NEW COMM'N DEMANDED BY OIL MEETING

In a meeting here yesterday caustic with criticism of the record of the Texas Railroad commission as a regulatory body, oil operators of the West Central Texas district formulated a demand that the state legislature strip the commission of its oil and gas regulatory powers and lodge these in a new commission created for no other duties.

Operators Outspoken.

The operators were outspoken in sentiment against a situation which has developed, they asserted, by reason of the inability of the railroad commission to find sufficient time from a multitude of varying duties to give proper attention to oil and gas problems.

SPEED AND MOBILITY ADVERTISING.

A three million-line newspaper advertising campaign has been started by Procter and Gamble of Cincinnati. Announcement was made in the city of New York by the advertising director of the firm. Why did they make use of the newspapers? Well, this is given as the main reason: "Newspapers are being used because of speed and mobility." Pungent to say the least and very much to the point.

ALFALFA WILLIAM GIVEN A JOLT.

Alfalfa William, governor of Oklahoma, was given a jolt by the Oklahoma City bankers. They made the very broad and the very blunt announcement they would cash no more state, county, township or rural warrants until the budgets are balanced and $3,500,000 indebtedness wiped out. Salaries of county and township and rural school employes will be held up indefinitely by the decision. Oklahoma City banks now hold more than two million dollars in county school warrants alone. Many of them unpaid since 1928. Reason given by the bankers: "We would not be playing fair with out depositors if we continued to take in such frozen assets."

In these blustering March-April days a banker must watch his step.

CARBON BLACK A LEADING TEXAS EXPORT.

An export of Texas and Louisiana has increased during the depression. Shipments of carbon black from the United States in 1932 topped the 100,000,000-pound mark, establishing an all time record, according to the department of commerce. With greatly increased production in the Texas Panhandle district, exports of this product, which is a jet black material obtained by the incomplete combustion of natural gas and used principally in rubber manufacture and printing inks, reached the total of 100,072,486 pounds last year. This was more than double the 43,182,635 pounds produced in 1925. It is predicted that because of the very extensive natural gas resources in Texas and Louisiana and the limited resources of foreign countries, further expansion for this industry, which has already grown to a value of $10,000,000, appears probable. Texas accounted for 80 per cent of the total output of the United States.

Speaking of the piping of natural gas from Texas to the far North, it is announced by the managers that the Texas product will be used for illumination purposes of all exposition buildings during the Chicago fair.

