

ale

ses

a Coat otine and l that we d we are l right at

$45.00
$33.50
$24.00

You will find it

$24

When you want you.

UN

List Your Property.

I want to get a list of all city property and farms for sale at reasonable prices. Also leases.
L. P. Henslee.

If you like the daily Dallas News, why not club it with the Review? The Review one year and daily and Sunday News for one year for $9.50. No bargain days, but worth the money. See or phone the Review.

FOR SALE—Blue prints of the Central Addition to Cross Plains, price 50c for paper prints and $1.00 for cloth prints.

Jackson Abstract Co.
Baird, Texas.

When You Need A

New Ford Car

We always have a stock on hand, with starters and without starters.

SEE BOOKKEEPER
At McAllister & Ross Horse and Mule Barns, Brownwood, Texas.

FERTILE SPOTS IN ARABIA

Country Largely Desert, but in the Valleys Figs, Spices and Dates Are Produced.

In physical character, flora and fauna, Arabia is more like Africa than Asia, says a bulletin of the National Geographic society. Josephus called Arabia "a country that joins on Judea," and Roman geographers drew a map of the land that included Mesopotamia and the Syrian desert back of Palestine.

Yemen, the most southerly and most populous of the Arabian provinces, has many arable valleys producing coffee, figs, spices, hides and dates.

For convenience, the ancients divided Arabia into three parts, the Stony, the Desert and the Happy. The high interior plateau is occupied by four great deserts, the Syrian, the Nejd, the Akhal, and the Dehna. Kuwait, the busy port of the Hasa province, from which many cargoes of dates, sponges and a wealth of pearls are shipped, was selected by the Germans as the salt-water terminus of their Bagdad railway. The Kaiser's plans, however, were blocked by a clever coup of the British who made a treaty with the sheik of Kuwait.

SKELETONS ARE IN DEMAND

Shortage of Osseous Structures of Humanity is Reported—Professors Seemingly Get Busy.

This is not really as gruesome as it sounds, remarks a writer in London Answers. The most essential impediments of the medical student is a skeleton, and at the moment there is a considerable dearth in the latter commodity.

Before the war, medical men and students used to purchase the material required for carrying out anatomical examinations from Paris. Now, for some unaccountable reason, the supply has been greatly decreased, and, unhappily, the profiteer has also stepped in. Four or five guineas was the utmost asked for a complete skeleton in prewar times; now the price is at least ten guineas.

A certain humor is lent to the situation by the appearance in medical journals of advertisements asking the loan of a skeleton for a short period! It recalls the savory conversation between Bob Sawyer and his fellow student, Benjamin Allen, at the breakfast table, when Dingley Dellites were regaled with details concerning the competition for the possession of a skull at "Bari's."

AIRSHIP POSSIBILITIES.

Several American commissions have recently made an investigation into the aircraft conditions in different parts of the world, and they agree that the country has the opportunity to lead the world in civil aviation activities and as a market for aircraft in 1920. It was the joint opinion of these commissions that the United States is ahead of all other countries in number of planes actually ordered and bought for civilian purposes, number of aerial transportation lines being organized, actual daily performance of the aerial mail service, and volume of mail carried, and possibilities for the use of aircraft for commercial purposes, and that the fact that the post office has proved that military planes can be converted into mail carriers makes possible the utilization of service planes to meet the immediate demand which manufacturers are unable to meet.

BRAZIL WANTS IMMIGRANTS.

The Brazilian government is endeavoring to facilitate the coming of emigration from Europe to Brazil. It has directed that government-owned vessels in European service shall bring on their return voyage such immigrants as have been vouchered for by Brazilian consuls. Immigration has recently been checked because of high rates for third-class passage from Europe.

A JOLLY BEGGAR.

"Please help a poor feller wot only got one arm left."
"Why, I can see your other arm."
"Yes, but that's me right."—Boston Transcript.

JOLLYING THE HELP.

Jud Tomkins says that this summer he's going to tie a few cowbells to the thrashing machine and make it sound like a jazz band.

