CATTLE MEN WILL MEET AT DRESSY

HOME TOWN GOSSIP

"Slim" Crutchmier breezed back into town this week from "parts unknown" after an absence of several months. As is his custom, the local humorist returned with a sharpened wit; which only goes to show that a rolling stone gets a mighty fine shine.

Just to verify our statement that "Slim's" wit is whetted to a keen edge, we give you this one which he ejaculated Sunday night. Upon walking into a local drug store and finding no less than a dozen people slipping fountain delicacies and patronizing marble machines, he said: "So this is the reason the churches have empty pews."

And incidentally, some one should introduce "Slim" to Cross Plains' official family. He insists upon calling this columnar "Mayor." We also heard him refer to Edwin Baum as "Judge" and Clyde Sims as "Chief"—don't know whether he had reference to "fire chief" or not.

Anyway the big galoot from the Sooner state ought not belittle our city officials by calling such political "nobodies"; Mayor, Judge and Chief.

The first marriage this department has had to report in weeks is that of Miss Marie Colvin, of this place, and "Jiggs" Eakin, of Pioneer. The rites were solemnized Saturday afternoon.

Ol' Dan Cupid, once this department's chief source of subject matter, has seemingly departed for greener pastures.

B. F. Peavy, the jovial blind man who is everybody's friend, deserves our plaudits this week for "doing the unusual."

He has made enough money whittling in recent weeks to pay an insurance premium protecting his home from fire, tornado, hail and etc. And incidentally, he is now whittling a large rolling pin which we suggest that the readers of Maggie and Jiggs purchase and send to George McManus, creator of the comic characters.

Babe Wood has the knack of turning a tense moment into one of mirth. The other day we saw him transfer a heated discussion into a hilarious "love fest".

And now, here's news of interest for readers of this column. If you remember several weeks ago we told you Hugh McDermitt had been induced to propound these lines at an early date. We went into a huddle with the Burnt Branch, gossip sneezer, Tuesday; and he states that he is just about ready to apply his literary talent to the exposing of many sensational facts.

In all probability we'll have Hugh's offering in this space for your approval next week.

Anyone would know that Oak Lewis has a political bee buzzing in his bonnet, from the way he treats the boys to coffee and cokes. That is most always the first symptom of political fever.

County Agent Ross B. Jenkins Gives Highlights Of The United States Government's Cotton Program

County Agent Ross B. Jenkins yesterday issued the following statement for publication, which should be of interest to cotton farmers throughout the Cross Plains trade territory. His statement follows.

"Applications for allotments under the Bankhead Act are being received in the cotton belt, and the Secretary of Agriculture has announced that a minimum allotment of the full amount of his base production was more than two bales. This is in accordance with the policy announced several weeks ago when the 1935 regulations under the Bankhead Act were approved. Under the existing regulations tenants operating a part of a farm do not have a separate base. No cotton farmer has any warrant to expect his allotment will be in excess of 65 percent of his production, unless the farm which he is operating has an established base production of two bales or less. In that event, he will receive a minimum allotment equal to the amount of his average production, but no more. The 12 cent loans on 1934 cotton holdings will be extended beyond the maturity date of July 31, 1935. As to a loan on the 1935 crop, it is the purpose of the administration to provide credit facilities to cotton farmers to permit the orderly marketing of the new crop. It should be emphasized, however, that the Commodity Credit Corporation will make no loans on the 1935 cotton crop to any producer who is not cooperating in the cotton program under the Agricultural Adjustment Act, nor will any loans be made on the 1935 crop to any producer for an amount of cotton in excess of his allotment under the Bankhead Act."

LODGE CHARGES OF DRUNKEN DRIVING FOR PIONEER MAN

Stanley Huddleston, 21, was arrested at Pioneer, Monday night and taken to Eastland where charges of driving while intoxicated were lodged against him by State Highway Patrolman Loran Barr. The apprehension of Huddleston is the aftermath of an automobile wreck between Pioneer and Rising Star several weeks ago in which Lorenzo Hodgnett was killed. Huddleston's bond was set at $750. Grand jury investigation of his charges are expected to be made the latter part of this month. Officer Barr told the Review.