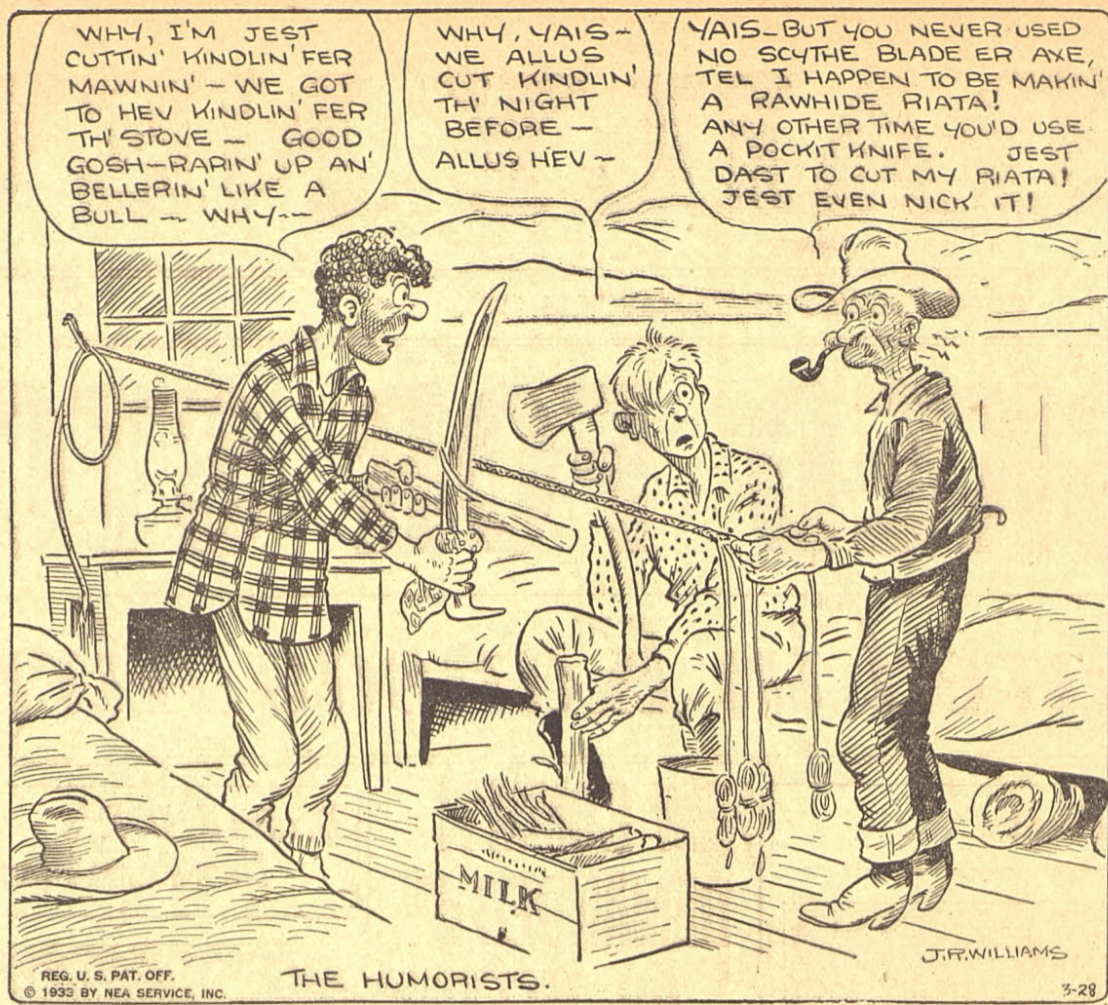

This is a reminder that the Texas senate has enacted a bill which should provide a ready market for natural gas producers in the Panhandle section who have been unable to obtain pipe line contact.

ROOSEVELT EVENTS OF THE HOUR.

Pres. Roosevelt asked Congress to throw the cloak of federal regulation over new securities issued in the form of a general blue sky law. Congress is asked to give the federal trade commission extensive authority to force complete publicity of securities transactions and to aid in prevention of "unnecessary and fraudulent issues." Second, a Roosevelt bill to put men to work in the forest reserve swept through the senate without even the formality of a record vote and was sent to the house where there is but little opposition.

Passage of the reforestation measure marked the fourth of the president's emergency measures to get through this session. Others were the banking and economy and beer bills. Of course the president has a program to protect the investing public. His general blue sky plan comes first. His second now in preparation calls for the regulation of stock exchanges. It will be known as "the truth telling bill," and may encompass sales of foreign securities in the United States as proposed by Sen. Hiram Johnson who investigated the losses in bonds a year ago.

A nation-wide house cleaning order for the protection of the public appears to be on the way. There are more than surface indications that the president is a man of iron as well as "the man of the hour."

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

Cisco citizens are not the only ones interested in the chamber of commerce, the band and the zoo. There are some Cisco people who live outside the city limits and are just as much interested in what goes on within the limits as are those who reside in the city proper.

I gather that from a letter which arrived in yesterday's mails with a testimonial to the good work that the chamber of commerce is doing and to the value of the other two institutions whose existence is affected by the result of the vote which will be cast in the municipal election April 4.

The letter was written by L. R. Nelms, who lives on Route No. 1 and who makes Cisco his trading point. Says Mr. Nelms:

"I have been reading in the Daily the interviews of several who explain their opinions on why Cisco should keep her chamber of commerce, band and zoo.

