(SERVING THE LARGEST SHALLOW OIL FIELD ON EARTH)

Without offence to friends or foes we sketch Cross Plains exactly as it goes.

VOL. XXII 8 PAGES THIS WEEK CROSS PLAINS, TEXAS, "When The One Great Scorer Comes To Write Against Your Name He Writes Not If You Won Or Lost But How You Played The Game" FRIDAY, APRIL 20, 1934 5c PER COPY No. 63

BIG VOTE IS EXPECTED SATURDAY

HOME TOWN GOSSIP

The scribbler of these lines is seriously troubled over why Broad Bond no longer carries the umbrella that once so characterized his person. During all of the recent rains he has not appeared in public one time with his artificial shelter.

Explanations are in order, what's yours?

A Gustine resident tells a story on George Neel that really makes our sides crack. It goes like this.

Several years ago—while Mr. Neel was manager of Higginbothams at Gustine—a farmer drove into town one morning in a high trot. He stopped his team directly in front of Higginbotham's store, alighted and immediately began to do a jig dance, much to the amusement of towns people. "I'm a happy man", he shouted with hilarious glee.

After several queries as to the reason for his happiness the farmer finally related. He had had a dream the night before that he had died and gone to Heaven. At the gate St. Peter stopped him and asked, "What's your name?"

"Eric Dent", was the reply.

"Where did you live?" was the Saint's next query.

"Gustine, Texas"

"Where did you trade", the guardian of the gate questioned further as if he intended to consult the reference.

"With George Neel at Higginbotham's", came the farmer's prompt reply.

"Enter my friend, you've had enough of Hell", Saint Peter said and welcomed the journeyer to the pearly city.

You can now watch for Cecil A. Lotief to pass out the campaign cigars. Ed Curry, Mayor of Pioneer, has notified the Gossiper that he will definitely make the legislative race.

Cross Plains high school seniors receive our honorable mention for the most unusual stunt of the century. On their graduation invitations soon to go out, there is this line, "No Presents Accepted".

Well, tie my tie. I don't blame Mrs. Warren Spencer (nee Irene Clifton) for stopping after taking the Mrs. degree.

A party enroute from San Antonio to Cross Plains the past week end to visit friends here, spent most of their time on the 'high seas' near Brady. To prevent a similar occurrence happening to any of our constituents we offer this warning: anytime it thunders in McCulloch County you can look for a flood near the county capitol.

The pursuits of a country newspaper editor carried us the past week into the school-room of Professor J. S. Varner, at Cottonwood. The little visit at Callahan's oldest school was so invigorating, we deem it worthy of space in this august chronicle of the news.

During our stay in the Cottonwood school-room Prof. Varner was conducting a class in Physiology. His knack in directing questions—possibly whetted by decades of class-room experience—is really good. Prof. Varner made it a point to see that every student had a part in the recitation, and his simplicity in propounding questions really made us ashamed that we could not analyze the blood, which his students did so efficiently.

Because of his long experience as a teacher, a quarter of a century of which has been at Cottonwood, we nominate Prof. Varner as the dean of Callahan county school teachers.

A SERIOUS THOUGHT

Nothing builds a community more substantially than constructive individualism on the part of merchants and citizens as a whole.

New Test Revives Oil Enthusiasm

SCHAFFNER WELL IS STANDING 1200 FEET IN CRUDE THURSDAY

Oil interest and enthusiasm is running high here this week as a result of the discovery of crude by E. N. Schaffner et al in the test on the Mary Bowden tract, two miles East of Byrd's store. The well was standing 1,200 feet in oil last night.

Pay was encountered late last week at a depth of 2,400 feet in the Ranger line. Drilling was immediately abandoned as soon as the lime was found. At present a crew of men is setting pipe and cleaning up preparatory to 'touching' the pay again.

Several oil men in the lobby of the Citizens State Bank Thursday morning told a representative of the Review that they held high hopes for Schaffner et al test and that they frankly believed it would create a revival in oil activities throughout this section.

Oil men are also keeping an attentive eye on the Williams tract Southeast of Cross Cut, where Watts Brothers are beginning a cable tool test just 100 feet offsetting the rotary test, which was abandoned due to the inefficiency of the rotary tools in making depth. The contract to drill the test, which is expected to go to the Cross Cut sand and possibly the Elemburger if oil is not discovered in paying quantities at the shallower depth, has been awarded to Bond and Jones Cross Plains contractors.

Another test is now drilling on the Dick Pentecost tract, two miles Southwest of Cross Cut, by the Doll Bailey et al interests. The Review learned Thursday morning that this well is now at a depth of approximately 1,100 feet. The objective, Cross Cut sand—at 1,400 feet—is expected to be reached early next week.

Ted R. Smith, manager of the Oil Well Supply Company here, told the Review editor in a conversation this week that he had noticed a decided increase in oil interest and activities here the past few weeks and that he had reason to believe that the industry would resume old time proportions within a short time.

Local oil is now bringing $1.03 per barrel.

VERNON R. KING IS CANDIDATE FOR TAX ASSESSOR COLLECTOR

Vernon R. King, of Baird, announces this week for the office of Tax Collector and Assessor of Callahan County, subject to the action of voters at the democratic primary to be held July 28. His official 'letter' appears on another page of today's Review.

