CHAPTER XIII—Continued

Grant sat for a few moments in agony. He had been condemned to the imprisonment because this forgotten and submerged identity had masqueraded, through some strange creebral vagary, as the real man. The aews was too much to grasp.
"Didn't any friends stand by me?" Grant asked brokenly.

The doctor shook his head.
"A great deal of sympathy developed for Captain Sutton. I'm afraid your friends deserted you in the hour of need."

friends deserted you in the model."
"Didn't my wife help?" He trembled with anxiety.
The doctor looked at him with a half-frown on his face.
"It seems incredible you've forgotten that. She has divorced you. No woman is expected to stick to a lifer."
Tears forced themselves through Grant's eyes. Even Natica, for whom he had sinned, had thrown him aside.
After a pause the doctor went on talking.

After a pause the doctor went on talking.

"The exceptional sentence was due to your stubbornness. The judge wanted you to contess. Yes," he added reflectively; "I think if you had made a clean breast of it you'd have had a comparatively light sentence."

Payson Grant gripped the edge of his cot. New hope was born. There might be a way of reducing his term yet.

"Doctor," he cried excitedly: "Do you suppose if I were willing to make a full confession now it would help?" The doctor considered the matter. "It's not easy to say, off-hand." "But your testimony would help," "Mine," said the doctor; "What do you mean by my testimony?"
"You could say you found me wholy uncoasclous of the past. You could prove I was a different man at the trial and that I ought to have another chance."
"Hold your horses," the doctor said.

riell and that I ought to have another chance."

"Hold your horses," the doctor said, frowning, "I couldn't testify to anything of the kind. All I could truthfully declare was that you pretended you didn't know who you were and tried to substantiate your truth, or lie, by making up your bed like one who had never done it before. Now, you are an educated man and you ought to be able to see my side of it. I ask you this. How long would I last here if I believed the tale of all the geniuses in Sing Sing?"

"My God!" Grant cried, "you can't think I'm lying?"

"Why not?" the doctor retorted. "Do you suppose it would be the first plausible lie I have listened to? I suppose we get the pick of the best criminal brains in the country in Sing Sing and they're most of 'em just as anxious to better their lot as you. I'm used to these stunts but I never lose interest in them; that's why I came to see what new one you were trying out."

Grant watched the doctor cross to out."

Grant watched the doctor cross to the cell door. He felt that with him hope would step into the corridor not again to return.

"Doctor," he called anxiously, "just a moment. Do you know anything about the action of a drug they call bhang in the East?"

The physician did not open the cell door. He turned and looked with renewed interest at the convict.

"I know all about it," he said. "I was a ship's surgeon before I came here and I've seen all I want to of hasheesh. Why?"

"I got in the habit of taking it. Do. do you think it might have robbed me of my mind?" said the doctor. He seemed to have a contempt for the lay form of expression.

"I simply don't remember anything that has happened. I never saw you before. I never saw that guard and yet he says he has been on this corridor for a month."

"That's very interesting," commented the other. "The drug's real name is Cannabis Indica, or Indian Hemp. It manifests itself in many very strange ways, perhaps, according to its degree of purity. Is this another of your facile excuses?"

"Won't anything make you believe?" Grant walled.

"Not a thing," said the doctor brutaily. "If you were sincere you would make a confession, properly witnessed, and not these sniveling excuse you are trying on me."

"That's just what I want to do? Grant cried, excitedly. "I'll fell you everything from the beginning."

"I haven't the time or inclination to itsten. I have enough to keep me busy without that."

"Isn't there any justice or decency it the world?" the prisoner exclaimed.

"Justice!" commented the physician, "you had a perfectly fair trial."

"But you won't understand that, it wasn't I who was tried. The man who was condemned had my body but that devillab green drug was talking—not me. If you don't ilsten to me you can't think of yourself as a fair-mind-ed man."

He saw that the doctor was Impressed by this.

He saw that the doctor was Impressed by this.

"It's nothing to do with me," he said. "Tm a physician. It's up to the chief and the board of pardons. I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll go and see the chief right away. That lets me out." He hurried off.

The surly guard came and coked at Payson Grant. But this time he saw a more sanguine prisoner. Presently the secretary to the chief, who was also a notary, came in with a male stenographer. The doctor came back with them. Grant tooked upon times a friend, and was glad.

He poured out his whole tortured soul to them. He concealed nothing; the relief he felt was amazing. Through all the devious ways by which he had set out to trap his benefactor they followed him. They learned why Sophy McKinnon had cer farm given her; the name of the man who falsified the entries was set down; and that hired gangster who had, for a few pieces of silver, thrust a loaded revolver in Captain Sutton's pocket was written in.

