

HOME TOWN GOSSIP

Gambling in the courthouse—no it just isn't done. But what other alternative is there when two printers go in and bid on one of the biggest jobs that the county has ever four years and submit exactly the same figure for the work?

Such was the case with this scribbler and one from the Baird Star Monday when they met in the Judge's office at Baird and offered prices on the ballot for general election.

All outside publishing houses were underbid decisively but the two Callahan 'bozoz' bid the same thing to a cent.

There was only one alternative. That is to call in an honest man and let him flip a coin. County Judge J. H. Carpenter was summoned. He tossed a penny skyward and the Baird man led "Tails."

The coin fell heads. We got the job. The ballot will appear in full in the Cross Plains Review November fourth. It's plenty big, the largest in history.

Moral to this story: always call heads when flipping coins, you'll win at least half the time that way.

Mary Massa says that having a bakery next door to where you work, is certainly no advantage. The odor of baking bread makes it seem like a week until noon. Then, when ones goes to lunch and is very temperate about eating and returns and has to endure the essence of crisp, baking berry pies, it's almost too much.

The Dr. Thomas W. Brabham, who perhaps you have been reading about recently in Texas newspapers and magazines, is none other than 'Tom the jolly fellow' that used to be Pastor of the Methodist church here.

He has recently been placed by the West Texas Chamber of Commerce in its official organ among the celebrities 'Whos Who in West Texas.'

Dr. Brabham is now President of T. W. C. in Fort Worth.

Heard while strolling: Sam Sipes has never read the comic section of a newspaper; Webster's dictionary defines 'democrat' as a light uncovered wagon with two seats; Cross Plains will probably have a picture show six nights a week after first of November; Harvey Dennis has been called to the pastorate of the Swenson Baptist Church; the ballot to be presented voters in general election will be the biggest in history... it will have 218 names and have blanks for 315 more to be written in.

KICK OFF IS SET FOR 2:30 ON HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL FIELD HERE

Fans Can Make Comparison Of Herd's Strength With Star After Clash

Caddo high school 'Cats' and Cross Plains 'Buffaloes' meet on the high school gridiron here Saturday afternoon, in a scheduled conference football game.

The kickoff is set for two-thirty. The contest will be the third of conference consequence for Caddo and second for Cross Plains. Caddo has played Rising Star and Baird already, while Cross Plains has met only Albany. The 'Cats' lost to Rising Star seven to nothing and to Baird one to nothing by forfeit. After the forfeiture however, Caddo engaged Baird and defeated them by one touchdown. The 'Cats' were forced to forfeit to Baird because their equipment did not comply with conference specifications.

After Saturday's game a comparison of Cross Plains strength with Rising Star and Baird, the herd's chief enemies, can be made.

Coach Goober Keyes gave the Review the following probable starting line-up for Saturday's fray: ends, M. Bingham and S. Walker; tackles, F. Halbert and H. Lacy; guards, Captain Tommie Webb and Forest Walker; center, M. Yarbrough; halves, T. Holden and W. Spencer; quarterback, Leonard Davidson and full, Bruce Spencer.

Halbert was ill Thursday and Keyes did not know for certain whether the big lineman would be able to take his position in the forward wall or not, he was non-committal as to who would relieve him in the event that he is not in shape to answer the opening whistle.

The same line-up started against Albany, there, Friday with the exception of Warren Spencer, in place of Stencil Greenwood at half-back. Greenwood was seriously injured in the game.

REPUBLICAN HOPE

Shown is Orville Bullington, a publican hope for Governor. He spoke in Baird and Coleman the past week. Several Cross Plains citizens heard the Wichita County lawyer.

HIGH SCHOOL STAR SEVERELY INJURED AT ALBANY FRIDAY

Stencil Greenwood, high school football player who sustained a broken vertebra in the Albany game, there, Friday, was reported 'recovering normally' from the Sealy hospital, Santa Anna, Thursday morning. He will probably be moved to Cross Plains Saturday, doctors stated.

Greenwood was injured late in the third quarter of the game, when blocked by an Albany back-field man. Team-mates thinking that he was only stunned, supported him on their shoulders and walked him about the field. He was unable to command his legs however and was rushed to an Albany physician, who diagnosed the case.