Mr. King is at present serving his first term as Tax Assessor of this county.

In making his announcement for the newly consolidated office, Mr. King stated in regard to his candidacy, "I have carefully considered the increased responsibility in the consolidation of the Tax Assessor and Tax Collectors offices, and should I be the choice of the people of the county for this office, I feel qualified to render the service you expect, in an efficient and courteous manner, and I trust that you will carefully consider my qualifications and if you deem me worthy of this responsible position."

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Lowe, Mrs. C. R. Cook and Mrs. Ben Garner were in Baird Monday afternoon.

Porter J. Davis has been attending federal court in Abilene all this week.

Local Woman Says Look Out For War, Oddity Is Warning

"Look out for war", cautions Mrs. Anna Travis.

Two months before America's entrance into the World War, Mrs. Travis states, she found a gourd shaped hen egg in a nest, and when the specimen was closely examined there was found a coloring in the shell spelling the word W A R.

Mrs. Travis found another egg of the same shape in a hen nest the past week—it is on display in the Review office—but as yet it has not aged enough for the "message in the shell" to be visible, she opines.

Mercy me, have the chickens taken up sooth-saying.

FATHER OF FORMER LOCAL WOMAN LAID TO REST AT BAIRD

An attack of pneumonia with which he was stricken less than a week ago proved fatal to B. F. Morrison, long time resident of Callahan County and father of Mrs. C. I. Powell formerly of Cross Plains, at his home in Abilene Sunday, shortly before noon.

Funeral service was held from the Baptist church, at Baird, Monday afternoon, with pastor Rev. Joe R. Mayes, officiating. Interment was made in the Ross cemetery at Baird.

Mr. Morrison was born in Kansas but spent most of his 60 years in Callahan County, where he moved with his parents, when a child. He was an employee of the Texas and Pacific railroad at Baird, until several years ago, when he became associated with the West Texas Utilities Company, at Abilene.

Surviving are his wife, one son, Garland Morrison of Abilene, three daughters, Mrs. C. I. Powell, of Brownwood; Mrs. J. T. Asbury, of Baird; Mrs. Neal McDowell, of Palestine and Miss Lillie Morrison, of Baird. All were present at the funeral Monday afternoon.

BEGINNING SUNDAY CROSS PLAINS WILL HAVE SUNDAY SHOWS

Cross Plains will have its first Sabbath picture show in years Sunday afternoon, when the Liberty theater here, opens at one-thirty for the showing of "Little Women", featuring Katherine Hepburn, Joan Bennett, Frances Dee and Edna Mae Oliver.

The picture highly characteristic of every day life has been stupendously received in the nation's larger cities and is claimed in theater circles to be a banner box office attraction. It will be shown here at no advance in prices, according to W. A. Beavers, manager of the Liberty.

"The matter of Sunday pictures was discussed by the management of the Liberty with city councilmen, ministers and interested individuals and no serious opposition was encountered, and on the other hand we have been encouraged to begin Sunday shows by scores of our patrons", Mr. Beavers said in an interview with the Review.

Mrs. Sam Long, Mrs. Frank McGary, Mrs. Lois Davidson and Mrs. Chase Adams visited in Cisco Saturday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Wright had as their guests the past week end their son and his wife, of San Antonio.

Miss Bill Shults of Rising Star visited in Cross Plains Wednesday.

E. D. CURRY TROWS SOMBRERO IN RING FOR REPRESENTATIVE

E. M. (Ed) Curry, of Pioneer and Cross Plains, files official announcement with the Review this week of his candidacy for the office of State Representative from the 107th flatorial district, subject to the action of the democratic primaries to be held July 28.

Mr. Curry is well known throughout this section having been a prominent oil man throughout this area for a number of years. He is at present President of the school board of Pioneer Independent School District, which position he has held for several terms.

In making his announcement for the place of State Representative, Mr. Curry told the Review that he had not yet completed his 'formal letter to voters' but that same would be drafted within the next few days and published in an early issue of the Review.

"I plan to make an extensive campaign of the entire district—Eastland and Callahan counties—and during the next few months hope to contact every voter and citizen", Mr. Curry stated in the interview with the Review editor early Thursday morning.

FOOTBALL SCHEDULE IS MADE WEDNESDAY FOR COMING SEASON

At a meeting of the executive committee of class B football district number 14 at the Laguna Hotel in Cisco Wednesday night, schedules for the 1934 conference play were formulated. Four new schools signified their intentions of joining the circuit and will probably be worked into the playing schedule at a later date, the Review was told by Nat Williams, chairman of the executive committee. The new teams would be Olden, Gorman, Parks and May. All teams represented in the conference last season have remained in the loop.

The scheduled arranged Wednesday night will send the championship Cross Plains high school Buffaloes into their first conference game at Moran, October 12. The following two weeks Cross Plains is slated to meet Baird and Pioneer, in the order named, both games to be played away.

The last five games for Coach Price McQueen's thundering herd, which will be Putnam, Clyde, Albany, Caddo and Rising Star, in order named, will be played on the Cross Plains high school gridiron.

The complete schedule for all teams in the district will appear in next week's issue of the Review.

