

ATTRACTIONS COMING TO LIBERTY IN NEXT SEVEN DAYS

Three big attractions within the next seven days await the cinema public here. Showing Friday and Saturday is "Blood Money", with George Bancroft, Frances Dee, Dick Chandler and others; Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, "Advice to the Lover", featuring Lee Tracy and a strong supporting cast; Wednesday and Thursday next week, "I Like It That Way", with Gloria Stuart, Roger Pryor, Marian Marsh and others. "Advice to the Lover" presents Lee Tracy again the role of newspaper reporter. He gets drunk and sleeps through an earthquake, missing the biggest story of the year. As a punishment he is rebuked by the City Father to the effect of conducting the "agonizing" lullaby. Tracy goes about his new duties in such a breezy manner that the department wins favor with readers and instead of being moved from the "desk" he is hereafter considered for nothing else. In the end he marries Sally Blane, with whom an intermittent affair is entwined throughout the story. "I Like It That Way," which comes to the Liberty Wednesday and Thursday of next week is said to be a rollicking, robust, comedy-drama. Three new song hits are

NEW YORK

I read all the signs in subways when I take an un-frequented route. No transportation system has ever succeeded in so thoroughly mixing my sense of directions—Three men in a row on the subway at 9 a. m. They're freshly shaved and obviously going to work. Yet all three of them nod stupidly in their sleep! Must have come from the end of the line an hour away in Brooklyn—Central Park was crowded with happy kids at play on Saturday. Too bad it's so far from many of the tenements. —That fountain in Rockefeller Center plaza—I don't like it. Why they did it in shiny gold is beyond me. But the green of the garden is a relief in that section of nothing but gaunt granite and concrete. Helen Hayes in Mary of Scotland—superb acting, but makes my history seem weaker than ever—First warm weather filled the highways to the beaches Sunday, and some optimists went swimming in the Atlantic. June third was my earliest last year and even then I came out numb—A woman caught between lines of traffic in the middle of Broadway. She's so the middle of Broadway. She's so frightened that she shakes her arms and stomps her feet like an angry little girl. I've felt that way, too. —The ex-Vice Consul wore a cutaway Sunday. I wonder if he rode the subway up to 68th Street. It's much faster than a cab. But you do—oh dear yes—so lose caste!

A New York attorney, Lloyd N. Scott, recently proposed an International Grand Jury composed of average citizens of every civilized nation. In his address at Hunter College in New York, Mr. Scott explained that such a body would express the majority will of citizens everywhere and would be empowered to subpoena officials of aggressor nations endangering world peace, and to make indictments to the World Court which would render judgments and designate the nations to enforce these. All one needs to be certain about the majority will is to look over a car full of New York subway riders. They may be brilliant or stupid, but put them into what they want. Without propaganda to run emotion to high pitch you know the answer will be, peace!

That part of New York humanity that calls itself Broadway leaves town about this time of year to try out its new scripts in rustic summer retreats. Of 143 plays tried out in Westport, Pasadena, Southampton, Provincetown and elsewhere, some 31 eventually arrived on Broadway. And of these 31 which appeared this season, only five were apparently successful each running for more than 100 performances in the forties" near Broadway.

If you have never been to New York, you may think, as I did, that a stretch of Broadway is just one theater after another. The fact is, however, that the great majority of Street to the way up to the Guild Theater in 52nd Street.

Summer—bus top—two elderly ladies from out of town identifying dozens of license plates from other states—What was that blue one?—"Pardon me, ladies, but that's from Connecticut."—And why the cheesecloth on the front of that car?—I was stumped on that one till I inquired: it's stuck on with drybacked water proof adhesive tape to keep bees and bugs and moths out of the radiator combs.

New York roof tops begins to approach the limits of nudist camps as warm weather sets in. And many a spy glass is put to unaccustomed use. Or perhaps I should say—usual use.