Be A High Salaried

Man or Woman

The business world wants men and does. There is a scarce high priced man and woman. Many are worth a thousand a year, but only a few are worth a thousand dollars. The late James of Harvard, declared the average man uses only ten per cent of his brain power. Suppose you are twice as capable as the average man; you are using only ten per cent of your maximum power. One fifty per cent of your greatest power is eight five per cent of the man's county are earning only twenty dollars per week. Ninety two per cent of those in business fall in the ages of forty and fifty. Five per cent have no money at age of sixty. Our business take you out of the eighty to ninety two and the ninety per cent class. If you can't come we will come to you through large and most successful Study Department. We have very successful in producing salaried men and women, as by students letters in our catalog. Take our thorough practical of bookkeeping, Business Short-hand, Cotton, Glass, Paper, Slip or Tuberapy and place self in demand in big business in and mail for free catalogue. Tyler Commercial College, Texas. Address..... Name.....

MICKIE SAYS

YOU MAY GET MORE FOR THE MONEY IN THE CITY PAPERS, BUT YOU READ EVERY LINE IN 'EM, INCLUDING THE ADS, LINE DO IN THE HOME PAGE DO YOU NOW?

My Belgian Staff will make the season at miles west Cross Plains. S. R. Ed.

The Farmers' Gin, Cross for sale. Has four 80-horse in good condition, enjoying patronage, with five-year site. Bids considered no. Address or see J. H. McDonald, P.

I have a good proposition royalty deal in the right country—suitable for a See me at once. L. P. H.

Town Lots for Sale We have a few town lots at a reasonable price. See once for a bargain for can offer. Carter & B.

A 2ndhand wagon for R. A.

A Rayo lamp in good for sale. Mrs. R. D.

PAUL V. HARRIS, LAWYER, Office Over Farmers National Bank, Cross Plains, Texas.

THE CROSS PLAINS REVIEW

CROSS PLAINS, TEXAS, FRIDAY, APRIL 16, 1920

No. 7

THE REAL BANK

IS THE SPIRIT THAT ANIMATES THE INSTITUTION.

Financial resources, buildings, fixtures, equipment—all these things—are, after all, the mere tools with which the bank works.

A real understanding of the customer's needs, an earnest desire to co-operate with him in every legitimate way; a realization of public responsibility—these constitute the BANK. Everything else is secondary.

The spirit that animates this bank is the ground upon which we invite your account.

Farmers National Bank

Of Cross Plains, Texas

CASING HERE FOR LITZINGER WELL

The casing for the Litzinger location on the B. W. Webb farm in Brooks Survey, two and one-half miles east of town, arrived last Sunday. The derrick was built for this location several months ago, and everything in readiness for the arrival of the casing.

Albin No. 1 was lost on account of casing troubles several months back, and the location was changed to the northeast part of the Albin farm, Mr. Webb later buying the farm from Mr. Albin. This location, from a standpoint of geology, is a dandy, and the drilling of the well will be watched with unusual interest. The coming in of the Hilburn and the Vestal wells makes this text an important one.

WELL THAT MADE TEXAS FAMOUS

The McCleskey No. 1, discovery well of the Ranger field, is being given a cleaning out this week and is being watched with interest by local oil men. This well, famous all over the world is being watched, with interest by local oil men. This well, famous all over the oil world came in in October, 1917, and for several months made around 1700 barrels of oil daily. It was drilled and owned by the Texas Pacific Coal and Oil Company and has been on the pump since early in 1919. A stray sand was encountered two weeks ago 60 feet above the level of the discovery well and several hundred barrels of oil was taken from this sand. The well is now being drilled to completion.

NEW OIL SUPPLIES ARRIVING

The last few days one car of oil well supplies has arrived in Cross Plains. The Atlas Oil Supply Co., headquarters at Ranger and Gorman is doing business here; also the Southern Oil Well Supply Co. Both are figuring on establishing offices here, and parties who should know say they are sure to do so.

E. N. Darsy of Ranger, rig builder, has a car of rig material in Cross Plains.

Gorman rig builders have a car of rig material here also.

Coleman Has "Shirt Tail Club."

As a means of sidestepping the high cost of clothing J.E. Gordon of this city is undertaking the organization of the "Shirt Tail Club." All persons are eligible who, during the reconstruction days following the Civil War were compelled by circumstances to go in their shirttail. Already a half dozen local citizens have applied for charter membership in the club. The only requirement of a member is that he tell the truth. Dr. W. T. Allan is a charter member, as is also J. T. Warnock, L. E. Collins and P. P. Reynolds; Judge J. O. Woodard is eligible to membership but he hasn't yet qualified. In placing his application for membership J. T. Warnock recited the incident of his plowing corn in his shirttail back in Arkansas and P. P. Reynolds remembers distinctly the incident of "skinning the cat" in his shirttail after he had passed the age of fourteen years.