"Of course I live out on a farm near your city in Eastland county and I call Cisco my home town. All the money I have to spend I spend in Cisco. I can't vote in your city election, BUT IF I COULD I WOULD VOTE FOR ALL THREE TO STAY IN CISCO.

"As to the chamber of commerce, I will say I don't think that any progressive city should be without one. I say this because it is through this institution that we have the lead of the best posted men to handle the city and its trade territory. I will go a little further to say that I believe and have a reason to believe that your secretary, Mr. Spencer, is a great man for that place.

"As your band comes next, I think any good town should keep its band. I believe our rural communities would be better off if they had bands, even if it was nothing but a string band. I have visited the zoo several different times and I have always thought it was the most interesting attraction I looked at there.

"Route One,
"Cisco, Texas."

This letter gives an idea of what the folk who can back off and look at us as a whole think. Most of us, living at close range to our institutions, can't evaluate them properly. We get distorted opinions of this or that. The best corrective is to step outside and have a look at ourselves from the perspective of the unprejudiced and unbiased outsider.

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

By GORDON K. SHEARER
United Press Staff Correspondent
AUSTIN, March 31—The house had the senate "buffaloed" on the judiciary salary reduction bill. Senators candidly admitted it. Senators who had made long speeches against the scale in the senate bill, saying it was too low, swung reluctantly into line on the final bill, which was even lower. They referred to it as a "bitter pill" which might as well be swallowed one time as another.

They confessed they were afraid to let it go back to another conference for fear the house would hold out for an even lower scale.

Description of the long struggle senate conferees had in getting the house conferees to come up to the figure nearer those originally set by the senate was no small stimulus to the final senate vote.

Senator Walter Woodward made no "bones" about his fear: "I am afraid the house would set judges' salaries at $1 a day. In fact some of the house members would take the job for that amount." Senator Clint Small, one of the conferees and a hard-fighter against reducing the judges' salaries even as much as provided in the original senate bill, apologized for the bill as it came out of conference, but informed the senate: "We'll have to take it or do worse."

Building of a 20 mile fence between Houston and Trinity counties raised a storm of protests in the house of representatives but got a favorable vote when the circumstances were explained. Houston county has been declared "clean" by cattle tick inspectors. Present finances make it undesirable to carry on a tick dipping campaign in Trinity county, which has not yet been declared clean. By spending $2,500 for fencing to keep cattle from the tick infested county going into the clean county, the cost of many times that amount for tick dip and guards will be saved. The fence will be across land that has been cut over for timber. Per-

Although senators had to run to a Webster's unabridged to find out what the word cosmetology meant when a bill was introduced in that body to create a board of cosmetology, they didn't have to ask outside help when a swarm of blondes, brunettes and inbetweens descended on the senate state affairs committee.

Across the bosoms of the beauty culturists were stretched blue banners, on them emblazoned in gold "Support Senate Bill 389."

Woman is Saved By Alaskan Flight

By ART HENDERSON
United Press Staff Correspondent
SEATTLE, March 31.—A "race with death" began one winter morning at 1:30 a. m. Ansel Eckmann, Alaskan flier, received a call, ordering him to fly from Ketchikan to Sitka, approximately 400 miles. A woman was reported dying. Immediate medical attention was necessary. Eckmann took off 45 minutes later. He made the trip in less than three hours. The woman, Mrs. Peter Kostrometoff, suffered from internal poisoning, and her condition was considered grave. Medical attention that could not be obtained in Alaska was necessary. All but the pilot's seat was quickly "knocked down." The woman, wrapped in heavy blankets, was placed on an army cot. The party, including her husband and a mechanic, started a long flight. The 425 horsepower motored craft shot through rain and snow clouds clear weather and fog. Eckmann kept the ship headed for Seattle. The woman was kept warm by an exhaust heater. Liquids were also used. A telegram had been sent to have the landing area on Lake Union flooded with lights and an ambulance waiting. Eckmann roared over Vancouver, B. C., Bellingham, Everett and finally Seattle. The plane circled to a smooth landing. The woman was hurried to a hospital and her life saved. She is living in Sitka. Eckmann made the non-stop flight in 16 hours.