Ex-ray pictures made at the Sealy hospital Sunday revealed that a back vertebra was broken and the boy was placed in a steel cast. Physicians told the Review that he would probably have to wear the cast six weeks at least.

Scores of high school friends and 'Buffalo' football fans visited Stencil at the hospital the past week. He was suffering quite a bit the first of the week but doctors explained that the first few days in the 'cast' were always most severe.

Before being removed from the game because of injuries, Stencil fought a gallant fight for the purple and gold and although defeat was eminent, team-mates declared that his spirit was unbroken. "He's one of the nerviest men ever to don a uniform for the herd. I think," said Captain Tommie Webb.

High school football fans have announced that they will pay Greenwood's hospital and doctor's fees, $69.00 was pledged Tuesday and a benefit football game will be played here Thursday by Cross Plains all-stars to take care of other incidentals.

MRS. MARTHA VESTAL LAID TO FINAL REST MONDAY AFTERNOON

Rev. S. P. Collins Conducts Rites For Pioneer Woman In Cross Plains Cemetery

Funeral and interment service for Mrs. Martha Vestal, 82, a pioneer citizen into this section, was held at the Cross Plains cemetery Monday afternoon.

Rev. S. P. Collins conducted the rites. Mrs. Vestal succumbed Sunday at the home of her daughter Mrs. Effie Lacy.

She was laid to rest in the Cross Plains cemetery beside her husband, T. B. Vestal, who died in 1917.

Mrs. Vestal was born in Smith county, Texas, August first, 1850. She had been a resident of this locality more than 50 years and was perhaps one of the best known pioneer women settling in this section.

Surviving are seven children, they are Mrs. E. E. Lacy, Eastland; Mrs. W. P. Armstrong, Cross Plains; Mrs. J. T. Harris, Cross Plains; Mrs. Will Roberts, Hico; Mrs. R. B. Forbes, Arp; E. I. Vestal and H. L. Vestal, Cross Plains.

CALLAHAN ASKS FOR $40,000 FROM R. F. C.

Callahan county filed application Wednesday for a $40,000.00 loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to be used to create employment here this winter. In the event that the loan is granted it will probably be divided equally among the four voting precincts and $10,000.00 will come into this immediate locality, said County Commissioner George H. Clifton, yesterday.

The money will be loaned local businesses and individuals and they will in turn repay the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. The county will not be held as surety for any of the notes. It was understood that the rate of interest to be charged citizens in the event that the loan goes through, would be four percent.

The amount to be loaned each county applying for aid is based upon their proportionate amount of unemployed and the conditions of that particular section, according to press dispatches the first of the week.

DRESSY HONORS NEWLY WEDDED PAIR SATURDAY

People of the Dressy community turned out 'en masse' Saturday night to honor a popular young couple, recently married—Mr. and Mrs. Nig Neeb. The reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Baird.

Presents of all types and demonstrations were showered. The theme of the social was that of a treasure hunt upon the newly weds. A varied program completed the evening's entertainment.

Mrs. Neeb was before her marriage Miss Theola Payne, daughter of Lee Payne one of the best known farmers and land owners in this section. The groom is the son of L. F. Neeb another prominent family.

They were married October first by the Rev. Ross Respress at Cottonwood.

Mrs. Sam Long and Marie, were in Coleman Thursday on business.

MRS. SARAH JONES IS BURIED HERE TUESDAY

Mrs. Sarah Jones, 74, was buried in the Cross Plains cemetery Tuesday afternoon. She succumbed Monday, at her home two miles North of here. Rev. C. C. Armstrong conducted the funeral rites from the Methodist church.

Mrs. Jones was an early resident of this community having settled here long before the present site of Cross Plains was established.

She was interred beside her husband, J. J. Jones, who preceded her in death. Mrs. Charlie Kent is a daughter of the deceased woman.

JUBILEE POSTPONED

The Cross Plains Lions Club high-way jubilee has been indefinitely postponed. Announcement will be made next week concerning later developments on the plans for the event and possibly the date.

CROSS PLAINS TRUCK DRIVERS HEAD WEST FOR 10 MONTH JOB

Cross Plains truckers have taken Horace Greely's advice, "Go West young man, go West." They left seven strong Wednesday for Odessa, where they have 10 months work doing road construction.