George Jenkins, of Cameron, was the third passenger in the automobile in which Hodgnett was killed.

LARGE CROWD OUT TO HEAR PENSION TALK BUT SPEAKER ABSENT

One of the largest audiences to assemble to hear an "old age pension speaker" in months was present at the Methodist church Sunday night but the speaker, Oscar Callaway, of Comanche, failed to arrive.

After waiting more than 30 minutes past the scheduled hour the crowd dispersed.

The Review was told yesterday that Mr. Callaway was unexpectedly detained, when a case he was trying in court was prolonged, making it impossible for him to get here at the appointed hour.

Two other matters of probable interest to cotton farmers in this area were also included in the County Agent's statement and are published hereunder.

"Cottonwood option contracts on which the exercise of option was extended by the Secretary of Agriculture from May first, will be called at twelve and one-half cents a pound, less carrying charges of 40 cents a bale per month for such time as charges have accrued against the option contracts. Approximately 1,470 options covering 10,958 bales of cotton are effected by this decision. These options were issued to producers as part payment for participating in the 1933 emergency cotton adjustment program."

The third and last matter which County Agent Ross B. Jenkins urged be called to the attention of

T. B. TEST FOR THIS COUNTY TO BE TOPIC FOR CONSIDERATION

Cattlemen of this section will meet at the school building at Dressy, Monday night—April 22—for the purpose of discussing the tubercle-osis testing program. The meeting has been called by County Commissioner B. H. Freeland, who will preside and consult the gathering in regard to the advisability of instituting the work in this county.

The Dr. Noyes, district veterinarian of Fort Worth, has informed County Judge J. H. Carpenter that every county adjacent to Callahan has or is being tested and will be finished within the next six weeks. He further stated if the Commissioners Court authorizes the testing to be done in this county that the crew will move here from Shackelford county about the latter part of May.

Many ranchers are reputed to have stated that if the program is to be put on, the most preferable time is during the latter part of May.

As a result of the government's buying in this county last year very few tubercular animals are expected in this county.

The meeting will be called to order at seven thirty and every rancher or stockman is urged to be in attendance.

SLUMBERING GOLD

TENTH INSTALLMENT

SYNOPSIS: Young Ed Maitland and the hardened gambler Speed Malone became partners on the trip north to the Yukon gold fields in '97, when word of the rich ores there first came down the Pacific coast. Maitland, son of a New England seafaring family, was determined to win back his lost family fortunes. Frenchy, the fisherman who took him and Speed north; Lucky Rose, beautiful young woman who had given Maitland a ring for a keep-sake; Fallon, trail boss of the miners, who resented Rose's attentions to Maitland; Steiner the money lender; young Pete and his drunken partner Bill Owens; Brent old-time prospector; and Garnet, a new-to-the modern one who hired Maitland and Speed to haul his stuff from the beach over the mountains to the Yukon—these were among the crowd that made up the gold seekers. At Liarville, a camp in the hills, Speed was made trail boss in Fallon's place, because Speed insisted on closing the trail till it could be repaired—it was almost impassable. But the fickle crowd veered back to Fallon, Speed and Maitland took a stand above the pass to keep the miners from breaking through. Pete came to offer his help, but Speed refused it and the boy, after saying his partner had been drowned after a drunken brawl, rode off. But he took a position where he could fire on the miners when they tried to rush the pass, and so helped Speed. Later Brent, with an old deer gun, added his help. Just when Speed seemed to be gaining the upper hand, Fallon called his men with an exultant shout. A cavalcade was coming down the trail—Now go on with the story.

Another pause followed before the speaker said, with an effect of challenge, "An oldish, square built, whisky-faced man."

"With a boy?"

"Yes—with a boy. The man's name is Owens."

"He's drowned," Speed said, with a sidelong flinker at his partner.

That left the voice mute for a full minute. "How drowned?" The question had a cold directness.

"All we heard was, he lost his outfit in a game in Skagway."

"Who as he gambled with?"

"What happened to the kid?"

"He trailed over the pass ahead of us. We don't know where he went."

"There wouldn't be a woman with Owens?"

