Notice From B. L. Boydston

In conference with my creditors, we deemed it necessary to establish a credit department for the purpose of collecting and eliminating present and future past due notes and accounts, and we have placed these matters in the hands of W. E. Melton at Baird.

All who are indebted to me with past due notes or accounts will please see him, as my Creditors insist that these items be settled.

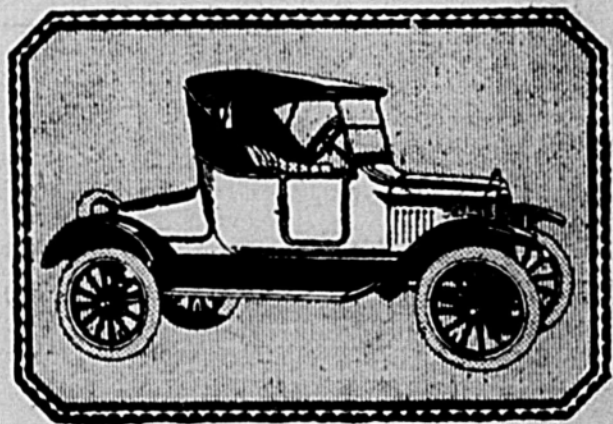

Respectfully, B. L. Boydston.

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

New Roadster

Business men—with whom the runabout has always been very popular—are well pleased with the changes embodied in this model. Always rugged, the car has been made decidedly trimmer and more comfortable. This result is obtained by raising the radiator and enlarging the cowl, making a decided improvement in looks and providing more leg room. A well designed top and slanting windshield do their share toward adding a finished, clean-cut appearance. Make it a point to see the other new models also on display in our show room.

BAND MAKES TOUR GIVES FREE CONCERTS

The municipal Band toured several neighboring towns on Monday, giving free concert on the streets. They motored to Pioneer Monday morning, where they were given a warm reception, returning for lunch and in the afternoon they went to Cross Cut, where the school turned out and greeted them in a friendly way. They went from there to Burkett and rendered program which was well received, after which they returned to Cross Plains and gave concert on the street at 4:30, all of which was thoroughly enjoyed.

CALLAHAN COUNTY FAIR WAS BIG SUCCESS LAST WEEK

The first Callahan County Fair was put over at Baird last week and according to reports, it was a big success. Continued interest and co-operation will be supplied and it will become an annual event of importance. A large number of people from this section attended and many others intended to go, but the recent rains had left the roads in rather bad condition. The Review isn't in possession of detailed report of the Fair, so we are unable to publish same this week.

An advertiser has threatened to quit the Review. His name is Martin Neeb, every body knows him. Last week he advertised in the Review for a car of Turkeys, and he certainly got results. He filled his car extra coops and every thing else that he could find to hold them—then had turkey left!

44 FORDS MONTHS SALE RECORD OF C P MOTOR CO

The Cross Plains Motor Co. local Ford agency is doing a record business this season. During the month of Oct, they sold 44 new cars. And for the first ten day period of this month, a total of 18 cars were sold. These records were established in face of continued rains and muddy roads.

THE DADDY OF THE WOLF TRIBE IS CAPTURED

T. H. (Tom) Lucky, W. A. and Jim Cunningham of Newburg claimed to have caught the largest gray wolf, Monday evening, ever caught in Comanche County. The wolf having measured 5 feet 9 inches from tip to tip. Stood 30 inches high and measured 28 inches around the body, 13 inches from nose to top of head.

This wolf was known by sport lovers from various parts of the county as being one of the trickiest, hardest wolves to run with dogs in this part of the country. Having been tried at different times by many packs of dogs. It was dratted by the sheep and goat raisers and particularly the turkey raisers in this community.

They claim to have caught him with twelve dogs, which they raised and trained themselves. One thing of interest was two puppies, 8 months old that ran in the entire race and were in the catch.—Comanche Enterprise.

OIL DEVELOPMENT CONTINUES REGARDLESS OF WET WEATHER

The continued rains this week, failed to materially check local operation. Stone & Co. are drilling at approximately 700 feet on the Barr tract offsetting town site.

While the Junior Oil Co. has completed their rig on the Thorne tract about a mile Southeast of the Barr well, and will start drilling as soon as tools are moved in.

East of town, C. O. Moore is expected to drill in this week on his Faulkner No. 1, if they have no more trouble.

Stone and Co. have moved their rig in on their Faulkner lease and will start the well soon, it is reported.

Schaffner Bros, on the James tract, are drilling at near 400 feet. T. B. Slick is drilling at around 500 feet on his Faulkner No. 1. Pennant Oil & Gas Co. have shut down their Albion No. 4, waiting for 8 inch casing.

In the Cross Cut section, the Pennant Oil & Gas Co. who having been shut down for some time on their Strickland No. 1, will start drilling deeper, in the near future.

Infant Dies

Sherman Glen, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Adams, died Tuesday afternoon, after a brief illness, and was tenderly laid to rest Wednesday afternoon, Rev. Stuts conducting the funeral services. There were many beautiful floral offerings. The pastor joins in extending condolence to the grief stricken young parents, and relatives.

Make South's Idle Lands "Blossom Like The Rose"

Some of the crops produced on Southern cut-over lands. Top, field of sugar cane; below, high grade cattle and Satsuma Oranges.

One of the principal objects of the Forestry, Reclamation and Home-Making Conference to be held in New Orleans, November 19-22 is to devise ways and means for putting to some useful purpose the vast areas of cut-over, swamp and overflowed lands in the South. The conference will be held under auspices of the Southern Pine Association, Mississippi and Florida Development Boards and New Orleans Association of Commerce, and the people of every southern state and community are considered to be vitally interested in this movement.

Several million acres of arid land in the West have been made to "blossom like the rose" by reclamation through irrigation projects financed and constructed by the federal government. The South now is asking that she be allowed to share in this federal assistance so that those portions of her idle lands suitable for agriculture also may be made to "blossom like the rose."

Many prosperous localities in the South which have been built up on cut-over lands furnish convincing proof that large portions of the cut-

NEW METHODIST PASTOR ARRIVES FROM ABILENE

Rev. Tom W. Brabham of Abilene, arrived a few days back with his family, and has assumed his duties as pastor of the Methodist Church here. Welcome to our City Bro. Brabham. Rev. R. E. L. Stuts, retiring pastor is leaving with his family for Abilene this week, after a successful year. He has taken a superannuate relation. We wish them well where they go.

You probably noticed a number of errors in last week's issue of the Review. In some places the type got mixed and we were too rushed to take proof, it went to press in that shape. The rush was caused by unusual amount of job work and news and advertisement reaching this office late. We appreciate your co-operation in handing in news, but please have same in this office no later than Wednesday noon.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Bruce, and Mrs. D. Montgomery, motored in this week to do some trading.

"THE LOST MINE" STAGED AT LAWN BY BAND

The municipal Band staged "The Lost Mine" an interesting Play, at Lawn, last Friday night. The Lawn people turned out and gave the players a fine audience. receipts show. They were well pleased with the play and were outspoken in their praise. The Band was accorded a friendly reception.

On Monday night of this week, the Band staged this play for the second time here before a large and receptive audience. When it was given here recently many were unable to obtain seats, so it was rendered again by request and attendance and receipts were satisfactory.

J. L. Dunoway, principal of Dressy school was in town Saturday, and subscribed for the Review. He informed the reporter that the box supper given at the school building Friday night, for the benefit of the play grounds, netted them $98.45. Dressy has a splendid and progressive community.

