ETHIOPIAN VICTORIES ARE REPORTED

Prosecutor Says Lynching "Will of People"

Through the Southern Methodist university's galloping Mustangs are in the danger spot this week. They are facing their crisis. Boomed throughout the country as the No. One team, heaped lavishly with praise by sports writers on the coast, at home and elsewhere, they are in the psychological spot for an upset. Arkansas may turn the trick Saturday at Fayetteville. Even if they win their game with the Porkers and go on to victory over the Bears of Baylor, the increasing confidence created would threaten every moment to become carelessness. It is a known fact that the T. C. U. Horned Frogs are shaping their course with one end in view—a victory over the Mustangs. That would do the Frogs more good than a national championship, for it takes just about all the graces that the Fort Worth sports writers possess to say a good word for the Ponies or admit they are due any credit at all.

It sure hurts those boys.

Notre Dame was on the same spot two weeks ago. The Irish, after a sensational rally to defeat Ohio State, slipped on the oil of national acclaim and fell a victim to a team already thrice beaten.

Wilson, star of the Mustang offense, came very near playing with the Cisco Lobos when Ted Jeffersons, coming from Corsicana, was coach here. He did the wise thing, however, and stayed with his home team, helping them, if I am not mistaken, to a state championship.

The praise he has drawn, however, is doubtless mighty pleasant to Miss Margaret Wilson, his sister, who is a Cisco girl. Through her, many Cisco people have a personal interest in Bobby's exploits.

Miss Wilson had quite a time locating Bobby when the Sunshine Special, carrying the Mustangs back to Dallas, paused here this morning. She ran up and down the long line of cars, following several instructions, before she located that in which the Pony star was riding. He came out in house slippers, looking as if he had been sleeping, happy to see her.

Others of the team came out, all obviously irked of the long trip. They said they had a marvelous time on the coast, but that they were not taking their victory too seriously. Shuford's leg injury was undoubtedly giving the team concern, and members of the team to whom I spoke—Tipton, Carroll and Phillips—said they were not underestimating Arkansas this week-end.

I suggested that it would be nice if the Ponies could go to the Rose bowl. Said Tipton: "I hope they give us airplanes, if we do."

Two Dallas boys in a Ford V-8 coach were having a "special" all their own. They left Dallas at the same time the Mustang train did, kept up with it clear out to Los Angeles and were keeping neck and neck with it coming back. When the train stopped here this morning, they did. And when it pulled out, they pulled out, too, keeping abreast of it into Dallas.

It begins to look as if the legislature will provide old-age pension eligibles with an empty satisfaction. A measure to authorize the pensions has been passed, but until some funds are made available the pension bill will be ineffective. The experience has occurred in many other states. No matter how much pension is authorized, the actual payments are gauged to the money available.

MOB HANGS 2 NEGRO YOUTHS AT COLUMBUS

High School Honor Girl Is Attacked and Murdered

COLUMBUS, Tex., Nov. 13. (AP)—County Attorney O. P. Moore said today he believed the lynching of Ernest Collins, aged 15 years, and Bennie Mitchell, 16 years of age, on a farm near here last night for attacking and murdering Geraldine Kollman, Columbus high school honor graduate, was an "expression of the will of the people."

Justice of the Peace E. C. Thrower said he would conduct a court of inquiry into the lynching some time today.

The town is quiet after the sullen mob of 700 citizens, including several women, jeered pleas of the Episcopal minister, Rev. E. B. Marmion, to allow the law to take its course, and hanged the negroes.

The minister leaped on the top of a car and pleaded to no avail. The negroes were taken from two officers returning them here from the Houston jail, for trial.

CCC FOREMAN IS MURDERED

RIPLEY, W. Va., Nov. 13. (AP)—J. Fulton Gunnoe, war veteran and CCC camp foreman, was hanged last night after an unidentified assailant had poured gasoline over the body, and wrapped a heavy wire around his neck and then set the body on fire.

A farmer, James Elliott, seeing the blazing body from his window, at first thought it the body of a negro. No reason was found for the horrible tragedy, as Gunnoe had no known enemies.

Leach Is Cisco Rogers Memorial Group Chairman

W. J. Leach was named chairman of the Cisco Will Rogers Memorial committee in a meeting at the chamber of commerce last night. H. Brandon was named vice chairman.

Milburn McCarty, Eastland county chairman, and Secy Davis of the Eastland chamber of commerce, attended the meeting.

