INTEREST GROWING BIG SUBSCRIPTION CONTEST

A number of contestants are at work securing subscriptions for the Review. The winner gets a beautiful $100 Diamond Ring, which will be on display at L. M. Bond's Jewelry Store, probably by Saturday. The Review force has been flooded with work this week, and we have not had time to prepare a report on the contest, but a list of the contestants will be published next week. This is a wonderful opportunity for some girl or woman who has some leisure time, to get into the contest. Some one is going to win this Diamond Ring on Saturday evening, Oct. 20th, at 8 p. m. The contestants are unable to see many people and they are coming to the Review office to renew. Many of them are placing their votes on file, and they will vote for someone in the contest, later. A list of those having votes will be published soon, so the contestants may solicit their support. The contest is expected to be lively next week. In this territory, the subscription price has been reduced to $1.00 per year, during the contest only. The price will revert back to $1.50 at the expiration of the contest, so if any of the contestants do not see you, call at the Review office and leave your dollar. You can vote for whom you wish. Ask your neighbor if he is reading the Review. $1.00 will keep the Review going into your home for one year.

Shriners Care for Crippled Children

VIEW OF THE FAMOUS MOSLAH TEMPLE AT LAKE WORTH

One of the grandest philanthropic and humanitarian works ever attempted has been inaugurated by the Shriners throughout the jurisdiction in North America. This work consists of the caring for crippled children and it is to the great credit of the Nobles of North America that such a splendid work has been undertaken. The plan has not only been inaugurated, but is well under way and already two of these hospitals have been completed and are performing their works of mercy.

The results already accomplished and being accomplished in the two hospitals now in operation will furnish a foretaste of the tremendous benefits which are to flow from this movement when its dozen or more hospitals are in full operation, and the trustees state that they believe results will surpass the most sanguine expectations of the most enthusiastic Nobles as the benefit to the nation in the way of rescued wrecks of humanity converted into health producing instrumentalities dawn upon the realization of those who see beyond the immediate effect upon the individual.

Hospitals are being allocated to points where the largest practical service can be rendered and the work of completion is being rushed with all possible speed.

CROSS PLAINS DAY AT FAIR WAS BIG EVENT

Wednesday was Cross Plains Day at the West Texas Fair, Abilene, and Cross Plains was there strong. The grand parade took place as scheduled, headed by the band. The Cross Plains Cars were decorated with streamers, and ribbons bearing the home town inscription were worn by the many representatives. A large representation went from here, but we are unable to give a list of those who went, as it is impossible to ascertain the number. But suffice it is to say that they were they were, and put Cross Plains Day over in grand form. This was made possible by the local Chamber of Commerce.

Mrs. Scott Gilbert and daughter Miss Francis, of Cisco, visited in the home of Mr. W. A. McGowan, Sunday.

Work will start in few days on the new filling station. Mr. Neeb is now waiting for brick masons who are engaged elsewhere this week.

BAND CONCERT MONDAY DREW LARGE AUDIENCE

The band gave a free concert on the streets Monday evening, and many people came out to hear the Program. They played a number of choice selections, and they rendered them in fine form. The fact has been thoroughly demonstrated that Cross Plains has a band organization of which may be justly proud. Mayor Gwin and A. C. Dodson, president of the Chamber of Commerce, both made short addresses, stressing the value of such a splendid band and its worth as a Civic asset to the community.

COOLIDGES FOND OF PLAIN FOOD

"Mac," Their Boston Waiter, Talks About Their Simple Gastronomic Tastes.

Boston, Mass.—Much has been written lately about the simple tastes and unassuming ways of Calvin Coolidge, now President of the United States, and of Mrs. Coolidge, and those who are well acquainted with them say that this simplicity permeates their life. When Coolidge was governor of Massachusetts he and Mrs. Coolidge made their home at the Adams house, and their regular waiter there, "Mac," who is known to many hundreds of Bostonians, told a writer for the Boston Sunday Advertiser a lot about their gastronomic tastes. Said he: "Their breakfast order was always the same—Two Special No. 1's, grapefruit for Mrs. Coolidge and orange for me."

"Special No. 1 never varied. It consisted of two small spots of coffee, graham muffins and fruit. "Mr. Coolidge would give the order and call for a clean glass and a whole orange. He would squeeze the orange juice into the glass, and drink the juice. "Silent at Meals. "Mrs. Coolidge always had half a grapefruit. "They were generally alone at breakfast, as their boys were at school and only visited them in vacation time. Once, though, when the boys were there, they wanted ham and eggs for breakfast. Mrs. Coolidge ordered it for them, but when the governor found it out, he frowned on giving the kids meat for breakfast. "They were seldom at my table for lunch, as they were both often gone all day. But they would be back for dinner, unless they were dining out. "Then Mrs. Coolidge used to order a chop—the way you do," interpolated "Mac," who has an uncanny memory for the likes and dislikes of every one of his patrons. "Sometimes she would have a steak. But Mr. Coolidge always made his dinner on cereal—usually grape nuts and tea or milk. "He was just as quiet at their family meals as he is in public life. Hardly ever said a word. Breakfast over, he would go away in silence. "They seldom had guests, except Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Stearns, who were with them frequently. "Sometimes there would be one or two others with them at dinner. On those occasions Mrs. Coolidge would try every way in the world to get him to join in the conversation. Nothing doing. He would look and listen, but hardly ever opened his mouth—except for his grape nuts. Once in a while he would shoot a little smile—like this—and for a fleeting instant—"Mac" was the living image of the President. "Lapsing back to his natural expression, which is intense but amiable, "Mac" continued: "He is a hard man to get at, if you know what I mean. But when you once do get at him, you find he has one of the best hearts in the world. "All Liked Mrs. Coolidge. "But for kindness and a charming manner combined, Mrs. Coolidge was the one. Every waiter in the dining room liked to serve her. She was always considerate, always appreciative for anything done for her. If Mrs. Coolidge once knew you, she knew you everywhere, no matter where she happened to meet you. In the hotel corridor, or in the street, she would always bow. She's a fine woman. "I used to look at those boys, and their good manners, and wonder how she did it. But then, bringing up six. (Six little McKeoughs, remember.) "I said to one of my boys the other day, 'Look at young Calvin Coolidge. His father's President of the United States, and he's looking for farm work at $3.50 a day. I suppose if I was president you'd be wanting to take it easy in the White House.' "A Healthy Climate. "You must go to the healthiest neighborhood you can find," said the eminent specialist to Mr. Forsythe. "And when you get there you must stay there for six months and have a thoroughly good rest." "In due course Mr. Forsythe arrived at the seaside town he had selected and inquired of one of the old inhabitants if it was a really healthy neighborhood. "Well, you see me," said the old man, who was a fine specimen of health and vigor, "when I came here I couldn't walk across the room and I hadn't the strength to enter a single word. I had scarcely a hair on my head and I had to be lifted on and off the bed." "Ah, you give me hope," said the invalid. "How long have you been here?" "I was born here," was the reply. "The name crabapple appears to be of Scandinavian origin, and skin to the Swedish 'krabapple,'" says Nature Magazine. Skent offers the explanation that the Swedish word is related to the sea creature. He adds that application of the word to the fruit was perhaps "from some notion of pinching, in allusion to the extreme sourness of the taste" of the crabapple. In this he finds resemblance to the "pinching" action of the claws of the crustacean.