Pharmacist Traces Profession Back Into Misty Days of Savage Medicine Occultist

(Editor's Note: The following "classification", or business, talk was delivered to the Cisco Rotary club yesterday by Leon Maner, druggist member of the club. These talks are regular features of the Rotary club programs and are designed to cultivate a more intelligent and sympathetic appreciation of the ideals, ethics and problems of each business and profession.)

In the past six or seven years I have made so many classification talks before you, that I know that you have heard of pharmacy, pharmacology, and pharmacognosy, of physiology, bacteriology, biology, posology, and toxicology, as matters of course which a pharmacist will confirm, means, when translated "until you are sick at your stomachs."

Medicine Man Because his pharmacy was so simple, yet fairly effective, I want to talk to you a few minutes about my brother pharmacist the tribal medicine man of the North American Indian. The similarity of his work and mine begins with the name, for the word pharmacist is but an Anglicization of a Greek word meaning medicine man, and continues throughout our labors. As he squatted by a fire, through the long hours of the night, in a certain phase of the moon, with his face painted with a death mask of white over many colors, with his head-dress of buffalo horns and raven's feathers, chanting his charms to all the spirits, steeping his roots and barks in boiling water, he produced a product very like the infusions and tinctures which I daily prepare in my modern prescription laboratory.

If we understood the beginning of his work, we would understand the beginning of all knowledge. For archaeological research continuously confirms philosophical reasoning that early intellectual development followed very similar lines among all races, and upon all the continents.

Origin in Fear It probably had its origin in fear, for primitive man walked always in fear. Surrounded upon every side by forces over which he had no control, and which he did not understand, his first reaction was to peep and then to run. He struck down his comrade, the torment which drowned his fellow hunter, and all other inanimate objects which endangered him, with spirits and to him all spirits were evil. They must be placated if he were to remain long in the land. His brain had not yet discerned the difference between a pain in his stomach which brought convulsions and death, and the flash of lightning which destroyed his comrade by his side. Both were the work of malignant spirits, overruling him.

Out of this conception of his surroundings grew both magic and medicine, so intimately combined that they are not yet fully separated. His first attempt to avoid annihilation was probably the use of a charm. If he were fortunate enough to battle and kill a large and ferocious animal with his primitive weapons, and the strength of his arms what better assurance could he have than that he would be equally fortunate in his next encounter with such a beast than the wearing of a tooth or claw from the monster? From this grew the wearing of amulets and charms, even the teeth of animals, which persists to this day, and from this it was a simple step to the carrying of unique or unusual fruits or roots or herbs, even as some people today carry a buckeye to ward off rheumatism.

A Real Idea Then across a more intelligent mind flashed a real idea. If such a charm could keep away the evil spirit of disease and death, why not by its possession, why not make the possession permanent and uniform by eating it? This was internal medicine born. By the slow process of trial and error, trying innumerable things for each complaint, till he found one which gave results, down through the centuries grew his knowledge. When he found, as a result of this process, that some of his remedies possessed the ability to overcome symptoms, which to him were the actions of evil extraneous spirits, they immediately became to him either good spirits in themselves of the manifestation of his theory, and started him on the long search for a true deity.

Even among primitive man some possessed quicker minds and more intelligence than their fellows. An occasional one stood well in advance. Naturally he adopted and improved upon the tribal magic more than the others, so that in time he came to be looked upon as of a different sort, a more valuable man to the tribe than the others. So he was differentiated, set aside as a man worthy because of his knowledge. This was again the birth of an idea, and the real beginning of all learning. No longer did he have to go upon the toilsome hunt, or endure the perils of the war-path, because of his knowledge he was superior to the medicine man.

Indebted to Frenchmen Such was his standing when the first explorers encountered him in what is now the United States; and for our knowledge of him and his from the Indian, and means sacred bark, or Holy bark.

