KIDNAP THREAT ON DAWES REPORTED

Permanent County Tax Payers League Is Organized

MASS MEET IS HELD AT COURT HOUSE

Organization of a permanent Eastland County Tax-Payers league, pledged to exert itself in the interests of lighter tax burdens for the people of the county, was effected at a mass meeting called by organizers of the league in the 91st district court house at Eastland yesterday.

MARKET FACILITIES SHORTEST ROUTE TO DEVELOPMENT OF CISCO TRADE TERRITORY

Cisco cannot reasonably hope to develop into a trading center until it has first developed into a market center. It cannot expect to sell until it is able to buy. It must provide the facilities by which the produce of its agricultural neighbors can be transformed into buying power before its merchants can be prosperous and its people resultantly so.

AN EDITORIAL.

Of late in a Buy at Home campaign. We have not thought seriously enough of the conditions that enter into such a campaign. Consequently we have wondered why such an appeal fails to meet with the response that we hoped it would command.

At the end that Cisco will become a busy market center, Cisco can become a busy market center by the constructive means of developing a resource that is being drained away to the competition of other towns. And that resource can be developed only by placing here a strong market where the produce grower can command an equitable price and the certainty of disposing of his products.

BONDED DEBT REAL PROBLEM SAYS AUDITOR

Real relief in Eastland county, as in other Texas counties, cannot be effected until some disposition is made of the bonded debt, either by absorbing a large portion of the debt into a state bond issue or by appropriations out of the gasoline tax that now goes to the state.

"Trunk Slayer" Goes on Trial

This striking sketch, drawn by Art Krenz, staff artist for NEA Service, shows an unusual character study of Mrs. Wilmie Ruth Judd, who is now on trial for her life before an all-male jury at Phoenix, Ariz. She is being tried first for the slaying of Agnes Leroy, X-ray technician, three months ago.

NEWSPAPER SAYS NAME 'MENTIONED'

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23. — A report that kidnapers were threatening to seize and hold Charles G. Dawes, former ambassador to Great Britain and now president of the $2,000,000 reconstruction finance corporation, was relayed today to Sen. Roscoe Patterson, Rep. Mo. Patterson, who has introduced a bill in the senate to enable federal officers to deal with interstate kidnaping, said the report had come to him from a Chicago newspaper.

WOMEN'S CLUB URGES LOCAL PATRONAGE

At the regular meeting of the First Industrial Arts Club Thursday afternoon a resolution, presented by Mrs. J. D. Barker in response to roll call requirements, urging that the public patronize home industries and home merchants, was adopted by the organization.

REORGANIZATION PERMITS TRANSFER OF SOUTH WARD

L. H. QUALLS IS CANDIDATE FOR COMMISSIONER

L. H. Qualls today makes public announcement of his candidacy for county commissioner from precinct No. 4, subject to the action of the Democratic primary next summer.

Economies effected through various consolidations of departments and classes, in instances made possible through resignations of teachers, has enabled the Cisco school board to adopt a plan of reorganization as between the South Ward, West Ward and Grammar schools under which it will be possible to close the South Ward building during the second semester, it was announced today following a meeting of the school board yesterday afternoon.

J. M. Douglas Funeral Held Here Saturday

Funeral services were held yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the Green Funeral home, for J. M. Douglas, farmer, 59, who died Saturday morning at 6 o'clock after a brief illness. Burial took place in Mitchell cemetery.

DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

HEAR THE LORD:—O earth, earth, earth, hear the word of the Lord.—Jeremiah 22: 29.
GOD'S WONDERFUL WORKS:—Many, O Lord my God, are the wonderful works which thou hast done; if I would declare and speak of them, they are more than can be numbered.—Psalm 40: 5.

BILBO SNUBBED BY HIS SUCCESSOR.