Bewildering Mineral Variety Revealed in Geological Exhibit

The windows of the Cisco Gas Corp. offices are attracting large numbers of curious. Thousands of items of a geologic collection belonging to Noyes B. Livingston, Fort Worth geologist, and collected from almost all over the world are on display there. Fossils of life 200,000,000 years ago are included among exhibits of quartz, iron, lead, zinc and mercury minerals, lodestone, fantastic and beautiful formations of crystal, diamond-bearing rock from Arkansas, sharks teeth and fish fossils deposited when this country was said to have been under water 40,000,000 years ago, and an innumerable variety of other interesting rock and mineral exhibits. An explanation of how diamonds are recovered from diamond-bearing rock in Pike county, Ark., is typed beside the exhibit. Similarly, typewritten notes explain other features of the display. For instance: a lodestone, with numerous metallic articles sticking to it, ex-

Resolution to Probe Hickman Case Is Killed

AUSTIN, Nov. 13. (AP)—The house today killed the resolution to investigate the dismissal of Ranger Captain Tom Hickman by the public safety commission after two hours of arguments.

The senate granted the request of the house for a conference on the adjustment of differences on the tax bill designed to raise funds for the old-age pensions.

The house rejected the senate changes which scrapped the house omnibus bill.

The senate made no effort to instruct the conferees. The house instructed its conferees not to approve either the general or selective sales tax. Passage at this session of taxes for pensions appeared doubtful. With the session ending tomorrow at midnight, conference committees sought to adjust the differences of other major problems.

Heart Attack Fatal To Tiger Club Owner

DETROIT, Nov. 13. (AP)—Frank J. Navin, 64, owner of the world's champion Detroit Tigers baseball club, died within an hour after he fell from a horse today. He was stricken with an heart attack.

Agates From Germany.

There are beautiful agate quartz stones from Germany, harder than steel; delicate alabaster limestone from which statues of angels and other interior decorations not exposed to weathering, are carved; water clear silicates; sections of cores taken from wells in Winkler county; petrified Elberta peaches; fossilized progenitors of the scorpion family who passed from existence a hundred millions of years ago—a great and bewildering variety of forms and colorings. There are black stones as smooth and as brilliant as glass. There are rows upon rows of tiny boxes each with its different exhibit set on cotton. The more one looks, the more one sees.

Mr. Livingston, outstanding geologist who has done much work in this part of the state, said that many years were represented in the collection.

SANITATION PROJECT FOR COUNTY READY

WPA Release of Fund Surprize to County Officials

Funds for an Eastland county WPA sanitation project for pit toilet construction were made available by the San Antonio state WPA headquarters today, according to an Associated Press dispatch to the Cisco Daily Press.

The project was one of 58, calling for an expenditure of $728,000 of federal money.

The release of funds came as a surprise to the county, the commissioners court having some time ago passed a resolution expressing preference for the money to be spent on "farm-to-market" roads, County Judge Clyde Garrett said. It was the county's understanding, he said, that the transfer would be agreeable to the WPA.

Says Nation Future Rests on Character

Neither preparedness, nor the lack of preparedness will prevent the United States having a war, the Rev. J. Stuart Pearce, First Presbyterian church pastor, told the Cisco Lions club today in an address on "The Future of America."

America's destiny, in the end, he said, rests upon the character of her people.

A spiritual foundation underlies the material and political strength of the nation, he said. This spiritual foundation must be strengthened if the nation's continued peace and strength are assured.

JUNCTION OF TWO ITALIAN ARMIES MADE

Ethiopian Defense Is Expected to Center at Harar

(By Associated Press.) General de Bono reported today that the northern Italian army had joined the Danakil column to the east, and had reached Takaze river on the west.

Italians predicted that the Ethiopian defense would center at Harar or Jijiga to obstruct the junction of the two Italian columns.

Ethiopia reported victories on both fronts.

From British sources it was reported that Great Britain would deliver Mussolini a new rebuff, but is withholding an individual reply to Italy's note protesting the sanctions.

An official announcement at Addis Ababa said the warriors of Emperor Haile Selassie, despite intense fascist fire, defeated the invaders at Anele, Ogaden province.

Losses were described as heavy on both sides, with the field of battle littered with dead. Four tanks were captured, it was announced, and Ethiopia was victorious in another engagement in the same region, killing many Italian soldiers and taking six trucks.

The same communique told of a success on the northern front. Warriors, it asserted, attacked a superior Italian force and killed the commander and a large number of soldiers.