"Not with him. There was, a pretty, dark-haired girl in Skagway who looked sort of interested."

This was ignored. "I mean an older woman."

"No."

During a suspended interval Speed stood motionless as stone. The voice spoke at last with a queer note of deliberation. "I needed that deer meat bad—it may be lucky you seen me, and it may be a long way from it, for you and me both—How god is your memory?"

"Feeble," said Speed.

"How do I know it?"

"All I can say is, we can imagine a man's maybe havin' a good reason for leavin' a sketchy trail. If I didn't figure you for a friend of Pete's, I'd take the chance of reachin' for a gun even now. But if you are, you can bank we've never seen or heard."

"Stand where you are," the voice said roughly, "for five minutes. I don't need to tell ye what'll happen if you make a move to trace me."

The quiet seemed to be absolute. Not a twig snapped; Maitland could not even detect the stirring of a spruce needle. But Speed's eyes almost imperceptibly traced a course through the shadows to the tree where they had cached the meat.

He allowed a tactful space to elapse before he lowered his arms. Then he went over to the tree where he had hung the meat.

Their ominous visitor had gone, taking with him an even half of the deer.

"I'm a Siwash," Speed muttered finally, "if that the maginary native Drew's patrolman's been puzzlin' over."

"Did you see him?"

"Just a glimmer when I got up from the fire. He stole in to unhook a piece of deer meat from the tree."

Maitland had a vague sense that he was withholding something "And that's the prospector Pete was looking for?"

"If you can figure it."

"Why does he wear native furs and moccasins?"

"Because no one in the North, I reckon, pays much notice to a Siwash's trail."

"To cover a gold secret, you meant?" The idea Rose had suggested loomed in Maitland's mind.

"I dunna," Speed pondered.

"They's somethin' more behind this prospector than it's likely either of us can figure."

"His waiting for Owens here would fit with your conclusion about Pete's not having gone down the river. But how would Pete miss him?"

The mysterious man with the mukluks had evidently gone in search of Pete. That seemed the last they were likely to hear of him.

But the next day brought an odd reminder. The lamed and starving malamute they had seen in the timber trailed the scent of the caribou in the sled. Its following then instead of the man it knew gave a grim color to Speed's idea about its owner, and the cruel necessity to which he had been driven.

On the trail the dog kept a cautious distance, but it drew closer under cover of the darkness when they camped. Maitland cut off a strip of frozen meat and threw it out in the snow, at the rim of the firelight. The strip vanished in a flash of wet fangs. So did several more, without visible effect of its aloofness, except that it no longer snarled when it evaded Maitland's approach. He called it "Rusty," because of its miscolored fur.

After a day's log cutting at the place they had chosen for a winter camp, Speed left Maitland to trim timbers for the cabin, while he took the team up to Tagish and hauled down the more necessary part of their outfit.

They set up the cabin walls, and whipsawed the softer spruce into lumber for the floor and fittings, laying aside the best wood to season for the boat.

In the midst of this work they were interrupted by a surprise visit from a mounted patrolman.

"My name's Cathcart," said the corporal stiffly. It was their first glimpse of Drew's new man. He was a tall, raw-boned, fresh colored rookie with frosty eyes, rather narrowly set. "This is an out-of-way place for a camp."

"We choose it so we could launch a boat below the rapids," Maitland explained politely.

"You men have just made a haul for Inspector Drew that took you by way of Lake Lebarge," said Cathcart. Did you see anything between here and Thirty Mile of a lone Siwash on the trail?"

Speed's eyes narrowed a little in their turn. "No," he said.

The patrolman looked quickly around their camp. "Let me see your guns."

He examined Speed's and handed them back; then picked up the carbine.

"This gun's been used recently," he said.

"We shot a caribou down on Lake Lebarge," said Speed. "Maybe you saw the blood dust."

The patrolman seemed disconcerted for a moment. "All right," he said abruptly, and took his departure.

The two partners stared after him, and then exchanged a long unsmiling look.

"Where's the dog?" asked Speed. But Rusty seemed to have vanished at the first scent of the patrolman.

A deathly stillness of cold amber crystallized the White Horse river canyon.