Over in Mississippi they call their new governor Mike Conner. He is 40. He is a planter-lawyer and a fighting politician. Democrats of Mississippi elected him successor of Theodore Bilbo. Well, inauguration day came and Mike refused to ride in the chariot reserved for the outgoing and incoming chief magistrate. He would have none of it. He had fought Bilbo to a finish and Bilbo returned the compliment in three bitterly contested campaigns. Bilbo was game. Under the big dome of Mississippi he mounted the platform and introduced the chief justice to the incoming governor, the oath of office was administered, and then Bilbo was on the outside looking in. There are many types and brand of democrats. They fight like cats at a Kilkenny fair and yet they hope to sleep in the Jeffersonian bosom when they pass out.

A NEW DEAL FOR NEW JERSEY.

Arthur Harry Moore, democrat, stepped back into the governorship of New Jersey with a tax slashing plan running into millions of dollars. He asked the legislature to sweep out 94 agencies and 35 commissions and substitute a 12-man cabinet. He declared for the passing back to the taxpayer some of the money "that may be saved by postponement of all non-essential state activities." He recommended that $16,500,000 be turned back through municipalities, "many of which have found it hard to meet state tax requirements." Of this, about $13,000,000 would come from the gasoline tax and $3,000,000 from the savings on a restricted highway program.

Speaker Jack Garner and his lieutenants promised to slash $350,000,000 from the appropriations, and there are democratic leaders who insist that there should be a salary cut in that of the president and all down the line. There are 700,000 on the federal payroll and commissions and agencies galore. It is estimated that one-third of the national income goes to defray the expense of government in nation and state and county and town. Why not face the issue? Why not lift some of the burden from the shoulders and pockets of the people?

A STORY OF PRACTICAL POLITICS.

Senator Thomas Schall of Minnesota is a republican. He is blind but he is not deaf and his brain and his tongue work together. A year ago he asked the president for a favor. In other words, to name a Schall partisan for the office of federal district judge for Minnesota. President Hoover turned down his application and named Gunnar Nordbye who had the backing of Attorney General William D. Mitchell.

Schall held up the nomination of Nordbye. He struck back with all his blind force. Now the feud has been ended. President Hoover will name Matthew Joyce of St. Paul, backed by Schall for federal district judge. There is a second vacancy. He has agreed to the appointment of Nordbye and now the blind senator is positive that the names of Joyce and Nordbye "will go through together. In other words, prompt confirmation will be had by the senate.

This is presidential election year. Senator Schall, having won one of the two judicial jobs for a friend, made it easy for the president to accept the program. This is his confession of faith: "My objection to Nordbye was a personal one and was not based on his legal ability. The only one who would be hurt by my change would be myself, and I consider time a great healer." It appears that even blind senators are willing to eat humble pie in a presidential year if given a share of the spoils. Minnesota in 1930 elected a farm labor leader governor of the commonwealth, and came within a few thousand votes of sending a democrat to the United States senate. Now the olive branch is in evidence and republicans of all factions are asked to board the band wagon in order to keep the republicans in clover for another four years.

Politics is a scientific game and republican leaders are clever players, unlike democratic leaders or laymen who run amuck and are given the feathers instead of the turkey most of the time.

OTHER OPINIONS

"TO A KID WHO DIDN'T GET AN EVEN BREAK"
By PAUL S. JACKSON, in Gulg Coast Review
(Voted the year's best Editorial by Editors in Editorials of the Month)
Easter Sunday was a beautiful day; the churches were jammed with fashionable new costumes, the highways lined with pleasure seekers. Each paraded his or her new finery, auto or other evidence of well being with his or her own particular brand of thoughtless, careless or reckless nonchalance — all different, but each characteristically American.
To most of them, Easter Sunday meant a gay holiday or a festive occasion — large crowds at churches — dinner guests — endless opportunities to parade new finery among congenial friends in laughter — music — but somehow we didn't enter into the spirit of the thing this year.
In a little unpainted shack near the turn in the Galveston road Easter morning dawned upon an entirely different scene.
In its rear room huddled a sorely-stricken family of humble Mexicans. In its bare parlor lay the poor, wasted body of Jesse Barajas who earned, but did not get, "the breaks" given less deserving boy heroes in stories every day.
Instead, Fate decreed that Jesse should battle his way almost insurmountable obstacles to a point within sight of success, and then slowly wither away, month by month, — that he should surmount the inequalities of birth and environment; learn — almost unassisted — a well-paying trade amid alien surroundings; mastering the intricacies of a strange language in order to do so; and that he should

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Jesus and the Samaritan Woman

Text: John 4:9-26
The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Jan. 24, Jesus and the Samaritan Woman John 4:9-26.

