Cross Plains Put In New Football District

STRONGER CLUBS TO BE MET IN DISTRICT 23-B NEXT CAMPAIGN

Cross Plains high school Buffaloes, always considered a serious championship threat in football district 17-B, have been transferred to another conference and may never again meet such ancient rivals as Albany and Baird in district competition.

A recent ruling by Roy B. Henderson, state director of Interscholastic League, places Cross Plains in loop 23-B to the Southwest with: Coleman, Santa Anna, Winters, Ballinger, Bangs and Rising Star. The Wildcatters, bitterest foes of the thundering herd for a decade, are also transfers from district 17-B.

Albany, last season's winner of this district, is also transferred to another district. The Lions go to 9-B and are grouped with Anson, Aspermont, Hamlin, Haskell, Monday.

Left in this district which has heretofore been known as 17-B, but will in the future be called 11-B, are: Clyde, Baird, Putnam, Moran, Caddo, Colony, Pioneer, May, Olden, Woodson.

News of the change came as a total surprise to Superintendent Nat Williams, coach Claude Daniel and fans as well.

"The transfer will give us much (Continued on back page)

Tom Wallis and his orchestra will be featured in one entire act of the program. The orchestra will present some of the newest popular tunes as well as some of the old favorites.

Numerous novelty numbers, girls' trios, solos, piano solos, musical soldiers, and tap dancing will have places on the program. Albert Miller will be featured in a saxophone solo, and Melton Smith, the singing drum major of Daniel Baker, will present a vocal solo.

The new program is arranged to be presented in three acts and will have special features between the appearances of the band and the orchestra. It will be sponsored here by the Cross Plains high school pep squad and held in the school auditorium.

200 FARMERS HEAR SOIL EXPERT TELL HOW TO MAKE RAIN

About 200 farmers attended a meeting held Friday afternoon at Baird by invitation by the county agent, Ross B. Jenkins, and heard J. W. Chapman, Secretary, State Conservation Board, explain Senate Bill No. 227.

Mr. Chapman pointed out that the great rain belts of Texas follow those sections which are the most heavily wooded and decrease directly as the vegetation decreases. He said that scientific experiments had proved that oak trees evaporate 150 to 600 gallons of water per day into the air which causes a greater amount of moisture to become available to form clouds which, in turn, will produce rain. He pointed out that cedar gives up moisture when an abundance is in the soil and reverses itself when the soil is dry; therefore, forming an extra dry condition to prevail in cedar belts during the summer. Mr. Chapman pointed out that Texas was in a semi-tropical condition in 1914, but within a period of 10 years had entered the first phase of primary desert and had become semi-arid. He attributed these causes to two man-made conditions. Through extensive drilling of oil wells the water table had been lowered and through placing into cultivation timbered and grass lands evaporation had been checked and since it has been proved that only 60 per cent of the water that falls as rain comes from the evaporation of ocean water and fresh water it was made clear that the 40 per cent that must come from plants had been seriously checked in the central and western portions of Texas. Mr. Chapman showed that by terracing and by building innumerable dams that Texas could again raise the water table and start evaporation back to the elements and thereby more or less control rains during the summer.

The couple will make their home on the Amarada lease where Mr. Williams is employed.

MAJORITY OF TWO THIRDS NECESSARY FOR BOND CARRIAGE

When property tax paying voters go to the polls in this Commissioner's precinct February eighth to ballot on a proposed $15,000 road bond, a two thirds majority will be necessary for carrying of the issue, the Review learned definitely yesterday.

The money would be used to construct an all-weather road from Cross Plains Westward to intersect highway 191 and to improve lateral roads throughout the precinct, as well as to construct drainage structures, stated Commissioner B. H. Freeland Tuesday afternoon.

Date for the election was set by the Commissioners Court in session January third, after a hearing in which both foes and friends to the proposition had been heard.

In voting the bond, Commissioner B. H. Freeland pointed out, property owners would vote off the special 15 cent road tax and in its place levy a 12 and one-half cent tax; meaning, in reality, a reduction of two and one half cents in taxes of this precinct.

Voting will take place at Cross Plains, Cottonwood, Caddo Peak, Dressy and Atwell. Election judges and places of voting will be: Taylor Bond, Anderson Chevrolet building in Cross Plains; R. N. Whitehorn, Coffey's Store at Cottonwood; J. A. Moore, at school building at Caddo Peak; J. C. Brasher, at school building at Atwell; C. R. Steele, at school building at Dressy.

Only resident property tax payers will be eligible to vote on the question.

B. H. Freeland Points Out Road Bond Facts

County Commissioner B. H. Freeland this week furnishes the Review with a concise statement of facts concerning the proposed $15,000.00 road bond election to be voted on February eighth. Mr. Freeland returned Monday from Dallas, where he secured information from an outstanding bond attorney relative to how the money appropriated in the election would be spent. His statement follows.