ALBANY AND LOCAL ALL-STARS MEET IN BENEFIT GAME HERE

Cross Plains and Albany 'All Stars' will meet on the high school athletic field here Thursday afternoon, in a benefit football game. The proceeds will go to take care of the hospital and doctor's fees for Stencil Greenwood, Buffalo half-back, who sustained a broken vertebra in the Albany game Friday.

The kick-off is scheduled for three-thirty. The game is being arranged by the Cross Plains high school athletic association.

The Albany line-up will have no less than four former all conference meff, from this district, as well as several one time college stars. The delegation from Shackelford will be headed by B. Todd, 175 pound all conference quarterback last year. Included among their roster will also be Sherwood, all conference end the past season; Jordan and other linemen of the same distinction and others of possibly equal distinction.

'Goober' Keyes, who is to shape the local club from all star material will take the role of quarterback. He was rated last year the most valuable player in the T. I. A. A. and was unanimously chosen all conference signal caller. Many local fans remember him even further back when he was barking signals for the championship Cisco 'Loboes'.

The game is called for three thirty.

PRICE EXTENSION AT BURKETT AND SHALLOW PRODUCER ARE CAUSES

Operators Here Anticipating Hike For This Area In Crude Quotation

Three factors contributed toward general improvement of the oil industry here the past week. They were; advance of crude prices, extension of the Burkett proven area and discovery of another shallow well on the Arrowood farm, five miles South of town.

Although the recent crude hike does not effect oil taken from this area, it caused local operators to anticipate a similar advance, or to at least feel certain there will be no immediate reduction of their present $1.00 barrel quotation.

The extension of the Burkett pool by discovery of oil in the Claude Brown etal well, on Henderson tract West of Burkett, is said to stimulating interest in drilling there. F. A. Lane has announced that he will drill an offset to Brown soon. Several other oil men here are reported to be making drilling plans concerning that area.

Ben Welch drilled in a shallow well Monday on the Arrowood farm, on Coleman and Callahan county lines, Southwest of Cross Plains. The test is 400 feet deep and is said to be making between five and nine barrels. Mr. Welch has six producers on the Arrowood farm. He told the Review the first of the week that the last producer had extended his proven area considerably and that he would begin another test within the immediate future.

PIONEER REBECCAS WIN BANNER AGAIN

Pioneer and Rising Star Rebeccah lodges were hosts Thursday night to the semi-annual meeting of the East-land County Association. The gathering was held at Rising Star. Refreshments were served to more than 200 visitors.

The Pioneer lodge won the drill team efficiency banner for the eighth consecutive time. They competed against Cisco, who although defeated displayed real brilliance, according to members present, and Pioneer was pushed to their greatest efforts to win the 'flag' for the eighth time. The association voted to give the Pioneer order permanent possession of the banner and to award loving cups in the future for degree team competition.

The next associational gathering will be held at Cisco in April 1933.

Those composing the degree team for Pioneer were: Nona Woods, Noble Grand; Mrs. A. J. Shepard, Vice-Grand; Mrs. Lamb, Past Grand; Mrs. O. T. Laws, Chaplin; Mrs. Virgie Browning, Conductor; Mrs. Bessie Lamb, Warden and Lillie Lawson, Mrs. Roy Patterson, Mrs. Hendrix, Mrs. Neel, Mrs. Milner and Mrs. Aiken.

Mrs. Robert Lamb served as inside guardian. Alma Armstrong depicted, a part in the degree work; Cecil A. Lotief took the part of Abraham.

Children's Bedtime Story

By Norris Chambers

THE ROCKY LEDGE PEST

Polly Possum walked slowly down the old trail, the trail that she had walked down so many times, and the trail that she had walked down the night she lost part of her long tail. She was intending to find a fat, young quail for her supper.

She walked for probably five minutes, and was beginning to think that she would have to go hungry for another day or so. But not quite, luck was with her. She saw a large flock of quails in the high weeds ahead, to the right of her trail.

The possum stole quietly along the border of the patch, and coming to a point that she thought to be exactly even with the quails, she turned into the broom-weeds and began stalking the flock. It would be a heavy job, but it would be worth it.

She was now exactly even with them, and was within six feet of one of the largest in the bevy. She prepared to grab him. If she could catch it by the neck and keep it from making a noise she would stand a chance of catching another, and maybe another.