By WM. E. GILROY, D. D. Editor of The Congregationalist.

The story of the meeting of Jesus and the Samaritan woman at Jacob's well is remarkable; but the strangeness of the narrative does not appear until one takes into account the background in the custom of the time.

General accounts in the New Testament would suggest that there was no such vivid and strict privacy for woman in the time of Jesus as has developed in later ages in the east, and especially among the Moslems.

For a man and woman to converse publicly as did Jesus and this woman at Jacob's well, was against all the prevailing custom and tradition, and the narrative indicates more strongly than anything else the extent to which Jesus was unconventional almost to the point of rebellion in disregarding the social usages of the time.

Probably if it had not been for her reputation she would not have been so free in conversing with a stranger. At any rate, when we are told that the disciples returned they marvelled at finding Jesus and the woman conversing so intimately.

The narrative, however, is one of the most interesting and most instructive in all literature. There is first of all, that very important lesson that character and reputation are not always the same thing and that even in lives that have mistaken the way, the elements of real character may not have been destroyed.

Here was this woman with a rather unsavory record, who tried to get away from any emphasis upon her past life by engaging Jesus in conversation about controversial issues of worship. Yet this woman did respond to the teaching of Jesus. She became vitally interested that she went to the neighboring city and brought her numbers of men to hear him.

It is instructive to see how considerably and tactfully Jesus dealt with her. He did not burst out into censoriousness, nor was he in any haste to display his knowledge of the woman's actual life. On the contrary, rather quietly, yet very effectively he probed the wound in her life that he might quicken her confession and bring her into the atmosphere of life and healing.

The conversation concerned the water of life — a very vital theme in the east where well were so few and scarce as to be of remarkable value, and a very important theme for other times and places where the wells of truth and right living have often run dry. The incident has been expressed in a hymn that used to be sung much by the last generation:

Jesus the water of life will give Freely, Freely Freely.
Come to that fountain; O drink and live Freely, Freely, Freely.

It is a good theme and a sound invitation, for, though it may not be at Jacob's well, we all have the privilege of discarding with Jesus and partaking of the eternal fountain.

PRESIDENT OUTLINES PROGRAM OF AMERICAN LEGION WOMEN

PERRYTON, Tex., Jan. 23. Mrs. Van W. Stewart, Perryton, Texas, president of the American Legion auxiliary, department of Texas, in a recent interview, outlined the activities program of the auxiliary in Texas for the year 1932. This largest of all women's organizations is again stressing community service, rehabilitation, child welfare and Americanism.

Child Welfare

All units are urged to join with and give helpful cooperation to all local organizations and groups interested in the serving of families to end that no family or child suffer to greatly during the winter months of 1932. It must be admitted by all that there is likely to be too many families and children without the bare necessities of life for many months to come. By finding the families and children in one's own community who are in need, one is more likely to alleviate a greater amount of distress at this time than to allow these local needs to be passed by and perhaps in an effort to meet the greater state-wide problem, have them entirely overlooked. With world war veterans in the government hospitals dying at the rate of seventy-six each day, and the majority of them married with an average of two children each child welfare problems will continue to increase for many years to come.

Rehabilitation

As part of the rehabilitation program of the American Legion auxiliary, each year, every ex-service man located in the Veterans' hospital of Texas are remembered at Christmas. The entire state Auxiliary units of the entire state. Several hundred men were made happier last Christmas by these gifts at El Paso, Kerrville, San Antonio, San Angelo and Galveston. When the large veterans' hospital is completed at Waco, several additional hundred men will be added to the auxiliary's Christmas list. At the present time, the American Legion and the auxiliary are maintaining a social service worker at the hospital center at Kerrville, who is doing a splendid work among the children and families of the veterans who are patients in that hospital.