W. H. Rausberger qualified as vice-president of the club; he attended school in his shirttail. As previously stated, the only condition of membership is, that the applicant tell the truth.—Coleman Democrat

Boydston-Kelly Wedding.

The marriage of Miss Kathryn Boydston, daughter of Mr. B. L. Boydston to Mr. Charles Roe Keilty, of Boston, Mass., was solemnized at the home of the bride, Tuesday morning at 8:15 o'clock, the Rev. P. G. Huffman, pastor of the Methodist church officiating, with the ring ceremony.—Baird Star.

The faith behind a formula

The faith

Paint half your house DEVOE; paint the other half whatever you like.

If DEVOE doesn't take fewer gallons and cost less money, we will make no charge for DEVOE.

If DEVOE doesn't wear a year or two years or three years longer—longer and better—we'll give you enough to paint it again.

JOE H. SHACKELFORD

CROSS PLAINS, TEXAS

The formula

GUARANTEE:

The paint in this package is full measure, and is composed of:
50% Pure White Lead,
50% Pure White Zinc,
Pure Linseed Oil,
Pure Turpentine Dryer
and nothing else.

JOE. H. SHACKELFORD

LUMBER AND PAINT STORE

GREENLEE READY TO SPUD IN

The well on the Greenlee, lease, southwest corner of the Dyson survey, short distance from the Vestal discovery well, the first of the week spudded in their water well, and as soon as sufficient water is found the well in the search for the elusive liquid will be spudded in. Everything is in tip-top shape to drill a well well, dispatch. The head driller, it is said, has had fine success in drilling in other fields.

PLENTY OF LUMBER HERE

There may be a shortage of lumber of certain kinds, but as to lumber in the aggregate Cross Plains should have enough and to spare. The town now boasts six lumber yards, and another with material on the ground but no location. In the last few weeks forty cars, in round numbers, of lumber have been shipped to Cross Plains, and more on the road and arriving daily. Build now and keep the wheels of progress going.

State Tuberculosis Sanatorium.

The State Tuberculosis Sanatorium, located near Carlsbad, Texas, conducts a follow up of ex-patients which clearly demonstrates the value of the institution to the state. Up to September 1, 1919, 922 ex-patients were on the following rolls. Of these one hundred and fourteen were earning up to $600.00 per year, twenty six were earning up to $1000.00 per year, forty-nine up to $2000.00 five were earning up to $3000.00 per year, two $4000.00, and three were earning more than $4000.00 per annum. The highest salary reported to the institution was $5500.00. One hundred and sixty-six ex-patients had died, eighty-six were at work but failed to report their salary, eight were students, two hundred and twenty-four were continuing to take treatment for tuberculosis, and the Sanatorium failed to make contract with two hundred and thirty-nine.

Every imaginable occupation was being followed by these men and women whose lives had been regenerated. Thirty-nine were farming, twenty-four were salesman, and there were seventy-six housewives doing four hours or more per day. Other occupations included mer-

ACCURACY. PROMPTNESS. COURTESY. ECONOMY

Above everything else our drug service is accurate.

Every prescription is filled as given, your every request met as you intended.

We solicit your drug business on merit

You will not be disappointed in a single deal made here.

chants, office workers, ministers, lawyers, teachers, physicians, dentists, newspaper workers, carpenters advertising, and insurance agents. It is estimated that those ex-patients actually reported as working on salary were earning in excess of $25,000.00 per year, a sum far greater than the annual up-keep of the sanatorium.

At Methodist Church

Preaching services, next Sunday: 11: A. M., and 8: P. M. Sunday School at 10: A. M. The public is invited to attend, with special invitation to strangers. C. C. Tyler, pastor.

Moving to Farm.

Not everybody is moving from the farm to town. Mr. J. W. Wesley and daughter, Miss Ophelia, the latter having taught the past session in Cross Plains school, last week moved from town to their farm near Burkett. Miss Ophelia has taught for a number of years, being in the faculty of C. I. A. for several years, and is tiring of the strain of teaching and is heading back to the simple life.