WILSON CAFE WILL MOVE 1 DOOR NORTH

Carpenters were at work in the Curtis building, adjoining the Citizens State Bank on the South, Thursday morning remodeling and arranging it for Wilson's Cafe, which will move into the new location shortly after the first of the month.

The cafe will occupy the entire building, giving more room and facilities to accommodate more people.

Mrs. B. Marshall and Mrs. Leona Cott, of Clyde, visited their daughter and sister, Mrs. W. J. Gray here Sunday.

Mrs. Edwin Baum Jr., and Mrs. Stanley Clark were Brownwood visitors yesterday.

See! We Told You So; Never Question Review's Integrity

Mrs. Fonia Worthy comes to the assistance of the Review in proving an oddity printed in the Gossip column two weeks ago, in which it was stated that a pigeon belonging to E. N. Schaffner, Jr. had hatched chicken eggs.

Mrs. Worthy says that it would be no trouble at all for a pigeon to get the hen egg into her nest in a tree. "In fact I have a hen that is so ambitious she even laid a setting of eggs in the forks of a tree and then began to set on them there", Mrs. Worthy said. "The hen's efforts were in vain, however, for one by one the eggs rolled out to the ground and before time for them to hatch all the hen had left was the experience", she continued.

PUTNAM CONFEDERATE VETERAN IS LAID TO LAST REST AT CISCO

L. B. Green, Confederate war veteran of Putnam who celebrated his ninetieth birthday February 16, died at the home of his nephew in Fort Worth after a short illness Tuesday. Interment was made in the Oakwood cemetery, at Cisco.

Mr. Green was born February 16, 1844, in Kingston, East Tennessee. When 18 years of age, in 1862, he joined the 26th Tennessee infantry of the Confederate army. He rendered his services for three years under Generals Bragg, Johnson and Hood. During this period he was neither wounded nor sick. The infantry surrendered in the last battle in 1865 under Joe Johnson. Mr. Green was able bodied until almost the end. Mrs. L. B. Green, 75, recently suffered a broken leg and is now resting in a hospital at Cisco. Mr. Green seemed unable to bear the shock. He is survived by one daughter, and his nephew Homer B. Green of Fort Worth, besides his widow.

RAINS CONTINUE TO DRENCH THIS AREA

Spring rains continue to drench this section. Precipitations have fallen every day this week. Moisture for the first 20 days of April has been more than seven inches, the Review was told yesterday by citizens, who have gauged the recent rains.

Soil is said by farmers to be amply supplied with moisture to make a bumper grain crop.

PENTECOSTAL MEETING IS IN PROGRESS NOW

Evangelist Lee Roy Richardson, Pentecostal minister, of San Antonio, began a revival meeting in the Electric theater building here Monday night. Services are being held each evening, beginning at seven thirty. "We invite the entire public, whether believers in our doctrine or not, to attend any or all of the services," he said.

At an eight week revival which closed at Pioneer Monday night, Evangelist Richardson had 65 souls 'filled with the holy spirit'.

Messages this week will deal with the end of time, the Review was informed.

Gene Adams attended business in Ballinger Thursday.

AS CITIZENS GO TO POLLS TO SETTLE 3.2 ISSUE FOR CALLAHAN

A record vote is anticipated by political leaders for Saturday, as citizens go to the polls to express their desire in regard to local option of 3.2 percent beer for Callahan County. Records from the Tax Collector's office show this county to have 2,664 paid poll taxes.

In Cross Plains the balloting will be held in the Anderson Chevrolet building, with Taylor Bond serving as election judge. Clerks for the election will be the same as served in the last general election the Review was told by County Judge J. H. Carpenter.

The last vote on the 3.2 question, which was held in August of 1933 revealed the sentiment to be closely divided, with the drys winning by a margin of 52 votes. Since then the number of poll taxes has increased several hundred and voters are contending that the 'new' voters are in favor of 3.2 and thereby they will be victorious at the ballot box Saturday.

Drys have made a concentrated effort the past week to hold their margin and declare that the verdict will be unchanged when the votes are counted Saturday night.

Unusual interest and extensive effort on the part of both sides to get citizens to be sure to vote, is expected to result in a record vote, according to political leaders of the various Callahan County voting precincts.

Arrangements were underway to receive the results of the election in Cross Plains Saturday night. The Review could obtain no definite information in regard to this, however, at press time Thursday.

"IT'S TIME TO PAY DUES TO CEMETERY" HEMPHILL REMINDS

"Time has arrived for collection of semi-annual dues from members and friends of the Cross Plains Cemetery Association", said C. F. Hemphill, secretary of the organization, in a statement to the Review yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Hemphill's appeal to members of the association follows: "Please be ready to pay our collectors—or better still, leave your dollar at the Citizens State Bank or hand it to a director of the association. This is a noble cause. Let us maintain a beautiful cemetery. We thank each of you for your favors and solicit your continued help and cooperation".

Solomon's Shrewd Proverbs

MOST of the Proverbs by Solomon could hardly be called religious. They are the shrewd guide-posts to worldly wisdom, by which a man may make his way through life with most profit to himself and least discomfort to other people:

The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge; but fools despise wisdom and instruction.

Reprove not a scorner, lest he hate thee: rebuke a wise man, and he will love thee.

A false balance is abomination to the Lord: but a just weight is his delight.