Recently two French soldiers were bathing in the Rhine river. Since they were unable to swim, the soldiers were in a serious condition. A young German who was watching, swam out and rescued both of them. The French tribunal, to reward him, promised that anything he asked would be granted. He asked that the lives of seven men, who had been condemned to be shot for causing trouble to the French authorities, might be spared. The request was granted.

Loosen Up That Cold With Musterole

Have Musterole handy when a cold starts. It has all the advantages of grandmother's mustard plaster WITHOUT the blister. You just apply it with the fingers. First you feel a warm tingle as the healing ointment penetrates the pores, then comes a soothing, cooling sensation and quick relief.

Made of pure oil of mustard and other simple ingredients, Musterole is recommended by many nurses and doctors. Try Musterole for bronchitis, sore throat, stiff neck, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, croup, asthma, neuralgia, congestion, pains and aches of the back or joints, sore muscles, sprains, bruises, chilblains, frost feet, colds of the chest. It may prevent pneumonia and "flu."

To Mothers: Musterole is now made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

LESSON FOR NOVEMBER 18

OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST A MISSIONARY

LESSON TEXT—Matt. 9:35-38; Luke 8:1-7; John 2:18-17.

GOLDEN TEXT—"God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."—John 3:16.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Preaching in City and Country.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus a Missionary.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Missionary Activity of Jesus.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Christ's Missionary Zeal.

1. The Missionary Motive (Matt. 9:35-38).

As Jesus saw the multitude His compassion was aroused. Their pitiful condition moved Him to take steps to provide missionaries. The result of this was the sending forth of the Twelve. Jesus saw the multitude as: 1. Shepherdless Sheep (v. 36). The people were in need of a protector, provider and guide. Just as sheep are of a shepherd. They were fat and scattered—distressed, cast down and hopeless. What a picture of the needy world today! The world is hungry but knows not how to have this hunger satisfied. They know not which way to turn in their confusion and perplexity. They are in need of that which alone the Good Shepherd can supply.

2. Grain Ready for Harvest (v. 37). He told the disciples that the grain was ripe, ready for the harvest, and that unless laborers were secured the harvest would be lost. This is still a picture of the world. The laborers are still few. It is the Lord's harvest that is ready to be gathered. No wonder He was moved with compassion! Those who have eyes to see and hearts to feel are still moved with compassion as they see the world ready to be gathered into Christ's fold but no one to perform the labor. The means for securing laborers for the harvest is prayer. He urged the disciples to pray that the Lord would send forth laborers.

3. Classes of Missionaries (Luke 8:1-3).

Three classes are here enumerated: 1. Jesus Himself (v. 1). He is the grand and supreme missionary. All receive their example and power from Him. He left all and gave all in this great enterprise.

2. The Twelve (v. 1). Christ called them and sent them forth. They were His representatives and were clothed with His power. Missionaries should be chosen and commissioned by the Lord himself. In the evangelization of the world there will always be need of the group of men and women devoted exclusively to that work.

3. Certain Women (vv. 2, 3). Christian women can most effectively do their part in preaching the gospel by ministering to the workers. All who have experienced the saving grace of God desire to have a part in sending the gospel to others that they too might be saved. The church is greatly indebted to the work of consecrated women.

4. The Missionary Message (John 3:16, 17).

The salvation which is offered to the lost world was accomplished through the sacrificial death of Christ. Out of a heart of love God gave His own son to die. The figure portraying the method of the Cross and salvation is that of the brazen serpent. The outstanding teaching as suggested by Dr. Charles R. Erdman is as follows:

"1. That men are, like the Israelites of old, serpent-bitten; but the deadly poison is the sting of sin."

"2. God has provided a remedy in the person of His Son; in His crucifixion we see sin vanquished, as the uplifted serpent pictured the death of the destroyer; yet as the uplifted serpent was not real but one of brass, so Christ was not really a partaker of sin but only made in the likeness of sinful flesh."

"3. As it was necessary for the dying Israelites to accept God's provision, and with submission and faith to look upon the brazen serpent, so it is necessary for us to look in repentance and faith to the crucified Savior and to commit ourselves to God as He is graciously revealed in Jesus Christ. If we refuse to accept Christ we perish, but faith results in eternal life."

"4. This provision is made by the love of God and is freely offered to everyone who believes. 'For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life.'"

His Presence.

When we have broken our god of tradition, and ceased from our god of rhetoric, then may God fire the heart with His presence.—Emerson.

God's Way.

God's way of forgiving is thorough and hearty—both to forgive and to be forgiven; and if that be not so, then hast no portion of His.—Leighton.

Heart and Home.

Without hearts there is no home.—Byron.

Just a Little Smile

Slightly Nervous

An English barrister, after a particularly trying day, came home with his nerves on edge, and at once sought refuge in his own study, well away from the noises of the household machinery.

He sat down by his fire and was gradually getting calmed down when the cat, which had been sitting there, too, got up slowly and walked across the room.

The master turned on her and said, indignantly: "Now, what are you stamping around here for?"

Why Does It?

The head of the office was in a thoroughly bad temper, and, moreover, he had just broken his glasses, and could only read with difficulty the figures the clerk put before him. "Just look at this!" he roared. "It's exactly like a 7." "The figure is a 7, sir," said the clerk. "Then," roared the old man, "why does it look like a 9?"—Yorkshire Post.

Curbing Their Eloquence.

First Attorney—Your honor, unfortunately, I am opposed by an unmitigated scoundrel.

Second Attorney—My learned friend is such a notorious liar—

He—Were I a raindrop and you a rose, do you know what I'd do?

She—Why, you'd evaporate, I suppose. And so I'd be rid of you.

THE REASON.

Same Old Human Nature.

We fear no gold-brick game today. No green-goods man can bring dismay. But—whisper—jays must have their larks. A lot of us bought German marks.

Time Will Equalize.

Maud—Do you know that Ida's husband is several years younger than herself?

Marie—Oh, time will change that.

Playing the Races.

"I suppose I was foolish to take a tip from a bootblack, but I thought one tip was as good as another."

"So it is. Just about."

A Big One.

Optimus—Have you heard the latest Ford joke?

Cynicus—Yes; he wants to be president.

Feet and Shoes.

Mr. Oldie—I am a self-made man, sir. I began life as a barefoot boy.

Kennard—Well, I wasn't born with shoes on, either.

Costly Aids.

"It keeps me poor."

"What does?"

"Trying to make other people think I'm rich."

EXONERATED.

You come home all hours of the night.

Art and Nature.

A people by dissension struck Exclaimed, "We revel in hard luck. We have no earthquakes ready-made. Let's wreck the land without their aid!"

New Use for Hookworms.

"They tell me," said Jackson, "that he is an expert angler."

"Yes, maybe, but he doesn't know anything about fishing," said Johnson. "Why that guy is so dumb that he thinks hookworms are used for bait."

The Artist.

"A fine stenog you are! Call yourself a typist and don't know how to put a ribbon in a typewriter."

"Does Paderewski know how to tune a piano?"—Life.

On the Safe Side.

Husband—My wife does nothing but ask for money—it's $5 one day, $3 the next, and so on.

Solicitor—What does she do with all this money?

Husband—Nothing. I don't give it to her.

An Inventor.

"Pa, what is an inventor?"

"An inventor, my boy, is usually a man who has thought up a way to do with machinery some task that he is tired of doing himself."

OBTAIN SUGAR FROM GARDEN

Process Devised Whereby Sirup Can Be Extracted From Beets by Amateurs.

