Lone Star Company Gives Testimony at Rate Hearing

PUTS VALUE OF ASSETS AT 72 MILLION

FORT WORTH, Nov. 1.—Opening a steamer trunk filled with cost records the Lone Star Gas company today presented testimony showing a marked decrease in its earnings at the gas rate hearing before the Texas Railroad commission here.

Lone Star testimony was ordered first over the objection of its attorneys. "We urge the right to be confronted with complainants' testimony first," attorneys declared.

"I feel that the company should first prove the fairness of its rates, if it is able to do so," said Commission Chairman C. V. Terrell.

D. A. Hulcy, chief auditor of the Lone Star Gas company, Dallas, was the first witness.

The grand total cost of Lone Star's physical and intangible assets as of December 31, 1931, was $72,186,033, he testified.

Actual cost of public service properties was $47,776,749 for the 12 months ending December 31, 1931, evidence showed.

After deducting operating expenses uncollectible bills and other expenses the amount available for depreciation and the company's own revenues was $4,605,721, or a ratio of 9.64 per cent.

This ratio, regarded an index to the company's earning situation, declined to 6.39 per cent as of August 31, 1932, the latest 12-month report available.

THOMAS RUNS CAMPAIGN ON LITTLE FUND

By SANDOR S. KLEIN
United Press Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—A story of rigid economy is written in the campaign expense reports sent to the headquarters by Norman Thomas, tall, broad-shouldered Socialist presidential candidate.

They also hint of the type of campaign conducted almost single-handedly by the athletic-appearing former minister, who hopes to poll the largest vote ever gathered by a Socialist candidate.

Norman Thomas' campaign party consists of his wife, Violet, and himself. Unlike his democratic and Republican opponents, Thomas had no publicity men.

Expenses Averaged $5 Per Day
His living expenses have averaged no more than $5 a day for himself and his wife.

On his round-trip transcontinental tour he took advantage of summer excursion rates. His 19-day Midwestern tour cost $229.41. The expense account showed the expenditure of $1.15 in one day for meals, tips, taxi.

Out-travelled Opponents
His headquarters here estimate he has covered perhaps 20 times as much mileage as his opponents.

ROOSEVELT IS CONFIDENT OF NEW ENGLAND

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 1.—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt on his campaign tour through southern New England came to the capital of Rhode Island today expressing confidence that this state will be in the democratic column next Tuesday as it was in 1928.

Police estimated that nearly 50,000 persons lined the streets through which the governor's automobile and Roosevelt said:

"These great receptions indicate a clean sweep of New England for the democratic party."

SAN ANTONIO, Nov. 1.—Sergeant Frank Brandstetter was killed today in an automobile wreck near Kirby, Texas. Sergeant E. D. Coombs was believed fatally injured.

INDIGNATION MEETING HELD BY CITIZENS

About 75 Cisco citizens gathered at the chamber of commerce last night in an indignation meeting voiced the city's increasing resentment at what was declared the "outrage" perpetrated on Cisco by the district committee of the Interscholastic league, and determined to call a larger meeting of Lobo football fans at the country club this week to decide upon further action in the Cisco suspension case.

At that meeting a decision upon two issues will be put up to the fans. They will determine whether or not Cisco will continue in the Interscholastic league next year, and, if so, whether or not the Lobos will demand to be placed in another district.

The attitude of the district committee and of those signing the supersedeas bond, in the face of numerous protests of citizens that they want the Lobos restored, is ample evidence, speakers declared, that other oil belt schools do not wish to play Cisco.

"An Outrage."
"If the citizens of these other towns knew the facts in this case they would be indignant," it was declared. "It is an outrage."

The meeting at the country club will be held this week. Its purpose is to create a spirit of cooperation among the fans of the city and to get sentiment solidified behind the Lobos.

"The matter in this district committee has handled this matter," said A. D. Anderson, "is an outrage. We cannot continue to court such treatment and we do not intend to. If the oil belt district does not want to play us, we can either find another district or we can play independent football. We are fed up on this and we don't intend to be persecuted by a group of transient school men any longer."

Several courses were discussed at the meeting. One of them was a plan to ask two or three members of each school board in the district to meet with the Cisco board and learn Cisco's side of the case thoroughly.

THE DOLLAR OR THE CITIZEN?

The news of the world is full of doubt, fear, unrest and even threatened revolution. Systems and methods born in a period of flush prosperity have fallen into confusion and disorganization. People denied bread, denied the opportunity earn a living in a world plethora with commodities and wealth that is literally stagnating, are threatening to overturn the existing order.

Crowds advance upon streets leading to Buckingham palace in London and are beaten back by desperate "bobbies." Communism is finding fertile ground in minds soured and resentful. Leaders are seeking frantically among shattered ideals and even in the wastehap of discarded economic theories for a solution to the problem. In the United States with $4,000,000,000 in gold in the national vaults, leaders are concerned to keep the currency system strong. Administration sources raise the cry of "Red" and accuse the democratic national candidates with seeking to perpetrate a glaring violation of the integrity of the dollar.