"Please permit me to call your attention to the following facts pertaining to the bond election to be held in Callahan County Commissioners Precinct No. 4 on February 8th, for the purpose of voting $15,000.00 of bonds against said precinct.

"First, the money received from the sale of the bonds is to be used for the purpose of purchasing right-of-way for Highway No. 36 leading west from Cross Plains toward Abilene to the Precinct line, and for the general improvement of road and bridges of existing lateral roads over the precinct.

"Second, there has been previously voted by Commissioners precinct No. 4 a special 15 cent Road and Bridge tax. If the election carries only a 12 tax levy will be necessary to pay the interest and principal of said bonds, and the 15 cent special Road and Bridge tax will be taken off. This means that if the election carries, there will be a 3 cent reduction in the road tax of the precinct.

"Third, the bonds can be sold at par and interest at the lowest interest rate, 4 3/4%, of any bonds heretofore sold by Callahan County.

"These statements are made in order that you may know the purpose of the election and not in an effort to influence you for or against the bond election."
(Signed) B. H. Freeland.

HOME TOWN GOSSIP

Into the Review building almost simultaneously Tuesday afternoon walked Callahan county's spat wearing County Agent—Ross B. Jenkins—and R. Elliott Bryant, one of the old home town's up and going young business men.

Greeting the two gentlemen at virtually the same time your columnist inquired of the County Agent if he were acquainted with Mr. Bryant.

"Yes," replied the Agent. Then to the other visitor he asked: "By the way, Bryant what school are you attending this year?"

Needless to say, Elliott hurriedly replied that despite his boyish appearance he was a man of responsibilities and had not attended school for "nigh on to many years"; and that in all probability the County Agent had mistaken him for his younger brother.

And speaking of spats, have you noticed His Honor the Mayor and the Higginbotham boss sporting gaiters? It's a fact and these two dittoes may be responsible for ingear being into Cross Plains the footers in which so advantageously cover the hessian link—from the shoes dress long handles—in a man's

SIXTH INSTALMENT

SYNOPSIS: A luxurious five-month cruise around the world aboard the "Marena" brings together a group of passengers for adventures, romantic, entertaining . . . and tragic . . . Like in "Grand Hotel" these passengers offer a study in human actions and reactions which unconsciously bare their souls. . . These characters are aboard the ship. Macduff, dour Scotchman, single, of middle age; Miss Mudge, school teacher, spending the savings of 20 years; Angela, faithful wife of Lovat gigolo; Dick Charlton, first officer; Clare, a person of experience; Joan, a dissipated flapper; Jenny, run-away wife, and Peter; Captain Baring, master of the ship—and his soul.

No. Go On With the Story.

"Well, I'm doing it. I'm painting a little, because I like to pass the time that way."

Macduff was charmed with Angela's way of tossing off her words. Here was a woman who might be worth her salt. She chatted about the Ganges, and gave him a lively picture of her own impressions that morning. Yes, she was an artist. He could tell that from her choice of words.

When Macduff was writing, he bothered little with externals, going in for sombre, philosophical stuff that some people seemed to like. It surprised him to see India through the sapient eyes of an intelligent woman. Soon he was talking himself, and marvelling at his own fluency. For half an hour his companion sat back, entranced and amused, while he unbent. She lit a cigarette and watched him from under the brim of her hat. It must be the cocktails. He was off like an orator. There was nothing to do but listen, now that the floodgates were open. But would he ever come to the end of his soliloquy? Was he talking sense or nonsense? Angela realized that the man was simply unused to voicing his thoughts, although verbose, no doubt, on paper. She had heard vaguely of his books, but had never read anything that he had written. After this, she would try to get hold of them and see what they were like.

The other people in the room who knew them were watching their table with surprise.

"Ye gods!" said Johnny to Clare. "Watch Macduff talking to Mrs. Wynant."

"It's a miracle. I'd like to know what he's saying. It would be Mrs. Wynant who would get him to talk."

"Won't you come with me to the river, Mr. Macduff?" Angela was saying at the first break in their conversation. "I can't keep away. It's the most animated canvas I've ever seen in my life and I'm rather keen about masses of people."

"That's just where you're different from me," said Macduff, weighing his decision on whether to go with Angela or stay for a liqueur. "No, I won't. There's nothing I dislike so much as human beings, and I find it depressing to look at such thousands mucking about together."

They went out to the veranda and he ordered liqueurs. Angela watched him, wondering if perfect frankness were not the cue in handling Macduff. She leaned towards him. "You're rather a myth on the boat, she laughed, "the man who must not be the cocktails. He was off like an orator. There was nothing to do but listen, now that the floodgates were open. But would he ever come to the end of his soliloquy? Was he talking sense or nonsense? Angela realized that the man was simply unused to voicing his thoughts, although verbose, no doubt, on paper. She had heard vaguely of his books, but had never read anything that he had written. After this, she would try to get hold of them and see what they were like."