As a jewel of gold in a swine's snout, so is a fair woman is without discretion.

The simple believeth every word: but the prudent man looketh well to his going.

Better is a dinner of herbs where love is, than a stalled ox and hatred therewith.

He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty; and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city.

Many of the phrases and sentences have entered into our common talk. Everybody knows them, but not everybody knows where they originated.

Go to the ant thou sluggard; consider her ways, and be wise.

Hope deferred maketh the heart sick.

A soft answer turneth away wrath; but grievous words stir up anger.

Where there is no vision, the people perish.

He that spareth his rod hateth his son.

A man that hath friends must shew himself friendly.

Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging; and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise.

A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches.

Some of the wisest and most memorable observations are set forth in poetic guise, which adds to their impressiveness.

There be three things which are too wonderful for me, yea, four which I know not:

The way of an eagle in the air; the way of a serpent upon a rock; the way of a ship in the midst of the sea; and the way of a man with a maid.

For three things the earth is disquieted, and for four which it cannot bear:

For an odious woman when she is married; and a handmaid that is heir to her mistress.

These latter selections are not Solomon's, but come from a man named Agur, the son of Jakeh, about whom we know nothing.

Mrs. V. A. Underwood and son spent the week end with her parents Dr. and Mrs. Rose, in Tolar, Texas.

Martin Neeb was a business visitor in Brownwood Tuesday afternoon.

History does not record an instance of greater daring, heroism, and sacrifice in behalf of liberty than that shown at the Alamo, March 6, 1836.

Weldon Anderson, of San Antonio, is visiting his mother and sister here this week.

With the Declaration of Texas' Independence, March 2, 1836, all prior colonial grants and contracts with Mexico or the State of Coahuila and Texas ceased.

THE STORY SO FAR

Nancy Gordon trades herself in marriage with Dr. Richard Morgan for fifteen thousand dollars—to save her family from the disgrace of her brother Roddy's theft of that amount for a woman. Nancy loves penniless young Page Roemer, and Richard is loved by Helena Haddon, a sophisticated young married woman. Kingdon Haddon, Helena's husband, sees the elopers, but holds his counsel. After the ceremony, Nancy returns to her parents' home, and continues to see Page, who urges her to divorce her husband. Mr. Gordon, to recase his daughter from what he considers her shameful marriage, sells his house to his friend Major Lomax, who rents it to the original owner. Helena is jealous of Richard's interest in Nancy, although she knows nothing of the marriage, and tries to make trouble. Once Page comes to Nancy's home and makes but refuses to go back on her bargain with Richard by divorcing him.

Richard stood still; a shock of horror shook him out of his preoccupation. He was not a vain man, but he could not have misunderstood her words or her manner.

He drew her hands into his. He made her sit down.

"For Heaven's sake, Helena, don't!" he implored her. "Command yourself—you'll be ill, indeed."

She caught the note in his voice and she laughed suddenly and wildly. "I'd better die," she said. "Why don't you say so, Richard?"

He flushed darkly, still holding her hand. "Helena, I'm King's friend, his physician; he trusts me. In God's name, what can I say? It can't be as bad as that!" he groaned. He could not tell her now that he and Nancy were married, not until Nancy gave him leave!

But Helena felt the chill of his silence even more bitterly than his words. She rose slowly to her feet, looking at him a little wildly.

"Go and tell her!" she panted furiously. "Go and tell her I came to you for help and you froze me stiff!"

"Helena!" he cried, aghast.

But she continued to laugh wildly, hysterically. Then suddenly she straightened herself.

"I'm crazy, Richard. It's the chloral—forget what I've said, forgive me!" She caught his hand and pressed her hot cheek against it. "Forgive an unhappy woman—who is your friend!" she cried and made her way unsteadily past him to the door.

He turned conscience-stricken, and sprang to help her. "Helena, let me go with you. I—"

But she waved him back, evaded his outstretched hand and went out alone, shaken from head to foot with an emotion that seemed to tear at her very heart. She hated Nancy. She blamed it on Nancy. But for Nancy she would have had his love to heal the cruel wound she had inflicted on her own heart.

Bravely Nancy neared her own home. But she got no farther than the back door, when all the misery—physical and mental—came to a climax. She crumpled up against the door-post.

"Mandy!" she cried faintly.

"I declare 'er goodness!" The colored woman, strong and broad-shouldered as a man stopped and picked the girl up. "Dere—y' keep still, honey; yo' ain't gwine'ter walk any more now." Amanda bore her into the library and laid her down on the lounge.

"Yo, wait, Miss Nancy; I reckons I can fix yo' up as good as a doctah."

Nancy, cuddling down in the old pillows with her first feeling of relief, smiled. "It's been done already, Mandy. Dr. Morgan's bandaged it."

Mr. Gordon had just come from the bank, his day's work done, and he had some papers in his hand. He had, in fact, succeeded in selling out some old shares in a copper mine. He would be able to pay Richard Morgan another five hundred. He was half way to the center-table before he discovered her, and he stopped short, looking at her over the top of his spectacles.

"Hello, Nancy! Got a headache?"

"I hurt my ankle—twisted it—that's all, Papd."

He came across the room and stood looking down at her kindly.

"Which ankle? Whereabouts did you twist it, child?"