'SILLY' SAYS STATE DEPT

TOKYO, Nov. 13. (AP)—The Japanese press prominently displayed today stories saying a secret military agreement between the United States, Russia and China, providing for each of the contracting nations to place armed forces in the Orient to preserve peace there, was reported to be imminent. The Washington state department said the reports were "silly."

PEANUTS WORTH MORE THAN COTTON TO EASTLAND COUNTY

Hunting Party Will Go to Mason County

Off on their annual deer hunt Floyd Cooper, Charley Kleiner, Dr. D. Ball, Yancey McCrea and L. C. Moore will leave Friday for Mason county. This promises to be a most pleasant outing, as well as a hunting expedition. They will go prepared for a stay of at least a week, and are carrying plenty of camp equipment, provisions, etc.

Deer hunting is Floyd Cooper's annual diversion, and he generally brings home the meat. The others, too, are hunt fans, and enjoy the sport as much as Cooper, but they can hardly be said to be in Cooper's class for they sometimes fail to go—Cooper never fails.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

I, even I, am he that comforteth thee: who art thou, that thou shouldst be afraid of a man that shall die, and of the son of man which shall be made as grass.—Isaiah 51: 12.

 In sacred pages given;
 I thank thee for thy sweet commands
 That lift my thoughts to heaven.

Grabbing at Straws

RECENT state and municipal successes in this off year of politics have been grasped by the GOP as the cause of much elation in that political camp. These successes, which in no sense can be classed as indications of the national trend, have been the thread on which the republicans hang quite a bit of hope, and proclaim the new deal as waning. Except for their success in electing their candidates for the New York state assembly, thus putting that party in control of that body, other victories were practically confined to municipal elections.

None of these was a real test of the new deal's popularity, while the only real contest staged was that in Kentucky, where the issues were squarely drawn. In that state the democratic candidate came out flatfooted for the new deal, while his republican opponent was just as pronounced against Mr. Roosevelt's policies. The overwhelming majority for the democratic candidate, "Happy" Chandler, was a decisive victory for President Roosevelt's policies, as Chandler polled a record-breaking majority when the people expressed their preference of his candidacy, and elected him Kentucky's next governor. If there be any significance in the few state and municipal elections recently held, surely the preponderance of evidence indicates that Roosevelt has lost little or none of his popularity.

In a few municipalities in eastern cities, it is not surprising that the republicans were successful, but when the rural vote is counted in 1936—the votes of those people whom the president's policies have benefitted by government aid—the republicans will hardly fare any better than was their fate in 1932.

BUT the GOP was so unmercifully overwhelmed in 1932 that one can excuse them for grabbing at political straws, no matter how slender such support may be.

BUT suppose, for the sake of argument, that the new deal has grown in disfavor, and any considerable portion of the voters should lean toward republicanism, where on earth with the GOP find a Moses to lead them out of the political morass?

THEIR leaders have been casting about for several months to pick a winner with ill success. At the present time none of those brought out from the political corral could get in hailing distance of Roosevelt, except Borah, who would hardly carry the electoral vote of a single Eastern state, although it is conceded he would be a winner in the West.

Landon of Kansas, seems to be in favor of the higher-ups of the GOP crowd, but Landon, while popular in the western part of the nation, would have to endorse the AAA, of which President Roosevelt is the daddy, to get anywhere. Should he do this it would hardly avail, as there would be no necessity of turning down the author of the farm policy to support an unknown quantity in the candidacy of Governor Landon.

EVERY indication points to the fact that the republican party is up against the real thing, and that there is little hope for that party's success next year.

NONE of the candidates mentioned seems inclined to accept the empty honor of the GOP nomination, except the fat boy from California, Ex-President Hoover, whose political lightning rod has been elevated for several months to catch a flash of presidential current that may be wandering around in the, as yet, political stratosphere.

He Didn't Fit In

DISMISSAL of Ranger Capt. Tom Hickman from service by the Texas Safety Commission will cause regret, especially among those in whose imaginations still lingers the romance of the ranger service. Hickman, one of the state's most colorful and, no doubt, efficient peace officers, was a foremost representative of the ranger ideal. His exploits gave him a great deal of notoriety and built up in the public mind a conception of him as the best physical expression of that famous clan of officers whose long and glorious history parallels the state's growth from a wilderness to a great commonwealth.

