.

Darkness drew in and lights began to pierce windows of the giant apartment houses overlooking the park. A light breeze sprang up. One by one the benches were emptied. The last toy boat capsized on the lake. The last cross and sleepy child was dragged away to supper. The park grew quiet.

The limousine swished to a stop at the Casino where early diners and women in evening clothes leaned across softly lighted tables talking and laughing. Ellen and her escort went inside for iced drinks. Neither of them was hungry.

Ellen looked around with wide-eyed pleasure at the other diners, successful men and lovely, well-dressed women. As her eyes returned to the handsome man opposite her she began to feel a stinging in her heart.

What fun to be so rich! What fun to be driven in a limousine wherever you wanted to go! What fun to stop at a smart restaurant because you were thirsty, to be served by an impressed headwaiter, to have every wish anticipated. Care and worries drifted away from her. The hurried, clattery morning with its clashing of milk cans and jangling alarm clocks seemed years away. Here there was only peace and beauty and pleasure.

She began, did Ellen, to weave these sweet dreams of girlhood and those dreams that need so little substance although Steven Barclay did not guess it his own shadowy figure moved through those fancies.

They drove almost quietly to Dreamland, absorbed in their separate thoughts. They stopped off Broadway. Ellen carefully picked up the box which held the precious dress and stretched out her hand to Barclay.

"I can't tell you," she said breathlessly, "how much I appreciate what you've done for me."

Above them, through the open windows, came a clashing of brasses and a singing of strings. The orchestra at Dreamland was tuning up.

"I'm glad I could do it," Barclay replied.

He meant to stop there. But he heard himself saying what he had not intended to say.

"I would like to do a great deal more for you."

Ellen's heart throbbed queerly but her voice was steady as she told him that he had done a great deal too much already. She was self-conscious, a rare thing for her as she climbed the stairs—self-conscious, and now that she was away from Barclay and what he stood for, a little dissatisfied with herself. How foolish to imagine that the fact Steven Barclay had lent her a dress meant anything except that he was a kind and generous man.

What did she know of him after all? He was rich and she had dreamed of becoming his young and adored wife, dreamed of the beauty that as Mrs. Steven Barclay she could bring into the lives of Myra and Molly and baby Mike. Dreamed, too, of herself in thin gayer frocks, never chosen for utility, moving in the pleasure spots of the world with never a thought of work or care.

She stepped into Dreamland and ran straight into Jacob Salomon. His face broke into a wide grin.

"Hullo—you're back. And with the dress, too. I see. Quick work kid."

Ellen's chin came up.

"I might as well tell you," she said coolly, "that I intend to work here only temporarily. For three weeks at the most."

"That's o. k. by me, kid. But since you're here I suppose you won't mind obeying the rules like the other girls. Or will you?"

"I won't," Ellen replied, ignoring his heavy-handed sarcasm.

"Guess this is the only one I didn't tell you about."

He pointed to a sign on the bright pink plaster wall. Ellen read that the hostesses were permitted no conversation while dancing except "yes" or "no" in answer to questions. She turned her amazed face to Salomon.

"Does look funny," he conceded, still grinning. "But there's good sound business back of it. The hostesses can talk when they are sitting at the tables with their partners. And when they're sitting they order things to eat if the girls will stand for it. They mostly will."

"Oh," said Ellen blankly.

"Our specialty's chop suey," he continued imperturbably. "Price $1—75 cents to me 25 cents to the hostess. Thirty-five if the chop suey isn't eaten but that means you can't mess 'it with your fork. It has to be good enough to serve again."

Ellen nodded.

"The joint's straight," he assured her seriously. "We don't serve liquor. We don't even admit men that have been drinking—much."

She was a little perturbed by his cheerful outspokenness but she meekly allowed him to pilot her to a cramped dressing room and to introduce her haphazardly to the other girls, some 15 in number. He used no last names. The girls were Alice and Dolly and Bunnie and Anne and Mazie to him. Ellen assumed they were to be that to her.

Salomon had not knocked but nobody appeared surprised. A few of the girls reached for kimonos with mechanical squeals of dismay but most of them serenely continued their toilets. One hard little youngster, whom Salomon called Tony, deliberately pulled her one-piece dress over her head and stood in brief shorts and a soiled satin slip, grinning at them.

A brightly painted screen gandy with peacocks and pagodas, concealed a washstand in one corner of the small, hot room. Ellen went behind it to dress. The quarters were cramped and stifling but she did not mean to risk another of Salomon's unconventional entries.

