Buffaloes Lose To De Leon Last Friday; Play Eastland Mavericks There This Week

The Cross Plains Buffaloes went down under a crushing defeat here last Friday night, when they met the large and powerful De Leon Bearcat squad in the first conference game of the season. The score read 59-6 in favor of the Bearcats.

While playing their best, the Buffaloes found the heavy and experienced Bearcat squad too much to handle and were forced to play defensive ball all evening. The heavy and fleet backs for De Leon scored almost at will during the evening and kept the ball in Buffalo territory most of the time.

The lone Buff tally came in the second frame when Buffalo half-back Kenneth Beeler sacked up a Bearcat aerial and raced down the sideline to score from the De Leon 35-yard stripe. Wilson's try for point failed and the scoring for the locals was over.

Play Eastland Friday
The Buffaloes journey to Eastland next Friday night, where they will tangle with the Eastland Mavericks in another conference clash. According to those fans who have seen the Mavericks in action, Friday night's game should be a real battle between two evenly matched squads.

The Buffalo Band will make the trip to Eastland and it is hoped that a large delegation of local fans will be on hand to "root" for the Buffaloes, who will be out to get back in the win column.

Gate Receipts
Financial results of the De Leon-Cross Plains football game:
Gross receipts $680.90
Less expenses:
Officials (4) 85.00
Lights 10.00
Total expenses 95.00

Former Cottonwood Man Suffers Severe Burns In Bunkhouse Explosion

W. C. (Doc) Kelley, former resident of Cottonwood and brother of Mrs. John Coats of that community, suffered second and third degree burns on Wednesday of last week in an explosion on the Ford Ranch, near Bootleg where he was employed. Mr. Ford rushed Kelley to a Hereford hospital where he is receiving medical care.

Kelley was alone in the bunkhouse at the time of the explosion and the exact cause is not known, however, it is believed that gas seeped into the bunkhouse from a leak in the butane tank and when he started to light a cigarette fire from the match ignited the escaped gas.

Mr. and Mrs. Coats left immediately for Hereford to be at Mr. Kelley's bedside when they were notified of the accident. They returned home Sunday and Mrs. Coats reported that her brother's condition was slightly improved, but no hope is held for his recovery. His two sons, Fred of Weatherford and Vorus of Dallas are at their father's bedside.

THE BAYOU PHILOSOPHER GIVES SOME FREE ADVICE TO EISENHOWER, HAS MORE READY FOR STEPHENSON

Editor's note: The Bayou Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm on the Bayou seems to be in an advisory mood this week, his letter reveals. It's his advice, not ours.

Dear editor:

While hasn't any Presidential or even Vice Presidential candidates made any whistle stops out here on the Bayou so far in the campaign, interest is running pretty high in the race and while it hasn't caused any stand-still in my farm operations, they came to a stand-still long before the campaign started and will be that way long after it's over, people are doin a lot of discussion of the campaign issues, on the grounds I guess that somebody should, if the candidates don't the people ought to, and after listenin for several days I don't mind sayin I have no idea which candidate is gonna win.

In this particular case I think it's a fairly happy situation because I don't care what the candidates say I don't believe either one is as bad as the other one says he is, in fact, I think both parties could have gone a short ways and done a lot worse in the matter of selectin candidates. The way it looks out here, the country ain't gonna be in bad shape for a President, regardless of which one wins, but after he gets elected the fight ain't over, the big battle will be whether or not he can win out over Congress, and I have been thinkin.

Just in case he wins, I would like to give some free advice to Gen. Eisenhower, although this ain't sayin he's gonna win. I couldn't any more tell you which one is gonna win than I could tell you which way the dish water is gonna go the next time my wife opens the back door.

But just say he's elected. I would like to tip him off that Congress is a little different from the army. They just ain't familiar with military courtesy in that outfit. They don't recognize much rank. You can issue an order to em, but you don't see any salutin or hear any heels snappin together, about all you hear is some Congressman's suspenders snappin as he sits there blowin smoke rings and makin up his own mind, and when you consider there is a whole hall of Congressmen and each one claims he has a mind of his own, don't make any difference how many different people contributed to his Christmas card fund, you can see you got a different outfit on your hands from a military establishment.

There are a lot of other pointers I could give but I will wait and see how the election comes out. In case Stevenson wins, I will be glad to give him advice too. How're you fixed for advice yourself?