Gardeners who cannot raise sugar cane are interested in a process, devised abroad, for extracting sugar from beets, a process designed especially for the amateur.

Great care is exercised in harvesting the roots, that the tender skin be not broken. The first operation is to remove all dirt by washing, after which the beets are boiled in water until the skin peels off easily. They are next cut into thin slices, placed in a pan, just covered with water, brought to a boil once more and then left to simmer for ten hours. The resulting pulp is then put into a muslin bag and squeezed until all the juice is extracted. The juice is boiled down to a very thick sirup that makes a good substitute for commercial sugar. As the sirup will not keep for more than a few weeks, it is found advisable to make only a small quantity at a time. The roots, however, can be stored for a long period without deteriorating if they are kept dry and free from frost.

Internal cleanliness protects against disease

IT is but a step from those immediate results of constipation—headache, heaviness, loss of appetite—to serious disease. Such minor ailments are a warning that poisons from food waste are flooding your body. Keep clean internally.

In constipation, say intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness including the gravest diseases of life.

Laxatives Aggravate Constipation

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in Lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is not a laxative and cannot gripe. Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world.

Don't give disease a start. Adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. Nujol is not a medicine. Like pure water, it is harmless. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

OBTAIN SUGAR FROM GARDEN Process Devised Whereby Sirup Can Be Extracted From Beets by Amateurs.

Gardeners who cannot raise sugar cane are interested in a process, devised abroad, for extracting sugar from beets, a process designed especially for the amateur.

Great care is exercised in harvesting the roots, that the tender skin be not broken. The first operation is to remove all dirt by washing, after which the beets are boiled in water until the skin peels off easily. They are next cut into thin slices, placed in a pan, just covered with water, brought to a boil once more and then left to simmer for ten hours. The resulting pulp is then put into a muslin bag and squeezed until all the juice is extracted. The juice is boiled down to a very thick sirup that makes a good substitute for commercial sugar. As the sirup will not keep for more than a few weeks, it is found advisable to make only a small quantity at a time. The roots, however, can be stored for a long period without deteriorating if they are kept dry and free from frost.

Internal cleanliness protects against disease

It is but a step from those immediate results of constipation—headache, heaviness, loss of appetite—to serious disease. Such minor ailments are a warning that poisons from food waste are flooding your body. Keep clean internally.

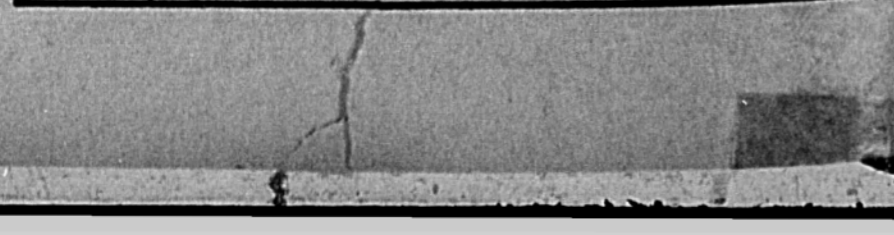

In constipation, say intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness including the gravest diseases of life.

Laxatives Aggravate Constipation Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in Lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is not a laxative and cannot gripe. Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world.

Don't give disease a start. Adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. Nujol is not a medicine. Like pure water, it is harmless. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

HELP FOR GIRLS WHO WORK

Mrs. Lodic Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her

Tyrone, Pa.—"A friend told my husband how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had helped his wife, so my husband bought me a bottle because I was so run-down, had a nervous weakness, no strength in my body and pains in my left side so bad that I could hardly do my work. Before I was married I used to work in the factory, and I had pains just the same then as I have had since I have done my housework. I would not be without a bottle in the house now. It has stopped the pains all right and I have found out that it is a wonderful body builder, as it has made me well and strong. It is going to be the old reliable" with me hereafter, and I am always willing to tell other women how it has helped me. You can use this letter as you wish as I can honestly say that my words are true."—Mrs. M. Lodic, R.F.D. No. 4, Box 40, Tyrone, Pa.

REASON SO MANY "PIMPLE CURES" FAIL

Salves and lotions come and go, one after the other, hoping to hit the right thing which might cause them to rest results for people who suffer from skin troubles. Most of these concoctions don't even heat the outward effects, much less take away the cause of the disease.

Do you think so little of your delicate skin as to allow yourself to become the subject for these experiments? By all means use only the thing which has stood the test of time and public opinion. Black and White Ointment has not only stood this test, but you are sure of it—when you know that it is selling at the tremendous rate of nearly two million packages a year.

The way it is economically priced, in liberal packages, has helped to make it so popular, along with its dependability. The 50c size contains three times as much as the 25c size. All dealers have it.—Advertisement.

Going Into Details. "Do you always fully understand that subject you feel called upon to discuss?" "That oughtn't to be expected," replied Senator Sorghum. Wreck survivors tell how tobacco kept them going

When food and water gave out on third day, they smoked until rescued

Perhaps they were only pirates of the sea, and deserved no great charity from the hand of Fate. Nevertheless, they were very much human beings when they found themselves miles out to sea adrift in an open boat.

With two days' supply of food and water, they confidently expected to be rescued in plenty of time. But when the third day passed and no friendly sail appeared on the horizon, it began to look like a case for Davy Jones's locker.

One of the victims, crazy with thirst, suggested that they divide a bottle of iodine and end the agony quickly. "The tobacco hasn't given out yet," said another. "Let's stick it out a while longer." And they did.

Late in the afternoon of the fifth day a tramp schooner saw their distress signals and came valiantly to the rescue. "The only thing that kept us going all was tobacco," one of the survivors admitted when he was safely deposited on dry land again. "We smoked and chewed, and that sort of kept us up."

Tobacco is certainly a poor substitute for food and water—but under the stress of trying circumstances a pipe is a big help.

Pipes filled with Edgeworth probably have no more soothing effect than pipes filled with other tobaccos, but most Edgeworth smokers somehow feel that they need Edgeworth to get complete pipe satisfaction.

If you have never smoked Edgeworth, send your name and address on a postcard to Larus & Brother Company. They will be glad to send you free samples—generous helpings both of Edgeworth Plug Slice and Ready Rubbed.

Smoke a few pipefuls and judge for yourself whether or not you wish to become a permanent member of the Edgeworth Club.

Edgeworth is sold in various sizes to suit the needs and means of all purchasers. Both Edgeworth Plug Slice and Ready Rubbed are packed in small, pocket-size packages, in handsome humidor holding a pound, and also in several handy in-between sizes.

For the free samples, kindly address Larus & Brother Company, 66 South 21st Street, Richmond, Va. If you will enclose on your postcard the name and address of your regular tobacco dealer, your courtesy will be appreciated.

To Retail Tobacco Merchants: If your jobber cannot supply you with Edgeworth, Larus & Brother Company will gladly send you prepaid by parcel post a one- or two-ounce carton of any size of Edgeworth Plug Slice or Ready Rubbed for the same price you would pay the jobber.

Condensed Austin News

The retail furniture dealers of Texas, organized under the name of the Retail Furniture Association of Texas, without capital stock, and headquarters at Dallas, have been granted a charter.

Dr. J. A. Torbett of Marlin has been appointed by Gov. Neff as a member of the State Board of Health, to succeed Dr. A. F. Beverly of Austin, who resigned to do the medical and surgical work at the State School for the Deaf.

The State Banking Board will meet and consider five applications for charters of State banks. Application for charter for a new State bank at Fort Worth will be considered later and probably be licensed about Jan. 1 next. No immediate action will be taken.