So Mote It Be

By MARTHA WILLIAMS

"Poppy! Poppy! Ought to be your name—you're so red at the top," Joyce commented cruelly, after a long appraising stare at the new member of the family. She felt justified, loving beauty as she did. The girl was uncomely, lathy in shape, with pale freckled skin and eyes red-rimmed till their color was uncertain. Her black frock, coarse and ill-fitting, emphasized the redness of her untidy mop of hair. She had swayed slightly at Joyce's speech, half turned to the open window, her eyes suddenly desperate, then checked herself, and said tremulously: "Please don't mind my looks—no more than I do. Please, also, tell me what I am to do!" "Anything I say," Joyce flung back flippantly. "Father won't have it that you're to be my maid—but I have the last say—so you hear when I speak—and be quick in minding."

"I shall try," the newcomer said still more tremulously, turning so the hard north light fell full across her meager face. The meanness struck a faint spark of compassion in the flint of Joyce. "Why, you look as though you hadn't had enough to eat in a year!" she said. "Go down to the kitchen and tell Liza I say to feed you—well." Dully the girl, Janet Leeds, obeyed. But she did not eat—she could not. The hot, richly scented kitchen sickened her—its aroma of luxurious plenty brought back her heartache keener than ever. If only some measure of its plenty could have been spared to her! She had not minded the pinching for herself—but to see her father turn away from her, to see her mother, proud and kind, and know him craving better, had been a knife in her heart. He had had no real claim on the rich Belis—his first wife, dead this twenty-odd years, had been Major Bell's sister, but the major had not approved the match, so quickly lost touch with the husband she had left. In a year he had married Janet's mother, through pity rather than love, yet had been reasonably happy with her because she gave him a child. She also had died when Janet was coming to thirteen—after that father and daughter had been everything to each other, until the strength of his love for her had wrought their undoing. It had led him to risk, at last, to lose, the modest savings put by for a rainy day. On the heels of loss had come fatal lingering illness. How she had kept him from starving in the course of it, was still a marvel to the girl. She had not had the least thought of asking help—certainly not from the Belis, but chance willed it otherwise. The doctor wrote to the major of how she was left, and the gallant fight she had made—so his conscience and a heart naturally good and generous had made him offer her a home. In a daze she had accepted the offer—being too worn and spent just then for longer struggle. Scant remnants of insurance had paid for the funeral, the cheap black frock, the fare to Bellwood. She owed no living soul a penny—and had just $2 in her thin purse. But until she had heard Joyce's speech she had not understood what lay ahead. Servitude was not so galling—it was the crudeness, the underbredness of her prospective mistress. The kitchen looked out on a thrifty garden full of sunlight, with hardy flowers bordering its plots. Janet crept into it—she craved sunshine more than food, after the hours she had spent in Madame Vine's work-rooms, where sunlight was not admitted. It confused color-tones in the fine embroideries wrought there. But for her work, she could not have kept the poor home. It had told on her even as had grief and watching. Out in the blessed shining she stood stock still, letting the blaze illumine her glowing hair and accent her piteous pallor and shadowed eyes until she was the perfect symbol of grief to artist eyes at least; a specially keen pair of them rested upon her with approval from a second-story window of a disused carriage house. Because of their money the Belis dared to be ultra-thrifty; they had rented the old coachman's quarters. The tenant called himself Smith—a name that meant as much as any other to the Belis. They accepted him as a rather decent vagabond, gave him freely milk, fruit and occasional hot meals, if he chanced to be visible as they sat down to table. Further human touch they had none, though Joyce confessed to her mates a certain curiosity as to pictures, their making and their makers. Commonly Smith was away very early in a rented car that took him to the hills. Sometimes he was back by noon, other times he straggled in by moonlight. He was affable enough, but evidently had no inclination for real acquaintance. Therefore, Joyce's curiosity was little in the way of being gratified. Janet stood drinking in life and warmth, her eyes shut tight, her face lifting a little to the shining. She started violently when a voice beside her said: "You are new. Why are you here?" She all but lost balance—a warm, pained hand attended her as the voice went on: "I hope you need money badly enough to welcome a chance of making it. Will $100 tempt you to be my model for a week? Not here—among the hills. Of course there'll be somebody with us." "Ask Joyce—Miss Bell," Janet answered shakily. "I am her new maid. She has the say."

At that Smith whistled faintly, but smothered it to a snarl. "Call her, please, I want the maid settled right away," he said. When Joyce came it was settled out of her of course in the affirmative, since she herself was to chaperon her maid in this great adventure.