Yours faithfully,
J. A.

How, why clouds are seeded

By Irving P. Krick

President of the Water Resources Development Corporation

General Electric Company scientists found in 1946 how to make ice crystals appear in the moist cold air of a deep freeze unit.

To men familiar with clouds, this meant we had found the key to open the door to more rain and snow.

Most clouds that you see every day are made up of thousands of billions of tiny water - globules and are high enough in the air to be colder than freezing. Yet they float along for the most part with those globules unfrozen.

This is due to the curious fact that pure water without something to freeze upon will remain unfrozen even far below zero. Most clouds are "supercooled," as this state is called. The droplets are too small and light to fall as rain.

If Nature forms ice crystals in such a cloud, then moisture will freeze upon those crystals, until each mass becomes a snowflake large and heavy enough to fall. If in winter, we get snow; in summer, the snowflakes melt into raindrops on the way down.

When General Electric announced its theory, Dr. Irving P. Krick, head of the Department of Meteorology of the California Institute of Technology (CIT) for 13 years, began trying to see if it would work "out doors," using CIT graduate students as his research staff. And he then formed the world's first institution of its kind, the American Institute of Aerological Research (AIAR), a non-profit group. This group did fundamental research on cloud seeding.

In 1948, Arizonans retained AIAR to study a cloud seeding experiment in which dry ice was dropped from airplanes to freeze ice crystals in clouds—one of the two major ways in which men can start the rain-and-snow process.

The experiment succeeded, but Dr. Krick felt that airplanes seeding was too costly, too hazardous, and too uncertain—since pilots often cannot fly just when seeding conditions are best—to be depended on for large scale, long continued seeding to increase rain. So he turned to "sowing" the clouds from the ground with invisible particles, on which ice crystals seem eager to form when conditions are right.

If you heat silver iodine to 2500 degrees or more, the invisible "smoke" rises into the sky carrying thousands of billions of tiny particles. Each such particle makes a natural core or nucleus on which moisture will freeze in a cloud that is colder than about 25 degrees (fahrenheit) and down to 38 degrees below zero, at which point the water-globules would freeze anyway.

Once an ice crystal forms in this way, it acts just as any other ice crystal, and will collect more moisture in this way, until it becomes a snowflake heavy enough to fall. This use of silver iodine was discovered by General Electric Company.

Nature provides particles in which ice crystals will freeze in such a cold cloud, but she does not always provide enough of them to turn all of the cloud's moisture into snow and rain. One big job that remained before large-scale continuous work could be done to make Nature yield more rain and snow over vast dryland areas, was to design a simple, rugged furnace or generator to burn silver iodine at 2500 degrees or more.

The AIAR staff tried out a generator (crude by today's standards) in the watershed above the Roosevelt Dam in Arizona. It worked wonderfully.

After much more study, the AIAR experimenters settled on a small furnace or "firepot." To this is fed coke that has been soaked in silver iodine solution. A motor forces air upward through the fire to keep it hot.

Such generators, much improved, are in use by the hundreds today. The haze is practically invisible, so these generators may not look like they are "doing anything." But they are—floating up into the sky thousands of billions of tiny particles better than Nature's, because they will start snowflakes forming at warmer temperatures than almost any natural particle.

We have all seen smoke floating up into the air. It is carried in invisible air currents that spread it out as it rises. In the same way, the invisible smoke from these generators rises, and spreads out downwind. Soon it reaches the "seeding level."

Studies by our staff indicate that the smoke is carried downwind for many miles, and spreads out in the shape of a huge feather, or plume.

Our research men found that, just like smoke, it flowed faster and the plume was narrower, in one case than another. They found that results varied widely with different storms, and with different types of storms.

The storm was the thing, they decided. If cloud seeding for rain or snow was to "work" consistently, our researchers would have to know everything possible about every oncoming storm, long before it reaches the "target area" where the people wanted increased rain or snow.

This was the simplest problem of all, since Dr. Krick's staff had long kept watch for incoming storms, and usually knew much about such storms even before they reached the shores of the United States, since most of them form far out at sea, and move inland.