Membership

The state and national organizations of the American Legion and Auxiliary have experienced a steady growth ever since their organization in 1919. Last year, the combined membership was one and one-half millions. The largest since their inspection shortly after the end of the World War. The national department has set for the Texas auxiliary, a quota of 9,444 members for 1932. But we have gone them just a little better and raised our own quota to 10,000, and on January 1, we had a 1932 paid-up membership of almost 4,000.

The American Legion and auxiliary have decided that community service be one of their major activities, and throughout the state and nation; you will find them promoting the activities in their communities, that will make the community a better place in which to live. Many posts and units are doing much to relieve the unemployment situation in their community. They are truly living up to that part of their obligation as members, which says, "For God and Country."

Legislation

There will be many bills of direct interest to the World War veteran introduced at this term of congress. Among the most important will be the war and orphan pension bill and the national de-

MRS. VAN W. STEWART, Perryton, Texas, President American Legion Auxiliary, Department of Texas.

Religious Survey Again Postponed

On account of the mud and rain it will be necessary for the religious survey to be postponed for another week. Rev. H. D. Tucker and Rev. Victor D. Dow announced yesterday.

It was the purpose of First Methodist and Twelfth Street churches to take a religious census today of the Methodists and those of Methodist preference. The workers will be ready by next Sunday if the weather permits to do this work.

To Raise Funds For Democrats

HOUSTON, Jan. 23. — Lewis Fisher new president of the Houston Bar association, today was named Texas democratic campaign fund committee chairman. He will have charge of raising funds during the presidential campaign.

Salesman Leaps From Hotel Window

TEXARKANA, Ark., Jan. 23. — Lawrence Russell, 31, representative here of the National Cash Register company, today leaped to his death from his room on the third floor of the Hotel Savoy. He died in less than an hour after being taken to the hospital.

$50,000 Ransom for Bower Demanded

DENVER, Colo., Jan. 23. — A frantic plea for Benjamin P. Bower, wealthy bakery official, directing his wife to deliver $50,000 ransom to his kidnapers two miles east of Golden at 1 p. m. today warned that he "surely will be murdered" unless the demand is met.

Revelation of his letter, however, aroused the belief the kidnapers would not keep the appointment and inspired fear that Bower would be slain in the kidnapers' hide out.

Bower's plea was made in a special delivery letter dropped in a mail box in suburban Denver late Friday and collected today. Bower was abducted from his home by two men Wednesday night.

MINE FIRE RAGING

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Jan. 23. — Investigation by a Swedish mining engineer disclosed that fire is still raging in the Sveagruvan Coal mine, Spitzbergen, after six years. The fire broke out in 1925, after the mine had yielded a large output of coal for 15 years. The mine was finally closed when all efforts to put it out had failed.

Sunday Services at The Churches

HOLY ROSARY CHURCH
Mass today will be at 10 a. m. by Rev. P. Ruano. This is Septuagesima Sunday and the Gospel read is from St. Matthew XX, 1-16. It tells of the parable of the householder who hired men to work in his vineyard at different hours of the day and gave each one the same pay though some had worked all day and others only one hour. This teaches us a lesson not to be jealous of our neighbor's good fortune but to wish him well and rejoice at his prosperity. It is God who gives to all and provides for all and He is the good father of all.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH
Sabbath school at 9:45. E. P. Crawford, superintendent. Morning worship at 11. Evening worship at 7:30. Junior service league at 2 p. m. Senior and Young People at 8:45. Special music and congregational singing at both morning and evening services. — REV. J. STAURT PEARCE, Pastor.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH
The lesson sermon subject in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, January 24 is "Truth." "God shall send forth his mercy and his truth" is the golden text, taken from Psalm 57:3. Included in the passages read from the scriptures is the following from Psalms 43:3: "O send out thy light and thy truth; let them lead me; let them bring me unto thy holy hill, and to thy tabernacles." The service also embraces citations from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy; among which was the citation from page 223: "(L14). (L 20-24.)"