Polly crept closer. The quail seemed to sense a premonition of danger, of impending doom. It was restless; it hopped about uneasily. Suddenly a white streak shot thru the air; Polly heard a muffled gasp. She saw the farmer's old cat hovering over the quail that she had expected to eat for supper.

She suddenly jumped out of the weed-jungle and prepared to fight the old cat, for on Rocky Ledge it was a custom among the animals to fight for a prize that had been deliberately taken from them. The cat suddenly let out a blood-curdling wail; every hair on her back stuck out, and the two animals stood facing each other.

The flock of quails simultaneously fluttered into the underbrush of the forest. The crickets even hushed for a moment their monotonous song. A passing jack-rabbit stopped and stared in wonder; a chipmunk fled in terror and dismay.

Suddenly the cat jumped at Polly; every claw she possessed, with the aid of every tooth in her head, was flung at the possum. Polly fought back with sullen, persistent charges and rushes.

It seemed as if the two fighters would surely annihilate each other. Each one was receiving numerous scratches and bites, and each was intent on nothing except disabling the other.

A sudden, snarl fusillade of fire barks rang from the woods near by. Both of the fighters realized the danger, and each one knew that must escape.

With two fierce growls the fighters lowered their tails and in terror. The dog came up and feasted on the remains of the quail over which the two rivals had fought.

Well, kids, it looks like Polly has found another enemy; one that always will be bothering her and trying to steal her meals, so I think would be advisable to always be the lookout. Be careful and don't let the cat get Polly off to herself, for just between us, I think the cat was getting the best of the scrap—B anyway—

POLITICAL STRATEGY

Complete Short Short Story BY PAUL HAWK In This Space

Colonel Sharp was tired. His high forehead beneath his fine, silvery hair was wrinkled. His deep blue eyes had lost their customary fire. His tall figure, usually erect, stooped slightly. His shoulders sagged. Colonel Sharp was fifty years old. Usually he looked only forty. Today he appeared at least sixty.

"Come in," he called, and the deep voice that had swayed voters for two decades was dull.

It was Calvin Colt, the Colonel's right hand man. They ruled the political destinies of the state's most strategic district.

"Howdy, Cal. Sit?"

"Colonel, for twenty years you've named the men to hold office in this district. But we've reached a crisis, huh! Two months to the primary, and things are already poppin'!"

"That so?" said the Colonel listlessly.

His eyes stared past Colt and out the window. The brilliant sun outside by contrast made the Colonel's office appear dark and gloomy. Shouts and laughter from boys playing on a vacant lot across the street filtered in. A bird paused on a telephone wire long enough to sing a little carol to Spring. The air had a vibrant quality, an invigorating smell. The Colonel mused absently on the number of elections he had worried over in that same office, unmindful of the same sort of weather.

"The women are going to ruin us, Colonel," Colt worried. "They're organizing. And they're going to stand together to show that they've a voice in these hah elections."

"It's all the doin's of this Mrs. Hardaway. If it wasn't for her, there'd be no organization. But she's intelligent. And she hasn't a husband to keep her busy. She's going to campaign against you," Colt ended.

"Why me?" queried the Colonel.

"Because you're the power behind the throne—the machine. These women have got the idea that the machine isn't picking the best candidates—and they're out to get you."

"Hm-m-m," said the Colonel. "Looks to me like this calls for some more of what we call 'strategy'."

"I've an idea," Colt offered.

"Well?"

"We don't always go about our ends directly, do we?" asked Colt.

"Well—" Colt hesitated. "Now, don't get me wrong 'til you think this over. 'The party first' is our motto."

Mrs. Hardaway is centering the attack on you. If we do something to make people discount that attack—that it's not sincere—"

The Colonel was interested. "Well, how?"

"Suppose—suppose you were seen in her company a lot," suggested Colt. "People would say 'she likes him personally; so why should we believe the bad things she says in her campaign speeches?' See?"

"You're suggestin'," said the Colonel slowly. "that I go courtin'? Me—fifty years old?"

"Why not? You know widows. And you're rich, distinguished, cultured. And she's attractive herself. It wouldn't be hard. Oh, if she'd only get married and forget politics! But this is next best."