The people of the research staff had proven they could tell a lot about storms, by the previous great success of Dr. Krick's work to aid industry, business and farming to anticipate and meet coming weather. Also, they had at hand, and still do have, a vast catalog of weather maps covering the United States and the world for the last 50 to 60 years.

By studying and classifying storms and weather patterns, the Krick meteorologists had learned that weather patterns fall into general classes, and that single storms usually act very much as similar storms had acted before. If you want to learn what a storm is likely to do, you can quickly look up in these catalogs previous storms much like it. This is known as the "analog" system of forecasting. Dr. Krick is one of the world pioneers in this also. In fact, it is something known as the "Krick method."

All this knowledge and skill now goes to watch the probable track of a storm, to figure out just where and when to "light off" generators in its path so that the rising haze of silver iodine particles will meet it so as to bring most rain over the "target area," the area where people hope for rain for their crops, their city water supplies, etc.

Usually these generators are lighted up when the storm is many hours away, so that the particles will spread through it just right—not too many, not too few.

This in turn requires much knowledge of the way the winds are blowing high up—which is usually a different direction than they are blowing on the ground.

All this sounds very hard to do, and it is. It requires the highest degree of skill, great weather knowledge, and long training. Into the laboratories of Water Development Corporation and AIAR in Denver flow thousands of reports daily, carrying weather information from the United States and all over the world.

These are shaped at least every six hours into big weather maps from which skilled meteorologists, who work in shifts so that the work goes on 24 hours daily, can tell at a glance what's coming, weather-wise. They also get weather reports from our own men on the spot. Then they can wire or call some of WRDC's many regional or project supervisors, or some of the hundreds of people who run generators, maybe a thousand miles away.

Some ranchers have built and set up generators on their own ranches. This has no effect whatever on their own rainfall, and as they know nothing about air currents high up where the rain clouds are and nothing about the proper rate of burning, they can't know whether they are doing harm or good to their distant neighbors.

One thing that cloudseeders cannot do, and that no reputable one ever claims to do, is to bring down rain where there is too little moisture in the air to provide rain. And that such reputable cloudseeders claim, or ever have claimed, is that if it's up there, they will do their skilled best to bring down more than Nature unaided might provide.

Please bear this in mind: Dr. Vincent Schaefer of General Electric Company—the first man to "make it snow" in a coldbox—has studied the atmosphere of the Western United States, and has found that it seems to contain less of the natural particles that make snow, on the average, than the air over the Eastern United States. The lack of such natural particles, therefore, may partially explain why we have less natural rain in the West.

IN OUR REGION, THEREFORE, THE WHOLE SCIENCE OF SEEDING THE CLOUDS TO INCREASE RAIN, IS TO PUT THE RIGHT NUMBER OF MAN-MADE PARTICLES INTO A "WET" CLOUD FOR THEM TO GO TO WORK AT THE RIGHT TIME, AND AT THE RIGHT PLACE—OVER THE TARGET AREA.

Members of a group that has bought cloudseeding service, you can be sure this whole vast organization, with all its skill and science and devotion, is working 24 hours a day to bring you what you are paying for.

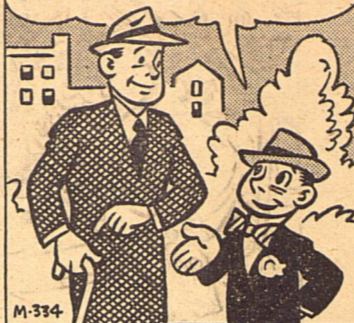

As we of the West well know, the value of crops and the size of farmer's and rancher's incomes, year in and year out, depends directly on the amount of year-round rain and snow, to nourish crops and livestock.

Repeat AIAR studies have shown that an increase of as much as one per cent of rainfall will much more than repay the cost of cloudseeding service in increased crop and range production.

Year-round service can be provided for a few cents an acre for the entire area covered. The cost may run more for individual subscribers, because they are volunteers, and "stand treat" for their non-participating neighbors.

It has repeatedly been proven that such subscribers can gain much more than they spend, even so.

But the story does not end there. The follow through is important. Another thing you may not know is that several western states have already set up control and research commissions, from which all seeders must obtain licenses to operate. Seeders must show evidence of ability and honesty to get such licenses. And seeders must file with such commissions daily reports of all generators in service, and the exact times they are lighted and shut down.