It was early in April. With the first lengthening of daylight a few weeks before Maitland had started building the boat, which was now almost finished. Speed had been called to Tagish by some message from Drew.

Today a pale and furtive sun had risen high enough to send some oblique rays into the canyon. But the delicate harbinger had perished at birth. In the western sky a strangely hued pall of vapor was stifling the sun gleams.

From a bank above him, the malamute, Rusty gave a low whine and nosed the wind with a faint bristling of his guard fur.

Warned by its nervousness, Maitland stowed his tools. He thought it strange that the dog should show so much uneasiness about a still distant storm, and wondered if there might be something else in the seemingly lifeless air.

Taking a length of rawhide, Maitland leashed the dog in a squaw hitch, and gave it its head, curious to learn what was troubling it. The dog halted at last on the crest of a long ravine. A lifting shiver ran through the malamute's fur. He gave a trailing desolate howl.

Out of the canyon rose a vaguely prolonged moan like the tremor of a deep organ stop. With that breath, incredibly cold, the air came to life. It was like a gasping exhalation from the indraught that had made the void. And now the pall from the West came steaming, in needle points, a flick ahead of the blast. Instantly the moan in the canyon leaped to a snarling below, and to a whine and a whistle and a scream from the bending timber on the cliffs.

Maitland, already slanting with the wind toward the canyon, was almost swept off his feet. The malamute leaped before him at the end of the lease.

In a seething draw at the foot of the slope, he caught a momentary glimpse of the tracks of some animal—erased drift. Shortly afterwards, as he came out of the wallow he saw below him dimly through the blinded air, the effigy of a riderless white horse, standing with its tail to the wind and its head low.

The malamute's pull on the line carried him on till he staggered against the flank of the white horse itself. When he groped to its head he had a vague glimpse of Rusty, a yard away, standing over a mound in the dancing snow.

A cold foreboding of the truth already chilled his heart. He stopped down, brushing the snow from the head of the fallen rider with one hand, while he dropped Rusty's tether from the other to try and unblind his eyes with stiffened fingers. A murmur of protest choked him at sight of a golden glimmer in the snow. It was Pete.

He raised the boy's slight form. Clumsily he lifted the light burden to his shoulder, and felt for Rusty's line.

The dog was gone. The malamute, he thought, had answered a simple savage law, and was finding its own shelter.

From one ravine to another he battled through the tearing maze for what seemed a smile. Swaying in the storm, with its ghastly chaos screaming in his ears, he stopped to marshal his senses. He was lost.

He changed his direction on a mere gamble. Fortunately he was prevented from testing it.

He had hardly started when something dark wiped by him, like a fragment of tumbling storm wrack; the sight of it stung his blood into sharper life and halted him. It appeared again, and his heart leaped with a great thankfulness as Rusty's wolfish head pushed through the welter within reach of his hand. The malamute was peering up at him through rimed slits of eyelids, its guard hair plastered and parted by the driving sleet.

Unable to trust his fingers, he wound the line round his arm. The rest lay with the dog; and Rusty's first lay with the dog; and Rusty's first move turned him from the course he had almost taken. Within a few minutes they were in the river canyon. After a timeless struggle up that roaring gut, they brought up against the cabin roof.

Careful still of his burden, he slid down through the drift that smoked around the door, and stumbled inside.

He slid to the floor beside the low bunk and placed Pete into it. He slipped a tarpaulin under the lifeless figure scooped a bucketful of snow from the drift. Without knowing whether raw whiskey was the right medicine, he forced a spoonful between the white teeth, praying that it was. To remove the riding boots, he slit the leather down the seams. He cut through every tight garment in order to save time.

At sight of the form he revealed, a murmur of complete astonishment fell from him. The adolescence of the slim, virginal figure had concealed the strange fact that Pete was a girl!

Amazed as he was, his hands did not pause. Covering her with snow, he rubbed the snow crystals against her flesh, with a cold fear in his heart that he was too late.