Governor Neff appointed two members of the State Board of Optometry, where two terms had expired. Dr. W. B. Georgia of Waco was reappointed for another term, while Dr. H. G. Towles of Snyder was named to succeed Dr. Fred Woolset of Wichita Falls.

Assistant Attorney General Riley Strickland has been to Fort Worth to represent the department in two cases to be called there in State courts. One involves the closed Farmers and Merchants State Bank of Ranger and the other is with reference to the United Home Builders.

The Commissioner of Insurance will approve securities deposited by insurance companies with the State Treasurer as a prerequisite to doing business, the same as was done by the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking before the department was separated, the Attorney General held in an opinion recently.

Dr. E. E. Bramlette, for many years superintendent of the State School for the Blind at Austin, has tendered his resignation to the State Board of Control, effective Nov. 15. He has accepted the position of superintendent of the American Publishing House for the Blind at Louisville, Ky.

Governor Neff and Attorney General Keeling have qualified as true sports. They were rained out of a deer and turkey hunt last week when their automobile became bogged near Kerrville and could not get to its destination because of the heavy rains, but they will renew the effort this week. The party is scheduled to leave Austin by automobile and go to a secluded ranch somewhere west of Kerrville.

W. W. Boyd, State Game, Fish, and Oyster Commissioner, has returned from Dallas, where he awarded the contract and saw work started on a new breeding pond at the State Fish Hatchery, which will make the twenty-eighth pond. The new pond will be four times the size of any of the present ponds. When completed Mr. Boyd estimates the hatchery will have a capacity of 400,000 fish per year.

The Railroad Commission has extended to Dec. 1 the time within which the contestants in the cotton rate hearing may file written briefs presenting their side of the case. Several asked for more time, as the thirty days granted would have expired early this month. It will, therefore, be near the first of the year or later before the commission returns a decision in this important rate case.

Representative I. W. Culp of Bell County has been in Austin on legal business and said that he is to make an active campaign in his race for Lieutenant Governor.

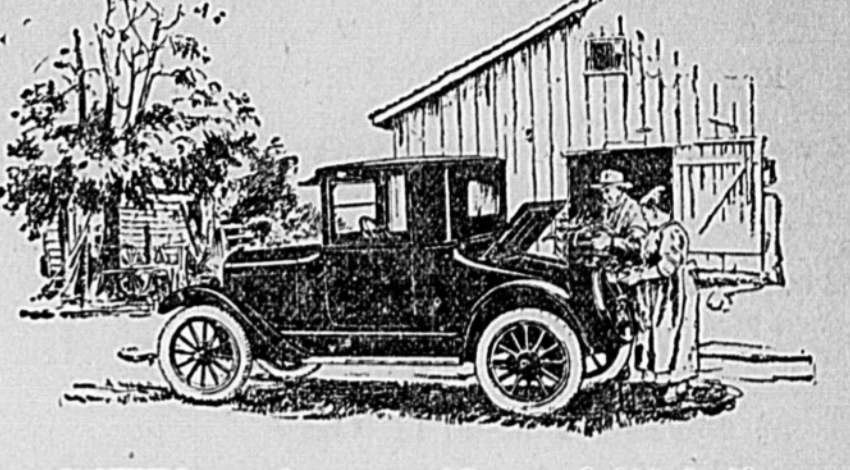

The act of the last Legislature in clothing the State Fire Insurance Commission with power to make workmen's compensation rates has been held valid in all particulars in an opinion given through Assistant Riley Strickland. This matter was briefed by the late Assistant Atty. Gen. W. W. Meachum and the language of the opinion is mostly that employed by Mr. Meachum in his brief.

In accordance with agreement made between counsel, a motion was filed in the supreme court to advance the mandamus case of Charles Scribner's Sons vs. Marrs, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, to compel the latter to do all things necessary to recognize the validity of the re-book contracts of last December. The motion further set or suggested the date agreed to by counsel, which is Dec. 12.

Contracts for erection of a tuberculosis building for negro men and a cold storage plant at the State Insane Asylum at Austin have been awarded by the State Board of Control to Richard Schmidt of Austin. Mr. Schmidt's bid on the tuberculosis building was $18,250 and $10,540 on the cold storage plant. Henry Waffinger of Austin was awarded the contract for erection of a power house at the Southwest Texas Teachers' College at San Marcos to cost $15,851.

For Economical Transportation CHEVROLET

Every Farm Needs Two

EVERY farm needs two automobiles, one of which should be a closed model Chevrolet. The open touring car is best for general farm use, carrying passengers or perhaps miscellaneous bulky produce or merchandise, but for cold or rainy weather, and for church or social use the family needs a closed car, either a 2-passenger Utility Coupe as illustrated, or the 5-passenger Sedan. The extra large rear compartment is a feature of the Coupe.

These closed cars are very finely made, furnished, upholstered and trimmed. The windows are of plate glass and can be lowered, providing as much air as an open car, yet affording full protection against wind, rain, snow or cold when raised. With a second car on a farm, one is always available for those at home when the other car is out.

The low prices of Chevrolet make the ownership of two cars feasible for most farm families. CHEVROLET MOTOR CO., DETROIT, MICH. Division of General Motors Corporation

40,000 RADIOS ARE ON FARMS Recent Survey by U. S. Department of Agriculture Shows Wide Use of Wireless Outfits.

The speed with which farmers have taken up radio for practical and social purposes is shown in a recent survey made by the United States Department of Agriculture at Washington. County agricultural agents estimate that there are approximately 40,000 radio sets on farms in 780 counties. This is an average of 51 sets per county. Applying the average to 2,850 agricultural counties, a total of more than 145,000 sets on farms throughout the country is estimated.

The county agents' estimates cover every state. To Make an Arrow Sling. Hunting with a slingshot is well known among boys. Using an arrow shot is better sport, especially when you make it all, including the arrow, yourself.

Take a shingle, which will, of course, be thicker at one end than the other, and cut off a long strip, about four inches wide, for the arrow. At the thin end cut a tail. The thicker end should be made to point for the head. Balance the arrow on your finger. At the place where it balances cut a notch. Make the sling like any ordinary slingshot, using a piece of wool five or six inches long for the handle, with two or three inches of string connecting the inch-wide rubber band. On the opposite end of the band is three inches more of string finished with a knot.

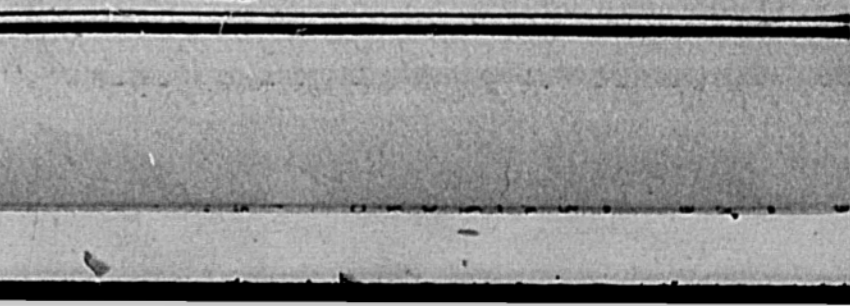

To shoot the arrow, put the knot in the notch, pull back and let 'er fly. Already Had Shopping Habit. Shopper—I want to get a habit. Floorwalker—Yes, madam. Riding or drug? Repeatedly Protested. Mabel—And did you object when he kissed you? Sable—Every time.