It began next morning at dawn—and fascinated her. Smith showed himself as Jehan, also something of a diplomat. By private treaty with Liza there was a liberal lunch basket, a kettle of coffee, also cushions to rest on while one ate. Smith rode in the car alone. Joyce liked to show her skill at the wheel, so drove her smart sedan. She was more charmed than ever when upon the second day a second car appeared on the scene—much, much younger and handsomer than a Smith; also, it appeared, much keener in quest of beauty. Smith was business—he sketched Janet in many poses against many backgrounds, always bareheaded, always in the coarse black frock—that somehow had learned a trick of emphasizing her classic lengths. Hourly it seemed she came to life in the sunshine—ate delicately but with relish. He came to lodge with Smith—room being plenty. Thus Joyce felt there could be nothing out of the way in asking them to dinner or supper at their convenience. She had meant fully to make Janet wait at table—but somehow the regard those outlanders bestowed upon her uncomeliness changed Miss Bell's mind. Besides—it wouldn't have been easy to get round her father—the major had a fine sense of hospitality. Having offered in good faith to care for this strange girl, she should be of the family. Smith paid on the dot at the end of the week, saying half-pettishly, half-humorously: "I'd try chartering you for six months if you were not growing so confoundingly good-looking!" Janet smiled—her first smile—it so transfused her he felt back a step, amazed. "Why! You'd be magnificent—if only you were happy," he said, turning and all but running away.

Allan Kitredge, a little way off, watched his older friend with rarely compassionate eyes. He knew the shadow upon Smith—the wife to whom he was simply an endowment, and tinted Venus exquisite as a work of art, but not as a human being. All along he had had a fear, that contact with this bleached, wan shade of young womanhood might come to mean. It died the death when half an hour later Smith said to him, holding up his hands: "I'm quitting cold, Allan—you stay on—and marry Janet—you two deserve each other. And don't be sorry for me—I've had the joy of painting her as her soul came back to life. Soberly, I rejoice in it—the picture will make me—shall ask twenty thousand for it. Won't Mrs. Smith be pleased? Bring Janet to see it in the spring exhibition—it will make a pleasant incident of your honeymooning."

"It will," said Allan. "So mote it be."

BIRD NEST OF SNAKE SKIN
Crested Flycatcher Uses Reptile's "Coat" to Scare Away its Enemies.
One of the queerest of the midsummer birds is the crested flycatcher, which has a strange passion for weaving a cast snake skin into its rough nest, generally placed in the hollow of a tree. The nest frequently is placed so far within the tree as to be well out of the sight of any inquisitive bird who might see it if it were left in plain sight. So the explanation that the flycatcher chooses to select a cast snake skin with which to build its nest as a matter of protection—that it knows that all other birds fear a snake and displays the skin to drive them away—does not seem to be a very plausible one. The bird's habit remains one of the mysteries of nature yet unexplained.

Little Known Isles of Greece.
The Dodecanese are small islands in the Aegean sea, not far from the coast of Greece, and it is because of their minuteness that they do not appear on ordinary maps. Because of the general ignorance of the islands and their locations Rue de Université of Athens a few years ago offered a Rhodes crown of laurels and 11,000 drachmas (a drachma is worth about 19¢ cents) to any one writing the best history of the Dodecanese from the time of Homer to the present. Although the collective name of the islands is confusing, individually some of them are familiar—Rhodes, Patmos, Icaria, Cos, Leros. In the Turko-Italian war of 1912 they passed into the possession of Italy, under whose rule they remained until 1920, when they were restored to Greece. The islands are completely Greek. They have played a part in the events of the world since the dawn of history and the earliest mythology of Greece.

LESSON FOR SEPTEMBER 30

REVIEW: GREAT MEN AND WOMEN OF THE NEW TESTAMENT

DEVOTIONAL READING—Heb. 11:13-16, 39, 40.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Wherefore seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us."—Heb. 12:1.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Favorite Story of the Quarter.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Favorite Heroes and Heroines of the Quarter.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Some Great Characters of the New Testament.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Life Lessons From This Quarter.

With the senior and adult classes, three methods of review may be profitably employed:

- 1. The descriptive word method as presented in Peloubet's Select Notes. 1. Brave John the Baptist. 2. The Faith-Filled Virgin Mary. 3. Impulsive Peter. 4. Loving John the Apostle. 5. Thoughtful Matthew. 6. Adorned Mary Magdalene. 7. Busy Martha and Open-Hearted Mary. 8. Faithful Stephen. 9. Generous Barnabas. 10. The Many-sided Paul. 11. Timid Mark. 12. Helpful Luke. 13. Consecrated Timothy.

- 2. Presenting Life Lessons as given in Crannel's Pocket Lessons: 1. Woman Lessons. 1. Mary: Glorified Motherhood. Lesson 2. 2. Magdalene: Adoring Gratitude. Lesson 3. 3. Martha-Mary: Rounded Womanhood. Lesson 7. 4. Barnabas: Greatening Greatness. Lesson 9. 5. Mark: Return of the Quitter. Lesson 11. 6. Luke: Double Healer. Lesson 12. 7. Timothy: The Glorious Ministry. Lesson 13.

- 3. The Summarizing of Contents. The following is suggestive: Lesson I. John the Baptist was a humble and courageous man. He did not take honor to himself nor trim his message to suit the crowd. Lesson II. Mary should not be worshiped, but she is worthy of great honor. Her faith made her to acquiesce in the Lord's will in spite of the fact that she knew that her character would be suspected. Lesson III. Peter, while being fickle and cowardly, is a fine example of the transforming power of God's grace. Lesson IV. John the apostle was a reticent man. He did not say much about himself, but was passionately in love with his Lord. Lesson V. Matthew, though humble, was a man of force of character and decision. He left all and followed Jesus. Lesson VI. Mary Magdalene, because she was saved, was devoted to her devotion to the Lord. Because of this, she was able to tell the good news of the resurrection to the discouraged disciples. Lesson VII. Mary and Martha both loved the Lord. Martha was mistaken as to the best way to please Him. Mary chose the good part in fellowship with her Lord which has made her name immortal. Lesson VIII. Stephen was so completely filled with Christ that his face shone as the face of an angel. Lesson IX. Barnabas was a good man and filled with the Holy Ghost. Therefore, he was qualified as a leader of men. Lesson X. Paul's knowledge of Jesus was so real that he had as his supreme aim to magnify Him. Lesson XI. Mark, though having turned back from the work, was restored and became a great and honored minister of Christ. Lesson XII. Luke, the skilled and popular physician, gave himself up to be the attendant of the missionary of the cross. Lesson XIII. Because of Timothy's religious training, he became a worthy minister of the gospel.

Corner Stone of Society.
The sanctity of marriage and the family relation make the corner stone of our American society and civilization.—Garfield.
Our Enemy.
A merely fallen enemy may rise again, but the reconciled one is truly vanquished.—Schiller.
Hatred.
When our hatred is violent, it sinks us even beneath those we hate.—La Rochefoucauld.