What about the integrity of the American citizen? What about keeping him at par? What about the man in the streets, these hundreds and thousands of men in the streets, begging for jobs, food, anything to keep soul and body together? What about the hundreds of thousands who shiver and starve in their homes rather than humble themselves to implore aid? If our national administration were to think less in terms of keeping the dollar together and more in terms of protecting our citizenship from the spectre of need and starvation the dollar would take care of itself. It has always taken care of itself. The ghastly truth of the matter is that the plutocratic philosophy of the republican party as exemplified in the very mind and character of the president himself, has crystallized above human values and human rights into a worship of the materiality of wealth. It attempts to reconcile that doctrine to a protection of the worker and the wage-earner, but the vital fact is that while it is strengthening the monetary unit and making it more and more precious, the ultimate unit of national power is depreciating.

We need a change of emphasis in this nation. We need a "new deal" that will put emphasis upon the man and less upon what he has. Vaults full of American gold hoarded by national alarmists and guarded by a moat of republican conservatism while millions of tons of foodstuffs waste in the fields and people starve, unable to find employment, is a wretched justification for the lack of an adequate financial policy enforced by republican regimes during the riot of speculation that attended the so-called prosperity period. They were not so concerned for the inflated dollar then. But they are tremendously concerned for the sanctity of the monetary unit now that the results of that carelessness have become expressed in human misery and suffering.

They point a shivering finger at the democratic national ticket and accuse Roosevelt and Garner of trying to "tamper" with the nation's system of currency. It is a feeble attack upon a doctrine that would exalt the citizen and restore to him his heritage of right to the economic wealth of the nation, a heritage that has been ruthlessly trampled under foot in the pursuance of policies of greed and gain.

To hell with the currency if it means a prostrated citizenship. We had better to take all the gold in the treasury and cast it into the sea and return to the unwieldy system of

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—Although Norman Thomas denies that the Socialist vote this year will be a "protest vote" on the ground that his party is the one which has a definite program, he will be receiving thousands of votes from folks who have only the vaguest idea what the program really is.

Ignorance of Socialism continues to be rather enormous, despite the fact that Thomas has expounded it in a long tour on which he spoke to audiences much larger than he had ever had before.

The Socialist program is always interesting because it is so likely to forecast many of the changes in law and government which are to be brought about within the next few years.

The record shows many such changes which were first demanded by the Socialists and although it cannot be said that they were brought about by Socialist pressure it does appear that the Socialists grab hold of various real and unescapable issues at times when the major parties consider them too hot to handle.

Thomas hopes that his vote this year will be large enough to spur the major parties to concede some of the Socialist demands, pending the day when a Socialist government can be elected.

of the other proposals of the Socialist platform of 1932 have been attracting much attention outside Socialist ranks and some of them are going to be important legislative issues until something is done about them. Already they find much support in conservative quarters.

Here are some of the demands which many non-Socialists believe to be reasonable.

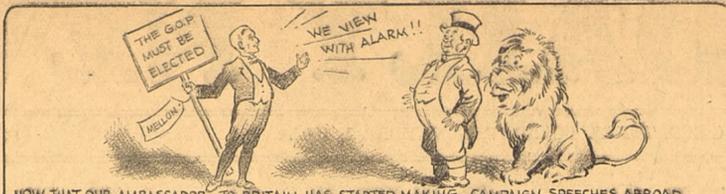

Five billion dollar bond issues for unemployment relief and for public works. Free federal-state employment agencies. Six-hour day and five-day week. Compulsory unemployment insurance. Old age pensions. Health insurance. Maternity insurance. Abolition of child labor.

Moratorium on sales of homes and farms for non-payment of taxes of unemployed workers and poor farmers. Minimum wage laws. Excess profits tax. Heavy increase in inheritance and higher corporation and individual income taxes.

Direct presidential elections. Easier constitutional amendments. Initiative and referendum. Insurance against bad weather losses for farmers. Long-term credits to farmers at low interest. Agricultural planning by national and local land utilization boards. Abolition of yellow dog contracts and guarantee of workers' right to organize.

Armament reduction. Recognition of Russia. Debt cancellation with disarmament features. Philippine independence. Entry into World Court and League of Nations. Repeal of the eighteenth amendment with governmental ownership and control of liquor industry and state local option.

Through the Editor's Spectacles

Most of us welcomed yesterday's announcement that the construction of the new Cisco post office building will be received by the treasury department for opening November 30. The construction of a $100,000 building in Cisco this winter will put a somewhat different complexion upon the employment conditions here. While it will not approach a normal condition it will act to stimulate more of the activity we need to keep from wasting away as a community. It is anticipated that the construction of the building will begin within a very short time after the opening of a contract. That is, the work should be under way by January 1.