HOLD RESTRICTED INQUIRY USELESS

IS OPPOSED TO LIMITATIONS

Assumed That Invitation to U. S. Will be Dropped Since It Would Be Rejected

London.—News from Washington of the failure of the negotiations for a reparations conference will hardly come as a surprise to British official quarters, although they had hoped that France would not push her attitude so far as to endanger the chances of the proposed conference of experts.

The question will now arise as to what will follow from the refusal of the United States to enter a reparations discussion. The general view is that the next step may be a formal request by the American and British Governments for payment of the war debts owed to them by France as a means of bringing economic pressure and so inducing France to adopt a more moderate policy.

Washington.—France and the United States came definitely to the parting of the ways Friday on the proposal to enlist American aid toward a solution of the reparations problem.

Premier Poincare was advised by Secretary Hughes, through Ambassador Juserand, that restrictions insisted upon by France would serve to "frustrate" the object of the Washington Government in offering American co-operation in an expert reparations inquiry plan.

The State Department refused to go beyond this point in disclosing the purport and result of recent conversations with the Ambassador, in which detailed explanations of the French attitude were made.

No formal invitation to participate in an expert inquiry is before the Washington Government and a declaration is, therefore, not in order. In the circumstances, no invitation from the allied powers now is expected.

There is no doubt that such an invitation, if presented under the French restrictions, would be declined. President Coolidge feels that the French limitations render the inquiry plan useless and futile. He believes the French restrictions would reduce the inquiry into a mere audit of German accounts, that the United States could serve no useful purpose by sanctioning an American participation in an investigation that could not produce broad and comprehensive plans for economic rehabilitation of Germany and adequate payments by Germany on reparations accounts.

The conversations at the State Department ended when Ambassador Juserand called with advices from his Government which reached him while Mr. Coolidge and his Cabinet were discussing the situation on the basis of previous explanations from Paris. The message showed no modification of the French attitude and added nothing new to the situation.

Secretary Hughes, before receiving the Ambassador, made a second visit to the White House for a brief conference with the President in preparation for presenting the American decision.

ILLEGAL TO SEIZE BREWERY, JUDGE HOLDS

Philadelphia Jurist's Ruling on Top of Federal Seizures There

Philadelphia, Pa.—After prohibition agents had announced the seizure of fourteen breweries in and near Philadelphia, Federal Judge McKeehan rendered a decision that it was illegal to seize the entire plants of brewing companies.

Holding that a search warrant authorizes prohibition agents to seize only intoxicating liquors illegally manufactured and the appurtenances necessarily used in the manufacture, Judge McKeehan advised Federal prohibition authorities to "use some discretion and judgment" in the execution of such warrants, and warned them there was a penalty of a fine or imprisonment for exceeding their authority.

The decision came like a thunder-bolt to the big squad of prohibition agents assembled here from different parts of the country, and who had planned to make other seizures in the Government's Nation-wide move to enforce prohibition.

LUDENDORFF STARTS MARCH ON BERLIN

Hittler and Troops Invasd Hall As Von Kahr Was Speaking

Paris.—Adolph Hitler's troops have begun an offensive movement toward Berlin, according to dispatches from Berlin.

The same dispatches say that Hitler has proclaimed Gen. Ludendorff dictator and himself Chancellor of the whole Reich.

Berlin.—Dr. von Kahr has accepted the governorship of Bavaria, saying: "In this most serious hour of Bavarian history I accept the governorship as a representative of the monarchy."

The new Government is declared to be a dictatorship without a Parliament.

General Ludendorff, in accepting Hitler's offer of the post of commander of the army, said: "We have reached the turning point in the history of Germany and the world. God bless our work."

It is reported that the rebels in Munich have placed Premier Von Knilling and some of the other Ministers under arrest.

Munich.—The Bavarian Government has been declared overthrown by Adolph Hitler, the Fascist leader, and the administration placed in the hands of Gen. Ludendorff as commander in chief.

Dr. von Kahr, the military dictator in Bavaria, had just finished addressing a patriotic manifestation in the Burgerbrau when Hitler entered at the head of 600 men. Hitler announced that the Government had been overthrown and was replaced by a new Government with Gen. Ludendorff as supreme head and Hitler as political adviser.

Former Chief of Police von Poenner has been named as administrator of the country and Gen. von Lossow Minister of War.

After Hitler's declaration his troops drew a cordon around the Burgerbrau. Troops of the Oberland and Empire flag organizations concentrated on the Burgerbrau and occupied different parts of the city, chiefly the squares.

Conferences were being held within the Burgerbrau and reports said that Dr. von Kahr was attempting to negotiate a settlement with Hitler. The attitude of the police and the Reichswehr has not yet been disclosed.

Those who gathered in the Burgerbrau, which is a famous Bavarian beer cellar, were members of nationalist patriotic organizations to whom Dr. von Kahr read a manifesto to the German Nation denouncing the principles of Marxism. The reading of the manifesto was greeted with applause and Hitler's sudden entry with strong forces was somewhat surprising in the nature of a dramatic surprise.

UNDERWOOD MAKES ATTACK ON I. C. C.

Senator Says the South Should Have Three Members on Body

Greenville, S. C.—Declaring that the South has only herself to blame for failure to receive proper recognition from the Government in various ways, attacking the Interstate Commerce Commission because he said discriminatory freight rates exist, and asserting that he expects the movement southward of textile manufacturing to continue in the United States, Senator Oscar W. Underwood delivered two luncheon addresses here. Thursday night he delivered the principal address at the annual banquet of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

"Not through any fault but our own has the South lost the golden opportunities that have presented themselves in years past," Senator Underwood told the Kiwanis Club.

"The reason is merely our fear of a shadow that does not exist," he continued. "The war between the States today is no more a fact than the War of the Roses, because the whole fault lies with us, because we have surrendered to a shadow—and we have surrendered material interests of our business and consequently of our communities and our families."

COOLIDGE IN CALL FOR THANKSGIVING

We Have Been a Most Blessed People We Ought to Be a Most Thankful People

Washington.—President Coolidge's Thanksgiving Day proclamation issued from the White House calls to mind that the year has brought to the American people two tragic experiences—the death of President Harding and the Japanese earthquake—but says that such experiences serve to test and refine men and nations.

The proclamation follows: By the President of the United States of America: A Proclamation: The American people, from their earliest days, have observed the wise custom of acknowledging each year the bounty with which Divine Providence has favored them. In the beginnings, this acknowledgment was a voluntary return of thanks by the community for the fruitfulness of the harvest. Though our mode of life has greatly changed, this custom has always survived. It has made Thanksgiving Day not only one of the oldest but one of the most characteristic observances of our country. On that day, in home and church, in family and in public gatherings, the whole Nation has for generations paid the tribute due from grateful hearts for blessings bestowed.

To center our thought in this way upon the favor which we have shown has been altogether wise. We have found warrant for a more hopeful and confident attitude toward the future.

In this current year, we now approach the time which has been accepted by custom as most fitting for the calm survey of our estate and the return of thanks. We shall more keenly realize our good fortune, if we will, in deep sincerity, give it due thought and more especially, if we will compare it with that of any other community in the world.

The year has brought to our people two tragic experiences which have deeply affected them. One was the death of our beloved President Harding, which has been mourned wherever there is a realization of the worth of high ideals, noble purpose and unselfish service carried even to the end of supreme sacrifice. His loss recalled the Nation to a less captious and more charitable attitude. It sobered the whole thought of the country. A little later came the unparalleled disaster to the friendly people of Japan. This called forth from the people of the United States a demonstration of deep and humane feeling. It was wrought into the friendship which is a guarantee of world peace. It replenished the charitable impulse of the country.