Aspirin Say "Bayer" and Insist!

Unless you see the name "Bayer" on package or on tablets you are not getting the genuine Bayer product prescribed by physicians over twenty-two years and proved safe by millions for Colds, Headache, Toothache, Lumbago, Earache, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Pain, Pain.

Accept "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" only. Each unbroken package contains proper directions. Handy boxes of twelve tablets cost few cents. Drug-gists also sell bottles of 24 and 100. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monocetate-dester of Salicylic acid.—Advertisement.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited to those who are in need of it. A prominent druggist says, "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments, corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism. You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by parcel post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Cutting Teeth Made This Baby Deathly Sick

"When my baby began cutting his teeth he became deathly sick and his constant crying almost broke my heart," writes Mrs. D. H. Tidwell, Grand View, Texas, "but as soon as I started giving him Teethingina he got over it and next day was laughing and playing as if nothing had ever been the matter with him." Teethingina is especially designed to allay the irritation and feverish conditions that are the cause of so much fretfulness in teething children. It soon stops the pain, relieves the trouble and gives the distracted mother rest and comfort. Teethingina is sold by leading druggists or send 30c to the Moffett Laboratories, Columbus, Ga., and receive a full size package and a free copy of Moffett's Illustrated Baby Book.—(Advertisement.)

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promise of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited to those who are in need of it. A prominent druggist says, "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments, corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by parcel post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Advertisement.

Heir to British Throne Rests from State Duties On His Alberta Ranch

By FRED JAMES
EDWARD, prince of Wales, eldest son of King George V, and therefore heir to the British throne, is spending a holiday on his 6,000-acre E. P. Ranch, in the shades of the Canadian Rocky mountains, twenty-five miles from High river, Alberta, the nearest railway station.

He went there early in September to get a complete change and rest, coming out from England as an ordinary passenger on the S. S. Empress of Scotland, under the title of the duke of Cornwall.

His visit to Canada is not to be interfered with in any way by official engagements. The last few years he has had more than a fair share of these. For some time he has found that uneasy lies the head that is destined to wear the crown. His world-wide popularity and his position have caused countless demands to be made on him to attend every conceivable kind of function and ceremony. Three months ago he made up his mind that he would have a holiday "far from the madding crowd," and said that he could not go to a better place than his ranch in Canada, where little heed is paid to Mrs. Grundy.

Until the end of October he is going to spend the time directing the management of his pure bred horses, cattle and sheep; in riding over his extensive acres that reach out and across to verdant valleys in the foothills; where silvery streams well filled with trout, ripple through, in shooting partridges and other game, and doing anything that fancy dictates—all of which a prospective king usually gets little opportunity to do.

Occasionally the prince may visit some of his notable neighbors. A few miles to the south Lord Minto has a substantial ranch. Across the foothills, in the neighboring province of British Columbia, the duke of Sutherland, one of the leaders of the British nobility, has a spacious acreage on which he grows fruit and raises stock and crops. Scattered throughout that part of southern Alberta in which the E. P. Ranch is situated there are the scions of notable families from the Old World. ### NEW BARN

BUNK HOUSE AND GARAGE

Thoroughbred horses were chosen from the Royal stud owned by his father. From the king's famous herds of cattle at Sandringham, England, some of the best animals were selected. The duke of Westminster, who owns some of the most famous flocks of sheep in the Old World, sold the prince a number of prize-winning rams and ewes, principally of the Shropshire and Hampshire breeds. The first shipment was made up of some of the finest race horses, Percherons, Clydesdales, beef and dairy cattle and sheep that it was possible to get in the United Kingdom. Since the original shipment of live stock reached Canada there have been others, the latest shipment including the thoroughbred racing stallion Will Somers, which was owned by King George, and five mares from the same stable.

Wales Wine Prizes

In the last two years stock from the E. P. Ranch has carried off a number of prizes at some of the largest fairs, not only in western Canada, but in the middle western states. Just now a number of the best animals from the prince's ranch are at the farm of the University of Iowa, having been loaned to that institution by request, for the improvement of live stock in the state. The E. P. Ranch has already done a great deal towards the development of live stock industry in Canada.

Country is Fertile

The way to approach the E. P. Ranch is from Calgary to High river, forty miles south, on the Canadian Pacific railway. From High river one has to drive southwest, a distance of twenty-five miles, through one of the richest grain-growing and stock-raising countries in North America. For the first ten miles or so from High river the road goes through an undulating country, where in the summer time great fields of wheat and rich pasture lands stretch away as far as the eye can see. Then comes the generous grazing areas, where cattle stay out all winter and do well. In the distance the jagged peaks of the Rockies clip the clouds and below, well wooded, are the foothills, with extensive belts of succulent natural grass, on which horses, cattle and sheep thrive. The road cuts through the center of the Bar U ranch, and about one mile and a half from the limits of the extensive domain of the Bar U, the low rambling bungalow where the prince is now living is seen through a pretty grove of cottonwood, balsam of cedar and poplar trees. It is a homelike looking place, typical of many a rancher's home in "Suzzy Alberta." No doubt it is a striking contrast to the palaces where Edward, prince of Wales, has to spend most of his time, but it affords all the essentials of comfort necessary.

Was Helpless at the Time, Says Mrs. Riley

"At the time I got Tanlac I was flat on my back in bed, but in just a little while I gained ten pounds and was feeling like a new person," said Mrs. B. Riley, 1304 Vernon Castle Boulevard, Fort Worth, Texas.

"Along about Christmas of last year I lost my appetite, commenced suffering from indigestion, frequent splitting headaches, nervousness, and got to where I couldn't sleep well. Nothing I ate tasted good, and finally I had to give up all my housework and go to bed.

The Bright Side.
"Any luck on your fishing trip this morning?"
"No. Didn't get a bite."
"That's too bad."
"Not at all. It's just as well. If I'd caught enough fish for dinner the wife would have made me clean them and I hate that job."