No Daniel And No Esther

EVERY ONE who has read the Old Testament at all knows about Daniel, who spent a night with the lions rather than give up his religion, and about Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego, his three sturdy associates. They were cast into a fiery furnace but walked comfortably upon the hot coals and came forth without even smelling of smoke. Similarly, we are well acquainted with Esther, the beautiful Jewess, who became queen and had the satisfaction of seeing Haman, the wicked prime minister, hung upon the high gallows which he had built for Mordecai the Jew.

These are two heroic figures, Daniel and Esther, and it is sad indeed to be told that the scientists, in digging around among the ruins of those far-away times, have been unable to find any trace of a prime minister named Daniel or a queen called Esther. We are forced reluctantly to conclude that the two books bearing these honored names are splendid pieces of Jewish propaganda, written by patriotic gentlemen who sought to uphold the spirits of their fellow-exiles and, in the case of Daniels, nerve them for one of the most heroic struggles in history—one that in spite of overwhelming odds succeeded.

As with Daniel, so with Esther. The author of the book that bears her name made her victory complete, as we shall have occasion to note more fully when we come back to her again. You will remember that her uncle Mordecai, a Jew, was prime minister.

And Mordecai went out from the presence of the king in royal apparel of blue and white, and with a great crown of gold, and with a garment of fine linen and purple and—The Jews had light, and gladness, and joy, and honour—And many of the people of the land became Jews; for the fear of the Jews came upon them.

But these verses which make so brave a showing for the Jews, are not an historic document; only a pious hope. The Jews in reading them, buckled their belts a little tighter and took courage.

In taking leave of the Old Testament we must stop to pay reverent tribute to two great truths which give eternal significance to these ancient books.

We have in the record of the division and downfall of the Jewish nation the first instance in human history where the god did not go with the land. In earlier days each tribe and nation had its own particular deity or set of deities, and when a man transferred from one country to another he, of course, changed gods. Naomi urged her two beautiful daughters-in-laws to go back to their own country after their husbands had died of starvation.

VACCINATION URGED DURING SUMMER FOR SCHOOL CHILDREN

Parents of children who will enter school this fall, are reminded by Dr. John W. Brown, State Health Officer, that vacations are a good time to have their children vaccinated against smallpox.

"The family physician is expected to vaccinate every baby and young child under his care," Dr. Brown said, "and the parents should see that it is done. The earlier it is attended to, the better it is for the child. Until the child enters school, the responsibility for having him or her protected against smallpox rests with the parents. After this it is shared by the teachers.

"Children, if vaccinated in the first year of life and again in the fifth or twelfth year, will be immune to the disease, practically for life. Single vaccinations usually last from seven to ten years. In part, this explains why most of the cases that have developed in the past few years are in adults who were vaccinated only once.

"Smallpox is a disease of ignorance and indifference. It attacks the rich and the poor, the healthy and the weak, with no discrimination; but it does not attack the immunized person who safeguards his health by taking advantage of modern preventive medicine.

"To stop vaccination would be relaxing our vigilance and the result would be rapid infection of non-immune people. There were 854 cases of the disease last year in Texas, every one of which could have been prevented by recent vaccination.

J. T. HAMMETT WINS MEDAL HONORS WITH 67 AT BIG SPRING

In qualifying rounds of the West Texas Golf Tournament at Big Spring last week, which attracted many of the state's best, J. T. Hammett, 17 year old Phil Pe Co Country Club ace, turned in a sub-par card of 67 for medal honors. Par is 71.

Hammett's triumph came after a bad start and in spite of a strong wind and intermittent rain. The Pioneer youth was forced to birdie the last three holes to win over Jimmie Phillips, of Ranger, who barely missed a put at the eighteenth green to tie for medal honors. Hammett's qualifying card follows:

Par out	434 544 345—36
Hammett out	445 543 343—35
Par in	444 334 454—35

Hammett was defeated Saturday by Charlie Qualls, golfing post-master from Post, Texas.