A deep roll of laughter shot surprisingly from his throat. "It's not on the boat alone—it's the way I live. I find that human contacts interfere with one's work and one's life."

"Then I can't understand why you travel around the world on a cruising boat. To escape from people on the Marena is like trying to dodge bees in a hive."

"I came on a cruising boat because it takes me out of the way ports I'd never been able to get to by any other means. Moreover, I've found all the isolation that I would get at home—at the least possible expense," Macduff finished, calmly.

Angela sighed and swung her parasol. "Sometimes I think one would be happier alone, in a world of one's own. The constant give and take of social relations wear one down."

Macduff's face was loosening in amiable lines, and she thought she detected a twinkle through his rianless spectacles. Or was it just the sun on the lens?"

"I'm thinking that you're not very happy," he told her, surprisingly.

"Happy enough, Mr. Macduff, but wandering in my thoughts. To tell you the truth, they're in England with my husband and my home."

"Tell me about your home."

"I've never been able to conjure it up for anyone else, although it's so vivid in my own mind. It's a rambling house with gables, frightfully ancient, with bits that have been added on from time to time. The ceilings are low and beamed and the dormer windows are tucked in idd places under the eaves. It's filled with pictures, ancient and modern, and my dog Jock patters all over it like a presiding Turk."

Angela stopped abruptly, thinking that she had been lacking in tact and reserve.

"Do you live in New York, Mr. Macduff?"

"Yes. Have you ever been there?"

"Five years ago I visited it for a few weeks. I love it, the excitement, the tearing hurry, the air—such air! But to live in it—how does one manage that?"

"My life is as quiet and slow as if I lived on the tip end of Cornwall."

"I don't see how you can dwell among such glorious skyscrapers and feel that life is quiet and slow. Life can't be slow in a soaring city. I think I should live on wings if New York were my home."

"It's all tosh, the things people think of New York. It's the best possible city for work, because it's one of the few places in the world where you are let alone if you want to be. I can work better there than anywhere under the sun."

"Perhaps that's why American women accomplish so much. I admire them greatly."

"Do you?"

"Yes. Don't you?" Her voice expressed surprise.

"No. They're scatterbrains—feckless creatures. They're also shockingly vain—spending, spending everything for clothes and appearances."

"But how stunning they look!"

"Like so many dolls in a window. The same eyes, the same life to their chins, the same way of wearing their clothes, and the same ankles."

"But I can't imagine a race of women with better ankles! American women always surprise me afresh with the buoyancy of their spirit. They have such grace—perhaps because they're free and have economic independence. They're the only women who walk with hope and assurance."

"I don't approve of them at all."

"Oh dear! What a pity! If I were a man and lived in America, I should admire them very much and fall in love with any number of them. They're intelligent, too. But I see it's a hopeless argument."

Macduff had lost the thread of the conversation, and seemed to be stumbling towards an important conclusion of his own. He was standing, looking down at her with an air of gloom. Angela gazed at him softly and he shifted his weight. The sun was in his eyes, the garden was fragrant with blooms, the Union Jacks were still pleasantly warm in his stomach. He rubbed the back of his head meditatively and couldn't imagine why his feet were moving towards the river. What was the sense of going to the Ganges with a chance traveling acquaintance?

"How delightful of you to come with me to the river, Mr. Macduff." Angela's voice was gay with pleasure as she saw him falling into step.

Her companion grunted and pulled on his pipe.

"We'll ride to Tiger Hill together to see the dawn over Mount Everest when we reach Darjeeling," he announced, amazed at his own desire to establish a deeper contact with the woman at his side.

"That will be splendid," she told him.

The afternoon sun fell in slanting rays over the Indian Oceans, shedding a flutter of gold on water that heaved in a darkening swell. The aquatic sports were about to begin in the swimming pool. Patty, brimful of energy was diving repeatedly from the highest spring-board.

"She was born to live in a swimming-suit," Jenny said, admiringly. "A genuine water-nymph!" Peter remarked always appreciative of the manifestations of physical perfection.

Jenny saw that Clare and Petty were both in the race. It would be interesting to watch the two of them together, for they were evenly matched, in spite of the difference in their ages.

Clare was a gifted swimmer, and her speed and form were equal to the best that girls half her age could do. No woman on the boat could compete with her except Patty. Joan Foster was good, but she slept all day and took most of her swims late at night.

Clare was in tangerine, a brilliant flash in the clear water of the tank. It suited her dusky skin. Patty was in a striking green suit.

The whistle blew and the contestants were off, with orange and green in the lead. Clare tore through the water like a goldfish, using the long Australian crawl. Patty made better time with the American crawl.