FIRST METHODIST CHURCH
Broadway and H Avenue, Sunday 24th. Sunday school 9:30 a. m. S. H. Nance, general superintendent. The pastor speaks at both services; 10:30 a. m. "The Greatest Glory of Methodism" and 7:15 p. m. "What Methodists Believe About Baptism." League meets at 6:30. You are invited to worship with us. — H. D. TUCKER, Pastor.

GRACE LUTHERAN CHURCH
Corner Sixteenth street and F Avenue. Sunday school at 10 a. m. Double service in the morning; German at 9:30 and English at 11. Topic: Jesus, the Help of the Helpless. Holy communion will be celebrated in the German service. We welcome you to our services. — ARTHUR RATHJEN, Pastor.

THREE KINDS OF LOVE

by KAY CLEAVER STRAHAN

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Ann and Cecily Fenwick have for years supported themselves and their younger sister, Mary-Frances, and their grandmothers, known as "Bossie" and "Grand". Because of this financial responsibility, Ann who is 28, is unable to marry Phil Eerooy, young lawyer to whom she has been engaged for eight years. Cecily, 22, loves Barry McKel, an engineer, but when he proposes she refuses to name their wedding date for the same reason. Mary-Frances, 15, and still in school, strikes up an acquaintance with Earl De Armount, vaudeville actor, and meets him secretly. He tries to persuade her to become his stage partner.

Ann and Phil quarrel when she hears Letty King, who works in Phil's office building, address him with endearments. Ann tries to forget Phil by going around with Kenneth Smith, rich and attentive. Cecily is disturbed when she learns Barry has left town without telling her about it.

Mary-Frances fails in an examination and promises De Armount she will go away with him. Barry returns and Cecily, against her grandfather's command, drives away with him in his car.

Kenneth Smith asks Ann to marry him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXIX

"Now, now, Kenny. How would you like it when people came up and asked to meet your mother?"

"Boloney! You got too many inhibitions, Ann. You—"

Would Cecily go home to dress and get ready to marry Barry without a word to her? Would Cecily do a cruel thing, like leaving a note? "Ange! Ann! Barry and I have been married—"

"Maybe," Kenny was persisting. "Maybe, Ann?"

"No," Ann said. "No, not maybe."

Was that right, or fair, or anything? How could you know what might happen in the future? You might change, mightn't you? It wouldn't hurt you to give me a little hope would it? What is a man going to live for if he can't hope? But you don't care. You don't care how unhappy I am, do you?"

"I care, Kenny. But, after all who is happy? I don't know anyone who is, except, perhaps, my grandparents. I'm beginning to think that young people never are. They have to wait until they get through caring so desperately about everything and come out to the — well, calm, is it? — on the other side."

"You could make me happy. But you won't. You're beautiful and cruel — that's what you are. Beautiful and cruel. Crueler than you are beautiful."

"Because I remember that four faces beat a full house?"

"Check. But what do you mean — exactly?"

"Possibly I mean that I can keep my values straight."

"And I'm of no value? All right. I may not be four aces, but I'm no four-flusher, either."

Ann had time to say only, "Of course you aren't. I didn't mean that," before Mr. Redfern came into the office.

He was a thin man with protruding eyes and a long stretch of wrinkled neck between his too large collar and his nervous chin. He always tapped a pencil when he talked and jiggled his foot up and down, and he fretted when he had to listen to other persons talking.

He said to Kenneth, "Don't let me scare you off, young fellow, and to Ann, 'Anything new?'"

"Nothing," said Ann, "except that Mr. Isenberg was in to see you about renewing the lease. He said he'd come in again at 4 o'clock."

"I met him down the street. I'm waiting for him. You may as well go, if you'd like to, Miss Fenwick."

"WE KNOW CHEVROLETS— YOU KNOW US"

NO CHANCES FOR ARGUMENT

Man comes into this world with nothing on but he can't live very long before everybody has something on him.