When the typed statement was brought back—in an amuzingly short space of time—Payson Grant signed it eagerly. It was not a contession that he felt he was signing. It was a document which might lessen his dreadful punishment. Of contrition there was no trace. He found nimself alrendy relying on the promised help of the physician.

"It's my firm belief," the doctor declared to the chief's secretary, "that this man does not remember a word that passed at his trial and I will testify to that belief before any lury of mental experts in the country. It will be a most interesting case."

As Grant looked at the signed in strument his eye fell on the date line. He saw that it was given as September 28.

"This is wrong," he said anxiously "You'll have to correct the date." He was not going to have the statement invalidated by such an error. He knew he could not be in the wrong.

Sutton himself had stamped the date vividly on his mind when he had declared that the seventeenth, as written in his threatening note, should have read the twenty-seventh.

The notary tooked at it and smiled.
"I guess that's near enough," he remarked.
"Like h—I it is," Grant snapped. He appealed to the doctor.
"Don't worry about that," said the doctor. "There's more than that to come."

doctor. "There's more than that to come."

Amazing incidents crowded one upon another. The little cell seemed suddenly to have ceased to be occupied by dour, hard men whose work was disciplinary. The warder, for instance, had his arm on the shoulder of the doctor.

"Boy." said the warder, whose face as he smiled was altered as though another man was there. "I thought I was it, but yours is the name that goes in the electrics."

Grant was still too intent upon getting the date changed to have time to speculate on the meaning of this. He saw himself being put in the wrong by a notarial error.
"Doctor." he urged. "this is incorrect." He felt his fate was in the official's hands. The doctor alone could aid him.

"You'll have to see the boss about this," said the doctor. "Don't worry; you've done your bit."
He whispered something to the warder, who left the cell. He was back within the minute accompanied by Anthony Trent, suave and debonair.

"You," said Grant, astonished. "How do you come to be here?"

At a motion of Trent's head the others left the cell, Grant noticed that he was scanning the confession. When he had glanced through it he put it in an inner pocket.

"What's that to do with you?" Grant demanded.

an inner pocket.

"What's that to do with you?" Grant demanded.

"Do you remember that night before you shot Sutton I gave you the opportunity to confess? You wouldn't do it. Then, later, Swithin Weld asked you to confess, but you refused. You've had to do it at last and it has cost me a great deal of trouble,"

"Cost you trouble," Grant cried, not wholly clear as to Trent's meaning "What has it cost me?"

Trent ignored the question.
"It has cost me a great deal more than you think. I suppose you know that you are in Ossining?"

Grant's nerves were on edge. He felt tired, hungry and in no condition to listen to Trent. And there was rising the feeling that there was some conspiracy in which he was involved whose motives he could not comprehend.
"There are some things I don't get conspiracy in which he was involved whose motives he could not comprehend.

"There are some things I don't get clearly yet," he snapped, "but I know where I am even if I don't know how I got here."

"Let me show you the secrets of your prison house," Trent said. He gripped the convict by the arm and took him to the open door of the cell so that a view might be obtained of the corridors.

The cell which Grant had believed to be but one of a great block of cells was revealed as a solitary unit standing in what had been a flower garden. The corridors ran only a few yards either side of the cell, just sufficient, indeed, that no end of them could be observed by the prisoner. Remorselessity, Trent dragged him across the yard where he had seen the convicts at work. The wall on which the blue-uniformed guards still walked was a thing built of heaver-board, plastered over.

The river was real, and Haverstruw.

The river was real, and Haverstraw occupied her familiar site, but every thing else was constructed as a moving picture set. The cell was more solidly built than a studio would need and the bars were steel instead of blackened wood.

At a little distance, the convicts Grant had seen were sitting around talking. It was the first professional engagement when they had not been made-up or photographed. Carpenters were even now beginning to tear down the wall. None paid any particular attention to Payson Grant. Only a few knew for what purpose the dramaways staged. The motion picture extra is not a curious person; he is engaged for scenes possibly in the middle of ictures whose title and plot is unlessom. The twenty men who had earned five dollars and transportation had no idea that they had been assisting a bit of real life. They only knew later that whereas they had been engaged to come for five dollars per diem they were sent home with twice as much.

Payson Grant suffered himself to be led to the upper room of the old mansion, where he found the warder and others he remembered too well.