It will be a large and beautiful structure to grace the section of town in which it is to be located. Plans and specifications for it will shortly be at the post office, W. H. Craddock, postmaster, announced. Other copies of plans may be obtained by interested parties direct from the treasury department with deposit of $15 to insure prompt return.

The notice which will be published in the Daily News will give directions for obtaining the plans.

Members of the city commission are considering the possibility of further increasing the amount of employment here this winter by the construction of settling basins at Lake Cisco with use of relief funds to provide work for jobless people. Construction of the basins will require expenditure of some city funds to provide materials and skilled labor and this is the point which is being considered.

Those charged with handling the funds consider that the best way to expend them in behalf of the unemployed is to start a construction program which will have repercussions of activity and thereby multiply many times the direct effect of the program. Work programs are contemplated by the government as the proper method of extending relief. They not only take away the stigma of charity, but they benefit the community with permanent improvements, increase material and supply business and give work indirectly to many others who would be forced to seek charitable assistance.

Now if we could get these two things to going and on top of that get a happy solution of our bonded debt question Cisco would be in pretty good shape. Sooner or later we have got to face that bonded debt question and do something about it. We can dodge it for a while and lull ourselves into a belief that nobody can do anything about it, but all the while it is hurting the city like the devil. Like the ghost in a haunted house its presence is always a chilling factor, whether we make an attempt to settle it or simply ignore it. Several of our best business houses are already quietly getting out from under the threat. Others are apt to do the same thing. Every one that does so is increasing the ultimate burden that the taxpayers of this city bear.

So we are losing as we wait.

In the Political Arena

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD
Sen. Morris Sheppard was the author of the 18th amendment. He was the co-author of the 19th amendment. In 1928 he made speeches for Smith and Robinson and voted the ticket straight. In 1930 he was re-elected to the senate by an overwhelming majority. Morris always knows where to find his political hat. He never bluffs. He never evades. He is a pro but he is a submissionist. Now he has made another announcement. He is going to vote the ticket straight all down the line from president to constable. There are many ambitious youngsters in the new democratic movement in Texas. They hope to be United States senators some day. Tom Connolly will come up for reelection first and the man who beats Connolly has some race ahead of him and the man who beats Morris Sheppard has a rocky road to travel. This is for the information of aspirants for a toga and a seat "in the greatest deliberative body of the world."

New Jersey is claimed as a doubtful state. Indeed, the Literary Digest poll gives Hoover a slight lead. It landed in the Hoover and Curtis column in 1928. It has been going democratic ever since. It elected a democratic governor by 275,000 majority. Alfred E. Smith made his opening speech of the campaign as to national candidates and national issues in the city of Newark. His presence called for the largest political gathering ever held in that city. More than 20,000 were packed like sardines in a great armory. On the outside a crowd estimated at from 100,000 to 200,000 fought like mad persons to get inside. A man was crushed to death. Sixteen were injured. Smith was given one of the most thunderous receptions of his career. According to an Associated Press writer "the crowd was in an uproar virtually throughout the state."

Smith is a big business man now. He wound up by asking his audience "to go home and see if you can find one great big public question that the republicans have made a reasonably good attempt to settle. He continued: "Instead of that we received the program of threats if the republican party is not returned the prosperity program will be retarded. I deny that and I deny it emphatically and I state from this platform to my nation-wide audience that the election of the democratic ticket is the best way to solve these problems and the best way to bring back prosperity — the election of Roosevelt and Garner." He called for democracy everywhere to go down the line, to roll up huge democratic majorities and to settle the prohibition issue and all other issues Nov. 8 by scoring a triumphant victory for Roosevelt and Garner.

Are the republican leaders desperate? Is the president of the opinion that he is leading a forlorn hope? There are 11,000,000 idle workers. Jobs are precious things. Henry Ford has followed his first statement to his employees urging them to vote the republican ticket. Now he has sent cards to all his employees telling them it is for the best interests of the nation and American industry to reelect Hoover. Henry Ford is an American citizen — an outstanding American. It is his American privilege to follow the bent of his own mind. It is for a Ford employe to follow the bent of his own mind and vote as he sees fit. But there are 11,000,000 unemployed men and women. Jobs are precious.

