"Hey, Ref - aren't you out of bounds?"

In basketball or business, Americans expect fair play all down the line. In basketball, the referee is there to see that the game is played according to the rules. But he's not a player.

In business, the referee is the government, which establishes regulations for fair practices.

But when government goes beyond governing and into business and competes with its own tax paying citizens, the American tradition of fair play is set aside. The referee then becomes a player, and he takes advantages that are denied to all the other players in the game.

Take government-owned or subsidized electric power systems, for example. They pay no taxes. When they need money, they call on our U. S. Treasury funds and get it at little or no interest. If they have losses, through political management, why worry? You, as a taxpayer, will have to take care of that.

Business-managed power systems, on the other hand, do not have these special government privileges. They pay their full share of taxes, pay fair interest on any loans.

It is a tribute to American self-reliance that tax-paying, self-supporting companies supply over four-fifths of the tremendous amount of electricity used in this country.

The same forethought and experience which furnished the required electric power to win a global war will continue to assure America dependable—and cheap—electric service for a postwar world. And businessmen can do the job better than bureaucrats.

Interesting Notes From Local School

Mid-term examinations at the local school have been finished and the second semester started January 14.

Enrollment, according to Superintendent A. J. McCuin, continues to rise. While some students have withdrawn and enrolled at other schools, enough new students have started here to keep the enrollment on the increase. Standing the current term with around 500 pupils, attendance rolls now stand better than 500.

A 16mm motion picture projector, ordered at the beginning of the term, has been shipped from the factory and is expected here daily. This machine will be used in classrooms and each instructor will learn to operate it. Films may be secured for any occasion, entertainment as well as educational and class room instruction. Superintendent McCuin expects to make wide use of the machine and its benefits will be far reaching.

By agreement of the two schools, Pioneer has transferred their 8th grade to Cross Plains for the remainder of this term, announces L. C. Cash.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Marshall, Lavern and 82 1/2 N. Marshall of Odessa spent the week end with Mrs. Marshall's sisters, Mrs. E. I. Vestal, and Mr. Marshall's sister, Mrs. Cordie Booth.