BUT the requirements for a police force for today's demands are not those of a generation or so ago. Very likely, Mr. Hickman's ideals, gained in the old school of individual exploits, conflicted with the plans of those charged with the development of a compact, well-organized and centrally directed force which alone can cope with modern crime. It's apparently just a case of two vastly different ideals clashing, with Mr. Hickman resorting to an individualism that amounts to insubordination. The Texas Safety Commission is charged with the task of building an institution, and no matter how colorful may be the old ranger ideal, how effectively it may have served in the days when enforcing the law was the task of the "lone wolf" type of officer, the commission ought not to be impeded in its efforts. It's mighty fine—for the officer—to have a roving commission and to exercise the authority of arrest wherever and whenever one pleases. But that is neither necessary nor effective in this day. It amounts, dangerously at times, to autocratic methods; and the officer who can't fit into an organization, like any other employe who can't fit, will have to go. Hickman would make a wonderful officer, no doubt, but "you can't teach an old dog new tricks."

contemplated. That is, break up both operating and holding companies with a flood of federal hydroelectricity at low and possibly subsidized rates.

There are other straws on the highline. Rural Electrification Cooke is figuring out how much it will cost for Uncle Sam to finance a national distribution system tying in with 'Quoddy, the St. Lawrence, Grand Coulee, Bonneville, TVA's Alabama plant. Though the White House will contest the Coleman crackdown to the last ditch, it is preparing to fall back on a Hindenberg line if necessary.

DIVISION—World war veterans still have a "last long mile" to march before they collect their bonus. Though 1936 is a reelection year, several moves not visible even to an American Legion lobbyist's sharp eyes may darken a hitherto bright prospect of payment.

Secretary Morgenthau has too many troubles—excess reserves, potential inflation, silvery chaos in China, budgetary fixings—to talk about the bonus, but nobody expects him or the president to budge from their veto dugout. They can't afford to. They will oppose liquidation of the certificates unless congress digs up the extra cash with new taxes. That will be a poser.

There is dissension in the vets' camp—as always. Last year the Veterans of Foreign Wars ganged behind the Patman inflation measure, while the Legion held dignified aloof. Both were playing hero politics, suspecting that no bill could pass over a veto. Now they must make good. The VFWs have proposed joint action but the Legion's inner council hasn't accepted the invitation. Some want to introduce their own bill, grab the glory—if any—and build up prestige and membership. That may make them easy game for the budget balancers.

SPEED—Inauguration of Pan-American's trans-Pacific airline late this month heralds the first move toward establishment of a commercial round-the-world aerial railroad. Official and unofficial negotiations for making a pessimist out of Jules Verne are closer to realization than the travelling public dreams.

Pan-American will fly mail and passengers from San Francisco to Canton in six days. A one-day leap from the Chinese port will hook up with the Dutch KLM line near "Rangoon across the bay" and this service will be installed soon. KLM will carry people in a hurry into London in seven days. Pan-American or British interest may soon furnish service direct from London to New York by way of the Azores and Bermuda. Dickering with the governments involved—Great Britain and France—have slowed down only because of concentration on perfecting the trans-Pacific route.

Within three years—possibly less—it will require only 18 days to gird the globe from Newark airport. Aviation experts shy away from public promises but they predict that stratospheric flying—30,000 instead of 3,000 feet up—will cut the time to 12 days, perhaps less. Blueprints for stratospheric ships and lanes are on the drawing boards now.

SHIFTS—Democratic students of higher political mathematics say they have solved a vastly important problem.

After excavating scattered election returns since President Roosevelt's first year, they come up with the conclusion that he has wooded and won at least 75 per cent of a vote which used to line up almost solidly for the GOP. They are thinking of the Italian, the Jewish, the colored electorate.

Several subtle moves are believed to have won over the negro vote. Pennsylvania democrats enacted a law conferring complete social equality on the colored people. Senate democrats sponsored the anti-lynching bill. Colored people, GHQ never fails to add, exercise tremendous political influence in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Michigan.

NESTOR—Senator Norris' apparently irrevocable decision not to run again means a heartbreak to a small group of conspirators at Washington which had tried to fire his ambition. It consists of New Deal friends and several sympathetic senators on Capitol hill.

Norris confided to them months ago that he planned to quit. He explained that he didn't want to stay in the senate too long—couldn't stand it to have people say they knew him "when he was good." Straightway they set out to rekindle his interest in public life and questions. They warned him that his power crusade still stood in jeopardy. They persuaded him to sponsor a program for federal subsidy of cheap power distribution. They thought they had won.

They haven't abandoned hope. The Norris announcement, Washington learns, was made before he learned of the Baltimore upset of the holding company law. Betting is even that if his equally aged colleagues on the supreme court undermine other New Deal pillars during its current term, the senator will match his age against theirs—and run again!

NEW YORK.