Nancy blushed. "Richard bandaged it. I hurt it in the field as I left Angie Fuller's. He saw me fall, and"—she drew a quick breath—"he's bound it up."

Her father eyed her shrewdly. "In the field? Nancy, you were running away from Morgan?"

Her eyes fell under his, and she winced miserably. He sat down in an arm-chair beside her and sighed heavily.

"Child," he said gently, "don't you

"No sir, she's not a home to you!" he said sharply.

want a divorce?"

He felt her start of amazement and fancied it was one of relief. She did not look up; she seemed to be considering his question.

"How can I get one, Papa"—her voice sounded smothered—"without telling people I'm married?"

"You might—there'd be some talk of course, I put it up to Laverick the other day. He pointed out that it was not a marriage in fact; there was a possibility of annulment. He said it might be suppressed a good deal if Richard—if the man would agree to keep his mouth shut, too."

Nancy stirred sharply, averting her face. She remembered Richard's cry. "I swear it, I won't give you up!"

She drew herself up on the couch, clasping her arms about her knees, a huddled figure. "I sha'n't ask for a divorce—I did it myself, Papa, and I've got to stand it!"

He turned and looked at her, and she saw the tears in his eyes. "Good for you, Nancy!" he said, and put his shaking hand on her bright head.

He was holding her silently when the telephone bell rang sharply. Nancy started violently. Even Mr. Gordon looked startled, but he rose heavily, crossed the room and took up the receiver. His daughter saw his whole figure stiffen.

"No, sir, she's not at home to you!" he said sharply. "Yes, Mr. Gordon, speaking. My daughter's not going to answer you. Good day!" and he hung up.

Then he turned and stared at Nancy, his face utterly transformed. The emotion of a few moments ago was lost in the wrath of his discovery.

"You're flirting with that Roemer boy still! He's been at the phone—thought I was out! Nancy, I'm ashamed of you."

She said nothing, still huddled on the lounge, her knees cradled in her arms.

"You said you wouldn't get a divorce, didn't you?" he went on with rising anger. "What d'you mean? You can't play fast and loose with two men, I—good Lord, girl, where's your mother? She's got to teach you sense—d'you hear? I won't have two men about. I'll by the Lord Harry I'll shoot 'em both if you don't stop! D'ye hear me?"

Nancy winced again, but this time not from the pain in her ankle. "I hear you, Papa."

These were bitter days, too, for Page Roemer. He had been sure of Nancy Virginia. Then suddenly, out of a clear sky, the bolt fell.

She had married Morgan against her will, she had married him secretly, and she refused to confess her motives.

He walked the floor at night, his nails biting deep into the palms of his hands. Out of these vigils of agony he emerged haggard but determined. Morgan shouldn't have her! He would take her away from him now by main force.

Love and Hate contended for his soul, and the love that he made his was more dangerous to poor Nancy than hate.

But she did not know it. Stinging from her father's denunciations, shrinking from her mother's reproachful eyes, uncheered even by letters from Roddy, home was intolerable to Nancy. As soon as the hurt she went out again, and she met Page. He was always lying in wait for her in his hours of leisure.

Not even Angie Fuller, who had taken a sudden unaccountable dislike to him, could prevent those encounters. One day, when the two girls were down in the river meadow, Page had joined them. The two were so intent on each other that the girl left them, a little hurt and angry.

A storm was gathering, too, behind the hills. Angie saw it. She shook her head and went into the house, aware that her own heart was sinking. She had no word of any kind from Roddy.

Nancy and Page walked steadily out on the old river road. There was a pungent fragrance in the very air.

Nancy drew a long breath. "How peaceful it is out here! What a beautiful world, Page."

He did not answer. Hate, that was working in his heart against Richard, was suddenly swept aside by love. She looked so beautiful today.

They had walked a long way now and suddenly she realized it. She hesitated, looking about her.

"Where are we going, Page?"

"We're going to the end of the rainbow, Nancy."

She laughed faintly, startled, looking at him now, her eyes wide with surprise.

"We sha'n't find a treasure there," she said sadly; "it looks like a storm. We'd better turn back."

He caught her hand and held it fiercely.

"Nancy, will you come on with me, or will you turn back to him?"

She stood still, and, instead of blushing, she turned white and her lips tightened.

"Don't ask me," she said faintly, "don't talk of it now—I was happy here. Let me be happy for a little while, Page. I've been so miserable!"

They walked on silently. Nancy was trying not to think. She drew long breaths of the fresh sweet wind that had risen suddenly. As suddenly the sun had gone out and a purple-black cloud was rolling up on them. It had an effect at once glorious and terrifying, for it was torn with jagged flashes of lightning, and the edge of it curled like the froth of the sea. Nancy loved it; it had no terrors for her, the very fury of it helped her lift up her soul. Then a rush of wind came, torn leaves whipped about them, the rain began to fall in great droops.

"Free?" she sighed, "Oh Page, if I only could be free—as I use to be!"

"Come—we'll have to go into the inn over there," he said briskly, "you'll get wet, Nancy."

Nancy yielded to his guidance and ran across the lane into the old tavern that had been made into a road-house for the convenience of summer motorists.

The inn dining-room was long and barren, with here and there a group of small tables. As yet there were but few summer visitors. Only a few people were in the room, driven by the coming storm.