Sinclair raises 1,000,000 insects each year to test the kill-power of Sinclair P. D. insect spray

The Sinclair Fly Farm at East Chicago is one of the most unique institutions in the world—and practically the only one of its kind in America. For it is here that Sinclair, every year, raises more than a million flies to test the killing power of Sinclair P. D. insect spray. Every batch of Sinclair P. D. manufactured must kill 1,000 flies under conditions more difficult than those in your own home. Five-day-old flies are used in these tests—as five-day-old flies are harder to kill than any other household insect. If Sinclair P. D. can kill healthy Fly Farm flies it is sure to kill any fly, mosquito, bedbug, roach or silverfish in your home. Ask for Sinclair P. The Story So Far

Nancy Gordon, loving Page Romen, sells herself in marriage to Dr. Richard Morgan for fifteen thousand dollars, the amount her brother Roddy stole to give to a woman. Helena Haddon, sophisticated married woman, in love with Richard, does her best to make Nancy, although she knows nothing of the secret marriage. Mr. Gordon sells his home to repay Richard. Nancy permits Page to continue making love to her, but when she finds that he wants her to run away with him she recoils from him in horror, taking shelter in the hovel of a poor woman whose baby is dying. Nancy realizes that Richard is the best man after all, and sends for him. Although he saves the baby's life, he repudiates the help of his wife. Helena, finding that they have spent the night together in the miserable hovel, spreads the scandal about town. Angie Fuller, Roddy's childhood sweetheart, and niece of Major Lomax, tries to stop the scandal. Just then Roddy returns home—drunk. His mother believes him crazy and sends for Dr. Morgan, who takes Roddy home with him. Nancy goes to Richard's to see her brother. "Rod," she says, "have you been doing it again—stealing?"

Now Go On With The Story

"I can't tell you, Rod, don't ask me!" she begged.

"But you must tell me—Angie, what is it? Something's wrong! Tell me—you shall tell me!"

But she shook her head. "No, no! He dropped her hands and snatched up his hat. 'I'll find out!' he said.

She ran after him, sobbing. "It's nothing—it's nothing—don't ask, Roddy, don't ask."

Angie's tears could not avail now, she had loosed the whirlwind. Roddy was in no mood to reason with Angie's hints. Something was wrong.

He would go straight to Richard. Man to man they would settle it. He was grateful to him, he was leath to behave ill to him.

Mammy Polk was back again. "No Mist' Roddy, de doctah ain't in—be back d'rectly, walk in, dere's a lady in de office—waitin'!"

"A lady?" Roddy hesitated.

Roddy thought of it a moment. He did not mind Helena. If there was any talk of Richard, Helena would tell him. She would be jealous. Roddy had found out a good deal about jealous women!

Helena sat in a chair by the window.

"Why, Rod Gordon!" she exclaimed and gave him her hand.

Roddy swallowed hard. He drew a chair close to hers and sat down. "Mrs. Haddon, I think you'd know about any—any gossip, wouldn't you?"

Helena shrank a little. What in the world was coming?

"Oh, I don't know—what do you mean?"

"I've just been told—" he stammered, then he straightened himself ruthlessly to his question, "Is there any reason why I should have a quarrel with Richard Morgan—about my sister?"

"Don't ask me!" she gasped in sheer panic. She thought he knew that she had told.

But, to Rod, her confusion was only the damning proof of Morgan's guilt. There was something He became deadly quiet and calm.

"Mrs. Haddon we're old friends. You were always kind to me," he said, "I—as a friend, I ask you to answer me. I have a right to know what is said of my sister."

Helena tried to collect her thoughts. The boy was not angry with her. She saw that, then he did not know. And this would be a way to get at Nancy herself.

"There's some talk, yes," she admitted reluctantly. "A small place, Rod, and gossip. You mustn't be too angry with me if I say so—your sister has been indiscreet that's all."

But he was more of a man than she thought. "How indiscreet? My sister? Good God, if a man had said that! Who's the man? Richard Morgan?"