THE STATE OF TEXAS

To The Sheriff or any Constable of Callahan County—Greeting:

You are hereby commanded to summon Curly Covington and R. L.
Smallwood by making publication of this citation once each week for four consecutive weeks previous to the return day hereof, in some newspaper published in your county, if there be a newspaper published therein, but if not, then in the nearest county where a newspaper is published, to appear at the next regular term of the Justice
Court of Precinct No 6 of Callahan County, Texas to be holden in the office of the Justice of the Peace of said Precinct in Cross Plains, Texas, on the second Friday in October 1923
the same being the 12th day of Oct-

1923, then and there to answer a suit filed in said court on the 19th day of Sept. 1923, said suit numbered 320 on the docket of said court, wherein the First Guaranty State Bank a private corporation of Cross Plains Callahan County, Texas, is plaintiff, and Curly Covington and R. L. Smallwood are defendants, plaintiff's demand being as follows: Suit upon one certain promissory note for the sum of $178.00 dated April 25th 1923, and due sixty days after date with 10 per cent interest from maturity and providing for 10 per cent attorneys fees for collection after maturity if placed in the hands of an attorney for collection, said note having been placed in the hands of Virgil Hart an attorney for collection on the 19th day of Sept.
1923 and also for foreclosure of chattle mortgage executed by the said defendants Curly Covington and R. L.
Smallwood on one Ford automobile Engine No. 6241063, License No.
811394 Calif Lock steering wheel B235459 touring car. Plaintiff alleges that said note is long past due and that defendants though often requested have failed, refused and still fail and refuse to pay said note or any part thereof, wherein it prays for judgment against defendants for the amount of said note with interest, attorneys fees and all costs of suit and for foreclosure of its chattle mortgage and for order of sale to sell said car and apply the proceeds arising therefrom to the payment of said note, the surplus if any to be paid over to defendants and if said car shall not sell for enough to pay said note, interest, attorneys fees and cost that it have execution for the balance remaining unpaid.

Herein fail not but have you before said court on the said first day of the next term thereof, this writ, with your return thereon, showing how you have executed the same.

Given under my hand this 19th day of Sept. 1923.

American Public Service Company Preferred Stock

From time to time, as financial requirements have demanded, it has been the policy of the West Texas Utilities Company to sell to its customers in West Texas the preferred stock of the American Public Service Company. The West Texas Utilities Co., as West Texas understand generally, is one of the constituent companies of the American Public Service Company, which has other subsidiaries operating in East Texas and Oklahoma.

Obtaining stockholders in West Texas has already become familiar, through promptly paid quarterly dividends, with the American Public Service Company's dependable financial record, while customers in West Texas are familiar with the West Texas Utilities Company's splendid growth and development.

Expanding impressively--yet solidly and substantially--this development has been made possible through the financial service rendered by the American Public Service Co. Since January 1, 1921, $3,171,033 of new money has been expended in this West Texas development, so that, today Central West Texas has in the West Texas Utilities Company one of the finest operating companies in the United States, with its physical properties in superlatively fine condition.

Noteworthy in this expansion has been the rebuilding of transmission lines, the remodeling of the Cisco electric generating and ice station, the erection of modern and model office buildings at Baird, Tuscola, Albany, Hamlin, Haskell and Munday, the building of a new ice plant at Hamlin and of a new power station at Stamford, the purchase, rehabilitation and electrification of the Roby & Northern Railroad (which, while a short line, is assured of a profitable freight business), the complete rehabilitation of the gas distribution system in Abilene, the erection of a central power station and of a general office building in Abilene, and the extension of transmission lines to approximately a score of new communities.

In East Texas and in Oklahoma, the American Public Service Company's subsidiaries have developed similarly, and these other constituent companies, together with the West Texas Utilities Company, unite to make American Public Service Company preferred stock one of the most attractive and safest of utility securities ever offered for sale to the public.

American Public Service Company preferred stock is now offered for sale by the West Texas Utilities Company, and it will be sold for cash, or, if the investor prefers, it may be purchased for $10.00 a share at the time of subscription, and $5.00 a share per month until fully paid.

Interest at the rate of 7 per cent will be paid on such monthly installments.

Stock may be purchased at any office of this Company, or through any employe of this company.

West Texas Utilities Co.

REAL TREAT FOR LOVERS OF HOME AND ITS BEAUTY

Woman's Department at Texas Cotton Palace, Waco, to be Veritable Beauty Spot

Waco, Texas.—The Woman's Department of the 1923 Cotton Palace Exposition will be the most exquisite affair with its many departments and exhibits, that has yet been collected for this part of the exposition in any previous year.

Toyland will be one department portraying a child's ideal playroom, with toys upon toys, and the most modern decorative effects. The Fine Art department will be filled with the best exhibits obtainable,—a real treat for the lover of art. Antiques for the antique department will be collected in greater numbers this year than ever before, many rare old relics and heirlooms never before placed on exhibition having been brought together for this feature of the great Woman's Department for this year. Woman's skill in needlework will be amply demonstrated in the Textile department, wherein the most exquisite designs, both old and new, may be seen at the 1923 exposition. Interior decorations will be a feature of the Woman's Department for this year's Cotton Palace. In this department the most beautiful home furnishings at medium cost will be demonstrated in varied styles and manners. School Art will be displayed by showing the talent of the little folk. The Culinary department will be made unusually attractive with the fruits of every section of the State of Texas and the great southwest given their full share of attention. Curios from every land and every clime brought together by committees appointed to secure them from globe trotters and other travelers, will be placed on exhibition in the Woman's Department at the 1923 Cotton Palace Exposition. Silver, marble and plastic art, and landscape gardening, will get a major share of attention this year. The Ceramic department is especially attractive this year, the women working on the collections displayed in this department having made special studies of modern and historic lore relative to good china, fine glass, and crystal.

The various departments of which the Woman's Department of the 1923 Cotton Palace Exposition is composed all give mute evidence to the enormous amount of work which only a great department of the exposition as superbly as this feature of the big 1923 Cotton Palace is to be this fall.

Contestants in the Review subscription contest should find a certain man. He doesn't subscribe for his home paper but yet he reads it. Tom Upton informed the Review reporter last week that some one had stolen his paper. He says he knows that no one in the office swiped it, as they are all subscribers. Mr. Upton said the Review was a fountain of knowledge. He secured an extra copy at this office—and all is well.