By JAMES McMULLIN.
POWER—Astute utility leaders sound a note of quiet warning in the midst of the industry's jubilation about Judge Coleman's decision declaring the holding company act unconstitutional. They point to three reasons why the ruling isn't nearly as conclusive as right wing optimists seem to believe.

First, the Coie man dictum—even if sustained by the court of appeals and the supreme court—applies only to one small holding company in receivership. It is risky to deduce assurance of blanket exemption for all other holding companies from that. Second, American states power—the company in question—in no case transmits current across state lines, although its properties are scattered. The government will have a much stronger case where the interstate angle is directly involved and the supreme court might well take cognizance of the distinction.

Finally, keen utility men are not forgetting that the administration still has power to make them vastly uncomfortable in other directions—and will probably use it with gusto if its pet measure is rendered null and void.

APPEAL—Here are some behind-the-scenes angles on the Coleman bombshell suggested by insiders on both government and utility sides of the fence.

1. The decision crystallized the determination of most holding groups not to register with the Securities Exchange commission on December 1. Almost without exception the important companies have definitely decided to balk.

2. But balking won't just be a matter of ignoring the registration provision of the law. New York legal factories are busy drawing up applications to the courts for injunctions to prevent the Securities Exchange commission from requiring registration. These applications will be filed some days before the December deadline. If granted, they will provide a defense against penalties for non-registration.

3. Keen right wing observers privately admit that Judge Coleman's interpretation of the constitution—as expressed in his opinion—was extraordinarily strict. They figure this leaves a loophole the government can use to advantage in arguing the case higher up. The judge's contempt for the will of congress might also boomerang harshly on the utilities when congress meets again.

4. The threat to tax utility holding companies out of existence if the present law is ruled out is not taken seriously. It would involve too many risky complications with other industries.

5. It can now be told that Attorney General Homer Cummings never did give a clear-cut opinion on the constitutionality of the holding company law—although he was asked to do so by Congressman Rayburn and others.

Burco, Inc.—official plaintiff in the American states power case—is sure to appeal—if only to avoid substantiation of the government's charge of collusion. Legal sharps say that either the court of appeals or the supreme court would probably allow the government to enter a presentment even at this late date—and thus become a direct participant in the case if it chooses.

CASH—Some republican analysts look back to 1920 for encouragement as to '36 prospects. They point out that popular resentment against government interference with business, high taxes and a high cost of living beat Wilsonism—and that none of these "evils" had developed to nearly the extent they have under FDR. They also remark that they don't need a nominee yet—recalling that Harding was successfully built up between his nomination and election.

Shrewd impartial observers doubt that the comparison is valid. They comment that Wilson was at the end of his road, that the Cox-Roosevelt ticket offered weak opposition and that almost any republican with enough money behind him could have won.

However, they admit there will be plenty of cash on deck this time also.

LIVELY—GOP backstage strategists count the northeast—from Maine to Maryland—as in the bag for '36. They hope it that their fire can be most profitably concentrated on the section between the Alleghenies and the Mississippi and on the Pacific coast—and that strong nominees from these sectors will be the most effective prescription.

Arthur Vandenburg has deliberately shunned the spotlight lately. He's perfectly eligible if a senator is to be chosen. But New York sharps rate Charles McNary of Oregon even more so. McNary has played his cards cleverly and offended nobody, including Mr. Hoover. He would probably be acceptable to both liberals and conservatives.

Astute observers are intrigued at the thought of a McNary-Ickes ticket—though they don't consider it probable. Ickes is, after all, a republican and no longer happy in his New Deal setting. He's anathema to New York—but he might run strong in Illinois and he would be harmless in the vice-presidency. It's figured that the GOP would at least be able to put up a lively argument with such a combination.

GRACIOUS—Wall street got a chuckle out of Mike Meehan's selection of Edward J. Flynn as his counsel for the SEC hearing. Flynn is still a very important cog in Jim Farley's New York state democratic organization.

This puts both Farley and the SEC in a delicate spot. If Flynn is successful in clearing his client of the accusations pending against him there are sure to be whispers of political influence. Actually there is no evidence that Flynn carries any weight at all in Washington.

The commission was graciousness itself in postponing the hearing to give Mr. Flynn time for a jaunt to Europe first. But those who should know say this was not so much due to a desire to oblige Mr. Flynn as it was to the fact that this arrangement would give a chance to work out its charges against Meehan in greater detail.

Advertising is not an expense—its life blood of any business.

WASHINGTON.

By RAY TUCKER.