"For the party," said Colonel Sharp thoughtfully. "I will." Suddenly he became energetic. "Let's do a little plottin' as to how the first meetin' comes about. First impressions are lasting. And she mustn't suspect what's up."

A week later, Colonel Sharp sat impatiently in his big sedan. The air was like a tonic to him. He felt like a small boy preparing to steal watermelons. He hadn't been so interested in life for a long time. He was a little nervous too, caressing the famous gold-headed cane that was a part of his elegant attire. He leaned forward and questioned the chauffeur for the second time.

"Got it straight, Frank? As soon as her car passes, follow it—but not too closely. Her chauffeur will stop then I'll offer her conveyance in this car."

"Yes, sir," said Frank.

When at last Colonel Sharp's sedan drew up, the Colonel got out and walked over to Mrs. Hardaway's stalled car. The chauffeur looked up from his examination of the motor under the raised hood and gave him a grin of understanding—a grin Mrs. Hardaway did not see. The Colonel looked at her and found her to be distinctly pleasing to his eye. She was his kind.

"May I make so bold as to inquire the trouble, Ma'am?" the Colonel said in his deepest, most courteous voice.

It was really his voice that made him such a distinctive character—that and his elegant and courtly air—for the Colonel was a gentleman of the old school.

Mrs. Hardaway looked at him with interest. Unconsciously, she smiled brightly as she answered, "A dreadful nuisance. The car won't go."

"I'm merely pleasure riding," said the Colonel gallantly. "I'd be deeply honored if you'd consider me and my car at your disposal."

"You know," Colonel Sharp's deep, cultured voice resumed as they started. "this day does something to me."

Wasn't it one of Morley's characters—a girl—who said, 'I'm thinking of the sky, the trees and the shadows of trees, and the swift wind, and the smell of everything? That's the way I feel today.'"

"Oh, do you feel it too?" exclaimed Mrs. Hardaway. "A sense of something—It's wonderful, isn't it?"

They chatted like old and intimate friends until she exclaimed, "But I shouldn't be imposing on you like this. In fact, I'm on my way now to campaign against you."

But Colonel Sharp waved his hand negligently. "Your purpose makes no difference," he said. "I would be very sorry to have you interrupt this very pleasant drive. I'm at your service."

Mrs. Hardaway exclaimed involuntarily, "You're not at all what I expected!"

A week later, the Colonel hurried to receive Mrs. Hardaway in his own house. It was a very select dinner party of a half-dozen of his best friends. He bent over her hand.

"My house for the first time is satisfying—now that you're here—Margaret," he said.

She smiled. "It's—perfect!"

In another two weeks—three men rushed excitedly into Colonel Sharp's office. Colt led them, waving a newspaper.

"Is it true, Colonel—about your marriage?"

Colt said reverently, "Gentlemen, the Colonel has done a noble thing for the party. His marriage removes from the active campaign, so the newspaper says, our party's most formidable opponent. We owe him our hearty thanks."

The Colonel's eyes twinkled. "Thank you, gentlemen."

"But even the retirement of Mrs. —of your wife doesn't mean we can quit our work. Have you any instructions, Colonel?"

Colonel Sharp smiled out the window. "Gentlemen," he said, "our party will become stronger than ever before if we put up worthy men as candidates. I believe," he said earnestly, "we've been lax in that respect. Mr. advice is to keep that thought in mind as you carry on."

"Carry on!" the three exclaimed in unison. "What?"

"I am," said the Colonel, retiring.

"But it will mean our defeat. You can't leave now."

"If the whole decision is left to the people's vote," said Colonel Sharp, quoting his wife's words, "they will choose the best men. As for me—well, I've missed a number of things in life—including a honeymoon and a lot of traveling."

ALBANY LIONS SWAMP BUFFALOES 33 TO 0 THERE LAST FRIDAY

Albany's championship Lions ran rough-shod over the Cross Plains Buffaloes Friday. They marched 60 yards for the first touchdown shortly after the game started. Passes over the center of the line and sweeping end runs made another touchdown possible before the first quarter ended. The score was 33 to 0.

There was no more scoring until the fourth quarter when the Lions scored almost at will. Loss of Greenwood and injuries to others dampened the spirits of the Buffaloes.

The herd made two drives that almost resulted in touchdowns, the last being stopped two feet from the goal line.