By experiences such as these, men and nations are tested and refined. We have been blessed with much of material prosperity. We shall be better able to appreciate it if we remember the privations others have suffered, and we shall be the more worthy of it if we use it for their relief.

"We will do well then, to render thanks for the good that has come to us, and show by our actions that we have become stronger, wiser, and truer by the chastenings which have been imposed upon us. We will thus prepare ourselves for the part we must have in a world which forever needs the full measure of service. We have been a most favored people. We ought to be a most generous people. We have been a most blessed people. We ought to be a most thankful people.

Wherefore, I, Calvin Coolidge, President of the United States, do hereby fix and designate Thursday, the twenty-ninth day of November, as Thanksgiving Day, and recommend its general observance throughout the land. It is urged that the people gather in their homes and their usual places of worship, give expression to their gratitude for the benefits and blessings that a gracious Providence has bestowed upon them, and seek the guidance of Almighty God that they may deserve a continuance of His favor.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused to be affixed the great seal of the United States.

Done at the city of Washington this fifth day of November, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-three, and of the independence of the United States, the one hundred and forty eighth.

HUGHES PLAN GIVEN FIRM U. S. SUPPORT

Some Formula Still May Be Devised Which Will Permit the United States and Allies to Join Hands

Washington.—The United States will stand by the Hughes note to Lord Curzon, proposing an unrestricted expert investigation of Germany's capacity to pay and methods of payment, and refusing to discuss the allied war debt in connection with the reparations question.

This was the statement which came from a high American source following a conference of an hour and three-quarters between Secretary Hughes and Jules Jusserand, French Ambassador. This authority said that the debt question had not been raised.

Paris dispatches had intimated that France intended to link them in its statement to the American Government.

Both Hughes and Jusserand refused to divulge what took place, but there was no indication that there had been a break. As he left Hughes' office, Jusserand said: "There is nothing that I can say except that we had a very friendly talk filled with great interest. I wish I could go further, but that is all I can tell. I know what you want and I am sure the Secretary will be delighted to tell you."

Hughes then went to the White House and conferred with President Coolidge for fifty minutes, giving him a report of what transpired at the conference with Jusserand.

Negotiations presumably are continuing with hope that some formula still may be devised which will permit the United States and the Allies to join hands.

Previously the State Department announced that the Hughes plan had been accepted by Great Britain, Italy and Belgium, leaving France alone in her opposition to an unlimited inquiry.

The speech of Myron T. Herrick, American Ambassador to France, attracted much attention here because he had just arrived in France after a visit to the United States. He was a guest at the White House for several days. But his statement that America would follow the furrow through was said here to have been made entirely on his personal responsibility and without instruction from Washington.

BONAR LAW BURIED WITH FULL HONORS

Ashes of Former Premier Entombed in Westminster Abbey

London.—Two thousand persons did honor to the ashes of Bonar Law as the remains of the former Premier were entombed in Westminster Abbey.

English royalty and representatives of foreign rulers, statesmen, diplomats and soldiers crowded the Abbey as, with impressive ritual, the ashes of the statesman were placed in a grave between the organ screen and the tomb of the Unknown Warrior.

The grave lies near that of Darwin, Livingston, Ben Johnson, Fox and Pitt. In the portion of the Abbey which is now reserved for statesmen.

Fallbearers were the Prince of Wales, Premier Baldwin, Austen Chamberlain, H. H. Asquith, Ramsay MacDonald, Lord Beaverbrook, Lord Carson, Lord Fitzala and Speaker Whitley of the House of Commons.

The sermon was preached by the dean of Westminster. Chopin's funeral march was played after the ashes had been lowered into the grave.

Texas Wards Cost $22.04

Austin, Texas.—It cost the State of Texas $22.04 per capita for its wards during September, the first month of the new fiscal year, according to figures officially compiled by the Board of Control. This included the inmates of seventeen eleemosynary institutions. The average expense was about the same as for the preceding twelve months. The figures for the Orphans' Home appear exceptionally small, due to the failure to render a number of maintenance bills before the end of the month.

The Cortlandts of

By JAN

"Marriage!" she exclaimed, aloud—"A stranger like that!" She went to the window to cool her flushed face, and standing there, overlooking the familiar square, she summoned back her flaming memories of the Italian. Invariably, he was a romantic figure, more daintily beautiful than any other man she had seen, and with something unknown and alien about him.

He had been very good to her; he recalled her awakening in the cottage, with Avezzana's eyes upon her, and the subsequent scene which had so filled her with unreasoning panic.

He had asked for her guardian's address. Now she knew why. . . . How fantastic it all was! . . . He had been brave, too, there in the midst of the fighting. . . . And Italy was a most lovely place—Densley had said it was a paradise for lovers. . . . It was strange how remote her association with Densley seemed; only an irradicable impression of his sophisticated viewpoint remained, and a gentle regret. . . . It might have been years ago that he had died. . . . Life was a queer business. . . . How could any one want to marry her without knowing more of her? . . . Still, it was nice of him. . . . A countless, too. Glamor stole over her senses, and yet she was sad; she did not know why. . . . Her guardian's acceptance of the idea of her leaving him depressed her. . . . It made her feel homeless and miserable. . . . To her amazement, tears suddenly brimmed in her eyes. She welcomed them in a luxury of emotionalism, and flung herself face down across her bed. . . . Sobs shook her, powerfully.

She was interrupted by a sharp knock on her door, and Mrs. Cortlandt's hurried voice inquired, "Ann, who in the world is a Count Guido Mario Avezzana inquiring for me—and for you?"

Ann stayed her sobs, and called tremulously, "Count Avezzana? Downstairs?"

"Yes, in the library. Who is he?" "He was at Gettysburg, Aunt Emily."

"You must come down at once." "I can't. It will take me a long time. You go down and see him, Aunt Emily, do."

"He asked for me, Ann. Naturally I shall go down. But hurry!"

Ann found it impossible to obey this command. She wanted very much to see Avezzana—she was breathless at the thought of him below, waiting. She was all on fire with curiosity as to what he would do next, but at the same time she wanted to look her best when she confronted him, lest he should regret his amazing overtures. She ran to the glass and scrutinized her face; although she had only just begun to cry, her eyes were undoubtedly rather red. "I look even worse than I did in the train," she murmured discontentedly, as she poured water into her wash basin. The cold was delicious to her flushed face; no one would ever know she had been crying, she decided, when she looked in the mirror again, after prolonged applications. She lingered over her dresses, unable to decide which one she should put on; but she was determined that it should not be black, and finally she selected an apricot green tulle, which she had worn in the spring before she put on her mourning. In it she had a young and vernal look that was undoubtedly charming. She had a heart-eating conviction of it, herself.

As she stole down the stairs she could hear alternately Mrs. Cortlandt's high voice and Avezzana's lower, more emotional tones. "What are they talking about?" Ann wondered, pausing midway on the steps. She thought that they seemed to be getting on very well without her, so when she went down the long library to greet the young Italian officer she assumed a little air of indifference. Avezzana sprang to his feet at her coming and regarded her with intent eyes. He was more beautiful than ever, and his uniform was more splendid than the one he had worn on the field. Under his look she was inclined to be somewhat uncomfortable, and when he bent to kiss her hand she flinched visibly. It was impossible for her to accept this salutation casually, and she felt self-consciously that Mrs. Cortlandt's massive presence was not the place for an amorous interlude. She sought her lightning glance under her eyelashes, but even before Avezzana's head was lifted Ann could see that Mrs. Cortlandt had preserved an air of worldly composure.