In all the elections of other years in the industrial centers of America workers were warned to vote republican "to save American industry." This was the system in Pennsylvania and almost everywhere else. It is a game as old as the machine age. J. M. Beatty of Columbus, Ohio, is president of the Federal Glass company. In a letter to his employes he urged them to vote for Hoover. This was his warning. "Your future and the future of your company depends upon the outcome of the election. I have never yet advocated any action on your part unless it was for your own good and in making the suggested above I am giving you better counsel than I have ever done in the past." C. W. Nash of the Nash Motors company, Kenosha, Wis., is another gentleman who is fearful of democratic rule. Upon his return to Kenosha from a swing through the wheat belt and a survey of agricultural conditions in the West, "he predicted that the placing of a democratic administration in Washington would result in a greater business stagnation than the country has yet experienced." American tariff laws forced the British-Dominion trade pact. Now more than 1200 American manufacturers have concerns established in Canada. Canadian workmen will be given the jobs. Really the tactics of the Grundy's in bygone campaigns would appear to be useless in this campaign after the republican party has wrecked the foreign markets of the world and made millions of wage earners penniless and hungry.

Ogden L. Mills is the one big hope of the Hoover administration. He has brains and he is a wonderful campaigner. Now he has been given the lie direct by Former Sen. Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma, who was one of Sen. Carter Glass' chief aides in the construction if the federal reserve banking act. When idle workers are hungry, they become desperate men. When practical politicians are up against the wall they become desperate men and never hesitate to invent falsehoods to advance their cause or candidacy. Ogden L. Mills in his Baltimore speech charged the democratic house with forcing through the Goldsborough measure "which instructed the secretary of the treasury and the federal reserve board to manipulate commodity prices." Owen of Oklahoma made reply. This is what he said: "This unjust, unfair and untruthful charge should warn the American people against accepting a proof that comes from such undependable sources! The Goldsborough bill passed the house 28 to 60 with 117 republicans voting for it. It was supported by the best economists of the world." Mills received it on the nose. He smiled and made another attempt.

The writer advises readers to give close attention to the letter of Theodore Roosevelt to William Howard Taft — written when they were friends and not political enemies. In the closing weeks of the campaign the republican spellbinders including the president adopted the Roosevelt tactics. Bryan and Taft were opposing candidates when the letters were written. This is what Roosevelt wrote to Taft: "Do not answer Bryan. Attack him. Hit him hard." It is splendid advice. Always attack. Never make reply to an attack. Another Roosevelt is on the stump meeting wonderful audiences and wild receptions. Hoover is on the stump fighting as he never fought before. Al Smith will be on the stump until the sun goes down on the eve of November election day. He is the one best bet of the democrats in the New England section and New Jersey and New York. He appears to be as fit as ever in his career. If New Jersey and Massachusetts and Rhode Island are in the democratic column the appeal of The Happy Warrior will have a vast deal to do with their winning.

STOCK MARKET FLUCTUATIONS UNIMPORTANT

In its weekly review of business and financial conditions The Wall Street Journal says:

Stocks lapsed into almost complete apathy on the New York Stock Exchange during the past week, holding to a trading rut with day to day changes in price negligible.

The flattening out in the market has accompanied reports in various trade circles attesting to a flattening out in business.

Heaviness in wheat, and the reaction in commodity prices generally, served to dampen constructive interest in stocks.

Encouraged by the good September earnings reports, the rails have given the best performance.

Individual carrier loadings reports for the week ended October 22 showed no pronounced trend in either direction, but it is apparent that the best traffic levels for the year have been reached.

The oil situation was somewhat disturbed by the court decision in Texas holding the proration in East Texas was unreasonable.

Steel activity tapered somewhat during the past week some estimates placing operations for the industry as a whole at 19 per cent at mid-week, compared with 19-1-2 per cent in the preceding week.

The week's range of the Dow-Jones averages follows.

PARIS STYLES

By MARY KNIGHT United Press Staff Correspondent

PARIS, Nov. 1. — Having shoes made to fit your foot just as you do clothes to fit your body is one of the delights here, and M. Rochet in the Rue St. Honoree is one of the few French shoemakers who know the requirements of the American foot.

Incidentally, he "shoes" some of the most aristocratic feet in France.

Many French women, having once tried American shoes, are won over by their comfort and smartness.

A new pair which M. Rochet has designed for a very particular client are of deep wine red velvet.

One side of the toe is cut out like a sandal while the other side is solid, completely covering the foot (the inside).

A strap, very narrow at the sole where it starts and widening over the instep and arch of the foot, holds it snugly in place while another strap, a fourth of an inch wide, pulls up over the heel and holds the foot even more securely.

There is no back to the shoe at all and consequently no rubbing against the part of the foot that causes many women so much trouble.

Memphis Is Leading Mule Mart of World

MEMPHIS, Nov. 1. — Memphis now claims to be the world's largest mule market.

Stockmen declare Memphis has passed St. Louis and Kansas City as a mule market.

"Mule town," where the center of the mule market is held is located at the west end of McLemore street and consists of more than two solid blocks of huge brick barns on both sides of the street.

Nearly everybody on the streets of "mule town" carries a whip or a stick. Monday and Tuesday are auction days as the animals are sold on the block.