"Your warder." Trent began, "is Mr. Joseph Clarke, formerly city editor of a metropolitan dally. This," he indicated the small man who had swept the passages and was still in prison livery, "is Mr. David More, who has been of great assistance in getting evidence." Trent next introduced the man who had masqueraded as the doctor. "This is my friend and attorney before he knows it," Grant snarled.

"I doubt it," said Fleming Dearhoit modestly, "and even if I am, I see a great future before me on screen and stage. Speaking as a inwey-your confession woed and Trent will have to make? If I'm to suffer for killing Sutton they'll suffer with me." He turned to Trent with flaming face. "Had accuse you of introducing Sutton into my room that light when I was on the ragged edge with that crime talk."

Fleming Dearholt turned to hiscilient with an appearance of concern. "Can this be true?" he demanded.

There and one-half billion dollars is a lot of money. The annual facome of the federal government, however, is approximately this amount. To be able to plan upon this amount year after year, its source must be one upon which a great deal of reliance can be placed.

One of the first acts of the first congress in 1789 was to pass a tariff bill, because the need for raising revenue was extremely pressing. Since this early beginning, there has never been a time when reliance has not been placed upon the tariff for some revenue. During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1927, the total receipts from this source were something more than $605,000,000.

The Ablene reporter of last week contained the following announcement of the marriage of Vernon D. Strahan and Miss Ruth Magee:

The marriage of Miss Ruth Magee, member of a prominent Ablene family, and Vernon D. Strahan, of Big Spring, son of a pioneer and outstanding citizen of Callahan county, was solemized Monday at noon in Dallas, with the announcement coming Tuesday afternoon from the bride's parents, Dr. and Mrs. J. D. Magee of 1910 North Third street.

airs, J. D. Magee of 1910 North Third street.

The marriage of Miss Magee and Mr. Strahan took place in the study of the First Baptist church, with the pastor, Dr. George W. Truett, officiating with the impressive ring ceremony. The bride was attended by Miss Betty Lee Byrne of Dallas, a school friend of the bride, who was maid of honor.

The only other attedants for the service were Dr. R. C. Magee of Dallas, brother of the bride, and Mrs. Magee, with whom she has been visiting for the last week.

Immediately after the ceremony was completed Mr. and Mrs. Strahan left for an automobile trip to Galveston, Houston, San Antonio, and other point of interest.

The couple are to return the last of years.

Mrs. Strahan, a popular local girl, is a graduate of Abilene high school and of Simmons University here. She has also been identified with Abilene schools as a teacher, and has been a member of the school faculty in Peekskill, New York: Last summer she did special work in Columbia University, and previous to that in the University of Colorado in Boulder.

BOARD SELECTS NEW

SCHOOL PRINCIPAL

At a meeting of the School Board last week, M. F. Kennedy was selected as principal of the Cross Pains school for the ensuing term. At the time of this selection Mr. Kennedy was unwell and confined to his home, but was able to be out the first of this week and has notified the board that he would accept the position. The principalship was made vacant by the recent resignation of E. D. Priest, who is now with the Tom Bryant Insurance Agency. Mr. Kennedy was with the school during the past term, and has proven himself capable and well experienced in teaching. He will do a valuable work for the schools.

The couple are to return the last of the week to Big Spring, where a furnished home awaits them. Mr. Strahan is employed there with the city as a civil and construction engineer. Following the World War, during which he saw service in France, he did special study in engineering in schools of the north, going to Big Spring four years ago. He is the son of S. N. and dolomites from 800 to 1,000 feet in thickness are found. These terminate in the great shale and limestone series which constitutes the last formation found in the well."

Since it is a well known fact that temperature increases as the earth is penetrated interesting results are expected from the temperature test which Dr. Sellards and his associates made shortly before drilling was resum ed. The usual temperature increase in the part of the State in which the well is located is approximatly one degree in 135 feet where there are no geologic disturbances, Dr. Sellards explained.

In the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Texas, at Abilene No. 1271, in Bankruptey. In the Matter of Mrs. CORRIE B. WEST, Bankrupt.

Reaching a total depth of 8,220 feet just before drilling was resumed the first part of last week, the deepest oil well in the world is on the property of the University of Texas, according to Dr. E. H. Sellards af the University of Economic Geology. The well, Texon Oil and Land Company B. 1, is located in the Big Lake oil field of Reagan County in West Texas.

The University Bureau of Economic Geology has made an examination of drill cuttings and has determined the various geologic formations through which the drilling has gone.