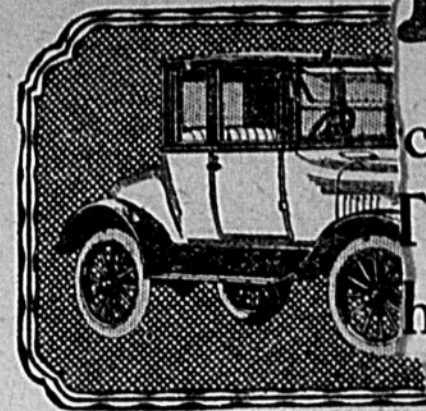

Higinbotham Bros. & Co. have a double page advertisement in this issue. Read it. They have also had the Review print over a thousand double page circulars, which will be distributed over this trade territory. The Higinbotham store here has the largest stock they have ever carried in the dry goods department, they state.

GOVERNOR WALTON APPEALS FOR FUNDS

Walton Charges Every Effort Being Made to Cripple Him and Counselor, Aldrich Blake

Oklahoma City, Ok.—Testimony about the inner workings of the Ku Klux Klan in Oklahoma City...

The testimony was taken by the military court sitting here and was given out by the Governor...

In a preface to the testimony, Gov. Walton declared the burden of the fight against the Klan had fallen upon himself and upon Aldrich Blake...

"Every effort is being made to cripple us financially so that we can not continue the fight," the Governor said.

"I call upon the people who believe in a representative form of government immediately to assist us financially and to make all remittance to Mrs. Aldrich Blake...

"So far as I am concerned," Gov. Walton declared, "I have crossed the Rubicon and it is a fight to the finish."

"Jewett (N. C. Jewett, grand dragon of the Oklahoma realm of the Klan) and his crowd have turned the fight over to the Klan newspapers and the Klan members of the Legislature."

"Jewett and his 'invisible empire' shall not pass in this State."

"If necessary I shall arm every man in this State who is opposed to his empire."

The section of the military court record made public was the testimony of four witnesses who were called to testify before the military tribunal.

In placing Oklahoma County under absolute martial law and banning the grand jury session, Gov. Walton charged that he acted to prevent the Klan officials of the county from proceeding with their purpose to indict him.

GERMANS ADMIT DEFEAT IN RUHR

With Nation Facing Grim Winter Streamer Cabinet Seeks to Settle French Issue

Berlin.—Germany has admitted defeat in the "war after the war" the silent battle of the Ruhr.

Sensational proposals for surrender to France on the Ruhr and reparations questions have been presented by the German Government to the Belgian Ambassador...

Germany is prepared to cease passive resistance immediately on condition that expelled Germans be allowed to return to the occupied area...

Germany is also ready to consider paying a reparations figure above 30,000,000,000 gold marks.

Germany offers to place debentures (as outlined in the recent Stresemann mortgage plan) in the hands of the reparations commission...

The offer is tantamount to surrender. Germany is willing to meet the French terms by quitting resistance; she abandons her previous maximum reparations figure of 30,000,000,000 payments...

France has demanded 50,000,000,000 gold marks. Germany previously has declared this impossible.

But with Germany facing a grim winter and a settlement becoming increasingly imperative, the Stresemann Cabinet met to devise some means of peace...

Anticipating that passive resistance will be completely and publicly repudiated shortly, regardless of the outcome of the present negotiations...

A party of Palestine citizens and attorneys, accompanied by Judge Nelson Phillips of Dallas, conferred at length with First Assistant and Acting Attorney General John C. Wall recently...

Speaker R. E. Seagler of Palestine, who has been in Austin on business with several State department, made a social call on the Governor...

30-CENT COTTON HAS BECOME A REALITY

Violent Upturn Causes Gain of About $6 a Bale in a Few Minutes

New York.—Thirty-cent cotton became a reality when October contracts on the New York Cotton Exchange crossed that level...

BARNYARD TALE

"There is going to be a great meeting in the barnyard," said Porky Pig. "Grunt, grunt, all come to the meeting."

"All come to the meeting," said Mrs. Duck. "Quack, quack, all come to the meeting."

"Yes, cock-a-doodle-do," said Red Top the Rooster, "all come to the meeting."

All the old friends and enemies—though I trust there are no enemies—will come and greet each other.

"It's to be a fine reunion," said Miss Ham. "It is to be a fine reunion. People mustn't think they're the only ones who can meet about and have family reunions where all the relatives and grandfathers and grandmothers and grandchildren and uncles and aunts and cousins and daughters-in-law come."

"We, of the barnyard, can also have a splendid reunion!" "Oh yes, every one must come to the reunion," said Billy Goat.

"They must, grunt, grunt," said Brother Bacon. "Has every invitation been sent out?" asked Mrs. Ham.

"Every one," said Mrs. Duck. Just then a caterpillar crawled along through the barnyard, hurrying out of the way for fear he might be eaten or trampled upon or killed in one of the ways creatures had of getting rid of caterpillars.

Billy Goat saw him and sang this song: "The caterpillar only crawls. He is not much admired. But he'll become a butterfly. For with high ambitions he's freed."

Everyone congratulated Billy Goat upon his song which was a quite original one. The words, everyone said, were a little better than the music, but it was all-good, all good, they said.

And Billy Goat was delighted with the praise. In fact so delighted was he that he said he had another he'd sing, though he'd have to think a little about it.

While he was thinking, though, he was talking about it. "You see," he said, "I heard one of the young ladies talking the other day, and it seemed she had gone to town dressed in all her old clothes because it had been a rainy day when she had started."

"Yes, she had on an old hat, and old shoes and rubbers, and an old skirt and coat. And no sooner had she reached town than the sun came out and there was she on this most beautiful day feeling so like an old rainy day."

"So this is the song I'm making up about that. There's nothing sadder in this world than to have the sun come out when you're dressed in all your old clothes because you were in doubt."

"Of course," said Billy Goat, "she had been in doubt as to whether she'd wear her good ones because she had seen a little blue sky in one corner of the sky but she had been afraid that it would rain."

"We see, we see; a fine verse, Billy Goat. We shall have to name you, the Poet of the Barnyard. Truly that would be an honor and one that you deserve," the other animals said.

So when the creatures all came to the Barnyard Reunion Billy Goat or Sir William Goat, the Gentleman, was also called "The Barnyard Poet."

Yes, everyone was on hand, or perhaps one should say on foot, for the reunion. Porky Pig and Mrs. Duck helped to entertain.

The song sparrows came and the owl sent word he was sleeping or he'd come. (They hadn't asked him so they were just as glad he couldn't come.)