Raven Trapping A Success

Mr. M. H. Perkins of Clyde asked the county agent some time back for plans for building a Raven trap and they were provided. The citizens of Clyde made up money and builded one for experimental purposes. Mr. Perkins' letter follows:

Clyde, Texas
April 13, 1935

Dear Mr. Jenkins:

Enclosed is the blue print you gave me. We built it here at Clyde and we find that if it is properly baited and tended it will prove very successful. Yesterday evening we killed 40 ravens out the trap. It works better to have live birds in there all the time. They come for the bait better.

I feel that this is something that every community in the country should have as it will really prove wonders in getting rid of hie ravens.

We have found that when baiting it with meats and dead rabbits, that they should be put in the trap early in the morning. The meat that is not eaten should be taken out of the trap at night or the dogs may tear up the trap.

Thanking you for giving me the ideas about this, I am,

Yours very truly,

(Signed) M. H. Perkins

Peanut Acreage Being Allotted

All persons who signed a peanut contract with the Secretary of Agriculture this year will receive the number of acres that they will be allowed to plant this week. The producer is allowed to plant the average of his 1933 and 1934 planting if it is the larger amount or is allowed to plant the acreage in whichever year his number of acres were the highest less 10%.

This rule applies except to those who have two or more farms or when owned with other farms. If a landlord or 1935 producer has more than one farm under contract then the acreage will be apportioned to each farm in the same proportion as if the entire acreage were signed under one contract. There were not many contracts changed by this ruling.

The county peanut committee met last week and made the apportioning. They are: Warren Price, Hommer Connel, Jim Barr, Dayton L. Sessions, and C. C. Elliott.

Any producer may plant more acreage than his commercial base but must show the committeeman that they have been harvested for feed not thrashed before the payment will be made on such contracts. The regular contracts are expected to be paid about the last of October or the first of November.

Wheat Referendum May 25th

The wheat growers of the Nation are to be given the privilege of stating whether they want the contracts to be offered after the 2nd year contracts signed in the fall of 1933 expire. The new program will carry through the year 1939. The telegram from C. W. Warburton, Director of Extension, Washington, D. C. was received today.

Dear Agent:

Official adjustment administration press statement today announces wheat referendum May 25. Statement outlines following features of possible future program to be considered by farmers in referendum. Fundamental features and principles present program with additional emphasis on inducements to shift land to grass in drought and dust storm areas. Voluntary contracts calling for adjustment to meet consumption needs and expert possibilities during crop years 36 through 39. Provisions for minor adjustments on individual farms to take care of crop rotation and other proven farm practices. Amount of adjustment and rate and condition of benefit payments to be determined each year but adjustment not to involve reduction of more than 25% individual's base acreage. Base periods same as in present program. Local administration through county association.

Signed C. W. Warburton
Director Extension
Washington, D. C.

Bankhead Forms Arrive

Callahan received the Bankhead forms today so as to be ready to gin the cotton when it opens this Fall. Committeemen will be instructed on all changes and the sign up is expected to begin shortly after May 1st. Those who have not signed a voluntary cotton reduction contract will be required to produce gin tickets for the years 1928 through 1934 if they expect to get more than the county average of yields or more than the community average. It is expected that certificates will be sold only through the Assistant in Cotton Adjustment this year and the price will be one half the price of the cotton. This is to insure each producer of the same advantages. Last year many that such practices will be prohibited this year.

Ranchers, 4-H Club Boys Need Calves

Leading ranchers of Mason and other counties have offered their 4-H Club boys the best calf in their outfit if the boy will show at least 2,000 pounds of grain that he has raised and 2,000 pounds of roughage that records have been kept on as required by the County Agent. It is hoped that the Callahan ranchers will make that same offer. The County Agent believes that there are boys who will take 'em up if they make the offer. All ranchers wishing to match the Mason County Ranchers please notify the County Agent at once so as to get the boys on record. Callahan 4-H Club boys did mighty fine feeding for their first year and are planning better records this year. men bought tickets at less than the stipulated price but it is expected Wright.

NEW YORK

Warm Sundays, the new zoo in Central Park is besieged by thousands. It is educational, no doubt for human beings to make the rounds and look at caged animals pacing up and down in their confining spaces, but it always seems a little cruel that their space is so limited. The sea lions are the only animals that seem really content to me, as they dive and bark and show off in their big pool of water.