SQUEEZE—"Quarterback" Roosevelt executed a slick lateral pass against the public utilities, with Premier King of Canada on the receiving end, at their White House powwow. The appointment list on the press bulletin board innocently announced "5 p. m.—Premier King for tea." Secretary Early broadcast that the executives would talk trade treaty.

But those in the know wondered why Frank P. Walsh was recalled to a Washington tea party from San Francisco, where he has been striving to pry Tom Mooney out of San Quentin. Mr. Walsh is head of the New York Power Authority and the president's adviser on development of the St. Lawrence power project. What really happened is that the lawyer submitted a brand new scheme for ending the deadlock over a power-and-navigation treaty. Mr. Roosevelt asked his eminent house guest to think it over.

Mr. Roosevelt applied the squeeze to other people—though they may not know it yet—besides the Canadian visitor. Earlier on the same day he called in Gov. Brann of Maine, whose handling of the Passamaquoddy problem has secretly displeased Washington. It may have been only coincidence but it recalled frequent suggestions that there may not be sufficient market for power if both the New York and New England projects are completed.

PREPARED—What the smart boys think the president really told his household of power experts is that he wants to push ahead with both schemes for generation of a vast supply of juice in the northeast. It is supposed to be his answer to the Baltimore decision that the holding company law is unconstitutional.

Though they won't admit it publicly, some New Deal lawyers suspect that the supreme court will uphold Judge Coleman in many details if not in all. That would put the administration in a hole it must dig out of instantaneously—at least on paper. The only dig implement in sight now is extension of the "yardstick theory" on a scale more grandiose than even the president has con-

Old Stereoscope May Show Way To New Movies

By SIGRID ARNE.
WASHINGTON, Nov. 13. (AP)—Grandmother's old stereoscope with its colored picture post cards soon may set off a revolution in the motion picture industry comparable to the one which happened when sound equipment was introduced.

Those stereoscope pictures had a depth and reality at which moving picture research men are casting a jealous eye. They would like to transfer that quality to their films and they begin to see a way to do it.

They gathered for a program here which forecast to their minds the manner in which movie fans will be viewing their favorite stars in a few years.

Besppectated Audience.
The most obvious difference was the appearance of the audience. They all wore glasses which looked like dark sun glasses. The pictures, they said, were so round and real they found themselves craning their necks from one side to another to see around objects in the film just as people in a legitimate theater crane their necks to see around a pillar in their line of vision.

The pictures they viewed were just stills of pieces of sculpture and buildings prepared by Dr. Clarence Kennedy, of Smith college, for his classes. But motion picture engineers believe they can be duplicated in film for moving pictures.

If motion picture films are made to take over the old stereoscopic magic, research men foresee a change in technique. Two pictures will have to be made of each scene through camera lenses set as far apart as the eyes of the average human being.

How It Works.
Those films could be superimposed on each other, and that's where the glasses worn by the audience come in. They are made so they can pick out the two images on the film sending the one meant for the right eye to the right eye, and the one meant for the left eye to the left eye. That would duplicate the manner in which human beings see, since the eyes actually get two slightly variant images when one looks at an object.

There were amusing angles to the discussion of the new methods. Homer G. Tasker, a research engineer of Long Island City, and president of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, voiced the practical question: "Will movie fans consent to wearing glasses?" If they do the glasses probably will be handed out at the door in separate paper envelopes. They will have to be sterilized between each wearing, and it may be that the more particular fans will want to purchase their own pair.

Maybe the individuals with unusually wide set eyes or those with unusually narrow heads will have to select their theater seats with more care, Kennedy said. Those with wide set eyes seeking seats in the back of the theater, and those with narrow heads in the front.

Lou Gehrig Recalls Time Will Rogers Imitated Judge Landis at Banquet

Will Rogers loved baseball—and baseball loved Will Rogers. A year ago Rogers attended every game of the World series between St. Louis and Detroit. He spent all of his time with the players of both teams and the newspapers covering the series.

He wrote much about them then, but now Lou Gehrig, star of the diamond, tells about Rogers.

"I had met Will Rogers several times casually, but the first time I had the opportunity of receiving the full benefit of his rare wit and personality was at an affair given by the Baseball Writers of New York during the winter three or four years ago. This annual affair is an exclusive stag dinner attended by approximately seven hundred baseball luminaries, including players, managers and all executives. The baseball writers act as hosts, and during the dinner a show is given, and believe you me, it is a razzing contest from start to finish.