TO HAUL MATERIAL TO FORBES

W. S. Huttel of Tulsa, Okla., who has contract with R. B. Forbes, who has contract with R. B. Forbes for a test on the D. H. Yesler survey, south middle of same, between the Harris well and Liberty, was in town on Tuesday. He states that next week he will begin hauling material to the ground and will start the well at once. He is under contract to begin by the 30th of June, but will not wait for that time. He has everything needed for the drilling of the well.

Safety First

Deposit your surplus cash with a

GUARANTY FUND BANK

We Appreciate Your Business

First Guaranty State Bank

CROSS PLAINS, TEXAS

Many a one of us has had in mind important gifts and tokens of affection and esteem which have been deferred to more prosperous times.

More power to the one who has done so.

Now, however, in the enthusiasm of the prosperity which those efforts have won we can afford to remember, and return to the kindler things of life.

We have a host of gift articles to meet your needs

WHAT WE SAY IT IS - IT IS.

L. M. Bond
JEWELER & OPTICIAN

CROSS PLAINS, TEXAS

THE CROSS PLAINS REVIEW

Review Printing Company

In Cross Plains and vicinity:

$1.50 for one year
80c for 6 months
50c for 3 months

Outside Calahan County:

$2.00 for one year
$1.10 for six months
.60 for three months.

All clubbing propositions will be figured on the above prices.

FOUR ISSUES CONSTITUTE A MONTH
CROSS PLAINS, TEXAS

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS

Subject to Democratic Primaries of July, 1920.

For District Judge,

W. R. ELY

E. M. OVERSHINER

For Sheriff:

C. A. CORN

County Clerk:

CHAS. NORDYKE

For County Superintendent:

MISS MISSOURI STAHAN

Petitions are being circulated in Calahan County for an election to vote $250,000 to build good roads in Road District No. 3, a newly created district highway

No. 7 from Coleman to the Taylor County line, will traverse this district Taylor County is building hard surface roads to Coleman line, Precinct 4 in Calahan is to expend $100,000, which will not go half far enough to get good roads.

Keep Up Your Stock.

The citizens of Cross Plains are hereby notified to keep their live stock up. All stock found loose will be taken up and put in pound. W. O. Yeevy, deputy sheriff.

Want a Residence

and want to put in new Essex car and get well located lot and rest in c. sh.

Carter & Henslee.

KODAKS

BEAUTIFUL WAR PICTURES AND ENLARGEMENTS FREE.

We want you to try us once with an order for Kodak Finishing and let us show you the best work you ever saw. Also tell you how you can get Enlargements from your Films free; also beautiful 16X20 "Honor Roll" Sixteen picture of the Great World War. Has place for photo, and complete record of service. Any boy who has seen service will want one; will frame it and keep it forever.

We develop films for 10¢ a roll, and make prints at 1¢ and up. Just mail us a roll and ask for information.

THE MAYO STUDIOS
Kodak Dept., 1085 W. Broadway, Brownwood, Texas.

New Spring

And Summer

Wearables

For Men and Boys

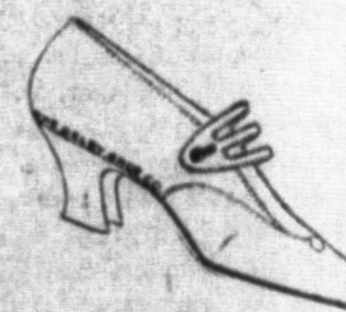

Our Men's Department is now featuring a nice line of new spring wearables. The new things in Shirts, Hats, Clothing, Neckwear, Hosiery, Shoes, Oxfords and many other spring novelties are here now in abundance, awaiting your selection.

See Our Stylish Line of Ladies'

Misses' and Childrens

Footwear

Spring Suits, Dresses, Skirts and Blouses are awaiting your selection. Better select yours now as we have them ready for any day dress-up, and not be disappointed at the last moment

HIGGINBOTHAM BROS & COMPANY

The Most Welcome Tire That Ever Came to Market

Who Appreciate Superlative Values Prefer The Brunswicks

every great tire factory, the question is: "How much can give for the money?" And the answer depends on the policy adopted.