"Well," she thought unbidden, "I'll have to get used to it, if I am going to live in Italy."

This was the statement which came from a high American source following a conference of an hour and three-quarters between Secretary Hughes and Jules Jusserand, French Ambassador. This authority said that the debt question had not been raised. Paris dispatches had intimated that France intended to link them in its statement to the American Government.

Both Hughes and Jusserand refused to divulge what took place, but there was no indication that there had been a break. As he left Hughes' office, Jusserand said: "There is nothing that I can say except that we had a very friendly talk filled with great interest. I wish I could go further, but that is all I can tell. I know what you want and I am sure the Secretary will be delighted to tell you."

Hughes then went to the White House and conferred with President Coolidge for fifty minutes, giving him a report of what transpired at the conference with Jusserand.

Negotiations presumably are continuing with hope that some formula still may be devised which will permit the United States and the Allies to join hands.

Previously the State Department announced that the Hughes plan had been accepted by Great Britain, Italy and Belgium, leaving France alone in her opposition to an unlimited inquiry.

The speech of Myron T. Herrick, American Ambassador to France, attracted much attention here because he had just arrived in France after a visit to the United States. He was a guest at the White House for several days. But his statement that America would follow the turrow through was said here to have been made entirely on his personal responsibility and without instruction from Washington.

BONAR LAW BURIED WITH FULL HONORS

Ashe of Former Premier Entombed in Westminster Abbey London.—Two thousand persons did honor to the ashes of Bonar Law as the remains of the former Premier were entombed in Westminster Abbey.

English royalty and representatives of foreign rulers, statesmen, diplomats and soldiers crowded the Abbey as, with impressive ritual, the ashes of the statesman were placed in a grave between the organ screen and the tomb of the Unknown Warrior.

The graves lie near that of Darwin, Livingston, Ben Johnson, Fox and Pitt. In the portion of the Abbey which is now reserved for statesmen.

Fallbearers were the Prince of Wales, Premier Baldwin, Austen Chamberlain, H. H. Asquith, Ramsay MacDonald, Lord Beaverbrook, Lord Carson, Lord Fitzala and Speaker Whitley of the House of Commons.

The sermon was preached by the dean of Westminster. Chopin's funeral march was played after the ashes had been lowered into the grave.

Texas Costs $22,044 Austin, Texas.—It cost the State of Texas $22,044 per capita for its wards during September, the first month of the new fiscal year, according to figures officially compiled by the Board of Control. This included the inmates of seventeen eleemosynary institutions. The average expense was about the same as for the preceding twelve months.

"Marriage!" she exclaimed, aloud—"A stranger like that!" She went to the window to cool her flushed face, and standing there, overlooking the familiar square, she summoned back her flaming memories of the Italian. Impulsively, he was a romantic figure, more darkly beautiful than any other man she had seen, and with something unknown and alien about him.

He had been very good to her; he recalled her awakening in the cottage, with Avezzana's eyes upon her, and the subsequent scene which had filled her with unreasoning panic.

It was all entirely incomprehensible; had anyone except her guardian been involved, she would have thought the whole thing a gigantic hoax. Mrs. Cortlandt, however, was decidedly impressed.

"Whatever he sees in you, Ann, I cannot imagine," she confided to the girl. "He is a charming young man. Such beautiful manners! Such delightful breeding!"

Ann stayed her sobs, and called tremulously, "Count Avezzana? Downstairs?"

"Yes, in the library. Who is he?" "He was at Gettysburg, Aunt Emily."

"You must come down at once." "I can't. It will take me a long time! You go down and see him, Aunt Emily, do."

"He asked for me, Ann. Naturally I shall go down. But hurry!" Ann found it impossible to obey this command. She wanted very much to see Avezzana—she was breathless at the thought of him below, waiting. She was all on fire with curiosity as to what he would do next, but at the same time she wanted to look her best when she confronted him, lest he should regret his amazing overtures.

There were roses everywhere—everywhere, I assure you, Ann—and purple flowers, great masses of them, I forget their name—"Bogumvella," Avezzana affirmed, smiling.

"Yes, that's it. So sweet! Of course, I was there long before any of our kind heard of Garibaldi. I am quite an old woman, you see! I went down to Rome and was presented to the pope. I had to wear a black veil on my head, Fanny; it was really quite becoming, and the pope was very sweet to me—very. Oh, yes, I loved Rome! I was a great success there, too. I often wonder, Theodore, that I ever came back to New York to marry you. There was such an attractive man I met there! I wonder, Count Avezzana, if by chance you knew him? Of course, by this time, he is probably a grandfather!"

And then began a long cataloging of possible acquaintances, in which Avezzana engaged himself vivaciously. Ann wondered if the Italian were really amused by it. It was impossible to tell, when watching him from across the table. Now and then he glanced up, and his black eyes clashed with her gray ones, but there was nothing personal, nothing demanding, in his look; the man she had known in the little house at Gettysburg had vanished so completely that she thought her memory must have tricked her in regard to him.

As her guardian's letter—she could only believe that Avezzana had, by this time, changed his mind in regard to her, for he had made no effort to arrange for a glimpse of her between the Thursday of his call and Sunday. In the drawing room after dinner, however, he asked her, choosing a moment when she was protected by the presence of both the aunts, if it would be a proper thing for him to ask her to ride with him one afternoon.

"Quite, I should think," Ann said, dryly. Mrs. Rensselyer added, smoothly, "In New York, of course, we are not so rigid as you are in Europe; young girls do many things I would prefer a daughter of mine didn't. But you have my permission, Ann, to ride with Count Avezzana."

Ann glanced a little at that; then she recalled her last ride with the Italian, and a slow flush burned up in her cheeks, for the elaborate and costly dress she had worn on that episode was making her self-conscious. It was arranged that they would go on the afternoon before the count's dinner for the Italian ambassador, but at noon of that day the heat broke in a sharp thunder squall and a flood of rain, so that riding was out of the question; Ann had an odd sense of relief at postponing the tete-a-tete.

In the evening they all wore their best clothes; when Mrs. William, Fanny and Ann drove through the rain in the big Cortlandt carriage, it could scarcely accommodate their flamboyant skirts. Ann was in white, Fanny in pink, and Mrs. Cortlandt in plum color. The older woman talked all the way of the charms of their young host; his good looks, his brilliancy and his fine manners. Ann wondered what she would be saying if she knew of the night in the little cottage at Gettysburg, "Nothing against him," she thought cynically, "but probably a great deal against me!"

The dinner was a most impressive occasion. Avezzana had engaged a private dining room in his hotel, and had decorated the table lavishly with flowers, after the Italian fashion. He had secured distinguished company to meet his ambassador; a general in the Northern army, whom he had met at Gettysburg, an ex-minister to Italy from Wilmington, Delaware, and an Italian capitalist from Chicago—a stout, fat, swarthy man, who, when he talked at all, talked volubly of the possibilities of the fruit trade in America. The ambassador proved to be delightful. He was a fine-looking old man, with a white imperial, fierce white brows over them, which moved up and down frantically when he talked. Ann liked him at once; it would have been impossible not to have done so, for he immediately set about making himself pleasant, and she was by no means proof against such flattering attention. She sat on his right, for Avezzana had placed the aunts on either side of him, and she found herself devoting most of the evening to a discussion of her host.