"You'll take something, Nancy, just for form's sake? People notice—there's Haddon over there. His wife too! The storm must have driven them in, too. He's been down to his racing stables I reckon. They're always quarreling poor fools, I wonder they're together."

Their alcove isolated them. Page put his hand out suddenly and laid it over hers.

"Nancy, are you going to endure it? You're wretched, I see it! Break with him now—right off—before it is too late."

"Too late? What do you mean, Page?"

"I know what to do. Trust me, Nancy, let me—set you free!"

"Free?" she sighed, "Oh, Page, if I only could be free—as I used to be!"

"You can be—you shall be!" he said in a choked voice, "Nancy, I adore you—I won't give you up, I swear it, he sha'n't have you."

She did not look at him now. "He won't let me get it," she said faintly, "he won't give me up."

He said in a voice of smothered passion.

She shivered, shaking her head. "I can't see how—he's like granite, Page. I can't make him yield."

The girl lifted her head and looked at him questioningly.

"Come to me," said Page thickly, passionately, "I love you—love me. Come to me, Nancy, we can go away from it all together. He'll know it's useless then. He'll get a divorce."

She stared at him innocently, bewildered.

"What do you mean, Page?"

He bent nearer, his face flushed, his eyes glowing love, triumphant and determined and unscrupulous, love with

Fishing Season Reaches Zenith

Since the last rain fish have been plentiful in the local creeks and bayous. It is the common belief that the fish came upstream from Lake Brownwood, which has been thoroughly stocked.

You can pass the bayou bridge any time, and you will see from one to ten cars parked on the banks of the creek the occupants strolling up and down the stream carrying great strings of the denizens of the deep.

Weather, in the daytime, has been excellent for fishing. The sun has shone unrelentingly from a clear and beautiful springtime sky of azure.

EDITORIAL Prohibition

By Norris Chambers

Discussion and public conversation now trend unerringly toward prohibition in its many forms. But, all and all, prohibition comes to one man issue—the use or disuse of intoxicating drinks.

Among a certain class of people it is the most sinful of sins to even advocate drinking, or making it possible to buy, alcohol in any form.

Both classes, or factions, are right, and both are wrong. It will, perhaps, cause a degradation of the youth of the nation to a certain extent; but in the meanwhile, it will—or rather has already done so—bring in tremendous revenues.

The pros have this to throw up. It will ruin the finest young manhood and womanhood the nation has known and it will do it by making it customary for the ones who treat the crowd to get hard-stuff, in this manner forming the habit of drinking among many who would not have acquired it.

The anti-pros can slam this back at the self-acclaimed saints—Every person who really wanted liquor before repeal could secure it, and he was not so certain as to its quality.

anted not to contain ingredients which may kill him, as was the former case. The revenues that are taken from the sale of this product help to feed many of the money-hogs who must be fattened; the personal tax of the people as a whole is lessened.

The arguments are about equal on either side. The pros find their rank in the church-going public—the sect which is absolutely positive that all who disobey the law of accepted morals are bound for torment.

Sometimes the pros throw up the argument that prohibition is against the will of God, and that it will ruin the people of the United States spiritually and religiously.

I do not know which side is correct, nor does the general public. We are waiting to see what the elections will do. If whiskey is to be used, those of us who drink it will go our ways unconcerned, and thank the lord that the tax burden is lowered.

It has been that the repeal of the prohibition laws will do away with the bootleggers. But the states that have tried it announce that it does not. It seems that there are hundreds of men who believe they can make more money by cheating the government out of the manufacturing revenue, and selling the liquid at a somewhat lower price than that of the lawful dealer who has to foot the tax bill.

Hilter! Isolation Of Germany

By W. N. Long

The resurrection of the old conquered word, military, is being formulated in its draconian style across the waters. Germany has afforded a new field of literature for the last year.

minor inequality, is one more fantastic step toward the increase of the degrading population of the world, because this condition will destroy initiative, talent, and confidence.

Second division, "Dictatorship", the belief in a divine leader, reminds us of the fabled belief. This division is a peculiar situation to find any so-called civilized country following it.

Third division, "Compulsory Militaristic Education", the only future of this rising government, is a reason to substantiate the continuation of this government, because the children from infancy to the age of accountability are taught the black mottoes of this aristocratic government.

After a considerate study of Hitlerism, we may easily conclude that it involves isolation. The elegiac thought for Germany is that all of her principles are negative to the rest of the world.

The Ruddle Of '38

Installment Two

The game revealed to Lockes the team's major weakness a passing offense, or rather, the lack of one. He promptly began giving his backs, and Mayes in particular, pointers on throwing the pigskin.

Cross Plains made two touchdowns in the first five minutes of play, and to give his reserves experience, Lockes sent his entire second string into the melee.

The Monday following the disastrous Clyde game, squadmen filed into the dressing room silent and subdued. As the players donned molasses and jerseys, the usual cheerful banter was missing.

Superintendent of schools, Nat Williams paused in the doorway a moment, permitting his eyes to become accustomed to the change from bright October sunshine to the shadows of the dressing room.

The Stampede

"Here are some jokes And a few wise pokes But be they so few They are guaranteed To be true"

The other night, while members of the Senior Class were trying out for parts in the Senior play, several girls were trying for the same part.