When she emerged only two hostesses were left in the room—Tony and a languishing blond called Anise. They shared a wicker bench, where they had sat smoking and waiting to have a firsthand look at her new hostess.

Ellen looked toward Tony—and met a pair of coolly hostile eyes.

How Young Lady's Health Improved

THOUSANDS of cases, like described below, have been reported in which better health followed the use of Cardui by women:

"When I was a young girl," writes Mrs. W. H. Gahan, of Milroy, Ind., "I was delicate, thin and pale. I was nervous at times. My mother knew of Cardui and thought it would be a good tonic for me to take. I took three bottles and my health improved a great deal. My mother was pleased."

"I kept on taking it for a while. I have been in good health ever since."

Many a young lady has been spared needless suffering because her mother knew about Cardui.

CHRIST OF THE ANDES

THIS EMBLEM OF PEACE, STANDING 12,000 FEET ABOVE THE SEA, ON THE BORDER BETWEEN CHILE AND ARGENTINA, WAS CAST FROM BRONZE CANNON BELONGING TO THE TWO NATIONS. A LEGEND ON IT READS: 'SOONER SHALL THESE MOUNTAINS CRUMBLE INTO DUST THAN THE PEOPLE OF ARGENTINA AND CHILE BREAK THE PEACE WHICH THEY HAVE SWORN TO MAINTAIN AT THE FEET OF CHRIST, THE REDEEMER.'

BRITISH SHOW SMALL INCREASE IN FAILURES

By W. G. QUISENBERRY

United Press Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Feb. 9.—The average British business man, an outstanding example of the nation's traditional conservatism, is weathering the financial storms with remarkable strength.

Despite the tremendous slump in business activity, bankruptcies have been only slightly more numerous than in years of comparative prosperity.

During 1931 only 4,655 business firms in Great Britain and Ireland went into the hands of receivers. The preceding year, which was far more favorable for business, saw 4,568 enterprises bankrupt. In Scotland and Ireland there were actually fewer such failures last year than in 1930.

British conservatism in business has come in for much criticism in recent years, yet it has saved hundreds or thousands of enterprises from going to the wall in the present crisis.

The severity of the test to which this conservatism is being put is revealed by the fact that bank clearings dropped 30.8 per cent during the last quarter of 1931 and 16.8 per cent for 1931 as a whole, reflecting a serious decline in business activity. The clearings have slumped from 44,896,677,000 pounds in 1929 to 36,235,869,000 pounds in 1931.

Of all the businesses which found it impossible to continue last year the grocers were most numerous. The drapery silk and woolen trades ranked second, the building and timber trades third and agricultural trades fourth. The motor trade, which occupied fifth place on 1930's list, was supplanted last year by the merchants, brokers and agents.

Stocks firmer.

Stocks on the London exchange have not suffered from the sharp decline recently that has characterized the New York list. While the general trend on the two exchanges is nearly always similar, British securities do not experience such severe fluctuations. Toward the latter part of the year they began a recovery while the New York issues were still plunging to new lows.

Britain's worst year for bankruptcies was 1923, when 5,032 firms went into receivers' hands. Largely they represented the dwindling of fortunes made in the post-war boom and the winding out of new businesses built on an insecure foundation. Their passing left the long-established firms and business generally in stronger shape.

GAIETY ENDS NEW ORLEANS MARDI GRAS

By HARRY J. HOLLOWAY
United Press Staff Correspondent
NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 9.—Gay and boisterous throngs today filled the streets here in a last fling of gaiety before the Lenten season celebrating Mardi Gras.

The strangest of American festivities, which comes to a close today, was ushered in with the official call of the Twelfth Night Krewe for this season's debutantes to assemble and draw for the golden bean in a giant white cake. This ceremony was observed on the feast of Epiphany, Jan. 6.

Miss Lorraine La Cour drew the honor and reigned as queen at the first of the brilliant masquerade parties, the Twelfth Night Revelers' Ball.

These balls will reach their climax tonight when the King Rex with his queen will leave the Rex Ball for that of the King and Queen of Comus, where they will be presented at court.

Only a few will see the coronation. For the society list of the city is rigidly checked for invitations to the Ball of the Krewe of Comus.

Other merrymakers will not lack fun tonight as night clubs, gambling casinos, speakies and other places of entertainment and hundreds of private parties will furnish amusement.