Johnny was perched in a corner close to Angela. His face was set in anxious furrows, for he felt that the race had something to do with him. Patty won the first heat, Clare the second; they seemed to be marvellously paired. Angela sat silent, thinking of Johnny and wondering whom he wanted to win.

Clare was leading now, but Patty was creeping up. Every stroke brought her nearer to the fleet orange figure. Patty was breathing easily and turning in the water with each long stroke.

Johnny's heart was pounding. Clare was losing. Did he want her to lose? He did not know. Patty was magnificent. He liked the clean sweep of her strokes. He remembered his college days, and his heart went out to Patty. He knew that she would root for him, but Clare bewitched him.

But this was Patty's race. She must win! Johnny's throat was soapy, as it used to be when he tackled at football.

Patty won, and, as she touched the end of the swimming-pool, he bit his lips on a shout of jubilation. Angela felt his suppressed excitement and was suddenly sure of something that had puzzled her for weeks.

But it was Clare he went over to speak to, Clare he helped out of the water. "Good stuff, Patty!" whispered Johnny as she passed him on her way to the dressing-room. "You and I'll have a race pretty soon."

Patty laughed in her throat, tossed her cap and strode on. She felt robust and happy, as if a dark shadow that had been creeping up on her for weeks had taken to its heels.

Clare was also in gay spirits, a step from Peter's side. She had not cared whether she won or lost; stress did nothing but give one crow's feet.

"Well, that's over," she said. "Patty's like the wind. I admire her form in the water."

"You were quite worth watching, too," Peter's voice was warm, and his glance passed over her like a searing flame.

"Why didn't you compete, Mrs. Rumford?"

"Oh, I'm a drone," laughed Jenny. "She's a lorelei who looks for rocks to sit on in the sun while she combs her hair," said Peter.

Was Jenny dreaming, or did she catch a look of understanding, the sudden raising of a curtain, between those two? Her heart missed a beat. No, that was absurd. Daydreams! Clare and Peter had scarcely spoken to each other since they'd come on the boat, except for their chat in the lounge at Bombay. They all moved out to the deck to dry themselves.

"Isn't the sea strange today? Jenny murmured, after a long silence. "This is the first time since we left the Mediterranean that I've seen the water crumpled, or foam breaking on the waves."

No one was paying any attention to what she said.

"This is no place to dry," said Clare, shivering with cold. "It's too late. The sun's gone down."

Jenny was lost in her thoughts, watching the dying sun in a semi-trance. She would not go below while the sunset lasted. The others had already gone; she had not noticed them leaving her.

She went down to B deck and along the corridor. Her glance swept by chance towards an alleyway, and her hand went up to her mouth to stop the exclamation that sprang to her lips.

Turkey Raising

Now is the time for you to start your plans for another year's turkey crop. No doubt, you selected your breeders last fall before marketing the bulk of your birds.

Mating time will soon be here and let us caution you there, to make haste slowly. Be sure to check every bird carefully for all standard requirements and do not overlook vigor and vitality.

In other words, when choosing breeders, look for the kind of birds you would like to have for the show and market next fall. The old idea that any kind of bird is good enough for the market is all wrong. A bird with a long straight breast is always more desirable and commands a far better price in the end.

In view of the present market conditions it is all the more important to produce quality instead of mere quantity. Our Slogan for 1936, therefore, might be Better Turkeys and not more turkeys.

In fact, if every turkey raiser were to lower his production for 1936 at least 25% and improve his quality at least 25%, the turkey situation would look far more favorable from a profit standpoint next fall.

Feeding Breeders

In order to get early eggs and stronger poults, all breeders should be started on a high-quality egg mash in January and not later than early February. Keep this egg mash before the birds all the time and feed all the scratch grain easily consumed at night. Be sure to give every breeder a chance. Improper feeding means poor hatches. ANNOUNCES $25-A-MONTH TIME PAYMENTS

AND A NEW UCC 6% FINANCE PLAN

Any New Ford V-8 Car Can Now Be Purchased for $25 a Month with Usual Low Down-Payment

THIS $25-a-month time-payment plan enables you to buy a New Ford V-8 car through your Ford dealer on new low monthly terms.

After the usual low down-payment is made, $25 a month is all you have to pay for any type of new car, including insurance and financing.

Your cost for this extension of credit is only 1/2 of 1% a month on your original unpaid balance and insurance. This plan reduces financing charges for twelve months to 6%. For example, if you owe a balance of $400 for your car and insurance, you pay $24 for the year of credit; if the balance is $200 you pay $12. Your credit cost for one year is the original unpaid balance multiplied by 6%.

UCC plans provide you with insurance protection at regular conference rates. You have not only fire and theft insurance, but $50 deductible collision, and protection against other accidental physical damage to your car.

The Universal Credit Company has made these plans available through all Ford dealers in the United States.