Suburbanites of New York talk of gardens and seed catalogues at this time of year, and the flower show held at Grand Central Palace each year gives them new inspiration to dig and plant. When hot days arrive, suburbanites will get back at Manhattanites for all the kidding they took about delays in transportation during the winter. They'll ask them how they breathe stuffy Manhattan air 24 hours a day without collapsing!

WATCH YOUR KIDNEYS!

Be Sure They Properly Cleanse the Blood

YOUR kidneys are constantly filtering impurities from the blood stream. But kidneys get functionally disturbed—lag in their work—fail to remove the poisonous body wastes.

Then you may suffer nagging backache, attacks of dizziness, burning, scanty or too frequent urination, getting up at night, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains; feel "all worn out."

Don't delay! For the quicker you get rid of these poisons, the better your chances of good health.

Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are for the kidneys only. They tend to promote normal functioning of the kidneys; should help them pass off the irritating poisons. Doan's are recommended by users the country over. Get them from any druggist.

CROSS CUT

Everybody that missed the chapel program Monday missed half a life time. The Juniors and Seniors were having a contest to see which could put on the best program. The Seniors put on a dignified act or two, and settled back to await the favorable decision of the judges. Then the Juniors began. It was a dry program until the performer, Miss Ophelia Smith, more or less accidentally broke her slacks and didn't know about it. From then on the show was a riot, with Miss Smith believing the audience was laughing at her jokes. Of course the judges gave the decision to the Juniors. But the Seniors know now—they'll put on a Nudist show next time. That's what the people like; so we found out. But, congratulations, Ophelia, you won!

Community night was to have been Wednesday evening.

The Seniors have ordered their invitation and calling cards. Look out uncles and aunts!

For the benefit of those who are in doubt, Norris Chambers wishes to inform the public that his so-called wreck a few weeks ago was absolutely on the square, and that he was using both hands on the wheel, and going slow. He also wishes to state he never touches liquor, and that this case was no exception. For further details see him!

The Seniors have decided to ask Dr. I. M. Howard of Cross Plains to deliver the commencement address. The Seniors of Cross Cut are always different. Last year, instead of asking some absent-minded professor with halitosis to make our address, we called on Jack Scott, and everyone was immensely satisfied with the simplicity, clearness, and directness, of his speech. This year we are making no exception, and we call on Dr. Howard with the feeling that a fellow doesn't have to head a college to be able to give a good lecture.

Estelle Looney and Lavonia Clark were in Brownwood Tuesday afternoon.

Rual Gafford has, as we predicted made the fatal plunge into the breezing gulf of matrimony, and has married Goldie Erwin, that galloping primary school teacher. But good, luck—you'll need it.

Good news! Charles Jackson has left temporarily. He has gone to Millersview.

Dub Stone and Vaunda Pittman were in Cross Plains Sunday.

W. F. Looney attended a first aid contest in Cisco Thursday evening.

Lonny Edington entertained with a dance Friday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Byrd visited Mr. and Mrs. Martin Sunday.

Elva Stockton was a visitor in Cross Plains Monday.

HENRY ARMETTA GETS 'FAT' ROLE AT LAST IN 'WAKE UP AND DREAM'

A Hollywood screen veteran has at last achieved his ambition. He has played a long and very "fat" role in a feature production.

For years Henry Armetta has been recognized as a comedian of unusual ability—an Italian character actor whose stilted dialect, ever-changing expressions and flowery actions never failed to make an audience laugh. He repeatedly "stole" scenes from leading stars, making himself the center of attraction while he was on the screen.

Character actors are not often present throughout the length of a feature picture. They may appear in a few sequences, at most, and then are seen no more. A comedy waiter, or store-keeper, or bus passenger, has only a short space of time to make his impression on the audience.

But Armetta always made such a definite impression in these "bit" parts that B. F. Zeidman, producer of the Universal comedy with music, "Wake Up and Dream," cast the explosive Italian in the important role of Cellini, with results which are said to be unusually satisfying.

This picture comes to the Liberty theatre on Friday, with Russ Columbo, Roger Pryor, June Knight, Catherine Doucet and Armetta in featured parts, and is the latest directorial effort of Kurt Neumann, one of Hollywood's most able directors of the younger school.