Every man who has become acquainted with Brunswick Tires knows that Brunswick standards are again evident. This famous company—noted as a leader in every branch—entered since 1845—has once again proved that its policy is right.

A perfect tire is simply a matter of knowledge and standards and no secrets nor patents prevent making an ideal tire.

But standards come first. For in making there is vast room for saving, for subtle economies, for short-comings. Makers with the highest standards don't make high-grade tires.

The Brunswick organization of makers includes a brilliant staff of technical experts. Not a man among them has spent less than 20 years in handling rubber.

Each is a master of his craft. And the new ideas they bring to the attention of Brunswick customers receive sincere consideration.

Every proved better than the adopted unanimously.

The Brunswick Tire is a combination of acknowledged features plus Brunswick standards of manufacture.

The result is a super-tire, the kind of which you have never known before. The kind of a tire you gladly join in welcoming.

Yet Brunswicks cost no more than like-type tires.

Try ONE Brunswick. We guarantee a surprise. And we feel that you will want ALL Brunswicks.

Then good tires will have meaning to you.

THE BRUNSWICK-BALKE-COLLENDER CO.
Dallas Headquarters: 611 Main St.

Sold On An Unlimited Mileage Guarantee Basis

Cord Tires with "Driving" and "Swastika" Skid-Not Tread. Fabric Tires in "Plain," "Ribbed" and "BBC" Skid-Not Tread.

B. L. BOYDSTUN

OPEN IN NEW QUARTERS

THE O. K. RESTAURANT AND MEAT MARKET

Across the Street From Jones Garage. You Can Eat With Us at the Same Old Price as Before the Boom

Good Fat Tender Beef is What you will find in our Meat Market

T Bone Steak, Round Steak, Rump Roast, Hams, Cheese, Loin Steak, Rib Steak, Rib Roast, Sausage, Chili Meat

Buy Your Meat and Eat At THE O. K.

A. E. SEARS PROPRIETOR

I have a royalty deal in country—See me at

Tow We have at a reasonable price for a can offer.

A Ray for sale.

PAI

Office O

Share Compan Gusher. 4c

New Spring

Summer

Wearables

Men and Boys

Men's Department is now featuring a nice line of spring wearables. The new things in Shirts, Clothing, Neckwear, Hosiery, Shoes, Oxfords and many other spring novelties are here now in abundance, awaiting your selection.

See Our Stylish Line of Ladies'

Misses' and Childrens

Footwear

Suits, Dresses, Skirts and Blouses are awaiting attention. Better select yours now as we have them for any day dress-up, and not be disappointed at the next

GINBOTHAM BROS & COMPANY

The Most Welcome Tire That Ever Came to Market

Who Appreciate Superlative Values Prefer The Brunswick

Every great tire factory, the question is: "How much can give for the money?" And the answer depends on the policy adopted.

Every man who has become acquainted with Brunswick Tires knows that Brunswick standards are again evident. This famous concern—known as a leader in every branch—entered since 1845—has once again proved that its policy is right. A perfect tire is simply a matter of knowledge and standards and no secrets nor patents prevent making an ideal tire.

But standards come first. For in making there is vast room for saving, for subtle economies, for short-comings. Makers with the highest standards don't sell high-grade tires.

The Brunswick organization of makers includes a brilliant staff of technical experts. Not a man among them has spent less than 20 years in handling rubber.

Each is a master of his craft. And the new ideas they bring to the attention of Brunswick directors receive sincere consideration.

Every proved betterment is adopted unanimously.

The Brunswick Tire is a combination of acknowledged features—plus Brunswick standards of manufacture.

The result is a super-tire, the like of which you have never known before. The kind of a tire you will gladly join in welcoming.

Yet Brunswicks cost no more than like-type tires.

Try ONE Brunswick. We promise a surprise. And we feel certain that you will want ALL Brunswicks.

Then good tires will have a new meaning to you.

THE BRUNSWICK-BALKE-COLENDER CO.
Dallas Headquarters: 611 Main St.

Sold On An Unlimited Mileage Guarantee Basis

Cord Tires with "Driving" and "Swastika" Skid-Not Treads
Fabric Tires in "Plain," "Ribbed" and "BBC" Skid-Not Treads

B. L. BOYDSTUN

OPEN IN NEW QUARTERS

THE O K RESTAURANT AND MEAT MARKET

Across the Street From Jones Garage. You Can Eat With Us at the Same Old Price as Before the Boom

Good Fat Tender Beef is What you will find in our Meat Market

T Bone Steak, Round Steak
Rump Roast, Hams, Cheese, Loin Steak
Rib Steak, Rib Roast, Sausage, Chili Meat

Buy Your Meat and Eat At THE O. K.