Taylor was the outstanding back for Albany, running 40 yards, once for a touchdown through the entire team. Allen and Todd were the mainstays of the Lions forward wall.

Davidson, Greenwood, T. Webb, and S. Walker started for locals. Practically all of the Buffs that made the trip saw service in the game.

The Buffs are working harder now than ever before and are out to avenge their loss to Albany by defeating Caddo and the rest of the conference members.

The Buffaloes Calves or yearlings played Pioneer Tuesday and will be ready to go against Caddo.

Yarbrough	Center
T. Webb	R. Guard
F. Walker	L. Guard
Lacy	L. Tackle
F. Halbert	R. Tackle
S. Walker	L. End
M. Bingham	R. End
Davidson	Quarter
B. Spencer	Full
Greenwood	Half
Holden	Half

STUDENTS DRILL FOR PREVENTION OF FIRE

Cross Plains high school has inaugurated fire prevention practice which is proving to be quite interesting. Floyd Halbart was elected as fire chief for the entire high school. It is his duty when there is a fire to see that every one is safely out of the building. However he is assisted by fire captains from each room and an assistant fire chief. Bruce Spencer was elected for the Senior fire captain, Clyde Walker for the Juniors, W. J. Mayes for the Sophomores, Scotty Smith for the Freshmen and Soc. Walker as assistant fire chief.

There is a red block which is used to indicate the fire. When it is found anywhere outside of Mr. Norman's office, it is the duty of the finders to go to the office and turn in the alarm. We have only had one drill so far. However it was very exciting. Monday afternoon, Athalie Adams after having been near the block for two periods, finally steadied her nerves enough to go and turn in the alarm.

Wilson's Cafe

When she did gather up the energy to move, or may be that it got so hot for her, she had to move, she jumped up and ran through the study hall and into Mr. Norman's office yelling, "FIRE! FIRE!!" as loud as she could. She then gave the alarm and chief Halbart was very busy for a few minutes attending to his duties. In exactly forty-five seconds the building was cleared. The fire, however was soon extinguished, and we again resumed our studies.

This fire prevention practice is very practical. It teaches us to be orderly in case of fire, and to keep a cool head at all times when there is impending danger.

A SHORT SHORT STORY

Miss Gwathmey assigned the poem "Evangeline" to her English class for outside reading, telling them to be prepared to give a short resume of the story in class. Tommie Holden gave a long winded account so she stopped him and called on Wilma Jones. Her recitation was not satisfactory, either, so she called on Tommie Webb to recite. Tommie said, "She met him, she loved him, she lost him, she found him, she kissed him; he died."

WARD SCHOOL NEWS

STUDENTS HEAR REV. ARMSTRONG IN CHAPEL

Wednesday the fifth, high school students met in the high school auditorium for chapel exercises. Rev. Armstrong Methodist pastor gave a talk on Leaders and Leadership. Later the high school students outlined their fire prevention program for the year, and elected a Fire Chief and an Assistant.

Rev. Armstrong's talk was developed especially for students—its extreme simplicity made it easily understood by the youngest, and yet there were such deep truths given and explained that the most advanced students in the high school were deeply impressed by the significance of being a leader. He gave sound advice and advice and encouragement in a most pleasant way.

SELECT CAPS AND GOWNS

At a meeting of the senior class Wednesday morning, October 12, caps and gowns were selected for graduation—A beautiful grey serge material was chosen with matching cap and white collar.

BUFFALOES DEFEAT PIONEER TUESDAY IN PRACTICE SCRIMMAGE

Cross Plains Buffaloes invaded the den of the Pioneer Panthers and defeated them in a football game 14 to 2 Wednesday afternoon. The contest, was classed by the boys of Cross Plains as a failure, although they did have the big end of the score. Pioneer fought to the finish, spurred on by the fact that they had scored first. In the last minute of the first half Cross Plains pushed across a marker. The first touchdown was made by Warren Spencer and the extra point by Soc-rates Walker. The last half was dull due to lack of fight by the Purple and Gold. The second score was made by John Lackey in the third quarter. Again Walker kicked the extra point. The Pioneer points were made on a safety in the first period.

Many players saw service in the game, including nearly the entire roster.

These people donated money to the pep squad to buy our suits, and we thank you.