"Limestones and sandstones of cretaceous age are found at the surface to a depth of four hundred feet," Dr. Sellards explained. "Just beneath these are red sandstones of triasic age, while below this are the permian formations, the uppermost layer of which is constituted largely of red sands, salt, gypsum and anhydrite.

"The salt beds reach a thickness of from 300 to 600 feet and contain considerable potash. Beginning at a depth of approximately 3,000 feet, limestone and dolomites from 800 to 1,000 feet in thickness are found. These terminate in the great shale and limestone series

For Pale, Delicate Women and Children. 60c

Kansas City, Mo.—A view of a section of the assemblage of boxes of the country as they gathered in convention in this city recently in response to a call from hobo headquarters. This meet-ing was called in order to bring to bear effective co-operation and organization for millions of industrial workers out of work.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

obs that old nursery rhyme bring up in your mind a picture of that class of vagrants, varlously called hoboes, tramps or bums, which were once a picturesque, if not exactly ornamental, part of the American scene? If it does, then you'd better change the reel, for the picture isn't exactly true any more. For Hobo Americanus isn't the "bird' that he used to be.

First of all, it is interesting to note that no one can tell for sure just how the word "hobo" originated. There is one theory that it came from "hoo boy," long used in certain parts of the country to designate all migratory farm workers. Another says that it is from the call "Ho! Boy!" used by the early mail runners. The hobo himself, who has a picturesque vocabulary all of his own, has contracted the name to one syllable and simply calls himself a bo. Be it known also, that he has become class conscious and, according to his caste system, the three words used to describe him are not synonymous. According to his definition, the hobo is a migratory worker; the framp, a migratory nonworker.

If, is doubtful if the public would make that fine distinction, but would be inclined to lump them all together as one class under the generic name of hoboes, a class that was brought into being by the first railroad and that until the last few years was ever increasing. But now the "Weary Willet' type, as depicted on the vauder wille stage and in the comic strips, is almost extinct. He was a strong in dividualist, responsible to no one but to himself and his inward urge to "go places and see things." The hobo, 1923 model, is still pretty much an individualist but he's also a member of the International Brotherhood Welfare association. He has organized and is trying to standardize his "profession." He is seeking a definite status in the modern order of things. He holds conventions, such as the one pictured above. He goes to "college" and, like as not, carries a "diploma." In addition to being organized and standardized, he is also becoming motorized. For the advent of

Streets in the bazaar districts of Asiatic cities are only 8 to 10 feet wide. The larger shops are 8 by 10 and the smaller ones 5 by 6 feet, with one side giving directly on the street. In each bazaar there is a khan for every 10 or 12 shops. These khans are two stories high with an open court in the center and rooms on the four sides, all opening into the new era. For 30 years Leon Ray Livingston carved or painted his "monicker" (name or distinctive sign) on railroad watering tanks, railroad bridges, freight sheds and other places near railroad shot only from the Canadian line to the Mexican border and from the Atlantic to the Pacific, but also from Alaska to Argentina. For more than a third of a century he rode on brake beams and the blind bagsage, and by keeping a careful account of his expenditures he was able to estimate that before he retified (as he did a few years ago to marry, settle down, write his adventures and do the work he is doing at present—trying to keep boys and girls from yielding to the call of the road he had traveled a total of 526,000 calles for the total sum of $7.611

During the course of his travels, this most-famous hobo knew another who later became famous as a writer—Jack London—and the life they lived was typical of the old-time hobo. Told in terms of the picturesque language of the hobo, they rode the "bumpers," "tops," "blinds" of trucks" of railroad trains until some "shack" (brakeman) or "con" (conductor) became "hostile" and threw them off of the "sidedoor pullman" (freight car). If they succeeded in eluding the "snakes" (switchmen) or "yard dicks" (railroad detectives), they made for the nearest "jungle" (place where tramps and hoboes congregated) where they were sure to find a varied collection of "fore-and-afters" (hoboes who walked from place to place). "bindle-stiffs" (a migratory worker in the true sense of the word who "glommed spuds, or did any other menial labor whenever he had the chance), "gay cats" (ordinary tramps and "stake men" (workers with some money). There, too would be certain to be be some "stew bums" (the tenderfoot of the profession) who listened eagerly as the elite of the brotherhood, the "comets," "perfesh" of "blowed-in-the-glass stiffs," told of their experiences in towns that were "jake" (not "hostile" to a "bo), where he could "batter" (beg) on the "main stem" (main street) for "light pleces" and b to sleep).