The high light of today's activities will come when Rex—glorious King of Carnival—rides his chariot down palm-lined St. Charles Avenue to Canal street, the main business thoroughfares.

Queen of Carnival
On a balcony on Canal street will sit the Queen of Carnival, who tonight will be given the royal jewels of New Orleans and reign over the last few hours of gaiety—which will end when the clock in old St. Louis Cathedral tolls midnight and the beginning of Lent.

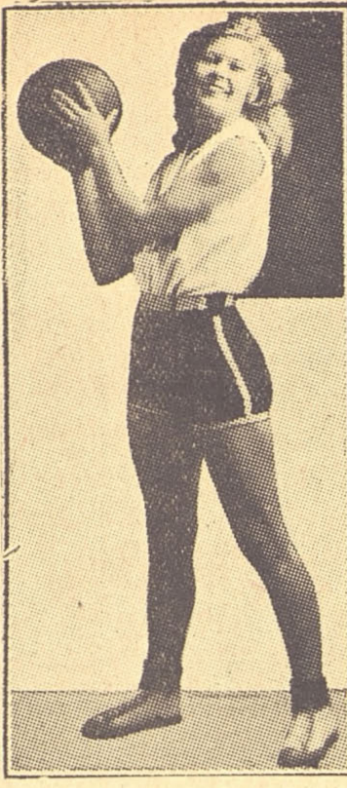

For more than a century New Orleans has observed Mardi Gras, and records found reveal that Louisiana has known such a celebration at St. Martinsville and Baton Rouge for more than 125 years.

Mardi Gras had its origin, according to legend, in the days of the Creole dandies, two centuries ago. These youths, returning from their school days in Paris and bored with nothing else to do, masked and went dancing through the streets on the Eve of Lent, in order to wake up the town.

Randolph Kittens to Meet Fort Worth Team Thursday Night

MARIE RUSSELL

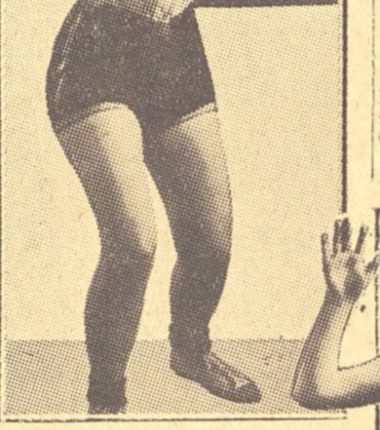

Randolph Kittens are lined up for two hard games at the high school gym this week. Those who have not seen this rather famous girls basketball team play will have the opportunity of seeing them in action against the Fort Worth Bowler Ice Co. team on Thursday night at 7:30 and again Saturday night against the strong Shoe company team of Dallas, composed of former Sun Co. Oilers and several all-Americans, led by Thelma Russell, former Kittens All-American star.

The game Thursday night at the Cisco high school gym promises to be a thrilling one since the Ft. Worth cagers are leading the city league and will put up a strong fight against the Kittens.

The game Saturday night at the same place and hour will have the added interest to Cisco fans of seeing their former idol leading a great team against the home girls.

Coach Garrett has been greatly handicapped on account of flu and injuries to his team but he expects to play a full team at both of these games and make some history for his college and girls team. He urges Cisco fans to back him up with enthusiastic support.

Randolph Badgers to Play Tarleton TONITE

Randolph Badgers are ready for the strong John Tarleton cagers tonight at Randolph auditorium. This promises to be a real battle, according to Coach Garrett, who has just received word from Coach Wisdom, of the plowboys, that his team is in first class condition for a big battle. The Badgers have all recovered from the flu and have blood in their eyes for the plowboys. It required an extra period for the plowboys to defeat the Badgers in their recent tilt and now the Randolthers are eager for revenge. They do not expect it to require an extra period to do the job, according to Garrett. They are going to give fans a real show.

Mr. Dick Dolgener has been awarded the contract for building Dump Penn's airplane hangar for housing his plane. Mr. Dolgener was the lowest bidder to complete the job according to plans agreed upon. According to the contract he is to move a building from Rangor and erect a building on the Cisco airport land at a place designated by the Cisco Civil engineer Dump pays for the material. Mr. Dolgener does the work in a workmanlike manner and subject to inspection after its completion. The price agreed upon to be $175,000, half to be paid as the work progresses and the other half to be paid when the work is received by the inspector on completion. — Adv.