The number of mules sold here annually depends, of course, upon business and farm conditions. The range is from 30,000 to 60,000. The average price of a mule is from $65 to $70.

The mule season opens in September, is brisk during the harvest months, falls off in the winter, comes back strong in the spring when planting begins, and ends June 1.

Mules to be sold are shipped here by the carload from Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Missouri and Illinois.

MARTIN URGES AUTHORIZATION OF CENTENNIAL

AUSTIN, Nov. 1.—An urgent appeal for support of the constitutional amendment to authorize the Texas centennial celebration for 1936, was made here today by Lowry Martin, president of the Texas Press association, in an address before the 10th district Advertising Federation of America convention.

"The proposed amendment does not appropriate any money and it does not direct the legislature to appropriate any money," Martin explained. "It merely authorizes the legislature to provide for such a celebration as it decides to be suitable, to be held at such time and places as it may designate, and to appropriate such support as it may find necessary and within the resources of the state."

The amendment is to be voted on in the general election Nov. 8. "A ballot cast for the centennial amendment will be one of the greatest acts of devotion and honor to the early heroes who blazed the trail 100 years ago to make possible the Texas of today," said Martin who is publisher of the Corsicana Sun.

"The birth of Texas as an independent commonwealth was an epoch-making event in American history. It was also the most glorious page in the history of the expansion of the United States to the Pacific and as such a part of American traditions as Concord and Lexington.

Too Important. "Our state is too important for us not to show our interest in its advancement and to carry on in an enthusiastic way for the future."

Such an event, Martin said, will advance Texas 25 years because of the advertising of Texas throughout the world.

Martin's address was a part of the program of the convention which has for its keynote the "Texas Centennial." The 10th district of the Advertising Federation of America has made an extensive educational campaign for the centennial.

The convention opened here today with a parade from the state capitol to the Driskill hotel where convention headquarters were maintained. The University of Texas band led the parade.

Arlie M. Racey, Dallas, governor of the 10th district, presided at the opening session at which Mayor P. W. McFadden of Austin gave an address of welcome.

One of the outstanding out-of-state speakers was Edgar Kobak, New York City, president of the Advertising Federation of America. His subject was "The Job Ahead for Selling and Advertising."

Other speakers included: Frank G. Huntress, San Antonio, publisher of the San Antonio Express; Shelley E. Tracy, H. C. Feister, president of the Advertising Association of Houston; and H. W. Stanley, director of trade extension division of the Dallas chamber of commerce.

Experts Enjoy Naming Relics

BILLINGS, Mont., Nov. 1. — Naming a dinosaur is more fun than picking out a name for a family's first born, as far as scientists in the Beauvais Creek region, south of here, are concerned.

Such long names as hoplitosaurus, camptosaurus, sauropod, and tyranosaurus rex have a meaning all their own, taken from some of the things for which the Greeks had a name.

Hoplitosaurus, for instance, is a combination of the Greek term for a type of heavily armed soldier—hoplite—and saurus, Greek for lizard-like. Even hoplitosaurus means a heavily-armed lizard-like animal. An almost perfect specimen the first to be found, was dug up near Beauvais creek this summer by an American Museum of Natural History expedition.

Curator Barnum Brown of the museum, head of the Beauvais creek expedition, hailed the discovery of the hoplitosaurus as the most significant achievement of the fos-il hunters this year.

Camptosaurus combines Greek words to describe a small dinosaur with a flexible neck. An herb eater, this species was identified by another nearly perfect skeleton found in 1931.

The sauropods include such gigantic dinosaurs as the brontosaurus, who had more brains in his back than in his head.

Tyranosaurus rex was the king of kings among dinosaurs — as his name indicates. Most vicious and rapacious of all the dinosaurs, he was equipped physically and mentally to be the biggest bully of a race of bullies.

Fat Stock Show May Pay Taxes

FORT WORTH, Nov. 1. — Payment of back taxes to the state and county for the past 16 years may be required of the Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show.

The Exposition is not subject to tax exemption, Baylor Agerton, tax exemption adviser, said in an opinion written for the Commissioners' Court.

Exhibit buildings of the Fat Stock Show were placed on the tax rolls at a valuation of $150,000 for the first time this year. Agerton said he was "unable to find any constitutional or statutory provisions which would exempt the property from taxation."

Money accruing from the Exposition is used for the advancement of agriculture only, the court was told.

CALL of the WEST

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Stan Ball accuses Asper Delo, timber king, of having men shot who attempt to check up on his activities. Ball says he is making a check. Dele says he will go in person and prevent it. Upon leaving the office Ball saves Dona, Dele's daughter, from kidnapers. He tells her he is Stanley Ball.