All of this talk would pass around the campfires in the "jungle" as the "stiffs" slpped their steaming "java" (coffee) made in one of the tin cans or wooden settees ranged in rows. Any visitor who sits down is first given a cupful of Turkish coffee and then a narghile or native pipe filled with Shriza tobacco. The charge for coffee and the use of the pipe is 2 cents. Here merchants gather to discuss trade bills.

for a pleasant hour of gossip with his fellows.

That was the hobo of the old days. James Eads How, the "Millionaire Hobo," is typical of the new. He is a grandson of James B. Eads, builder of the Eads bridge at St. Louis, and a son of the late James F. How, an official of the Wabash railroad. Brought up in an atmosphere of luxury and refinement, a college man, he became a hobo by choice, and for twenty years had devoted his time and money to the hoboes. He was the founder of the hobo college, which may be established almost anywhere. Usually it is a one-room affair and here the men eat, sleep and are taught. Teachers come from universities and colleges meanly to lecture on almost every subject under the sun. The "classes" are conducted through the winter, for, with the coming of good weather, the "students" take to the road again, some of them carrying their "diplomas," mimeographed on paper, certifying that they have attended a certain number of "classes."

The forerunner of the college and the new status of the hobo was the plomas," mimeographed on paper, certain number of "classes."

The forerunner of the college and the new status of the hobo was the organization movement which began in 1907. In the fall of that year there was much unemployment and about five hundred men were stranded in Tacoma, Wash. Jeff Davis, Dan O'Brien and a few other prominent members of the fraternity made an offer to the mayor. If an unused schoolhouse were given to them for shelter they would keep the hoboes from begging at back doors and out of mischief. The mayor agreed. Restaurants supplied left-over food and the hoboes spent a quiet winter there. There was held the first hobo convention and the organization idea came into being.

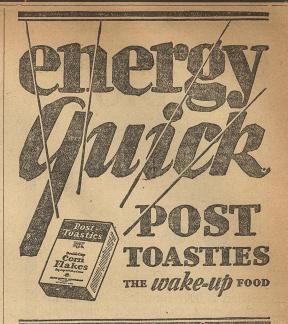

So now they have the International Brotherhood Welfare association, in which J. Eads How is a leading light, which holds conventions from time to time in various parts of the country at which economic problems are discussed and the purpose of which, in the words of How, are to "educate, organize, abolish poverty and squalof and unemployment everywhere." They have "advance agents" on the road who carry the gospel of the organization throughout the country and organize "locals." For the hobo. 1928 model, is no longer the picturesque Individual. He is fast becoming a standardized member of an organization.

PAUL IN A PAGAN COUNTRY

LESSON TEXT—Acts 14:1-28.
GOLDEN TEXT—I knew both how to be abased and I know how to abound. PRIMARY TOPIC—Paul and Barnabas Preach to the Heathen. JUNIOR TOPIC—Paul and Barnabas Preach to the Heathen.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Paul Unmoved by Flattery and Danser.

er. UNG PEUPLE AND ADULT TOP-the Heroism of Foreign Missions.

1. Paul and Barnabas Preaching at lconium (vv. 1-7).

1. Their manner of preaching (v. 1). This is suggested by the fittle word "so" in verse 1. They so spake that a great multitude believed They were true preachers. Only that which brings conviction of sin and induces decisions for Christ can be truly said to be preaching in the Biblical sense.

2. Their attitude towards opposition (v. 3).

This is suggested by the word "therefore." "Long time therefore they tarried." The opposition did, not prevent their preaching, but incited them to continue preaching. Christian workers should learn not to give up work because of opposition.

3. The Lord accompanied their preaching with miracles (v. 3). Since the opposition was so fierce, the Lord granted help which was needed.

4. The effect of their preaching (v. 4.)

The multitude of the city was di-the opposition was so needed.

4. The effect of their preaching (v. 4.)

The multitude of the city was divided. Where men faithfully preach the gospel there will be division. Such division comes frequently in the home fost as Christ predicted.

5. Paul and Barnabas assaulted tvv. 5-7).

The Jews and the Gentlles united in planning this assault. Being apprised of this plot, Paul and Barnabas fled to Lystra and Derbe, where they preached the gospel.