"On this particular evening, after much revelry (it was a festive occasion—you can imagine), Will Rogers arose to speak. Judge Landis was seated next to him. From somewhere Rogers had obtained an old battered hat, the duplicate of Landis', also a cane. He put the hat on, leaned his chin on the cane, a characteristic pose of the august high priest of baseball.

"His caricature was so utterly amusing that the entire audience was on the verge of panic. I only wish I could remember each and every witticism he uttered that night. The outstanding burlesque was his take-off of the judge handing down his decision on the twenty-nine million dollar Standard Oil case, in which Landis had gained prestige some years previous. He held his audience for one hour straight, and needless to say, the one who enjoyed it most, being almost steadily convulsed, was Judge Landis himself.

"This is the night that will always remain in my memory of Will Rogers; a night when I was fortunate to be among those present when our most typical American was his most lovable self—and in rare humor."

Loboes Are Seeking First Conference Win

NOTHING BUT O'S IN DOG COLUMN, TOO

The Cisco Loboes will be trying for their first conference victory this year when they meet the Ranger Bulldogs on Chesley field Friday afternoon at 3:30. This game, postponed from an Armistice day Monday afternoon date, when the teams traditionally meet, is promised an afternoon of dry, crisp, sun-drenched weather, inviting a large crowd. It will be the only football game in the Oil Belt on that date, and the attraction of the intense rivalry that has always existed between the two clubs should draw well.

Neither the Cisco team nor the Bulldogs have won a conference game this season. The Loboes have come the nearer, with a tie with the Eastland Mavericks, conquerors of the Bulldogs, to their credit. Both teams, moreover, are facing their last chance.

The Ranger eleven has the prospect of being slaughtered by the Breckenridge Buckaroos who walloped Abilene 26 to 0 to take the district title Monday afternoon, while the home clan has the slightly less dreary prospect of being butchered Thanksgiving to make an Abilene holiday.

So, all in all, folks, it's a victory Friday or bust.

Cisco and Ranger will both be in good shape for the fray. The long rest is giving time for injuries to heal and team morale to improve, so that when the clubs clash here they should be in the best of condition.

The game will start at 3:30.

About four years ago a Notre Dame football enthusiast offered the tip that a freshman named Andy Pilney was kicking, passing and carrying the ball at South Bend with a deftness that promised to earn him a place along side of George Gipp. Jim Crowley, Christie Flanagan, Marchy Schwartz and other great halfbacks in the Irish hall of fame.

"This kid Pilney is the best looking prospect I have seen in many a day," he purred. "A couple of years ago when he was playing with Harrison high school, in Chicago, he was the outstanding schoolboy back in the mid-west. Paste this in your hat—he's going to have plenty to do with bringing the Irish back to the high place they held under Rockne."

Leaps to Fame.

We sort of kept an eye on Pilney all through the last two seasons. Despite his glowing high school and freshman records he proved just another fair back on the Notre Dame squad. There was nothing about his work to mark him as a stand-out.

When the present season got under way this fall he was ranked as understudy to Bill Shakespeare. It was not until the fifth contest of the current campaign, against Navy, that Pilney was "uncovered."

Both of Notre Dame's touchdowns resulted from Pilney passes. He earned his spurs by playing the leading role in that 14-0 triumph over the Midshipmen.

In the Ohio State contest he rose to even greater heights when he inspired a Notre Dame team, which to all outward sign was beaten by the Buckeyes' first half scoring assault.

Almost unaided he carried the ball twice to first downs in the disastrous first half. In the first two periods the blocking of his mates was woefully weak and inadequate. But by his own efforts Pilney showed them that it was not impossible to gain through the giants of Ohio State.

A Wounded Hero.

Once they were satisfied they could gain they started to go to work on whittling down the 13-point lead the big Buckeyes enjoyed. And urged on by Pilney they started to go places.

In the second half, after he had run and passed Notre Dame to two touchdowns and was threatening in the final minute to put over the winning score, he was carried off the field on a stretcher.

The finishing blow came after Pilney had slipped by a flock of tacklers and had fought his way for a 32-yard gain. He was brought down hard. And when the group of Ohio State giants was unpiled, Pilney failed to regain his feet. A hurried examination in the dressing room disclosed a torn ligament in his left leg.

The first impression was that his playing days, so far as the present campaign is concerned, are over.

TIGERS OUTCLASSED, SOONERS WIN, 20 TO 6

Don Faurot's Missouri Tigers were skinned at Columbia by the smashing attacks of Biff Jones' Sooners, the game ending in a 20 to 6 victory for Oklahoma. COAST WRITERS BOOM SMU PONIES FOR ROSE BOWL

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 13. (AP)—Los Angeles sports writers urged today the selection of Southern Methodist as the eastern representative in the Rose Bowl game at Pasadena, Calif., on New Year's day.