A. E. SEARS PROPRIETOR

I have a good proposition in a royalty deal in the right part of the country—suitable for a small pool. See me at once.
L. P. Henslee.

Town Lots for Sale.

We have a few town lots for sale at a reasonable price. See us at once for a bargain for a bargain we can offer.
Carter & Henslee.

A Rayolamo in good condition for sale.
Mrs. R. D. Carter.

PAUL V. HARRELL
LAWYER

Office Over Farmers National Bank
Cross Plains, Texas

For Sale

Shares in the Consolidated Oil Company, owners of the Vernal Gusher. See, wire or write, 41 W. C. Owens, Moran, Texas.

We have a few county ownership and other oil maps for sale. Also blue prints of Cross Plains and the Dyson survey.

The Review.

Rubber roofing, ridge roll, valley tin, tin shingles, cresting. Shackelford's Lumber and Paint Store.

Galvanized and Painted Iron in stock. Shackelford's Lumber and Paint Store.

DR. HOWARD

Office Over

Farmers' National Bank

A. F. UPTON

Physician and Surgeon

Specialty on Asthma, Cancer, Gall Stones, Kidney Stone, Ovarian Troubles, Neuralgia and Appendicitis without the use of knife.

30-odd Years Experience.

Cross Plains, - Texas.
Ford for Sale.

A brand new machine; have two and must sell one.

Carter & Henslee.

MICKIE SAYS

AIN'T IT STRANGE HOW SOME GOOD SCOUTS IN THIS TOWN WHO PAY ALL THEIR OTHER BILLS PROMPT AND REGULAR WILL FORGET THE NEWSPAPER MAN FOR TWO OR THREE YEARS AT A STRETCH?

METHODIST REVIVAL

Will Begin Sunday, April 25 at the Methodist Church Cross Plains

S. A. Steel, D. D., of Mansfield, La., Will Do the Preaching
The Public in General is Invited to Attend These Services. Special Welcome to Strangers

Dr. Steel is well known from his writings and sermons in the United States and Europe as one of the greatest gospel preachers, revivalists and pulpit orators of the South.

Evangelist Singer, Mr. Chester Green of Sabanno, will have full charge of the choir and song services. We do not mean to boast, but we challenge any section of the country to produce a greater singer and choir leader than Mr. Green. Billy Sunday's song book, "Songs for Service," will be used.

Don't Forget the Date,
Sunday, April 25, 1920

C. C. TYLER, Pastor.

Light Truck Hauling

And Service Cars
Go Anywhere...Any Time
REO SPEED WAGONS
McFerrin & Gray
Jones Garage Phone 161

W. A. Payne

CONTRACTOR
See me for Wall Paper
and Sanitas

Engene DeBogory Howard H. Dailey

DEBOGORY & DAILEY
LAWYERS
Cross Plains Texas

BARKER & GATLIN
LAWYERS

Cross Plains, Texas
Office Over Farmers Nat. Bank

Case Peanut Planter for sale.
A. Ogilvy.

NOTICE—I have the Brown Jack and will stand him at my farm two miles east of Cross Plains.
C. E. Atwood.

D. P. CARTER

L. P. HENSLEE

CARTER & HENSLEE

Real Estate and Insurance

If you have anything to sell you can not do better than to list with us. It will be our business to sell. We want a chance at your lease, royalty, the renting of your place, your town property—vacant or otherwise. By placing your business in our hands your best interests will be looked after. It will be a pleasure to serve those who do business with us.

We also want to handle your fire insurance. We watch your expirations and keep you protected. We have the best companies to be had and will represent no other kind. We are agents for two companies that did the biggest fire insurance business in the State last year, one of which is the largest American fire insurance company. Place your fire insurance business with us and we will take care of your interests.

FIRE, TORNADO, LIFE

Insure anything—Dwellings, Barns, Autos, Oil Rigs, Oil in Tanks, Compensation, Grain, Cotton, Etc.