Some famous sayings heard about the campus.

Rosalea: Come up and see me sometime, big boy.

Fannie: I'm the best in the west.

James: I'm one of the Jones boys. Wilburn, to Miss Cunningham;

Oh; pearl of the sky blue ocean. Moreland, to all girls, "Did any one ever tell you that you had beautiful eyes?"

Bright spots on the campus.

Charles Frank's red tie. Wilburn and James' endless wise cracks.

Thomas Edison Smith returned home Saturday from Bronte, where he visited last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Avie Smith, of Los Angeles, California, are visiting his mother, Mrs. Mack Smith here at present.

H. H. Nash was a business visitor in Baird Saturday afternoon.

the boy nearest the portal on the back spoke to him, softly, quietly, and though he addressed himself directly to that lad, the rest knew that the words were meant for them also.

"Keep your chin up, boy," he said, "Keep fighting and the school is behind you. Everybody loves a fighter even though he loses. Your dad lost a game or two, but he never let that down him. What are you going to do?"

Without further remarks he turned and strode from the room.

When the players took their places for signal drill they had regained their confidence and zest. After running through formations, they were called into a circle by Lockes.

"Fellows," he said, "What happened Friday is history. This week we play Putnam, here. Who we meet next week or next month does not now concern us. We can defeat the Panthers but we must work if we do. We thought Clyde was weak. She is, but last week we were weaker. We must forget about the past and play our games as they come. Let's go!"

In a light scrimmage Lockes worked on the pass defense, using second string wingmen with the regulars and transferring Walker and Patterson to the reserve squad with Mayes back, passing. Although the little tosser was heaving the pigskin straight and true, after the first few throws his receivers were covered on every play.

Putnam, always ready and willing to take the Buff's number whenever she could, came to Cross Plains confident of victory. The visitors received the kick-off and straightway began an aerial attack. The first pass was grounded by the alert Bison.

The second toss was intercepted by Spencer, and since the Panthers could not cover up he raced for a touchdown unmolested. The final score was 27 for the home team and a goose egg for the Cats.

Oil belt football teams, both A and double A, were considered the class of the Texas interscholastic league. District 2 champions in both divisions consistently were state titlists, and there was stiff competition between the best of the smaller schools and the larger institutions for the all around crown.

Ablene, big favorite to win the district, 2 AA prize, was host to the Buffaloes in a con-conference practise tilt the week following the Putnam game. Cross Plains adherents possessed no hope that the locals could hold the Eagles to even a close score.

Cross Plains kicked, and gaining the ball on downs, wasted no time sparing with the Ablene team. Halbert was good for seven yards through center, Webb and Lusk taking the opposing giant linesman completely out of the play. Smith made a first down.

What About Sunday Shows?

Will Cross Plains have Sunday picture shows, or will scores of citizens continue to drive to neighboring cities each Sabbath afternoon for cinema entertainment?

The above question is current this week as a petition endorsing Sunday pictures is being circulated among citizens, prior to being presented to the city council.

Frankly, we believe that councilmen will be in accord with the idea of having Sunday pictures in Cross Plains, so long as the showings don't conflict with church services. And this conviction would be well grounded. For they as leaders and business men know full well the vast number of Cross Plains people that are driving elsewhere each Sunday afternoon for entertainment of their choosing.

Mayor S. P. Collins, who might be expected to be the bitterest opponent of the movement, takes a very broad minded attitude on the situation. Recently in a conversation with the editor of the Review, he said: "I, as an individual, never attend a picture show and consequently see nothing particular good about them. But on the other hand I see no more harm in showing on Sunday afternoon — no conflict with church services — than any other time. I also realize that we can not legislate morality and if Sunday pictures are wrong we must correct the situation first in the home".

The Mayor is right.

It is unjust to say that a picture show should not be allowed to show a few hours each Sunday afternoon, merely because it is a picture show, then allow other businesses to remain open the entire day if they choose.

Cross Plains has suffered in a business way from the loss of Sunday picture shows. On the average, 75 people from this place leave each Sabbath afternoon to see a picture in some neighboring town. If these people remained at home, think of the additional money that would be thrown into business channels here. And that is to say nothing of the additional cash that would come into town each Sunday afternoon, from adjacent communities.

It is time for Cross Plains to arouse from the long delima of hibernation and put into effect those things here that are making other cities attractive. We can not build a wall around our town and expect it to progress or even survive. These are changing times. Let's keep abreast, if not ahead, of other places.

The Editor's Mail

Cross Plains, Texas
April 14, 1934

Editor Cross Plains Review,
Cross Plains, Texas.

Dear sir;

I was just reading the county agent's instructions to the farmers of Callahan County, as to what they could do with their land taken out of production, in your last week's paper.

I note that he specifically states that none of it can be used for "the purpose of increasing which the government is trying to curb. He can plant enough for feed and food but not to lay up any surplus."