There's no arguing against the fact that if you have lots of money you can buy a new car but if you have a moderate income you can enjoy the same privileges as your neighbor if you'll look over our re-conditioned models. We have several practically as good as new. Terms arranged to pay while you ride.

wick. No reason for us both sticking around here." He reacted for the telephone.

Ann said, "May I get the number for you, Mr. Redfern?" and nodded at Kenny.

"I'll hang out-side for you," he said, and went scowling to the door and out of it.

Mr. Redfern explained that he had thought of calling Black & Mauer, but guessed it wouldn't do any good.

"I called them this morning. They said they'd have to let the discount go—that they didn't have the money to take advantage of it this month."

Mr. Redfern sighed and tapped his pencil. "By the way, Miss Fenwick, since you brought up the matter of the lease, I guess I might as well tell you one time as another. Been meaning to tell you for quite a bit now. I'm not going to renew."

"No?" said Ann, without understanding.

"Can't do it." Mr. Redfern jiggled his feet as if he had a child riding on it. "Can't struggle along with this overhead."

Presently Ann understood. It was confused with what Mrs. Redfern had said and with the basement in the Redfern house, and with old customers who were still to be served but one fact emerged clearly — in August Ann would be out of a job.

Kenny said, "Gosh, this is great! Good scout, your boss—though I'd like to choke him. Where'll we go? What'll we do? How about the houseboat and a swim?"

"No. I have to go home."

"Everything?"

"Gee, Ann. I'm sorry. On the square I am. I'll just run across the bridge here and back over the other one. Ride will do you good. That old crook say something to bother you, in there?"

"Yes — he did. He's going out of business, for a time, at least — except that he can carry on from his house. It means I'm out of a job — or will be, in August."

"Speaking of jobs," said Kenny, "I know of one that I'd like to have you consider. The hours are long, but the duties are — how do they say it? — comparatively light."

Fact about all you'd have to do is put up with him hanging around and have your cards engraved Mrs. Kenneth Homer Smith."

For one silly minute Ann had hoped. The disappointment, administered suddenly, demanded reprisal. "That is simply absurd," she said. "I've told you so often. If I don't stop baring and bothering me about it all the time I'll stop seeing you. I think I shall anyway. You've agreed over and over to be friends — but you won't try to be. You have no conception of friendship — ner of anything but having your own way. I told you I wished to go straight home. Here we are going across the river."

We went down under it. In his own way, Ann, don't say that. Ann I try. Ann. I'd die for you this minute. I'd gladly die for you this minute," there was a tragicomic youthfulness that made Ann sad and astounded.

"I'm sorry I was mean, Kenny. It is all right. But I am so — so frightfully worried today."

"Something else besides the job?"

"Yes. Ever so many things. I'd rather not talk about them though. Please."

They had crossed the wide beautiful bridge and had come into the dingy district where shabby men milled about sidewalk blackboards in front of employment offices; where poverty protruded like a bony elbow through a ragged sleeve and waned, desperate, skulked like a starved cat and mewled and clawed. From the door of a charitable organization a queue had formed and crept almost to the corner and Ann thought of it as the gently lashing tail of a monster, doing now, but soon to waken and spring on its prey.

Even Kenneth had to drive charity through this district. He did not speak until they had come to the greens of the trees and the shadowed grass in the park blocks.

"Ann" he pleaded. "I just want to tell you one or two more little things, and then I'll promise not to open the subject again. Will you listen while I tell you just one or two more little things?"

"I suppose so," said Ann.

"I know I'm dumb," said Kenny, "and as honestly as a hen's foot, but I'm not deaf nor blind. If I do say it, I know you have worries, Ann. I've known it all along. But what can I do? Nothing."

"Of course you can't," Ann said. "Forget about it, Kenny. That's all right."

"No, it's not all right. But listen, Ann. You said you'd listen. It's not so hot, bragging about money and so on — but I have ways of it, and it is all yours for the taking. Of course, I know money isn't everything. In fact, I know it isn't much of anything — but it does help, Ann. Honest, it does help — lots of times."

"Yes," said Ann. "I believe it does."

"What I mean is — you don't hate me, do you?"