11. An Attempt to Worship Paul and Barnabas as Gods (vv. 8-18).

11. The occasion (vv. 8-10).

11. twas the healing of the lame man. God's gracious power shown in healing this lame man occasioned a new difficulty. The man was a confirmed eripple. He had never walked. On hearing Paul preach faith was born in his heart (Rom. 10:17). When Paul perceived that the cripple trusted Christ, with a loud voice that all could hear he bade the man to stand upright. The cure was instantaneous for he leaped up and walked (v. 10)

2. The method (vv. 11-13).

They called Barnabas Jupiter, and Paul Mercurius because he was the chief speaker. The priest of Jupiter brought oxen and garlands ready to offer sacrifice unto those men (v. 18).

3. Their efforts frustrated (vv. 14-18).

14-18).

This foolish act was happily averted by the tact of the apostles as exhibited in the address of the occaed by the control of the occasion.

(1) They denied that they were divine beings and declared against the worship of men of like passions with themselves. What awful folly to worship such beings when the infinite God, who created all things and is above all, spreading out His beneficent hands in blessing upon all, is seeking true worshipers!

(2) They directed them to turn away from these vain things unto the living God who made heaven and earth, and has left witness of Himself in that He has always done good, giving rain and fruitful season, filling their hearts with gladness.

self in that He has always done good. giving rain and fruitful season, filling their hearts with gladness.

III. The Stoning of Paul (vv. 19-22).

Wicked Jews from Antioch and Iconium pursued Paul with relentless hate to this place where they stirred up the very people who were willing to worship the apostless a little while before. This hatred took form in the stoning of Paul and dragging, blim out of the city for dead. These things are easy to talk about, but how awful they must be to experience. God rafsed him up, and with undawnted courage he pressed on with his duties as a missionary, hearing the good tidings to the lost. The church today meeds men with such zeal and courage, and such a passion for the souls of lost men that they will do as Paul did.

IV. The Organization of Churches
IV. The Organization of Churches
In the Field (vv. 23-28.)
Evangelization with Paul did not mean a hasty and superficial preaching of the gospel, but the establishment of a permanent work. Elders were appointed in every church. The work of the missionary is not done until self-governing and self-propagating churches are established on the field.

Fly to Him

If it be true that God is not only willing to befriend us, but is spoken of as touched with sympathy for our miseries, so as to be all the kinder to us the more we are miserable, what folly were it not to fly to him without delay.—John Calvin.

There is an added attraction given to the new autumn satins, in that they are so ingeniously fashioned.
There are such intriguing details observed in advance satin modes as

The blouse insets of the satin frock in the picture stress the luster side, while the front and back show the re-rerse crepe finish. The russet brown of the satin is complemented with the deep ecru of the lace collar and cuff set incorporated in the making of this frock. The pale beige double fox scarf adds the final touch of beauty to the color scheme. And that reminds—the importance of the separate fur neckplece is emphasized throughout the autumn mode.

Speaking of satin for evening wear, it is undoubtedly in the formal gown that the art of the conturier reaches the neights. Absolutely without other adornment the satin frock enthralis with the grace and beauty of its classic drapes.

Skeleton of Extinct Bird Found in Rocks

Bird Found in Rocks

The prehistoric rocks of Wyomlig have yielded up parts of the skeleton of a huge flightless bird that lived on this continent many hundreds of thousands of years ago. The fossils were found last summer, but their discovery was announced for the first time before the recent meeting of the American Philosophical society in Philadelphia by Prof. William J. Sinckiff of Princeton university.

The bird was similar to other giant extinct birds found on this continent, but constitutes a new genus, which has been named omorhamphus. It had no wings, and was a ground dweller like the modern ostrich. Instead of the specialized clublike toes of the ostrich, however, if had more primitive feet with short curved claws. In some respects it resembled the moa of New Zealand, which became extinct during the memory of the native tribes of those islands.—Kansas City Times.

There's a Difference

A young fellow who never has been known to go out of his way to take an airplane ride was told the other day that he was included in a "get off the earth" party to go up one afternoon with a visiting pilot at the Mars Hill airport.

"Well, I can't say that you seem particularly overwhelmed by the Invitation," one of his companions remarked.

WHY CYLINDER UNKEEP PAYS

The length of service and power of motor depends upon the mechanical condition of cylinders, pistons and rings. Pistons and rings cannot function right unless the cylinder walls are in mechanically accurate condition. It is wrong to install new rings and pistons without restoring cylinders to their original accuracy. When cylinder wear becomes too great for ring expansion to overcome, power is lost and raw gasoline (unburned gas) leaks down into the vital bearings of motor and rapid wear results. Worn cylinders pump oil, foul spark plugs. cause formation of carbon which scores cylinders.

Unkeep of cylinders pays in saving of fuel and longer motor life.

HAVE THEM STORMIZED.
