"No—and I wouldn't have told you—"

"Better I should know it. I don't want to be shielded by outsiders from what's going on in my own family. This'll kill his mother if she finds it out, she's so wrapped up in him."

"Mr. Cayne," said Rachel, "I'll go up and get my clothes and tell Mrs. Cayne that I've found another job, or that I've been called away by sickness in my family, I'll make some excuse and I'll leave at once, if you don't mind. And please forget about the bonus. I couldn't take it."

"That's very irregular, Miss Vincent," snapped Terriss. "You can't afford to be sympathetic. You're earning your living."

"I'll never earn it in this way again," said Rachel, fervently. She rose, eager to end the miserable interview.

"Don't take it that way, Miss Vincent," said Peter Cayne, dully. "It's better for me to know the whole thing. You did what I wanted, you found the thief. Just don't tell Mrs. Cayne suspect anything, please, will you. I'll take care of the rest of it."

"Mr. Cayne, please—I don't want to be impertinent, but don't be too hard with Holbrook. Many young people—get strange ideas—and don't consider their—parents. I know—I've done it myself."

He did not answer, but made a slight movement of the hand in acknowledgment. Outside the door Terriss spoke severely. "You'd ought to have taken that bonus, Miss Vincent, that's a foolish way to act. He offered it and you earned it. It's not your fault he's got a bad egg for a son."

"I don't want to be melodramatic," said Rachel, "but that money would have seemed a little like the 30 pieces of silver to me."

"I don't get you," said Terriss. "What 30 pieces of silver? It was 30 silver spoons in that lot the boy took."

"Never mind," said Rachel. "Oh, but I'm glad this is over."

"You're one of those young ladies who let your feelings run away with you and you can't do that in this business. I hope you didn't mean what you said about never taking another job of this kind, I'll be glad to turn something else your way. I might judge you, Miss Vincent, at the first, but now I believe you might develop into a good operator, with training of course, and experience. The way you got yourself up like a maid and did a maid's work and got in with the servants shows you've a talent for this kind of work."

"I'll hate to think so. No, Mr. Terriss, I'm through playing detective, that means I'm through. I'll go back to posing thankfully."

"Well, Louis Vincent'll be thankful, too. I expect. He's been giving me an awful razz about taking you off his work. But look at the profit you might've made. That hours—"

They had reached the street.

"Goodby, Mr. Terriss," said Rachel, shaking hands with him. "You've been awfully nice. I'm sorry to be such a disappointment, but nothing will change my mind."

"Never speak too final," said Terriss. "Circumstances alter cases, I always say. You got my phone number and if you should reconsider, give me a buzz, that's all."

"Not to ask for a job, Mr. Terriss," As she went on Rachel felt unhappy, yet relieved in spirit. At least this was over. Now there was nothing left to do but get out of the house and forget the whole wretched affair. "I shall have to forget a great deal," she thought, "but most of all I want to forget about her. I don't want to think of her again, I shall try not to remember how she looks or how she acts. I shall even remember her name if I can help it. If I ever see her again I'll avoid her. It serves me right for doing this behind Anne's back, and for wanting someone different from Anne. I'll just get away as quickly as I can."

She began to wonder what she could tell Lena and Towers, who had been so good. It might be best to say that she had another place; if she said anything else they would be over-solicitous and perhaps over-curious as well. She devised a possible announcement but she had no chance even to begin it for Towers met her at the servants' entrance fairly wringing his hands, Lena with him in tow.

"Rachel, Rachel, where've you been? The madame's been carrying on like a wildcat. Something's happened. I don't know what, the boy's mixed up in it, too. Something about you cleaning his room, they asked me who'd been in there and I told 'em. But look—Lena and I'll stand by you, don't you let the little brat scare you. We know you're all right. Go on in."

As she started down the hall Lena caught her arm. "You better put on your uniform. She'll be madder yet if she sees you dressed up."

"It doesn't matter," Rachel told them. "I was out looking for another place and I've found one. It doesn't matter how she sees me or what she says."

She went on to the drawing room where she had seen Elinor Cayne and Holbrook for the first time, but today they were not sitting at the tea table. The whole room as she came in seemed filled with their suspense and terror and anger, they themselves were so wrenched and driven by these furies. They pointed at her.

"Did you clean my son's room?" said Elinor. "Did you clean his closet? I know you did. Don't lie to me."

"Yes," said Rachel, slowly. "I cleaned the room and the closet."

"You took a paper out of my overcoat pocket!" shrieked Holbrook. "Where is it. Give it back to me this minute!"

Putnam 4-H Club First To Organize For 1938

Fifteen boys of the Putnam 4-H Club met with their county agent Tuesday, November 16, and after having received instructions on how to fill out the reports for the year 1937 and having made arrangements for all those who finished to attend the finishers banquet at Baird, December 11th, talked turned to plans for 1938. The boys wished to reorganize and elect officers for the coming year so they could start to work earlier than before. Roy Lee Jobe was elected president, Wilburn Carrio vice-president, Melvin Crawford, secretary treasurer, and Earl Gunn, reporter. New members for 1938 that joined at this meeting were G. P. Jobe, Gilbert Shackelford, Donnie Elzay, Bill Fields Williams, and Benton Friet.