"I like you a lot. But I don't love you a bit."

"Never mind rubbing it in. What I was going to say was — outside the fact that I love you enough for two and all — that maybe you could sort of look at it unselfishly. I mean — there's your sisters and your grandparents. Not counting yourself, Ann, there wouldn't be much of anything you couldn't do for your folks. Your little sister, for instance. She's a peach. You'd like to put her in the best girls' school in the country — or over in Switzerland or some place, wouldn't you? And you'd like her to have everything — pretty clothes, and nice places to go, and travel and all. Same with Cecily. Barry hasn't much and we could help them out in lots of ways — and they'd never know we were doing it. Barry's kind of high-hat, I mean. And then the old people — we could give them every comfort and luxury. All like that. If you hated me, Ann, it would be different. But, since you don't it seems as if you might get a big kick out of making me happy and doing things for the family and making them happy. Unselfish. Presents and opportunities and everything you'd like it, Ann."

After a few blocks Kenny said "You won't even answer me, will you?"

"Kenny, you tease so. You bother so I don't wish to be bothered. I'm troubled enough. I want to go home. I told you I wanted to go home. I have a headache."

"We'll stop at a drug store and get a bromo or something."

"No. I don't want a bromo nor anything. Thank you."

"But what's the use of suffering when you don't have to?"

"I don't want a bromo."

Kenny sighed and frowned "Well, here's another thing —"

Ann put her hand on his arm "Please, Kenny. Talk about something else. I don't want to hear any more about that please."

"Well, of course, if you won't even let a man talk—"

Ann did not answer. She had just given Mary-Frances a fur coat in a big box.

"Anyway, answer this one question. Just one question. Answer it yes or no. Will you think it over?"

"No," said Ann. "I won't."

ed by the people receive their compensation from, and pay the salaries of their deputies and assistants out of fees and commissions earned and collected, and that the net amount of such fees and commissions shall be retained by each officer as compensation for his services is prescribed by law. Also the salaries of the few county officers who are appointed and compensated for their services on a salary basis is fixed by law. It is therefore evident that no relief can be expected from this source until our legislature changes the law. Anyway, if the salaries of all the county officers which are paid out of taxes were reduced fifty per cent it would not materially lower the tax rate. Possibly there are some items carried in the running expenses that could be eliminated or reduced without seriously affecting the proper functioning of the county government. But any substantial relief, it appears to me, must come through a shifting, in some manner, of at least a part of our bonded debt to the state to be taken care of by a state bond issue, or by an appropriation out of the gasoline tax which now goes to the highway department. A state income tax law along the lines of our federal income tax law to take the place of the ad valorem tax levied for state purposes, while it would not affect tax levies for county purposes, would afford some relief as a large per cent of the property owners do not receive sufficient income to require an income tax return."

The American Legion, of this city, have completed arrangements for the staging of "Sweetheart Town," a local talent musical comedy at the high school on February 15 and 16.

The production will be presented by a cast of many local players before a background of pretty girls, appearing in a gorgeous costume array.

As a special added attraction one hundred local kiddies take part in a miniature wedding preceding the regular performance, which will be called "The Wedding of the Little Doll."

In presenting this double attraction the American Legion plans to interest the entire community in the project and in so doing hope to make it the outstanding theatrical event of the season.

WANTED: WOMEN TO WORK

We wonder how many women there are in Cisco who would work at our laundry for the same wages they make doing their own washing at home?

ECONOMY WASH 7c LB.

This service includes washing the entire family bundle and ironing all the linens with wearing apparel fluff dried.

Now what is the cost? Let's see. The average family bundle weighs about 15 pounds. This at 7 cents will only cost the small sum of $1.05. Now see about the labor necessary to save that sum.

First, you spend a hard day at washing and another at ironing the linen. Your back is broken and your feet are sore and tired—two nights of restless tossing without much sleep. Poor wages, we agree.