Helena nodded, tapping her foot on the floor.

"Mrs. Haddon, I wish you'd tell me," he pleaded quietly. "See, I'm not excited, I want to take care of my sister. What's the story? It's a lie, you know it, I know it, but tell me—what is it?"

She panted a little; she was frightened. He looked suddenly a man and she had thought him a mere boy.

"I—I can't tell you!" she said in a low voice, "I'm going—let me go, Roddy!"

But he had caught her by the wrist.

"You shall tell me!" he said between his teeth, "what is the—the damned lie they're telling?"

Shed ragged back from him, her green eyes suddenly blazing with fury. "I'll tell you—but don't blame me—let go my hand."

He let go as if she had struck him, but his eyes still burned into hers.

"Your sister went to Washington with Morgan. She stayed there a day and a night. A man who registered at the same hotel told it—they were there as man and wife. That's the story—now, are you satisfied?"

"I'm quite satisfied," he replied simply, thank you, Mrs. Haddon. Good night.

Mr. Gordon had spent his evening alone. His wife had given up early; a headache brought her the relief of going to bed. She was in terror of her husband's remarks about Roddy's return. Nancy was out on the piazza now, sitting on the steps. No one knew that she was there, and she did not speak when Roddy sprang up the steps and bounded into the house. He did not see her at all.

A moment later Mr. Gordon looked up into the boy's face.

"By gum!" he ejaculated involuntarily, "what's wrong? Drunk again, sir?"

Roddy laid his hand heavily on the back of the nearest chair and straightened himself.

"Father, do you happen to know about the scandal—the story they're telling here about Nancy Virginia?"

Mr. Gordon sat up straight. "Make yourself plain, sir."

"Did Nancy ever go to Washington without you—or mother?"

Mr. Gordon's face changed. "She did."

Roddy made an inarticulate sound in his throat, his hands clenching on the chair back.

"When?"

"In the Spring—after your first escapade." Mr. Gordon was staring hard at him, his anger rising.

"They say she went with Richard Morgan and stayed there twenty-four hours. They—" Roddy's eyes blazed—"that fellow—Morgan—registered them as man and wife."

To his amazement, his father said nothing. He merely nodded his head slowly, his face stern.

"Do you hear me?" Roddy shouted, "do you take it in? Nancy—Nancy Virginia and Dick Morgan is man and wife. Some one saw it, read the register!"

Mr. Gordon regarded him sternly, something like grim humor showing in his eyes. The young fool did not know what a sacrifice he girl had made for him. Then he remembered the intolerable against his poor girl. He turned on his son angrily.

"They're married," he said shortly.

"Married?"

Roddy's jaw dropped, he stared at his father like a zany.

There was a long moment of silence. In it Mr. Gordon's anger gathered force. And who had dared to start it? Roddy getting his breath, broke out again.

"Married? Why didn't I know? Why didn't you tell me before—tell other people?"

Mr. Gordon gave him an exasperated glance. "You're not the one to find fault," he replied dryly, "they're married—secretly."

Secretly? The word was like a torch of flame, it set Roddy on fire.

"Why?" he demanded fiercely, "is that fellow ashamed of my sister?"

His father said nothing.

"Do you hear me?" Roddy struggled with anger. "My sister! he thought to walk up and down. He thought of the family honor. His father must be breaking down in a premature dotage! What else could it mean. Did Richard know it? His eyes shot fire.

"I know," he said chokingly, "you", he said chokingly, "you've told Morgan about me—it's because she's my sister! Nancy Virginia scorned for me—my God, I'll—I'll —he seemed to strangle again. He ran out of the room and out of the house.

Bare-headed and disheveled, he ran to the gate. He never once looked back. He did not hear the half-smothered cry that pursued He vaulted the gate and was gone.

But Nancy stood there, clasping her cold hands against her breast.

"Oh, what shall I do?" she sobbed to herself softly. She had heard almost all that Roddy had shouted at his father, "What can I do?"