"A charming boy," the ambassador said, smiling indulgently across the table at Avezzana. "I knew his father well, and his mother. Ah—une bella Signora, Signorina, and how she will enjoy you, so fresh, so naive, so American!" His English was extraordinarily fluent. "My young friend has a great life before him. It will not be long, when my king will have a united Italy; there will be no more fighting—no more wars. The young Guido will be free for politics, and he will go far!"

Ann, at this juncture, made a feeble attempt to divert the conversation into more abstract channels, but the ambassador would have none of it. "His family jewels!" he exclaimed, approvingly of nothing. "Such pearls! But pearls are too dull for you. I have seen his grandmother's diamond earrings, which wait for Avezzana's bride—there is a tara, too." His glance traveled to the top of Ann's shining head and rested there until she felt uncomfortably naked; she had never seen a tara, but she was, but her instinct told her the place for one. "And his houses. Do you like the country, Signorina?"

"Yes," said Ann. "Pretty well." She had in mind the little white farm house in Milton Center.

"Ah, until you have seen Piedmont you have not seen the country! A beautiful old castle, Signorina, stone everywhere, inside and out; therefore, even in midsummer, you have never the heat like this. Such gardens! Such flowers! Such fruits! In America you have no idea of fruits—in spite of

Ann wondered what she would be saying if she knew of the night in the little cottage at Gettysburg, "Nothing against him," she thought cynically, "but probably a great deal against me!"

The ambassador leaned back in his chair and expanded his white shirt-front genially. "Per Bacco!—such delightful lives! Not perhaps so energetic as this of yours, in this so charming country, but always feminine, you understand. It is the custom in the cities of my country to drive in the afternoon—in Roma, on the Corso, and in Firenze, in the Cassine; the ladies use the elegant carriage like those in which the Queen Victoria drives. Also, because our king sanctions it, it has recently become the custom for the ladies to ride on the horse in my country, as they do in England—but, you understand, with somewhat less freedom. And there are balls—soirees—the opera—all those entertainments which one finds in capitals—and also, naturally, they have their devotions—their charities."

"In the cities," Ann continued definitely, "what do they do there?" The ambassador leaned back in his chair and expanded his white shirt-front genially. "Per Bacco!—such delightful lives! Not perhaps so energetic as this of yours, in this so charming country, but always feminine, you understand. It is the custom in the cities of my country to drive in the afternoon—in Roma, on the Corso, and in Firenze, in the Cassine; the ladies use the elegant carriage like those in which the Queen Victoria drives. And there are balls—soirees—the opera—all those entertainments which one finds in capitals—and also, naturally, they have their devotions—their charities."

"When the ladies were shawling, Mrs. Rensselyer murmured to Ann, softly, "You are a sly puss, my dear, and it is no wonder that my poor boy should not carry the day against such a rival!"

"I thought perhaps you liked it," Avezzana said nervously. "I do." Avezzana shrugged one of his slim shoulders. No, I have remain so long in your city because of you, my Ann. You must have—what is it you say?—guessed, that it was my intention to ask you to do me the honor to be my wife. Ever since that night at Gettysburg—he broke off, and for a moment his deep look flickered away—"but we will not talk of that—not now. It is only that since then I have the wish but for one thing. He slipped his hand over Ann's at this juncture. "Could you care for me?" he asked, smiling brilliantly down upon her; his assurance was contagious.

"I am afraid not," Ann said drearily; at the time it seemed to her unfortunate.

"I will teach you," Avezzana proclaimed, joyfully. It was exactly as though she had not spoken. "You must marry me, my Ann. You must come with me—to Italia."

Ann continued to look at him, half-hypnotized. "I think my uncle would like it," she murmured. "But you—it is a good alliance. The only question is this: is it your wish?" Her wish? She almost yielded to his power of suggestion. . . . Everything seemed to be pushing her toward this marriage. . . . Nineteen years old. . . . High time. . . . Every one would be pleased. . . . She had only to nod her head.

She smiled rather miserably at Avezzana, and heard a tiny voice somewhere saying, "I really can't be sorry." She half regretted the words as soon as she knew them to be hers, and yet she did not recall them.

Avezzana flushed deeply, and for an instant the vivid passion of his nature flashed out, as it had at Gettysburg. "I must have you!" he said; for the first time he was loud and uncontrolled. "I will not give you up. How is it that you can think to refuse me, after that night near the battle?"

"That is all past," Ann said. "It has nothing to do with my marrying you, or not."

With a violent effort, Avezzana regained his smooth control of himself. "Please," he begged, "give me a little time. Do not yet make up your mind against me, I beg you."

"Very well," Ann conceded grudgingly. "But don't be too hopeful."

That night, before he left, Avezzana had a word alone with Mrs. Cortlandt, and the next afternoon Ann came in to find the two closed in the library. She was only too glad to steal past the door to the stair, filled with an exhilarating sense of escape.

She had been in her room but a few moments when Mrs. Cortlandt rapped portentously at her door. She came in, Ann thought, like a ship under full sail. "Well, miss," she flung at the girl with a complete return to her old manner, "and so, having disgraced the family by this, you have your best friend, you have the insolence to refuse to marry the man who is willing to clear your good name!"

"So," Ann said indignantly, "he has told you."

"And high time he did! What your guardian will think of such behavior! All night! Alone!"

"No," Ann corrected her color. "Not alone. With Count Avezzana."

"Have you no shame?" "I have nothing to be ashamed of."

"I have nothing to be ashamed of."

"I can't see why he had to tell you about it, now everything is all over." "Over? Nonsense! Count Avezzana is willing to marry you, Ann."

"But I'm not willing to marry him. I don't love him, Aunt Emily!" Mrs. Cortlandt looked at her, exasperation written plainly on her face, which she found herself, and her wonderment as to what Avezzana's next move would be became a preoccupation. It was evident that Avezzana considered the dinner a definite step in his courtship, for every day, following that event, he sent her flowers; fresh and untouched by the September heat. In the evening he came, formally, to call on her and Mrs. William; it was always a repetition of his first visit; the older woman was invariably present, and the conversation flowed in shallow courses, so that Ann found herself swallowing yawns. Avezzana's form of courtship was new and exciting, but she came reluctantly to the conclusion that she did not like him, particularly. It was all very perplexing, but, at the same time, it was a fascinating game.

When the ambassador finally came she was, for all her anticipation of it, caught unawares. The Italian came to dinner in Washington square, and found her alone in the library. It was obvious that the others would be there in a moment, and Ann had no expectation of anything decisive impending, until, contrary to his habit, Avezzana came close to her chair, and stood over her with an air of affectionate proprietorship.

"It is coming!" Ann thought, staggered, and she began to talk rapidly of the extraordinary heat of the night. He brushed her simple defenses aside with a romantic gesture of his hand. "I have something to ask of you."

"No. Please don't ask me anything, Count Avezzana." She knew, as she spoke, that he took her repugnance for more than merely confusion. He smiled, and surprised her. "Have I your permission to call you by your name? To call you Ann?"

In her relief, she almost laughed. "Oh—that? Yes, of course, if you like."

This permission encouraged Avezzana to an extraordinary extent. He leaned closer to her, and the scent of his pomade enveloped her with an odor entirely different from that used by American men. "Grazia, mio Bella. You know, perhaps, why I have remain so long in your city?"

"I thought perhaps you liked it," Avezzana said nervously. "I do." Avezzana shrugged one of his slim shoulders. No, I have remain so long in your city because of you, my Ann. You must have—what is it you say?—guessed, that it was my intention to ask you to do me the honor to be my wife.
