ANOTHER COMMUNIST SCARE.

"While extra squads of policemen watched outside the supreme court today acted on approximately 100 cases," reads a Washington dispatch. "The guards were on duty because of threats and a communist demonstration would be staged urging that seven negroes condemned to death for assaulting two white girls in Scotsborough, Ala., be freed." Regardless of the special guards and all the hoop that goes with it, the correspondent closed his story thus: "Nothing happened to upset the customary solemnity of judicial proceedings." Reds did not appear. Not a red flag was flaunted in the District of Columbia.

It was the same old game that was worked in 1896 when William J. Bryan made his race against William McKinley. Mark Hanna directed the republican campaign. He discovered Reds behind every bush from coast to coast and his publicity agents spread the news from coast to coast and from Canada to Mexico that in the event of the election of Bryan there would be red uprisings in American cities and towns, and death would come to the republic founded by George Washington. Well, the stars and stripes still floats high in the air. There were no red uprisings in that memorable year. There will be no red uprising this year regardless.

Just now Samuel J. Insull and the lesser Insulls have a front page preference and the Insulls are not reds. Samuel was the financial contributor to the cause of Big Bill Thompson for 12 years in the city of Chicago. One Frank Smith was the chairman of the state corporation commission of Illinois which "regulated" public utilities of all kinds. Samuel decided that Smith should be sent to the United States senate. He financed the campaign of Smith. Republicans elected Smith. It must have been a raw job. A republican senate dominated by progressive-republicans and democrats denied the right of Smith to take his seat. They declared a vacancy and sent Smith back to Illinois.

Now Samuel is in Greece and Martin, his brother, is in Canada. Martin is a British subject. He never asked for citizenship papers, although he made a handsome fortune in America and waxed fat and strong under the protection of many of our peculiar laws. Really, this was the first frontal attack made upon the $3,000,000,000 inland empire builded by Samuel Insull, one of the most marvelous financial geniuses and captains of industry and builders and developers that America has known. He was caught in the crash. He paid the penalty. In this land of the free an empire king of power and finance may be monarch of all he surveys one day and a pauper in foreign climes a very few days thereafter.

ENGLISH SPINNERS AND EMPLOYEES.

Master spinners of Great Britain recommended that wages of 200,000 Lancashire cotton spinners be reduced at the rate of 20 1-2 pence per pound. Workers had offered to accept the reduction of 9 3-4 pence, expressing willingness to accept even a greater reduction if employers restored a 48-hour working week. Employers indicated a readiness to do this if operatives would accept a reduction of 20 1-2 pence. Negotiations then broke down. Now the master spinners and their vast army of employees are ready to sign up and resume activities in all the Lancashire district. Southern cotton growers are interested. There is a heavy cotton surplus. A foreign market with a fair advance in price would do more to increase the purchasing power of the American growers than all campaign speeches from now until doomsday.

FREIGHT LOADINGS IN OCTOBER.

According to the American Railway association, car-loading for the week ending Oct. 1 was the highest for any week so far this year. Well, this is a little earful and it should be cheerful. "Up and down" is the story of the ticker. It required 11 years of close research work to convince Calvin Coolidge that "America could be sold short" and one year to convince him that the republican party had not discovered and caused to function "continuous prosperity with never a lean year in the distance." Now his excuse is, "It might have been worse." His advice is that it never pays to vote a political change in times of stress. Why not? Even a Percheron draft horse, after the animal has become broken and useless for further activities, is relegated to the green pastures.

COL. LEW WENTZ BACK ON JOB.