With Incantations Of course his medicine was mixed with incantations to drive away devils, with supplications to those forces or spirits which he considered good, was covered with all the mystery which he could devise, performed in certain phases of the moon or hours of the night, to make it more effective. Yet with all this, he had acquired some knowledge, and he had devoted his life to the alleviation of suffering. As he sat through the long night, at the side of a dying tribesman, putting his puny knowledge against the powers of death, he was withal entirely sincere, and in his savage mind, he believed with all his heart, that every weird rite, every charmed magic formula, helped his medicines to do their work.

More Than Elementary The medicine man had at this time reached a rather more than elementary knowledge of American materia medica. By the slow process of trial and error, he had found his magic alone to be worthless; but he could not separate it from his medicine, for then even as now, the troubles he treated were mental as well as physical. He had found from experience in many cases that black willow buds would calm hysteria, that butternut bark was a valuable laxative, that the cinchona bark which came from highly civilized Peru, and found its way into the hands of medicine men as far away as Louisiana was a specific for malaria. By the same slow process he had set aside many things as useless others of occasional value, but he had found that the turpentine exuded from a wounded pine tree was a wonderful antiseptic, and he treated wounds with it with great success. He had learned that the seeds of some of his pumpkins and gourds dried and powdered would expel tape worms, that oak bark macerated in warm water would reduce swelling, and while he knew nothing of tannic acid, he made good use of its astringent properties. He had discovered the actions and uses of countless drugs of value, but perhaps his greatest discovery was that of cascara sagrada, which was transported from its habitat in the northern sierras to all parts of the continent, and was so highly esteemed that it was worshipped as a good spirit in all the tribes. Its very name is a translation into Spanish

BEGIN HERE TODAY When JANET HILL was a ROSE CALVILLE has been breaking engagements with her to meet the girl. She tells him their marriage is off. Janet is 23, pretty and secretary to BRUCE HAMILTON, advertising manager of Every Home Magazine. She still loves Rose and cannot forget him. JEFFREY GRANT, young engineer who lives at the same rooming house as Janet, meets her one night just in time to save her from a holdup man. Janet becomes interested in the SILVANI family, almost destitute. Jeff helps provide food and clothing for them and later they find a job for PAT SILVANI, the father. Janet and Janet's friends help her to help him select a gift for a girl and they buy a purse. Newspaper headlines that Rose has eloped with Betty Kendall she tells Jeff about her broken engagement and says she will never care for anyone else. When she tells Bruce Hamilton she is leaving the magazine. The staff is to be re-organized and her job will be gone. Hamilton says his sister, MRS. CURTIS, needs a social secretary and that he has recommended Janet. She goes to see Mrs. Curtis and is hired. When she tells Jeff she is going away he seems distressed. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXV DUSK had begun to descend over the street. In the gray light Janet looked up into Jeff Grant's startled face. She was remorseful. "I meant to tell you before," she said, "only I've been so busy!" "Where are you going?" Jeff asked. Janet smiled. "Not very far," she told him. "Only out on the west side. You see, I have a new job and I'll have to live out there." "Then you're not leaving town?" "Why, of course not!" The girl laughed. "Did you think I was? Oh, no, I'm not leaving Lancaster but it's just about as much work to pack as if I were. We've been awfully busy at the office, too. This new job is different from anything I've ever done—"

Says CARDUI Seemed To Stop Cramping "Several years ago, when I was younger, I was advised to take Cardui for cramping and irregular trouble," writes Mrs. Esther L. Dodson, of Lowry City, Mo. "It helped me and stopped the cramping. Before the birth of my baby, I felt I needed a tonic to give me strength and appetite. Knowing that Cardui was a good tonic, I decided to take it again. I took it for nine months. I feel that my good health is due to Cardui."

Take Cardui to build up against the nagging symptoms of ordinary womanly ailments. It has been in use for over 50 years. So many women praise CARDUI, it must be good to have the widespread use that it has today. Sold at drug stores.