CARTER & HENSLEE

Office Over Farmers National Bank.

CROSS PLAINS, TEXAS

The Man Nobody Knew

By HOLWORTHY HALL

"AND HERE IS HIS CROIX DE GUERRE"

Synopsis.—In a base hospital at Neuilly, France, his face disfigured beyond recognition, an American soldier serving in the French army attracts attention by his deep dependency. Asked by the surgeons for a photograph to give them in making over his face, he offers in return a picture of the Savior, bidding them take that as a model. They do so, making a remarkable likeness. Invalided home, on the boat he meets Martin Harmon, New York broker, who is attracted by his remarkable features. The ex-soldier gives his name as "Henry Hilliard," and his home as Syracuse, New York. He left there under a cloud, and is embittered against his former fellow townsmen. Harmon makes him a proposition to sell mining stocks in Syracuse, concealing his identity. He accepts it, seeing in it a chance to make good and prove he has been underestimated.

CHAPTER III.—Continued.

He knew, from meticulous study and practice, the full effect of his manner, which was distinguished, patrician. He knew the almost irresistible magnetism which had befitted him by accident. He had been prepared in his own imagination—for the battery of interest which was promptly trained upon him. And yet, as he pursued his luggage toward the desk, he faltered in his pride, he felt as though the sorrowful eyes of all Syracuse were riveted upon him; the well-remembered surroundings unmaned him, and he was impelled to halt, lift up his hands in token of surrender, and to cry out: "This is not I! This is not I! It is the man I might have been—if you and I had understood each other!"

So great was his anguish that in that moment he honestly believed that it was the equal fault of the city, and of himself, that he had gone forth discredited. Behind the desk stood a clerk and Hilliard's heart tripped—the manager who had tendered him the ultimatum. Hilliard's pen split a blot of ink on the register; his ears were tuned for the speech of recognition which would blast his dreams of triumph, and send him off again in multiplied disgrace.

"Yes, sir," said the clerk with extreme deference, "and about what price, sir?" The manager, who had been scrutinizing Hilliard intently, whispered something to the clerk; the clerk hit his lip and looked up sharply; the manager's face stiffened, "Parlez-vous français?" asked the clerk. "Very comfortable, sir."

The manager, as Hilliard retreated, said impatiently to the clerk: "What's the matter with you, Jimmy, anyway? Don't you know how to size up a man yet? Don't ask a man like that what he'll have—tell us what we've got!"

Epistates, Hilliard went limp from the reaction. He had doubted what he knew—and this was proof of his lack of innocence. But the manager—who two years ago had called him by his first name—the manager had looked him full in the face, and made not the faintest sign of recognition!

It was in improved confidence, then, that he went down to dinner; and deliberately chose a central seat in the most popular of the three available rooms. He was actively eager to be observed; now that he had passed his first examination, he craved test after test; no inspection could be too urgent for him. And at the nearest table sat a business man he knew, and a girl he knew; from their matter-of-fact attentiveness, he judged that they had been married during his absence; they gazed interminably at him, but only in admiration. He mentally checked off his list—that made a trio of old acquaintances who failed to know him. Facing him, a frozen feet away, sat a man who had been Hilliard's employer for an epochal six weeks—this man, too, was obviously interested, but uninterested. Four! A dinner party, comprising six girls and six young men, filled gayly past him; every one of the twelve he had known well, some of them intimately; they looked down at him in passing, and, without exception, went on in ignorance. A tiny roseleaf of a girl was rather noticeably attracted to him; she spoke to her partner, who turned, and stared, and nodded in the bored fashion of any escort to whom a handsome stranger is pointed out; and Hilliard could have laughed aloud at the irony of the incident. They had known each other for a dozen years, that girl and Hilliard; in the dozen and first, her mother had forbidden him her house.

He dined with considerable leisure, and smoked a cigar almost to the end before he left the table. When he quitted the room, it was with practical assurance that his gravest fears were groundless, but for an additional precaution he read an evening paper in the lobby and endured in safety the inspection of a score of men who had known him well enough to refuse to loan him money.