Call 138 and the worry is over, and your clothes are returned nice and clean.

and interest amounting to $196,495.00 will mature, making a total due next year of $346,945.00. Annual payments have been decreasing a small amount each year since 1927 but will not fall below $300,000.00 till 1939. To provide funds to take care of the payment on bonds and the operating expenses of the county government next year a tax levy of $1.86 on the $100 valuation has been made. Of this total levy $1.26 is for bonded indebtedness, the other 60 cents being distributed among the other county funds according to their respective levies. It is seen at once that about two-thirds of the taxes collected is for bond purposes. A tax of 60 cents on the $100 would hardly be considered burdensome if this were the total. At this rate taxes on property rendered for $3,000.00 would amount to $18.00, but adding the bond tax at a rate of $1.26 the total would be $55.80. It is clear, therefore, that our real tax burden lies in our bonded debt. Under these conditions, what can be done to relieve the tension? The issuance of these bonds together with a tax levy sufficient to take care of interest and sinking fund requirements, was authorized by a majority of the voters in elections held to determine whether, or not bonds should be issued for the purposes specified. So far as the writer knows no question has been raised as to their legality. So it appears that we have fastened upon ourselves valid and binding obligations to burden us and our children for several years to come.

Salary Reductions.

"It has been suggested that the salaries of county officers be reduced as a means of relief. In this connection it should be remembered that in Texas county officers elect-

JUSTICE HICKMAN TO SEEK PLACE ON SUPREME COURT

EASTLAND, Jan. 23.—Chief Justice J. E. Hickman of the eleventh district court here today announced his candidacy for the democratic nomination for associate justice of the Texas supreme court.

"In formally submitting my candidacy, I am deeply sensible of the dignity and importance of the high office to which I aspire, and shall conduct my campaign by keeping clear of party lines," he said in a brief statement.

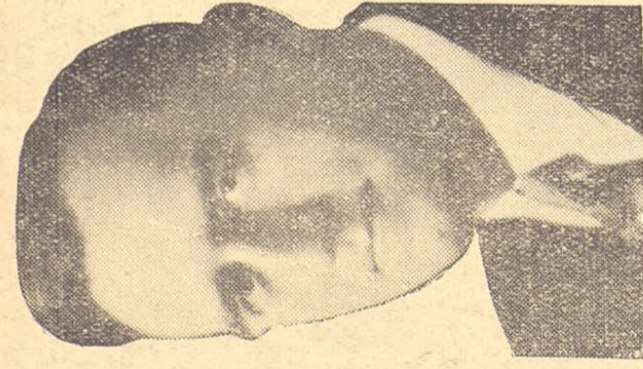

"If elected, I do not promise to take to their bench the great learning of some of the illustrious jurists who have adorned it, but I do promise that I shall be as devoted as any of them have been to the discharge of its important duties and to the upholding of its proud history."

For the past 11 years he has been a member of the board of trustees of Stander and an important part in the development of that institution.

Born 48 years ago on a farm near Liberty Hill in Williamson county, Hickman attended the public schools and during one vacation worked in an East Texas saw mill. He taught a one-teacher school at Hog mouth in Bell county for two years at $45.00 a month.

After attending the University of Texas, two years, he was for the same length of time principal of the Lampasas high school, then enrolled in the University of Texas Law school and completed the three-year course in two years. He served as student assistant to the faculty.

JUSTICE J. E. HICKMAN

Are You Proud of Your Credit Standing?

This Is the BANK that SERVICE Is Building

Successful business men jealously guard their credit rating. They realize the tremendous value of promptness in the payment of their obligations and of adequate bank balances.

Some men are thought to have a credit standing far beyond their financial ability to pay, while others with more capital are less favorable credit risks. The difference is not in capital but in character.

And credit, like character, is a matter of building. The young man should begin the building of his credit wisely by selecting a good bank and staying with it; by meeting every financial obligation promptly; by keeping well within his income, and by saving a part of every dollar he earns.

AUTOMOBILE INSURANCE

Every day one reads of damage suits from automobile accidents. Therefore one should have public liability and property damage at least. The cost is small compared to the risk one is relieved of with dependable insurance, such as we sell.

See us for all kinds of insurance—the kind that insures.