A sharp sound startled Morgan; some one had run up the front steps.

He rose slowly to his feet, went to the door. On the steps stood Rod Gordon.

"What's wrong, Roddy? Any one ill?"

"No one's ill. I've got to see you, that's all!" Roddy's voice was utterly changed.

Richard looked at him sharply. Had he been drinking again?

"Come in, he said quietly, "go into the office."

Roddy stopped short by the table and faced him, folding his arms on his breast.

"I've come—" he got that far and seemed to be choking. The boy in Roddy had leaped up again. He was a boy in his passion of blind rage.

"I've come to demand an explanation," he panted. "I—father just told me—you've married my sister.

"Sit down, said Richard quietly, "let us talk it over."

"Talk it over? Hell!" Roddy struck his hand on the table with such force that every article on it crashed and spun around. "You've married my sister and let people talk about her. Do you harpen to know what they say of it—of her?"

Richard's face whitened to the lips. "I know nothing. Who dares to say anything about her? Or about me?"

Roddy laughed wildly. "Dares? When a man hides his marriage you know what they say. They know people talk, don't they. I'll tell nothing of this marriage—this secret marriage of yours, you—you coward! They say she's your" he struggled again,— your mistress, dam' you!"

Richard rose to his feet.

"Who says it?" he demanded hoarsely, "who told you that?"

"The whole town says it!" shouted Roddy, "it's seething like a caldron. Lomax knows it, Haddon knows it, everybody knows it! You took her to Washington and married her secretly and ruined her good name!"

"If you were not a boy and her brother," said Richard, "I'd wring your neck!"

"Wring my neck, would you? You haven't got the courage!" Roddy screamed, flinging out his arms.

"Do you think I don't know what ails you? Father told you I was a thief—you're ashamed to say you married my sister—my sister, Nancy Virginia Gordon! She's an angel and you're a devil you're a black-hearted, cowardly scoundrel! You'll fight me, or, by God, I'll call you a coward on every street corner in the town! I'll publish you—you can't hide any longer behind my sister. I—" he stopped again, and suddenly drawing himself to his full height, spoke with a new tragic dignity. "I challenge you, Richard Morgan, to defend yourself or die in your tracks—like a dam' coward

Richard had scarcely heard him. "Yes, I'll fight you," he said dryly. "I admit you've a right to demand it."

"Come out now—the moon's like day—I'll get a gun—we can fight it out now. I can't wait, I won't wait!"

"Now? Out there a grim smile twisted Richard's lips. "If one of us dies out there tonight it would be called plain murder. That won't do, Roddy, we must keep to the code. Get a second, then I'm ready any time."

"I wouldn't care a copper what they called it," Roddy snapped, "but since you're particular—oh, the code, of course! 'I'll get a second, you can get yours—over the phone. I give you the choice of weapons, Dr. Morgan."

Richard bowed his head gravely. "Pistols. Mine's here on my desk, but you can bring two. I'll be waiting for you when you come back. Where is it to be?"

"Out there!" Roddy pointed at the moonlit lawn.

"I understand," Richard answered grimly, and he opened a long window on the moonlit piazza, "you can go this way. I'll wait."

Home Town Loyalty

An advertisement of a Baird baker in last week's issue of the Baird Star said, "Last week we talked to a farmer living West of Cross Plains. The conversation drifted to bread. He said this to us: "That when he purchased bread he always made certain it was baked by his home town bakery. He considered the Baker of his town was working at all times in an effort to better the conditions under which both of them lived in their community. He reasoned that he owed support to the local enterprise, and not to someone who would close up his neighbors "business if possible."

Frankly, the Review has no idea who the farmer mentioned in the Baird Star might be. But if we did, it would be a pleasure to shake his hand and say "O! man we agree with you in the entirety of your statement, and it only through cooperation between the consumer and distributor and visa versa that any locality may enjoy consistent growth and a small measure of prosperity.