Seniors To Begin Preparing For Commencement

The Seniors of 1935 are working very hard so as to have graduation exercises that are worth while. Senior night will probably be on May 7. That night the program will probably be divided into four parts. The first part is a view of the past life of the Seniors. The second part is a view of the Seniors at present. The third is a view of the Seniors in the future. The last part is not yet determined. It may consist of a one act play. Baccalaureate will be on May 19, and commencement will be on May 24.

The Seniors have elected several members to serve on parts of program. Beatrice Minton will read the class-will. W. N. Long has been elected the class poet. Miss Price and Mr. Williams are to read the class history and class prophecy. Other plans are being made to make a different and better group of Senior exercises in 1935 than any other year past.

Freshman Play In Rehearsals Now

"The Pampered Darling," the Freshman Dramatic club play, has begun its real work and rehearsals now that the director, Beatrice Minton, has her prompt copy finished and every character has his part.

Children's Club To Have Play, Soon

The Children's Theatre is progressing rapidly. They now have seventeen members on roll. There are several casts working on plays. The plays are "The Two Episodes," "Light and Airy," "A Miraculous Recovery," "Both Sides of the Story," and "A Little Incident." The Children's Theatre will have charge of the chapel program Wednesday, April 24. Any children between the ages of six and fourteen are invited to join the Theatre. A class is taught each Monday and Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock in room 4 in the high school building. See Helen Gray.

Speech Class News

By Beatrice Minton The Public Speaking Department has resumed its work now. Miss Navalyn Price, who has been absent for quite a while is now able to teach her classes again. Boy! are we glad to get her back. The school seemed haunted with her spry figure and merry laugh, but now that she is back, we must do our best to show that we are glad to have her with us again.

A Mighty Good Place To Eat

WHEN you're hungry as a bear in the spring drop into Kemper's Cafe and ask for one oof our juicy tenderloins. Or if your appetite is jaded with the summer heat, look over our hot weather menu.

KEMPER CAFE

The prospects look even better than they did last year. We have one of the heaviest squads that Cross Plains has developed in many years. Many of the heaviest men are Sophomores and Freshmen and should have a good team for the next year or so.

Last Thursday the Seniors were defeated for the first match in the inter-class tournament. The Sophomores defeated the Senior Boys in a volley ball game and believe me everybody seemed to have had a good time.

Volley ball is getting to be one of the most popular games around this town at the present. If you pass the gym at almost anytime of the night you will see a light in side. Both young and old like the game. It's an interesting game and a lot of fun come up some night and try it.

The Buffaloes are scheduled to play the Albany Lions under the light next year at Albany. The date is October 28. Gobber Keys was down here last week to confer with Coach Osburne about the game. Day or night, dark or light watch those Buff's step next year.

We are sure missing Doc. Rumph around the gridiron this Spring. He was out to see and encourage are boys every day last year, but because of illness he has not been able to see a single workout this year. We all sincerely hope that he will recover soon and be with us this season.

And believe me those boys from Cottonwood are going to make valuable men this Fall. All are doing nice work, and seem to like the game fine.

Coach Osburne is trying out a good formation this Spring. If he comes to the conclusion that the boys are capable for that kind of work, he will use it next fall and believe me is good and will go. However, it is not determined yet.

HINTS TO THE BOOKLOVER

The two books we have chosen to report on this week are South Moon Under by Rawlings and The Broad Highway by Farrell. Both of these are outstanding books in our C.P.H.S. library.

South Moon Under is a very new and popular novel by a modern author. This novel describes the life of simple, uncouth people living with dignity, honor and joy. The characters of this story are slow Southern who generations back wandered into an isolated country, Florida. The characters are gallant and brave, making their living from the soil. The reader gets a peaceful joy from reading this story of simple, everyday people.

The Broad Highway is chiefly an adventure story. It is of the varied adventures of Peter Vibart along the broad highway of Kent early in the nineteenth century. This young man is an Oxford scholar and meets all sorts of individuals. In his travels he meets the heroine chairman. This book is a very delightful book to read.