The skilled staffs of Water Resources Development Corporation and American Institute of Aerological Research are constantly at work analyzing the results of each seeding operation to see what led to its success, and, if it didn't work as well as they hoped, why didn't it.

Therefore, each new day they have more information about cloudseeding process. This has built up into the world's largest body of PRACTICAL cloudseeding data. In this way knowledge and skill of this organization, as an organization, is constantly increasing, all to the benefit of those who employ it to seed the clouds for rain or other purposes.

Q—I have just filled out my application for training under the Korean GI Bill. Am I supposed to send it to the VA in Washington?

A—No. Send your completed application—along with a photostat or certified copy of both sides of your discharge or separation paper—to your nearest VA regional office. VA's Central Office in Washington does not process the applications.

Q—I have just returned to active duty and have surrendered my permanent NSLI policy for cash, so I now have the free indemnity protection of $10,000. My aunt was the beneficiary of my NSLI policy. Does she remain the beneficiary of my indemnity protection?

A—No. You must make new designations of beneficiaries. Under the law, they may be persons only within the following categories: wife, child or children, parent or parents, brother or sister.

Q—I have just been given a disability compensation rating by the VA, but I feel the rating should have been higher, and I intend to appeal. Does the fact that I accept the compensation checks constitute an admission that I am satisfied with my rating? Will it hurt my chances of an appeal?

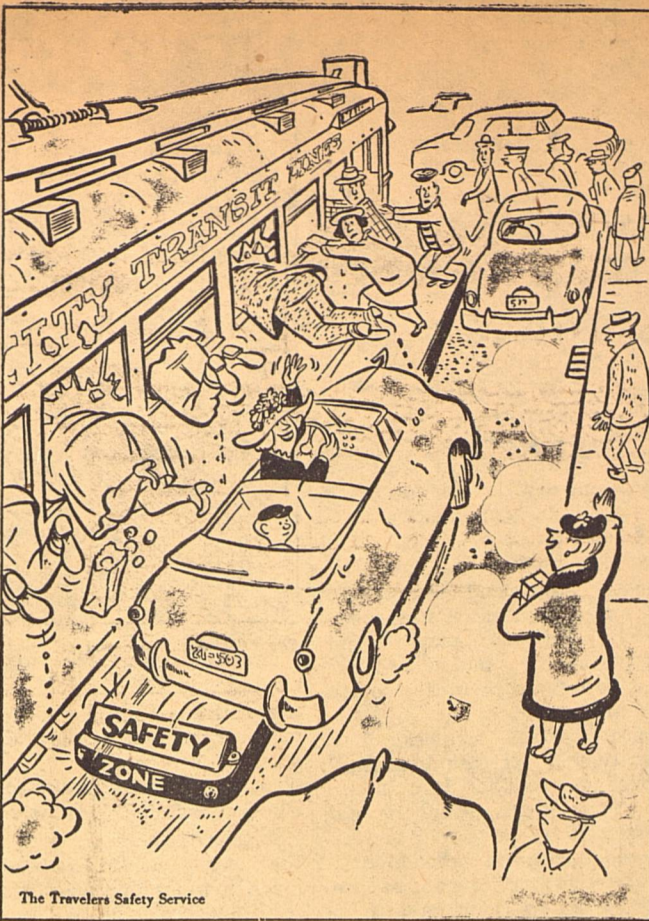

A—Acceptance of the compensation checks has no bearing at all as to whether or not you are satisfied with the amount. VA will not consider that fact in studying your appeal.

Health Department Issues Warning About Scarlet Fever

The State Department of Health has just issued a warning in regard to scarlet fever, as the number of cases usually increases during the fall months. The majority of deaths from this disease occur from October through February.

Scarlet fever is a very contagious and serious disease. Grown people may contract it, but children under 15 years are especially apt to have it, if exposed. It is especially dangerous for children under 15 years, and Dr. George W. Cox, State Health Officer, warns mothers to "not let your children take any chances with scarlet fever. Call the doctor as soon as the first symptoms appear."