Every farmer in Callahan County should study deeply these last two sentences above, as to curbing the increase and laying up a surplus. It will really give him an idea what the Government is trying to do to him. The farmer must not, any more, emulate the little ant, the industrious bee, or the sagacious little squirrel in laying up his store of food, as we have all thru the ages before been admonished to do. During these dry years that are coming down the vista of time, just in front of us, when we know that there cannot be raised on that specified acreage any thing out a swirl of dust: He must not have any big fat stacks of feed piled up around the place to turn to with pride and pleasure when in the coming Summers he looks out over the parched and burning acres to see nothing but the azure heat waves rising above the ground, when the cattle around the Old Mud Hole, will not even go out in the pasture to look for food for they know that it is not there. He must not have a cellar full of food, enough to do him five years, no that would be over production. In short do not look ahead but let the farmers in Washington do that. These boys in Washington have made such good record and set such wonderful example in running the government, they have stored up and are storing up now such nice big fat debt. I do not believe that the people individually would borrow money and pay interest on it if they could make it with less effort, I thought however the people had followed their example fairly close but I guess not they are going to force the farmer now.

They say to the farmer; you must not have a surplus, you must not increase, but Mr. Insurance man, you have got to have a large surplus, you haven't got a first mortgage on quite every thing in the United States yet but you must get the rest as soon as possible. And they say to Mr. Banker; you have got to have a huge surplus also so far you haven't got a second mortgage on quite everything we will help you get that as soon as possible, for if the farmer has no surplus when the dry years come you will certainly get it then.

Sincerely,
Cleve Callaway

SUCCESS WITH POULTRY

COD-LIVER OILS

The knowledge of the importance of Vitamin D in the nutrition of both human beings and animals has been steadily increasing since its discovery a little over ten years ago. Since then, cod-liver oil, which is one of the richest sources of this vitamin, has been extensively used for feeding purposes, especially for poultry. More cod-liver oil is, in fact, consumed by the chickens of America than by chicken.

Its use is the secret of raising poultry successfully in confinement and securing high winter egg production.

Cod-liver oil is supplied to the poultry raiser in several different forms, and success in his enterprise may depend upon the proper selection and use of these oils.

There is no simple test for vitamin D. The only way to determine the amount of it in a given quantity of oil is to measure its effect on living animals. Oils assayed for their vitamin D content in this way are called 'biologically tested' oils. Rats and chicks are used for this purpose, but obviously chicks are best when the oil is to be used for poultry feeding. It is safe to use, at the level recommended by the manufacturer, oils that have been assayed with chicks, but one may run risks with oils not so tested.

'Fortified' cod liver oils are also available. These oils are prepared by adding to plain cod-liver oil a vitamin D concentrate extracted from codliver oil. By this process the vitamin D content of the oil is increased and standardized so that much smaller quantities are needed. Transportation and other expenses are therefore reduced.

Fortified cod-liver oils are suitable for home mixing. They are also suitable for use in mechanically mixed feeds put out by feeds put out by manufacturers, and many use this type of oil in their products.

LOTIEF'S

The Family DOCTOR by JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

"BIRTH CONTROL"

I am a believer in education—the kind that lead to intelligent activity for the betterment of our race. We use intelligence in the production of our live-stock, even in the growing of our crops. Why not in bringing up families that can be provided for?

The law in most states makes it a crime—to furnish any sort of contraceptive—and call it that—to the worn, half-distracted mother of eight or nine children, who has not the strength to properly care for them—a crime that could draw—imprisonment. Any kind of interference with gestation—pregnancy—is manslaughter. And, who can deny it? Yet—what of bringing an unlimited flock of children into a starveling world—wrecking the life of a poor mother? It is nothing short of a problem!

This same world will laud to the high heavens a big military rooster—will cover him with medals of distinction—for leading twenty-five thousand grown-up sons of mothers into a battlefield, and have them shot to pieces by the truck-load! That's not "manslaughter"—or is it?

It's a strange world, viewed from any angle—with codes and statutes—enactments, that require acres of buildings for their storing—when the Ten Commandments would answer every purpose!

Yet, birth control is a serious matter, if in the hands of the ignorant. Sometimes I think—If we gave it half the the study that we have given to whiskey, we would have more and happier mothers—and brighter, better-raised children—The average man has a great deal of "hog" and selfish appetite about him—So much of birth control depends on him; just as he is the chief delinquent in the lack of it—We must educate—and live up to humane principle.

TEXAS FACTS

The history of Texas is linked with the names of heroes and martyrs whose deeds of valor the world delights to honor.

Few battles of the world have been more decisive and tremendous in their influence over civilization than the Battle of San Jacinto.

The capitol is an enduring monument to Gov. John Ireland's statesmanship, integrity, and zeal in behalf of the interests of the people of Texas.

The barbarity displayed at the Alamo has few equals in the world's history.

Governor E. M. Pease was born in Enfield, Conn., January 3, 1812.

Why Liquid Laxatives are Back in Favor

The public is fast returning to the use of liquid laxatives. People have learned that the right dose of a properly prepared liquid laxative will bring a perfect movement without any discomfort at the time, or after.

The dose of a liquid laxative can be varied to suit the needs of the individual. The action can thus be regulated. A child is easily given the right dose. And mild liquid laxatives do not irritate the kidneys.

Doctors are generally agreed that senna is a natural laxative. It does not drain the system like the cathartics that leave you so thirsty. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a liquid laxative which relies on senna for its laxative action. It gently helps the average person's bowels back to regularity.

You can always get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at any drug store, ready for use. Member N. R. A.