P. T. A. HAS SPECIAL PROGRAM

The West Ward Parent-Teachers-association met for a business and social meeting Friday afternoon at the school building. One of the interesting features of the program which was in charge of Mrs. P. R. Warwick, was a "Candle Lighting Ceremony" in observance of Founder's Day. The memory candle was lighted by a child, Brenda Louise Warwick. It was because of their love for children that the two women, Mrs. Alice Birney and Mrs. Phoebe Heart, organized the National Congress of parents and teachers at Washington in 1897. The National candle was lighted by Mrs. A. J. Olson, one of the first to organize the Parent-Teachers work in Cisco. As the teacher's share in the great work of this organization, it was fitting that one of them should light the state candle. This was done by Miss Byrd Bacon. The candle representing the local association was lighted by the president Mrs. Homer Slicker. A reading was given by Eleanor Gleason and two violin numbers were rendered by Norma Ghormley accompanied by her mother, Mrs. W. I. Ghormley.

During the business session, it was reported that the sale of the Tuberculosis Christmas seals sponsored by the West Ward and South Ward P. T. A.'s amounted to $47.61. The problem of financing the milk furnished to the undernourished school children of the school was discussed at this time. It was reported that 2436 half pint bottles has been furnished during the past month.

SOCIETY COMPLETES MISSIONARY STUDY.

A missionary study on "Methodism and Its Needs" was completed yesterday afternoon by the Missionary society of the First Methodist church. This study under the direction of Mrs. J. E. Crawford of Nashville, Tenn., was completed in three lessons.

"Sweetheart Town" at High School Feb. 15
The stage is set and everything is ready for "Sweetheart Town," the American Legion musical comedy, which is to be staged at the high school auditorium on Monday and Tuesday evenings, February 15 and 16.

Joe Frederick as the hen-pecked husband and manager of the Sweetheart Town hotel, and Wilma Mason as his wife are two of the leading characters in the comedy. It will be worth the price of admission alone just to hear Mr. Frederick make the customary excuses to his wife for being such a lady's man.

Nona Cluck, as their daughter, Mary, is in love with Joe, a country boy, which part is taken by Joe Carothers. Squire Biglow, the richest man in town, is none other than Dick Mancill. The Squire holds a mortgage on the Sweetheart Town hotel and it is this mortgage, coupled with the love affair of Mary and Joe, that forms the basis of the plot of the play.

Lucille Clements in the part of Peggy Biglow, the Squire's daughter is engaged to marry a man from the city whom she has never seen. The man in question is Rig Edwards, but owing to a change in trains, a mistaken identity occurs and a certain Professor Lighthouse, in other words Frank Reynolds, is introduced as the fiancée of Peggy.

Accompanying the professor is a valet, Nathan Cliett, with a color all his own. To further complicate matters Elizabeth Dial in a character part, that of the Squire's half sister, falls madly in love with the professor whom she believes to be Peggy's fiancée from the city. An actress is then introduced in the person of Willa Mae Snyder and the play is on.

Oretta Hausen taking the part of Miss Kaba, appears in the last act and a word from her relieves all complications and permits the play to end as it should and all live happily ever after.

The play is presented before a background of 40 girls dressed in the latest and most up-to-date costuming that has ever been presented here before. The Frederick B. Ingram Production, Inc., who are staging the play, carry the complete costuming and scenery which is used and which incidentally make it possible for our local people to appear at their best. Miss Orlian M. O'Halloran is the director here in charge of rehearsals.

Reserved seats may be obtained at the Red Front Drug Store, beginning Saturday, February 13.

Preceding the play, "The Wedding of Jack and Jill" will be presented by 150 grade children and promises to be one of the big attractions of the evening.

Good looks aren't always luck

Sparkling eyes and a smooth complexion depend on good health. The beautiful woman guards against constipation. She knows this condition can cause headaches, sallow skin, dull eyes, pimples, premature aging.

Protect yourself from constipation by eating a delicious cereal. Tests show Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and Vitamin B to tone the intestinal tract. In addition, ALL-BRAN furnishes blood-building iron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is similar to that of lettuce. Within the body, it forms a soft mass, which gently clears the intestines of wastes. How much safer than pills and drugs—so often habit-forming.

Two tablespoonsful daily—in serious cases, with every meal—will correct most types of constipation. If your trouble is not relieved in this way, see your doctor.

Serve as a cereal, with milk or cream, or use in cooking. In all grocers. In the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.