If your child has contracted scarlet fever, the first signs you may notice are that he seems tired, restless and out of sorts. Usually, there is a sore throat, chills, vomiting, or convulsions and fever. His skin is dry and hot. His tongue is furred, and, under this white covering, it is red and swollen. In ordinary cases, these early signs are followed in a day or two by a rash. Little flat red points, close together, appear first on the neck and chest and soon the rash, very red in color, spreads over most of the body. The doctor is required by law to report the case to the local health officer. Do your part by fol-

UNDERGOES SURGERY

A note from Alexander Neill, of Kerrville, states that his wife underwent surgery at a Temple hospital, Thursday, October 9, and is now recuperating nicely. She will return to her home in Kerrville the latter part of this week, he said.

Mr. and Mrs. Sonny Umberson of Stanton spent a few days last week with her mother, Mrs. Zola Plumlee.

Rev. Ed Anderson of Brownwood spent the week end with his daughter, Mrs. Jack Watkins and family of Cross Cut. Rev. Anderson filled the pulpit at the Methodist church Sunday morning.

Mrs. Ida Graves and Mrs. R. M. Illingworth spent last week in Dallas with relatives and attended the State Fair.

Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Hobdy of Houston visited here with the V. L. Hobdys Thursday night and Friday.

Robert Rutledge of Abilene, son of Roy Rutledge, visited friends and relatives here Monday.

Following carefully the quarantine instructions which the health officer will give you, since a severe or fatal case of scarlet fever may develop from contact with some one who has only a light attack. Children who have had scarlet fever, or who have been exposed, must not return to school until permission is given by the health officer and physician.

LET'S TALK LIVESTOCK

BY TED GOULDY

Fort Worth—Trade was resumed in the sheep yards at Fort Worth Monday after more than a week of idleness caused by the findings of some hogs in the yards with vesicular exanthema. Hogs and sheep can no longer intermingle on the yards and prices on most lambs and yearlings were steady with those in effect at the time the yards were closed. Old ewes sold 50 cents to $1 lower.

Stock Yard officials reported the hog yards would be opened to receive shipments at midnight Monday night and that trade would be resumed on Tuesday morning. They stressed, however, that there would be no market for stocker or feeder pigs and such animals should not be shipped onto the yards. Pigs cannot be held on the yards for more than 48 hours in the future and will then be sent to slaughter.

Cattle and calf trade was extremely slow and most classes where under severe pressure again and selling measurably lower than a week ago. The largest offerings of the year appeared around the major marketing circle, topping last week's mark by several thousand cattle and calves.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Freeman and daughter, Mickey, visited in Moran Sunday afternoon with Mrs. Hattie Gray, Jimmy Freeman, who had spent several days visiting with his grandmother, returned home with his parents.

Stocker demand was virtually limited to choice quality light weights, other kinds having to move into slaughter channels.

A few good and choice fed steers and yearlings drew $22 to $31, and common and medium kinds cashed at $13 to $21. Cutter grade steers and yearlings sold from $10 to $13.

Fat cows cleared at $11.50 to $14, and canners and cutters sold from $5 to $11.50. Bulls sold at $12 to $18.

Good and choice fat calves cashed at $17 to $24, and common and medium sorts sold from $13 to $17, with culls at $10 to $13.

Good and choice stocker steer calves sold mostly from $18 to $23.50, and most heifer calves sold at $21.50 down. Stocker steer yearlings and stocker steers cashed at $17 to $23 when good and choice. Stocker cows cashed at $12 to $15. Stocker heifers sold mainly from $20 down.

Good and choice fat lambs cashed at $20 to $23 and stocker and feeder lambs cashed at $12 to $18. Low grade slaughter lambs and yearlings sold around $8 to $10. Medium grade feeder yearlings sold at $10 to $11. Slaughter ewes cashed at $4 to $6.

SHUTTING THE GATE ON TOP SOIL EROSION

Sheet erosion accounts for much loss of soil that ordinarily cannot be detected. It is different from gullying which cuts great gashes in the face of the earth.

The sheet erosion is the more vicious because it skims from the surface of your land the rich top soil and moves it to the sea. The one way to stop sheet erosion is by terracing. Good terraces hold back the water, forcing it to give up the soil—for you to keep. Talk this over with your soil conservation technician and your County Agent.

OCT-12-18 THIS IS OIL PROGRESS WEEK

Progress 1952

Texans have a natural interest in the oil industry, which is so important in our State, and in the progress made since Oil Progress Week was last observed.