Col. Lew Wentz, republican millionaire oil man and philanthropist, is back on the job as state highway commissioner of Oklahoma. Gov. Bill Murray removed Wentz early in April. Wentz is not a rubber stamp man. He is not a "yes" man. Gov. Bill said he was going to throw Wentz into the political ash can, and then the removal act followed. Oklahoma has a state supreme court, "mostly democrats elected by all the people. Wentz appealed to the court. What happened may be ancient history. After a thorough review of the constitution and the statutes of Oklahoma the supreme court lifted Wentz out of the ash can and declared that the act of the governor was unconstitutional, illegal, arbitrary and without the pale of the law or the constitution or the statutes. Col. Wentz is back on the job. Now the state highway commission of Oklahoma has two democratic members and a republican. Gov. Bill will continue to boss the two democratic members of the commission, but in the future he will permit the colonel to follow the bent of his own mind without a rubber stamp attachment. 'Tis well.

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

Miss Laura Lou Waring, personable and silent (?) member of the firm of Butts and Wright, has developed into a Santa Claus. Visitors in her office Saturday morning produced a casual demonstration in psychology by their reactions as to what she was endeavoring to accomplish with a shoe box, sundry wires and some ingenious use of the scissors upon a sheet of cardboard.

Their guesses ranged from preparations for a box supper to the construction of a theater of marionettes.

It developed that she wished to hinge the lid of the shoe box so that it would open and close. Judge J. J. Butts produced a pocket knife and offered a solution.

"A woman," remarked the Judge sententiously, "isn't fit for anything but to pull an apple off a tree and make a man eat it."

"At any rate," retorted Miss Waring, "she can make the man eat it." The Judge merely grinned.

An explanation of this cryptic industry was finally produced. A little netting required a steamer trunk to keep her doll dresses in order. Miss Waring was making her one.

Comes from Eastland a letter that should interest the bridge hounds. Thirty-five thousand players are going to participate in one gigantic game. "Precisely at 8:01 p. m. on the night of October 19, 35,000 contract bridge players in the United States and Canada will engage in the greatest competition in the history of sport."

The competition is known as the American Bridge Olympic. The contest will be scattered all over the continent and a section of it will be held at the Community club rooms at the library building at Eastland with Mrs. James H. Cheatham as game captain. Cisco bridge players may take part and reservations for tables or couples or individuals may be obtained by calling Mrs. Cheatham at once at once.

A wonderful opportunity to dignify the family scrap with a worthy motive. More than 200 gold and silver trophies will be awarded state, province and national winners.

Rigdon (Handsome) Edwards, who is trying to get a monopoly on the gasoline and car lubricating business in Cisco, is considerably torn up just now. He has detoured all business to rebuild the drive-way at his service station. But he expects to be back stronger than ever. Rigdon has a reputation for being hard-headed.

It is said of him that while riding on the train between Abilene and Fort Worth when a student at McMurry college, he persisted in sticking his head and shoulders out of the car window. The conductor, passing him touched him on the shoulder. "Better keep your head on the inside," he advised.

"I can look out of the window if I want to," said Rigdon, stubbornly. "All right," agreed the conductor, "but if you damage any of the iron work on the bridges you'll pay for it."

RUMANIAN CORN CROP REPORTED FOR EXPORTING

BUCHAREST Oct. 15. — The official estimates for this year's grain harvests contain bad news for the Argentine corn grower, foreseeing an early entry of Rumanian corn on the world market in competition with the Argentine product.

United States and Canadian wheat and barley growers will, on the other hand, be relieved from a large part of the usual competition from this quarter due to a poor crop coupled with a high tariff, and a virtual ban on wheat and barley imports.

The official figures always must be discounted as too optimistic. That is true of this year's official estimate of a total corn crop of 610,000 carloads. The official prediction that 300,000 carloads will be available for export is being discounted to 250,000 carloads by experts and dealers, because large amounts will have to be used domestically as substitute for wheat. But due to the warm, dry weather the crop is expected earlier this year, so that large shipments can be made before the Danube freezes.

Even if the new corn is not fully dried, there still are approximately 75,000 carloads of the 1931 crop ready for shipment, so that the Argentine grower must reckon with Rumanian competition from Nov. 1 this year.

This last-year corn will not raise the estimated export figure of 250,000 carloads, however, since the Rumanian farmer always holds back anywhere from 50,000 to 100,000 carloads of the new crop until he can see what the next year will bring in this case until next August.