The statement of the Cross Plains farmer to the Baird baker exemplifies the reason why Cross Plains and this section continues to "get along", despite economical adversities and financial panics. Cross Plains trade territory as a whole is made up of people, who possess a neighborly feeling toward their fellowman. The farmer is anxious to see his merchant friend succeed in business and the merchant has a mutual feeling toward the farmer.

Now merchants, you have been given the assurance that farmers are behind you. It is your turn to reciprocate. Let's purchase home grown products—vegetable or what ever happens to be in season—everytime in preference to shipped in commodities. Such cooperation will make Cross Plains even more envied by adjacent towns. It will propell the wheels of industry a little faster.

Fewer Failures Of Banks

No bank failures have occurred in the United States, within the past five months.

Covering a period of the past ten years, the average bank failures, for the first five months of each year, have been about 393.

Bank failures have been the bane of business and the night mare of those who possessed cash in hand.

Even then, with banks going broke all over the country, the loss to depositors was far less than the loss to those, who sought places other than banks, to store their cash.

Now, with banks made safe to the depositors, no longer does there exist any good reason why, all surplus money should be kept any where, except in the banks.

Under the present guarantee of bank deposits, the sock, mattress and tin can banking places, will undoubtedly become very few, but those few, will continue to be easily found and easily robbed.

Not only is money safer from theft in the bank, than in any other hiding place we can devise but money, in a bank contributes towards the prosperity of the community in which the depositor lives.

People who hide their surplus cash, in various places, about the home, or about their persons are only adding themselves, by thinking they are the only persons that know. Scarcely can you scan the pages of papers without reading about some old man or some old lady, being tortured, by some dirty low down thief, until they tell where their life savings are concealed, and many times these victims are murdered, after they have been forced to give up the little money they possess, for this class of thief, is usually a dweller in the community, and some one, whom the victims might recognize and identify, and these rascals have learned that dead men and dead women tell "no tales."

The men who hide their money or carry it upon their persons are always known, and their hidden funds usually represent their life's preparation, for old age and funeral expenses, and they become easy marks for the dirtiest group of thieves that have ever infested the earth, and the only way to drive them out of business is to leave the cash you possess with your banker, where it will be safe. Even though the banker might be robbed your money will still be safe, for all good bankers have always carried insurance, and even the bad banker, if any there be, must, under the direction of the National government protect your deposit by insurance and in addition to such insurance, against robbery, the federal government, under the "new deal" has set up a great guarantee fund, to make doubly safe the money deposited in banks.

In the past there were grounds for uneasiness, on the part of those who placed their money in banks, but this "New Deal" makes safe the depositors.

VICTIMS

As time goes on, I become more and more impressed with the devastating effects on the health of the people by this so-called "depression." To be candid, I have never witnessed anything like it. Literally thousands of mature men and women are breaking down in their nervous systems—the break-down striking at the very foundation of the physical structure, sweeping the victims from the field of combat—the zone of making a living. Never, in my existence have I seen anything more devastating.

I have urged my patients, "don't worry; there is nothing worth so much to the individual as his LIFE. And, life can be made little else than constant torture—by worry! Yes, dear reader, we family doctors giving our life energies to our patients—we advise people not to worry—only to catch ourselves doing the very same thing.

Symptoms of impending break: General weakness in hands and legs. There may be numbness and tingling, with very little actual pain. Just a feebleness—feeling of incapacity, "unequal to the day's task." When these symptoms are felt, REST at whatever cost.

All sorts of surface sensations may be noticed; coldness of the hands and feet is common. I have observed "nervous chills," the sort not followed by noticeable fever. The patient himself remarks that "he can't stand anything any more." Some imagine that they have influenza, but the absence of cough and marked nasal symptoms prove no infection. There may be loss of appetite, languor, and above all, marked discouragement with daily affairs; the feeling that it isn't any use to try to venture further.

Mental break down—nothing strikes me with more feeling of dread. Dethronement of reason! To all my readers, REST—before too late.