Here are a few quick facts:

New Wells—During the twelve months ending August 31, 1952, the Texas oil industry drilled 17,000 new wells, at a cost of over $700 million. Most of the heavy expense of drilling these new wells was paid from earnings plowed back into the development of the State's oil resources.

Transportation—The total mileage of Texas' trunk pipe lines for oil and finished products is over 29,000. This low-cost transportation system is a major factor in the maintenance of the low prices you pay for petroleum products.

Production—Production has reached a record level. Texas currently is producing about 46 per cent of all the crude oil produced in the U. S. In the year ending August 31, Texas production totaled about 1,015 million barrels. There are now 133,800 producing oil wells in Texas.

Reserves—Proved oil reserves in Texas of 18 billion barrels represented 57 per cent of the U. S. total at the beginning of 1952. During 1951, the last year for which figures are available, proved reserves increased two billion barrels. These are developed oil reserves and the figure is important: developed reserves supply our needs currently and provide reserve capacity that is immediately available when we need it.

Refining—The Texas refineries will have a big year. They now employ, in round numbers, 46,000 Texans, and process about 28% of all the oil refined in the U. S. The daily refining capacity of all Texas refineries exceeds 2,000,000 barrels. A program to expand and improve these facilities has been general throughout the industry.

Taxes—The Texas oil industry continues to be the largest tax-payer in the State. Through the year ending August 31, gross production taxes alone on Texas oil and natural gas amounted to more than $137 million; in addition, the industry pays large amounts in other taxes.

In brief, the Texas oil industry during the past year continued to do its part in meeting the demand for oil. It has expanded pipelines to provide low-cost transportation. It has improved facilities for making more and better petroleum products for your use. Today, two gallons of gasoline do work that required three gallons in 1925; and the gasoline costs no more than it did then.

Cross Plains FHA Girls Active in Summer Work

Before the end of last school term, the girls, with their sponsor's guidance, planned what they wanted to do for summer group work.

They sponsored a play school for pre-school children which lasted a week. This was the first time this had been offered and it was a success. Ten children were enrolled.

They redecorated the cottage. Each girl had a part in planning jobs to be done.

First, they gave the cottage a thorough cleaning. All the floors were varnished and waxed. All furniture in the department was varnished. Baseboards in the living room and bathroom were painted. The wainscoting in the bathroom was kempt and new border put up. Then they washed, dyed, and ironed all linens in the fitting room. New draperies were made for the living room. Two new lamps were made for the end tables.

New machine covers were made for nine machines. They purchased a new iron and a punch bowl.

The girls closed their summer group work with a picnic at Cisco Lake.

TEXAS LIVESTOCK IS BIG BUSINESS

The Texas livestock industry, staggered by the 1952 drought, is certain to make a comeback. And with it will return economic stability in all sections of the state.

The livestock trend is shifting back toward the eastern counties, a territory it gradually abandoned in favor of the wide-open western area several generations ago when the grasslands were supplanted by crops. Many ranchmen in the West now realize it is becoming increasingly more practical to till a part of their land rather than to depend upon livestock alone.

But livestock always has, and always will be big business in Texas. In a recent typical year, Texas lead all other western states with cash receipts from meat animals of $515,394,000. California, with $303,563,000 ranked second in regional importance.

Meat animals are the biggest factor in Texas livestock economy. In all western states, cash farm income from cattle and calves ranked higher than from sheep, wool, or hogs. The combined sheep-wool-lamb industry followed cattle in receipts but the value of hog marketings exceeds that of sheep alone.

Due credit for recent gains in Texas output of meat animals must be given to the rapid war and post war rise in price of meat animals and above average favorable weather for livestock from 1940 to 1950. The last two dry years made considerable inroads on profits, however.

Farsighted farmers and ranchers of Texas have increased their income through better management and care of livestock, effective disease and parasite control, and better feeding. These factors considerably increased calf, lamb and pig crops and reduced losses in the few critical days following birth.

In general, a more effective job of ranching and farming is being done in Texas. According to a recent report by a livestock research committee, the efficiency of breeding stock for all meat animals increased about 16 percent in a period of 25 years. In terms of more total pounds of output, cows and heifers advanced 17 percent, sheep about five percent, and sows and gilts averaged 48 percent in the 25 year period.

The disaster hay buying program initiated in Texas recently by federal and state governments is designed to help stock farmers and ranchers maintain a level of eco-