Dudley Winters, in love with Della goes with her to Three Rivers to get her father to give up the fight with Ball. Dudley gets a marriage certificate filled out, which he hopes to use. Ball is accused of killing a ranger and of wounding Dele from ambush. Dona has to show him the certificate and tell him she is married to Dudley to get him to promise to leave.

The office is raided of valuable papers and a posse headed by Swergin, Dele's timber boss, surround Ball. Dona goes out and is captured after trying to shoot Ball. He takes her to a cave. Swergin finds the cave and rescues Dona. He waits for Ball, who is out, and captures him. Swergin's men start a lynch mob while taking Ball in. Dona stands them off with her gun and frees Ball. After his escape, Dona promises to marry Dudley. Dona rides out to investigate queer workings over the ridge. Her horse is shot from under her. She regains consciousness to find Swergin being over her by the posse.

Suddenly a light of understanding broke over Stan. Malloy cared for Dona ever as he cared for her. He was not the man to say so and no one but a man who knew his type would have guessed it. Malloy was willing to do this for her without expecting her to ever know. He dropped the rider's arm awkwardly and his voice softened.

"What has he done?" he asked in a voice as smooth as oil.

"You are supposed to have shot the roan out from under her. Swergin comes to the rescue. She is lying up there now still weak and sick." Malloy's calm seemed to have burst.

"Thinking me a skunk who could not keep his word, who would shoot her down from behind?" Stan's hands closed and his eyes blazed.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLI

The cow town of Radiant is known to the straggling riders who come down out of the hills as the "jumping-off place."

It is a short half day's ride from the Mexican border and it is close to the rough country on the north and touches the edge of the burning desert on the right. In Radiant no one asks questions of strangers, and the past of each resident is a closed book. The test of a man is his ability to ride and rope.

Stan Ball leaned against a plank bar and watched a half dozen Mexican playing poker with a deck of greasy cards. He was restless and would rather have been riding in the hills for one of the many big outfits near town, but he had not been able to get a job.

He had wandered from one cow town to another. Now he had only a few silver dollars left and he would have to find a job. It might as well be Radiant as any other in the sun-baked country. Stan thought. From now on he would have to be within easy riding distance of the border.

Stan half turned upon one elbow as the swinging doors of the pool room creaked open. Few men of interest came into a place like this in the daytime, but Stan had reason to look every man over carefully. The man who entered was lank and leathery, a cow hand beyond doubt. He was covered with dust and plainly thirsty. He slapped a dollar on the bar and called for a glass of something cold.

The owner of his voice made Stan jump. With one great stride he was at the stranger's side, and had slapped him on the back.

"How are you, Malloy?" Stan grasped his friend's hand.

"Hot, dried up and mad," Malloy grinned as he recognized Ball. "But darn glad to see you."

"What brings you down here?" Stan asked.

"We'll find a corner and I'll tell you why I dragged over all these miles of half-baked grass land." He led Stan to a table across the room.

Stan was eager to ask questions but held his silence and allowed his friend to take his own time.

"I just came down from Three Rivers," Malloy's mouth hardened. "There's a job up there for you." He looked Stan squarely in the eye. Stan shook his head. "I'll never go back to Polly Mountain."

"No?" There was a glint in Malloy's eyes.

Stan looked out toward the swinging doors and his face saddened but he continued to shake his head.

"Then I reckon I'll have to shoot a man for you," Malloy spoke slowly.

"You came all the way down here to find me?" Stan demanded.

Malloy nodded. "And I'd have been on the trail for a month if I hadn't been trekked in here by accident."

Stan hesitated a minute, then asked: "What's up?"

"Swergin is raising the devil. Swears you are back." Malloy leaned an elbow on the table. "The shooting is still going on up there." Stan's left jaw shut with a snap. "And I get the blame?" he demanded.

Malloy nodded. "Old Asper is a crook or a fool."

Stan shook his head. "I can't go back," he said slowly.

"You promised the girl?" Malloy's eyes were sympathetic.

Stan smiled miserably and spread his hands in helpless gesture. "If I clean up this thing I have to get the old man into it as well as Swergin." His hands clenched suddenly. "I should have shot it out with that crook."

"You should have killed him," Malloy said simply. Stan's eyes smoldered.

Malloy got to his feet. "I know how you feel, kid. Now I got a hard ride ahead of me."

"Where are you headed for?" Stan asked.

"I'm going back to Three Rivers to kill myself a skunk." Malloy smiled.

Stan caught his friend's arm. "You can't do that. You have nothing at stake not as much as I have."

"I'll put a stop to this double-crossing," Malloy's eyes were hard. "I have stood by and watched all I can take."

"You'd do another man's job?" Stan looked Malloy squarely in the eye.

"I am in this case," Malloy spoke firmly.

Stan gripped Malloy's arm and jerked him around. "How is — the girl?" he asked.

Malloy hesitated before he spoke. "She's fine, now."