Notes From COUNTY AGENT'S OFFICE

To Cotton Contract Signers Every man who signed a Cotton Reduction Contract has been sent the original copy for his own record. Study it carefully. It tells the number of acres that are rented to the government, the number of acres that may be planted, the yield allowed and on the front pages are the things the signer agreed to do. Study carefully the nine provisions contained on pages 1 and 2. In order that no man may have cause to regret, we hope the rules and regulations so contained in this contract will not be violated. This contract was made voluntarily by the producer but the government expects its terms to be carried out in all particulars. Any questions, not clear to any producer, will be explained by dropping a letter to the office of the County Agent.

Record Books We have now a sufficient supply of Farm Record Books for every Contract signer, whether he be Corn-Hog, Cotton, or Wheat. Call and get your copy and keep an accurate record for the year 1934. They are furnished free by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration and distributed through the office of the County Agent. Rural Work Center How Texas farm communities can get financial assistance to build, equip and develop rural centers for carrying on small farm and home manufactures is outlined in a circular just issued by the Texas A&M College Extension Service. It is known as C-101, is entitled "Rural Work Centers," and is available on application to the county farm demonstration agents. Advanced by extension director O. B. Martin in response to a call for sound plans for permanent rehabilitation, the rural work center idea has been adopted by the Texas Relief Commission as the mainstay of the Texas program. It is in charge of J. E. Stanford, director of rural rehabilitation, Austin.

The object of the rural work center is to furnish a means for worthy families on relief rolls, one or more of whose members are mechanically skilled, to make themselves at least partially self-supporting from small manufactures which may be exchanged or sold locally. This would supplement the usual agricultural living-at-home enterprise. In addition the work centers and their equipment will be permanent in the community and available to all families.

To secure assistance in building a rural work center a community must first show that it can supply at least 10 suitable vacant houses to be made habitable for relief roll families by the labor of the occupants. The Texas Relief Commission will pay for the labor and a limited amount of materials for soft unripened labor and some material-repairing these houses. It can also aid for new construction for the use of relief roll families. The community will have some choice in the families which are to make their homes in the community. The community must also donate the land for the center, and furnish half the material and equipment for it. A plan for maintenance and use of the work center should be made to show that facilities requested will be ample for local desirable to make a list of locally needed commodities. Applications for rural work centers should be made to county relief administrator, E. E. Cook, Baird, Texas.

RODE HORSEBACK 500 MILES TO BE AT HIS SISTER'S BEDSIDE

(Continued from page 1) out for Buffalo Gap. Another interesting experience from his colorful career—most of which has been astride a saddle—is related in his own words as follows "In 1914, one day I was enroute from Brenham to Ledbetter with two of my favorite ponies, Johnnie and Charlie. I was riding Johnnie and leading Charlie. Some two and a half miles North of Carmine, on the Houston and Texas Central railroad, I met Charlie Gillespie. He was foreman, Section seven, and was trying to push one those motor cars down the track to where his men were at work. In some unaccountable way the motor started and the car got away from Gillespie. It went through his bunch of men who tried to board it, but failed. He called to me to ditch it by throwing a tie across the track. The track was fenced, and I had no chance. In fact I did not have to "hesitate". It was all my horse could do to outrun the car, and I saw my only chance was to beat the car to Carmine and rope it. There was no way of getting close to the track on account of the high fence. I got to Carmine in time to jump off my horse and throw a nearby plank across the track and ditch it directly in front of the depot. It was a test of horseflesh against gasoline, in which the horse won out. This little pony was until a few years ago playing polo in New York."

It was the same Hiram G. Craig, who rode his horse in the direction of Cross Plains to be at the bedside of his dying sister, that won first prize for the quickest time over the pony express route from Houston to San Antonio at the opening of the old Trail Drivers Association a number of years ago. What Mr. Craig thinks of the old time cowman are told in his well worded sentence which follows. "I candidly believe them to be among the best people on earth, they do not all profess to be Christians but they are a noble and big hearted set of men that you can rely upon when you, or your country, gets into trouble: They will divide their last dollar and fight their weight in wildcats for a friend."