One or two members of the Putnam club planned to grow certified seed wheat for the coming year and are studying rules issued by the State Department of Agriculture governing such work.

More boys have completed projects at Putnam this year, notwithstanding the drought, than in any previous year.

Eula Club Meets

The Eula club met with the county agent during the week and with their school sponsor, Clifton Thomas, they received instructions on how to fill out their reports for 1937 and also laid plans to attend the finishers' banquet to be held in Baird December 11th. They plan to organize at their next meeting in December. J. D. Williams, Raymond Kemper, Charlie and Willie Tate, David Archer, Wilburn Judd, Mack Kniffen, and Doyle Whitley have enrolled as new members for the 1938 program.

J. D. Gist, who has one of the few registered Hereford cows and calves as a 4-H demonstration, was the first Eula boy to enroll for 1938. He has carried his demonstration over a year, has built new pens and sheds and will have a very good exhibit for the Fall show planned for Cross Plains.

Goals for Depleting Crops and Conserving Acres. Sought in 1938

The following article by Mr. H. R. Tolley, A.A.A. Administrator, sets out the objectives for the 1938 program: "The 1938 program estimates the acreages that would be ample to meet all the needs of the country for crops that deplete the soil, such as wheat, corn, cotton, tobacco, and so on. These acreages for the whole country will be divided up among the States, counties, and individual farms. Within this whole group of soil-depleting crops, the program states the needs for some particular crops. For example, within the acreage goal for all depleting crops, there will be a goal for corn, a goal for cotton, goals for the different types of tobacco, a goal for rice, a goal for peanuts, and a goal for potatoes.

On the soil-conserving side of the scales, the program also establishes acreage goals for soil-conserving crops and practices.

Practically speaking, the use of goals this year will work out about like this for a farmer: He will know at the beginning of the season how many acres are in his total soil-depleting crop goal, how many are in any special depleting crops goals such as cotton. He will know the soil-building goal with its provisions for soil-conserving crops and soil-building practices. And he will know the total amount of money he may earn by meeting these acreage goals completely.

The program is open to all farmers who want to join with others in the country-wide effort to save and restore soil fertility and to

BUSINESS-MEN AND FARMERS TOGETHER IN JOINT SESSION

An enthusiastic general meeting of the newly organized Cross Plains chamber of commerce was held in the city offices Tuesday night with 33 farmers and business men in attendance.

LOCAL GIRL BRIDE OF BAIRD TEACH HERE NOVEMBER

Miss Jennie Laura Jackson, Cross Plains, and Everett Johnson, Baird, were united in marriage at the Presbyterian manse, 1 Wednesday night of last week.

County Agent Ross B. Jenkins was present and spoke briefly on the possibilities of the Cross Plains trade territory saying that the possibilities of this area were unlimited as an orchard center.

The meeting was declared an official one of the kind held here in recent years.

These present were: president, Jesse McAdams, Chas. F. Hemphill, Lewis C. Norman, B. H. Freeland, E. M. Howard, V. A. Underwood, George R. Neel, Meritt Garrett, Fred V. Tunnell, J. E. Henkel, J. A. Holdridge, Henry Williams, Z. W. McCellan, Martin Neob, Will H. Fortane, C. D. Westernman, Lewis Placke, Lindsey Tyson, Jack Scott, N. L. Long, Claude Burns.

Next general meeting of the local chamber will be held some time in January. Mr. McAdams announced yesterday.

The aim of the Chamber of Commerce as read by Hemphill and adopted by the body in a unanimous vote appears hereunder.

"To sponsor any movement we can which will benefit the business men of Cross Plains and the farmers and stock raisers of our trade territory."

Memories of 50 years of happy married life were recalled Thanksgiving day by Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Franke, beloved Cross Plains couple, as they celebrated their golden wedding anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Franke were born at Voigtsdorf Habelshwerdt county, Germany. They came to America in 1883 and were married at New Braunfels, Texas. Soon after their marriage the couple moved to Coleman county. Later they settled on the place where they now live, three miles Southwest of Cross Plains. They reared three sons

The Texas fig canning industry, which hit an all-time low during the depression, is starting a great come-back, according to the Texas Planning Board, which reports that 25,000 pounds of fresh figs daily now are being canned in Texas. Although Texas has the essential raw materials for making soap, such as fats, oil, alkalis, sodium and rosin, practically all of the soap used in Texas is shipped in from northern and eastern states. Cellulose, which may be derived from East Texas pines and other woods, native balmores, ragweeds, sweet potatoes and a dozen other standard crops, is now being used in artificial silks, hosiery, paints, and enamels, celluloid and cellulose used for water-proofing materials. Texas rice hulls, formerly considered a waste, are now being used commercially as pecking material, as a filler for horse collars, as an insulating product and as much. Recommendations which will solve the major water problems in the five Texas drainage basins have been forwarded by the Texas Planning Board to the National Resources Committee in Washington for submission to Congress. The expenditure of approximately $300,000,000 in Texas.