Something in the lank cow puncher's eyes made Stan grip Malloy's arm savagely. "He hasn't touched her?" he rasped.

"Not yet," Malloy answered calmly. "And I aim to make sure he don't."

Suddenly a light of understanding broke over Stan. Malloy cared for Dona ever as he cared for her. He was not the man to say so and no one but a man who knew his type would have guessed it. Malloy was willing to do this for her without expecting her to ever know. He dropped the rider's arm awkwardly and his voice softened.

"What has he done?" he asked in a voice as smooth as oil.

"You are supposed to have shot the roan out from under her. Swergin comes to the rescue. She is lying up there now still weak and sick." Malloy's calm seemed to have burst.

"Thinking me a skunk who could not keep his word, who would shoot her down from behind?" Stan's hands closed and his eyes blazed.

with sudden fury. "The rat!" he gritted.

"I figured you should have the first break at him," Malloy smiled. "But being as you don't want it I'll be more than pleased to do the job." He turned to face the door. "And I aim to get there pretty pronto."

Stan laughed a harsh laugh that made the bartender put down a glass nervously and stare at the pair in the corner.

"I'm on my way, feller," he said, "and when I get to Three Rivers you can expect action."

Malloy grinned and slapped Stan on the back. "I'll trail along with you and see that this is done according to the law and the prophet."

"You better sleep in for a day. I won't be stopping except to feed and rest the mare a bit." Stan was sure Malloy had ridden steadily in his search for him.

Malloy rubbed the back of his neck thoughtfully. "My bronc is pretty sore and tired. He'd be apt to slow up a lot." He faced Stan. "Got 40 bucks?"

Stan fished out three silver dollars and a couple of quarters. "That is my pile," he said ruefully. He extended it to Malloy.

Malloy shoved the money back. "Thought if you had 40 bucks I might buy me a fresh hoss and ride along." He tried to hide his disappointment under a wide grin. "But you run along. I have jack enough to carry me through but not enough to buy a horse that would keep up with that black mare."

"Sorry," Stan spoke with genuine regret.

"You better get a move on," Malloy said. "I'll browse around here for a while and then hunt up a bed."

They shook hands silently and parted. Stan hurried out to the town corral and whistled to the black mare. She came running to him and he saddled her rapidly.

"We got a job lady," he whispered to the mare. "We're going back to God's country." He added as he tightened the cinch.

Dobie on Muleback For Mexican Lore

VILLA ACUNA, Mex., Nov. 1. — J. Frank Dobie, author of Coronado's children, has begun a muleback trip through northern Mexico in search of tales for a book on Mexican folklore.

Traveling with only a native guide for a companion, he will go by easy stages to Mexico City, where Mrs. Dobie is writing a book on "Texas Gardens."

Dobie is on leave of absence from the University of Texas, where he is a member of the English faculty. He holds a Guggenheim research fellowship to further the folklore studies for which he is well known.

He will gather material for his new work "on the ground" from the people he meets, and particularly seeks tales about a cave he has heard of that hides 300 skeletons.

"I shan't try to discern fact from fiction in the tales I hear," he said. "If they are interesting it doesn't matter whether they are true or not."

Besides his Coronado's Children—a collection of tales concerning buried treasure—Dobie is the author of a Vaquero of the Brush Country and numerous articles on Southwestern Texas and its legends.

SMALL SCHOOLS ARE FAVORED IN DEPRESSION

Editors Note—Sturdy Texas youth and resourceful parents have refused to let economic stress prevent the youngsters' getting a college education. Here is the first of a series of United Press articles telling how they have "carried on".

By SAM D. HALES
United Press Staff Correspondent
DALLAS, Nov. 1.—The depression has reduced but slightly, if at all, the number of students in Texas colleges and universities, but many students and bill-paying parents have forsaken the larger, distant institutions this year.

A United Press survey shows although cost of board, tuition, clothes, football tickets and other collegiate necessities has dropped an average 20 per cent everywhere, more boys and girls are attending classes, having their extra-curricular fun and perhaps working a little, in the smaller schools.

The University of Texas is a notable exception. Its enrollment this fall mounted approximately 22 per cent while that in most other large schools fell. Only one other important school reported a larger gain.

Full term enrollment dropped 7 per cent, for example, at Texas A. & M. college from that last fall. There was a decline of eight per cent at Baylor University, despite reduced dormitory charges, and of around ten per cent at Southern Methodist university, though it made a 15 per cent reduction in tuition charges and ten per cent for board and rooms.

12 Per Cent Drop
There was a 12 per cent drop at Texas Christian university, where changes were almost unchanged from last year. Among negro schools, Prairie View State Normal, with costs unchanged, lost about 33 per cent of its enrollment.

While the large institutions lost, enrollment mounted at small, scattered state and denominational four year colleges and in both public and denominational junior colleges. The latter group made remarkable strides.