The Dog who had become so brave came along, so did Sharp-shinned Rabbit, Mrs. Blue Jay, and all of the ducks and pigeons and hens and roosters and pigs and geese and turkeys.

In fact it was a splendid reunion and there was excellent food, though of course the Pig family forgot about entertaining any but themselves when the food came along!

But there was enough to go around. The Geese weren't quite as polite as they should have been, of course, but taking it all in all it was a splendid barnyard reunion.

MRS. COFFMAN ILL SEVEN YEARS

Saved from an Operation by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Sidell, Ill.—"I was a nervous wreck. I was suffering from a pain in my left side, which was almost unbearable, and I could not even let the bed clothing rest on my body at night. I had been sick for seven years, but not so bad until the last six months, when I had become so run-down that I cared for nobody, and would rather have died than live. The doctors told me that an operation was all there was left. I would not consent to that, so my husband brought me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the house and begged me to take it. I have taken fourteen bottles of it and I feel ten years younger. Life is full of hope. I do all my household and had a large garden this year. I never will be without the Vegetable Compound in the house and give it to two little girls reach womanhood. I intend to teach them to take it. I am never too busy to tell some suffering sister of my help, and you can use my name and letters to spread the good news of Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine."

—Mrs. IDA M. COFFMAN, R.B.2, Sidell, Ill.

"Oh, yes—I worked. . . . I can work much faster than you, Fanny, when I try. . . . I finished ever so many haversacks, and—I put a note in the last one."

Henricks bounced from his chair, his face crimson with indignation. "You did what?" he stormed.

"What made you do a thing like that? What did you say?" the young man demanded fiercely.

"Oh, I said I hoped my havelock would keep him safe from harm. . . . And that I hoped he would kill ever so many Confederates."

"Did you sign your name?" Fanny inquired, awestruck.

"I just wrote Ann."

"Your first name—to a stranger?" "He didn't seem like a stranger. . . . When I saw him marching away I would have given anything to know which one had it."

"When you saw them marching away," repeated Henricks in a voice of doom. "Did you go over to Broadway to see them?"

"I did."

"With uncle?" "No."

"Alone in all the crowd?" "The girl's impatience flared out. "Oh, what difference does it make? . . . I saw a woman crying because her husband had gone. . . . And I shouted, too, and waved my handkerchief. I wouldn't have cried—not even if my uncle had gone. . . . All around me men were shouting 'On to Richmond!' She drew a passionate breath, and pressed her hands tightly against her breast. "And there you were, Henricks, making money, Mr. P."

She threw her hands out in a gesture of desperation. "You never seem to think of the war at all—and I can't get away from it for a minute! . . . You know, Fanny, every morning on our way to the Sanitary Commission we go through all that crowd at the recruiting office—young men wild to go—and you have no pass the army any time all day long, to see soldiers drilling there."

Henricks smiled at her with affectionate tolerance. "There are at least sixty thousand men in Washington," he said soothingly. "General Scott can handle it, all right. We are sure to win."

It was cut short by the clatter of horses' feet and the confusion of a sudden stop before the house. Ann leaped to the window to look.

"It's uncle!" she cried. "Something must have happened!" She ran out to meet him, leaving Fanny white-faced.

What's Burning? "Why do you call an auto speeder a 'brocher'?" "Because he goes out at a hot pace, makes the pedestrians boiling mad, gets roasted in court, warms up the police, and calls it a burning shame."

"Defeat!" Ann flung at Henricks, and she faced him with blazing eyes. "A rout," her guardian supplemented. "A shameful rout! . . . Five hundred men lost!"

"Scott should never have yielded to the demand for a decisive engagement. . . . He hadn't enough discipline. . . . Or enough reserves, uncle!" Ann turned a scornful glance on Henricks. "I suppose you want me to re-enlist?" he demanded truculently.

"Ann, how can you?" Fanny protested, furtively, shrewdly, in her unnoticeable face, while Mr. Cortlandt laid a restraining hand on Ann's arm.

"I want to go, all right," the boy said. "You know that, don't you, Uncle Henricks? Do you think I should?"

Mr. Cortlandt was silent for a moment; he entirely disregarded the impatient little pushes Ann gave him from time to time. "Henricks," he said, at length, "I hate to have you go—God knows, tonight we know what may happen—but the country needs the young men."

Suddenly Ann melted. She clung to Henricks as she had never done, and lifted an ardent face to his.

"When you come home, Henricks—when the Confederates are beaten—I'll marry you if you want a cent!" "Well," he said, gloomily, although his arm tightened about Ann, "that settles it."

"Oh," she cried, undeterred by the presence of her guardian and Fanny. "I love you, Henricks! I do love you, after all!"

Having made up his mind, Henricks Rennessy lost no time in severing his connection with the bank, and the next day, while Ann was only beginning to taste the joy of having bent him to her will, he announced that he had joined the Fifty-fifth New York volunteers. A week later was under canvas on Staten Island, endeavoring to absorb sufficient information in regard to drills and maneuvers to enable him to perform his duties as second lieutenant with some likelihood of success.

He was greatly bewildered by his new duties, for his month's service had not, after all, taught him much, but he managed to pick up some useful information from a soldier in his company who had served in Africa and the Crimea, and when the Fifty-fifth was ready to march, he had a fair parade ground idea of his duties.

Henricks' second military departure was strangely different from his first. It was only four months since the Seventh regiment had marched away, in a jubilee of adulation, but in that time war had become an ominous thing. When the Fifty-fifth broke camp and started for the front, Ann had an exultant thrill. "Uncle," she gasped, "I don't want them to go!" She had a sudden clear vision of young Philip Vanderyken, lying stung through the head on the field of battle. She was all at once fearful that she might never see Henricks again.

At the train she puzzled him by her heart-lunged depression. She clung to him desperately, so that he was embarrassed at such public demonstration, and she did not smile nor wave her hand as the train drew away; she only looked at him profoundly.

Back in Washington square Mrs. William Cortlandt was awaiting them. "Henricks," she said at once, "I have come for some money."

"Sanitary commission again?" Mr. Cortlandt asked, smiling.

"No—this time it is for an army hospital."

"Has it been decided to equip one?" Mr. Cortlandt asked.