The aerial circus from Dallas was praised in extravagant terms for the way it defeated U. C. L. A. at the Coliseum here yesterday.

Said Sid Ziff, sports editor of the Herald-Express: "Yesterday's hero was nifty Bobby Wilson, a halfback who does everything but personally tack up the scores on the scoreboard. He passes like Howell, catches like Don Huston and runs like Bobby Grayson."

"It's not possible, you say? Then you weren't among the thousands who saw the exhibition in the Coliseum yesterday. When he trotted from the bowl before the game was over, he waved happily at the crowd. 'We'll be seeing you again,' the gesture seemed to say. 'I wouldn't be surprised. We can't see enough of Wilson and his Texas Mustangs and if they are looking around for a Rose Bowl nominee they needn't prow further than Dallas.'

Maxwell Stiles, sports writer for the Examiner, was only a little less enthusiastic: "No Texas team has ever been considered for the Rose Bowl game, but this one should be if it goes through undefeated. S. M. U. meet Texas Christian, also undefeated, in a crucial game at Fort Worth Nov. 30."

"The winner of that game would probably carry on the recently acquired custom of pinning back the ears of the far west representative at Pasadena and there ought to be a better reason than that for not inviting the Texas champions."

Braven Dyer, sports columnist for the Times, puts it in this way: "I don't suppose our friends up in San Francisco will listen to advice from Los Angeles, but if the Golden Bears of Stanford want to fill the Rose Bowl New Year's day they can be assured of a capacity crowd by inviting the Mustangs."

"Efforts will no doubt be made to secure Princeton but you can have the Tigers—Southern Methodist has color and speed, which are two of the greatest attractions in any branch of competition."

For The Bridge Player

By TOM O'NEIL, Guile.

Squeeze plays are effective against good defense only when there is a certain entry from the hand containing the long suit to the other hand of the contracting partnership.

Against players who follow the cards and count at all it is futile for the declarer to run his long suit in the hope that the defenders will discard in such fashion that side cards in the dealer's hand will become winners.

A real squeeze requires that either or both defenders must have to protect two suits. If there is no entry from the declarer's hand to the faced hand it is easy for the defenders to deduce what the declarer has left in his hand and to discard accordingly.

But supposing the defenders think there is an entry! Then a pseudo squeeze may be effective at times against players who know the mechanics of a real squeeze. For instance:

Table with columns for North, West, East, and South, showing card distributions like S-9 4 2, H-Q 5, D-9 7 6 3, C-A J 7 5.

South bid a spade. After West's pass, North offered one no trump. East thought he'd better pass to see what happened.

have at least 70 per cent sound meat.

The Humble Peanut.

"The humble peanut is a more profitable crop than the yield of cotton in Eastland county, on the same acreage," according to C. Metz Heald, county agent. "There are about 18,000 acres planted to peanuts in the county," Mr. Heald said, "and the crop will sell for more money than the same acreage planted in cotton with much less labor for production and harvesting."

"This 18,000 acres should, at 20 bushels to the acre, produce 360,000 bushels, which at 90 cents per bushel, will amount to about $324,000, plus 15 cents per bushel benefits under the peanut program, equalling $54,000. Add to this the value of the hay at $4 per ton for 18,000 tons, will bring the farmers of Eastland county the neat sum of $72,000. Making a grand total of $450,000, approximately, for the peanuts, diversions and hay should be worth $450,000 to Eastland county farmers this year, or nearly one-half million dollars."

"By the peanut program our farmers will be paid this $54,000, not for reducing the peanut acreage, but for maintaining the normal acreage. Eastland county was allotted 25,500 acres, but only a little more than 18,000 acres was planted."

"This same land planted to cotton would bring the farmers only about $125,000. So, by these figures it will be seen that the humble peanut is a rather profitable crop, at that," he said.

Numbers of the states have passed bills providing for monthly payments to the eligible aged ranging from $15 down to the state's share. In most of them, however, the old people are getting at best a few cents a month. The treasury is empty. No adequate method of raising the money was authorized. It's just an instance of mass political skulduggery that could have been avoided had the framers and promoters of the amendment presented, simultaneously with it, a method for raising the funds. Had the voter been aware when he voted that he would also have to pay the bill the old-age pension plan would have been adopted in authoritative fashion.

But the manner in which it was adopted amounts to tantalizing the aged. It is unfair, to say the least.