Texas Technological college, Lubbock, youngest state school, gained 10 per cent in its first year since 1929. Texas College of Arts and Industries, Kingsville, another young state school, likewise gained 10 per cent.

State teachers' colleges also gained. Some examples: Sul Ross, Alpine, 25 per cent; Sam Houston, Huntsville, 12 per cent; West and East Texas teachers college at Canyon and Commerce, respectively also have slightly larger student bodies than in 1931.

Among denominational schools, Howard Payne, (Baptist) college, Brownwood, recorded a 26 per cent gain in enrollment. There are one-fifth more students at Abilene Christian college than last fall and one-sixth more at McMurry college, another Abilene school. Baylor college for Women, Belton, also has more enrolled.

Freshman matriculation at North Texas Junior Agricultural college, Arlington, mounted 25 per cent over last year and the gain for the school as a whole was 20 per cent. John Tarleton Junior Agricultural college, Stephenville, had a 12 per cent increase.

Lamar Junior college, Beaumont, gained 25 per cent. Wichita Falls Junior college enrollment mounted 7 per cent and Texarkana Junior college has a slightly larger student body than last year.

Entertaining rooms were effectively decorated in Halloween colors and symbols. Later, the party had a "spooky" walk to the picnic

RANDOLPH STUDENTS HAVE HALLOWEEN PARTY.
A Halloween party was given Saturday evening for Randolph college students at the girls dormitory. The living room was attractively decorated in colors appropriate for the occasion. As the party assembled, Mrs. Tyndall directed an impromptu play called "The Gathering of the Nuts," which proved very amusing. Later guests went in couples to the third floor, and were taken into rooms where goblins, witches, ghosts, weird noises, groans, and screams of fright reigned supreme.

blamed for the misinformation that the group declared had been disseminated among the citizens of other cities. Articles written by sports writers ignorant of the true situation and the facts behind it, and prejudiced against Cisco, were reproduced in the oil belt with detriment to efforts made to settle the controversy, it was said, and with the result that a misunderstanding of the matter was fixed in the minds of many people. To overcome this the meeting considered calling representatives of other boards in the district to get a true perspective of the case. This question will be considered at the meeting at the country club.

Attending the meeting were most of the business men of the city. Each of them pledged his efforts to secure the largest attendance at the country club gathering and to create a city-wide cooperation behind the disqualified Loboes.

All Weather Signs Have Failed Indian

LAC DU FLAMBEAU, Wis., Nov. 1.—Old Sarinesco, venerable brave on the Flambeau reservation, retains his prestige as a weather prognosticator despite his miscalculations of last year.

One of the surest signs of a hard winter, Sarinesco says, can be found in the autumnal activities of the muskrats.

Last year he based his prediction of a cold winter with much snow on the size of the muskrat houses.

"Bad winter coming," he said. "Muskrat houses big, heap big, this year. Sure sign of bad winter. Rats know when cold winter coming and build big houses."

There are other signs, however, that enter into Sarinesco's calculations.

"Moss on north side of trees very thick," he said last year. "That's a sure sign. Husk on maize very thick, too. And hair on ponies very thick. We have big winter with lots of snow."

Sarinesco's "weather signs" failed him in this region last year, for the winter was unusually mild.

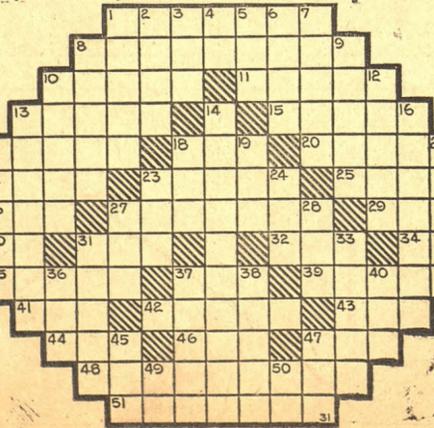

Among his fellow tribesmen, however, the Indian, who is said to be

THE SEA WOLF
"Nature in the Raw"—as portrayed by the noted artist, N. C. Wyeth... inspired by the infamous Captain Kidd's fierce raids on the gold-laden Spanish galleons (1696), which made him the scourge of the Spanish Main. "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—and raw tobaccos have no place in cigarettes.

No raw tobaccos in Luckies —that's why they're so mild

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

When you're HEALTHY you're HAPPY

HAPPY days are usually healthy days. Why not add to these sunny days!

Poor health and constipation go hand in hand. Get rid of common constipation by eating a delicious cereal.

Tests show that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and vitamin B to aid regularity. ALL-BRAN is also twice as rich in iron as an equal weight of beef liver.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that in leafy vegetables. How much better than taking pills and drugs—so often harmful.

Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

At all grocers. In the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.