"Yes, Henricks—I don't know what you will think. . . . When we get the hospital ready, I have made up my mind to nurse in it." Mrs. William looked as frightened as a darning little girl.

Ann's eyes widened. To nurse! To bathe the brows and to moisten fevered lips? To read poetry, and to place flowers by sick beds? That was life. She, too, would be a nurse!

"It is a new work for gentlemen," her guardian said doubtfully.

"Yes—but so are hardships of campaigning new work for gentlemen!" It amazed Ann to hear Philip's conservative mother championing something her guardian thought unconventional, and she flung herself into the talk, eager to help her. "It's the next best thing to fighting, to be a nurse, uncle!" she declared. "And when the hospital is opened I shall work there, too."

Mrs. William turned on her, in irritable indignation in every line of her plump features. "Indeed you shan't, miss!" she cried. "What an idea! A young girl!"

"Well, young men are fighting!" The girl appealed to her guardian. "Uncle—I may, mayn't I?"

He shook his head, smiling. She could see that he did not like her request seriously. "Henricks wouldn't like it, I am sure," he chaffed, and she felt herself flushing up sharply.

"Let I should think he wouldn't!" exclaimed Mrs. William, and swept on with her plans for transforming a dwelling house into a hospital. The subject of Ann's participation appeared to be disposed of, but the girl knew better. As she sat silently by, absently taking in the conversation, she was quite determined as to one thing; when the hospital was opened she would work in it, no matter what opposition she overcame. She watched Mr. Cortlandt draw a generous check, with exultation; it brought her opportunity so much the nearer.

Letters came promptly from Henricks. He wrote that Washington was greatly changed in the two months he had been in New York.

Apparently the Fifty-fifth had made a good impression in Washington, for the crowd had cheered as it marched and tremulous. It was only a moment before she returned, with her arm through Mr. Cortlandt's, half supporting him.

"What is it?" gasped Fanny, frightened.

"Defeat!" Ann flung at Henricks, and she faced him with blazing eyes. "A rout," her guardian supplemented. "A shameful rout! . . . Five hundred men lost!" "Scott should never have yielded to the demand for a decisive engagement. . . . He hadn't enough discipline. . . . Or enough reserves, uncle!" Ann

SACRED HARP SINGING CONVENTION BIG SUCCESS

The Sacred Harp Singing Convention which convened here Saturday and Sunday was a notable success in every respect. There were about 200 visiting singers from other Texas towns. Some were here from Dallas, Fort Worth, Brownwood, Abilene, Coleman, DeLeon, Putnam, Blanker, Clyde, Dublin, Cisco, Baird, Eastland and many other towns. The singing was great. Those present were thoroughly convinced that "Sacred Harp" singers can deliver the goods in thorough and impressive manner. They sing soul stirring melodies that have been sacred to them since childhood and with some of them that was more than half a century ago. The writer noticed that while they sang, their eyes sparkled and their faces glowed and radiated the spirit of something deeper than the words. The doors of their souls were opened so to speak, and they were singing a message from their souls. It was good to be there and hear them and mix and mingle with them. It was a day that will not soon be forgotten by them or by the people of this community. At the noon hour, dinner was spread and all invited to partake. There was plenty and to spare after all had fared sumptuously. Brownwood won the convention for next April.

Sunday afternoon, the committee authorized to locate the place for the next state convention which convenes in July next year, took up the matter, and it developed that there were three towns after it. Cross Plains asked for it and so has Abilene and Hubbard City. Rev. Richbourg, Baptist pastor; F. M. Gwin, Mayor, and A. C. Dodson, President of the Chamber of Commerce, all spoke before the convention in the interest of Cross Plains, stating that if the convention should come here, that they would be well cared for and the necessary preliminary arrangements would be made to care for all who might come. All made splendid talks, and the committee was very favorably impressed. Their decision will be announced later.

The visitors were all in the best of humor and between songs someone would "spring a joke" on a friend—and the friend was always ready with repartee, all of which served to create a spirit of pleasantness. All seemed to be glad that they had come, and praised the people for the courteous manner in which they had been entertained. Many stated that they were comidg back to Cross Plains the first opportunity.

Next Sunday being the 5th. Sunday, I'll not be here. Am out at Burnt Branch at 11 a. m. and Victory school house at 3: p. m. and at Dressy, Sunday night 8: p. m. We had a very fine 4th. Quarterly Conference, Saturday and Sunday. The Church has taken an advanced step that will mean much to the church and town. Let's all do our best in closing out a prosperous year for Cross Plains charge. Rev. W. M. Lane preached three fine and helpful sermons and returned to Abilene Monday morning. R. E. L. ## OKLAHOMA GOVERNOR STILL ON WAR PATH AGAINST KLAN

Governor Walton of Oklahoma says he has men and money to keep Oklahoma under martial law for a year—and he has the bull by the horns. The legislature wants to convene in special session to impeach him—but he says that when they meet, he will arrest them. The opposition to the governor is strong, yet the governor has powerful and influential friends who are backing him. The trouble started over a clash between the governor and the Klan, but recent developments have charged the issue into Walton and anti-Walton factions. Many who oppose the Klan are opposing Walton. They contend that he has deprived them of their constitutional rights, and are demanding his retirement. Feeling is running high, and the governor is resorting to extreme measures in an effort to steer the ship of state as he desires. His policy is to run Okla. while he is governor. He is recognized as an extreme radical by most people, regardless of whether they are Klan or anti klan. At present, Oklahoma is under a one-man rule. Walton is not only governor, he is dictator.

The Chamber of Commerce met Friday Night and discussed a number of things which will engage their attention for some time. Be sure and attend the meetings, and do your best. Some announcements will be made soon regarding the work of Chamber of Commerce.

Rev. S. P. Collins attended the Presbytery at Anson last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Barr, went to Brownwood Saturday to see Mrs. Barr's mother, who was operated on Monday at Sanitarium.

Hester Notgrass and two brothers of Nimrod, attended the convention.

WORK STARTS ON NEW FILLING STATION HERE

Mr. Edwin Neeb has men at work this week laying the foundation for his new brick filling station, which is going up on the corner directly across the street east of the Guaranty State Bank. The brick is now on the ground. The station when complete will be modern and up-to-date in every respect. It will be constructed on "regular city style." Work is progressing nicely, we are pleased to report.