"I attribute the hale and heartiness which I enjoy at my age, to a life in the open and being used to work."

The T&P man, however, was taken to a Ranger hospital and Mr. Wood received medical treatment in Cross Plains.

Dr. John Rumph, who attended the injured, said her arm was badly lacerated and bruised. She had also sustained back and side injuries. Her arm was believed to be in a critical condition. Mrs. Waid left Fort Worth Monday morning, where she had been visiting at the home of Mrs. Earl Day, at 715 West Bellnap, Street. She was enroute to the home of a Mrs. Tucker, two miles South of Coleman, where she planned to visit a few days before going on to Paintrock, where she was previously employed and was to begin work again soon.

Rising Star school board is announcing the employment of Johnnie Gregg as football coach for the approaching season.

The scribbler of this department "has been down the line" with the new R. S. mentor and knows him to be as fine a natural athlete as ever entered competition. He is one of the few—if not the only—man ever to win four consecutive berths on the all Texas conference basketball team. In football his sensational around end and oft-tackle spurts gave color to many otherwise dull conflicts. In tennis, track baseball, swimming, or golf, he excels. We have yet to see the athletic contest that he cannot play as a sportsman and as a winner.

Living in the same house with Johnnie in college days we shared his success and sorrows. Loaned him our Sunday suit to court the present Mrs. Gregg, and borrowed his on occasions of similar significance. Four years ago, we closed up shop and drove across the state to serve as best man in his wedding. Yes, we have "gone down the line" with Johnnie, but it seems that the end of our tranquility has arrived. For in athletic contests, the colors of Rising Star always have the same effect upon us as a scarlet flag waved at a bull.

But in all sincerity, here's congratulations to Rising Star upon the selection of Gregg as high school athletic mentor. He and his Mrs. (Delta) are a fine little pair.

Firestone Tires have been on the winning cars in the gruelling Indianapolis 500-Mile Race FOR 15 CONSECUTIVE YEARS

EVERY winner in the 500-Mile Indianapolis Race—the most gruelling tire test in the world—drove to victory on Firestone High Speed Tires. Race drivers know that heat generated by friction inside the cotton cords is the greatest enemy of tire life. These men will not risk their lives on any but Firestone Tires, because they know the high stretch cords in every Firestone Tire are protected by the Firestone patented process of Gum-Dipping. Gum-Dipping soaks the high stretch cords in liquid rubber and saturates and coats the millions of fibers inside the cords, counteracting destructive friction and heat. It provides greater adhesion between the plies of the tire, and between the Gum-Dipped cord body and the tread.

Firestone chemists and engineers kept pace with new car developments by building stronger, safer tires to meet the exacting demands. Drive in today and equip your car with new Firestone High Speed Tires for 1934, with deeper, thicker, flatter, and wider non-skid tread, more and tougher rubber, more traction, giving you more than 50% longer non-skid mileage. Remember, in Firestone High Speed Tires there is Greater Strength—Greater Safety— and Greater Blowout Protection than in any tire made.

THE ADHESION TEST Note how the rubber in a Firestone Tire clings to the high stretch Gum-Dipped cords. This greater adhesion and strength is made possible by the Firestone patented process of Gum-Dipping. Note how the rubber in an ordinary tire pulls away from the cords that have not been soaked and insulated with rubber. This causes friction and heat within the cords, resulting in separation.

COME IN AND MAKE THIS TEST FOR YOURSELF THE NEW Firestone AIR BALLOON FOR 1934 The new Firestone Air Balloon for 1934 embodies all the improvements in the new Firestone High Speed Tire. The lower air pressure provides maximum traction and riding comfort. Gum-Dipping safety-locks the cords, providing 30 to 40% greater deflection and blowout protection. Get 1935 low-slung style by equipping your car today with these new tires and wheels in colors to match your car.