At half-past eight, vastly heartened and refreshed, he equipped himself with certain documents from his suitcase, and called for a taxicab. The address he gave the driver was high on the eastern hills; during the last half mile, Hilliard was peering out at the shaded lights of houses where he had played in his earlier youth. The car stopped; Hilliard went up a stone-flagged walk, waded up stone steps, and stood on a huge veranda. He was alone, and yet his senses were disconcertingly unsteady; he was deter-ed, and yet his heart was pumping in uneven beats; for the moment, his throat was dusty dry. As he gained the level of the veranda, there was a stir of activity off to the right, and an erect, middle-aged man clambered out of a hamper, and came briskly forward to back to the shadows. Hilliard could detect the soft outlines of a white dress.

"Yes?" The middle-aged man was politely brusque. "Is this . . . Mr. Cullen? Mr. James Cullen?"

"Yes, sir!" The middle-aged man was very convincing about it. "Yes, sir. What can I do for you?" Hilliard bowed stiffly from the hips—a touch of foreign courtesy which had its effect.

"If you're at leisure, Mr. Cullen, I should like very much to have a word with you. One of my friends here, my name is Hilliard. In brief, I've come up from New York today to bring you a letter from a young man named Richard Morgan."

"Morgan?" said the older man sharply. "Dick Morgan?" Back in the shadows there was a sudden rustle. "Where's he?"

"He's dead," said Hilliard. "He died in France." Mr. Cullen stood perfectly still, and Hilliard, watching him intently, was overcome by resentment at the knowledge that two years ago this man had held Hilliard's fate in his thick fingers.

"No!" said Mr. Cullen. "Of all things, I don't think I know about that! Dick Morgan dead?" There was surprise, but little indignation in his tone. "Isn't that terrible! And over in France! . . . Angela, did you hear that?"

More rustling from the shadows, and a slim figure stepping out of them into the foreground; it was Angela Cullen, just over the brink of seventeen, exquisitely small and blonde, and profoundly agitated by the news. Hilliard bowed mechanically; he had remembered her as a vivid little hoyden. Quicker than his beholding her now, but she had brought the first remembrance of untroubled days back to him, and the contrast hurt—abominably.

"Oh, dad!" she said with a quick intake of her breath. "Oh . . . dad!" And clung to him for refuge, staring the while with wide and fearful eyes at the tall stranger who had delivered the laconic message.

Cullen held her close, and cleared his throat. He was in the common-sense situation of a man who feels that he ought to be deeply moved, and isn't, and wonders why; and his transparent effort to be funeral was slightly overdone.

"It's a great shock to us—of course," he said, speaking slowly. "A great shock. . . . Oh! Mr. Hilliard—my daughter. Well, I must say I . . . Suppose we sit down and talk this over."

Hilliard bowed again; Mr. Cullen, his arm encircling Angela, led the way to the hammock and its reinforcement of wicker chairs. The trio was seated; Hilliard coughed delicately, and after that, there was a brief silence. Gradually, the air was charged with constraint. Here he was, and there was Angela and Mr. Cullen—all of them a little older, all of them a great deal more repressed, but even so, here they were, these three, just as they had sat in the same place, on the same sort of summer evenings, when Dicky Morgan wasn't yet an anthem, and when . . .

"This . . . this thing happened some time ago, did it? You were abroad yourself?"

"Yes, I was." "I want to hear about Dick," said Angela in a dry little voice. "Please! And . . . and who are you, Mr. Hilliard?"

"Angela!" said her father, reproachfully, but Hilliard, coughing with great vehemence, felt a sudden inrush of triumph which gave him confidence. It was the triumph of dramatic success; the consciousness that whatever might come next, he had actually appeared before people who knew him best, and that they saw a stranger. He smiled, as a churchman smiles.

"All I pretend to be is a friend of Dick's. I—"

"Back in May, 1915," he said, "I went to England and then to France to arrange some government contracts for copper products. In France, I was stung—as everyone—by the backlash of the war. And like everyone else, I did what I could on the spot . . . bought tobacco for the soldiers, and all that sort of thing. It isn't a question of charity, once you see the circumstances—you simply look, and realize that the most you can do is so trivial in comparison with what there is to be done that you . . . well, you do all you can and wish to heaven it were ten thousand times more. And then you try to find out where your mite will do the most good, and it staggers you because there are so many places where they need everything you have and everything everybody else has. So it happened that a friend of mine was in one of the American surgical units at Neuilly. I couldn't spread my own little contributions over all the institutions that needed it—there wouldn't have been enough to notice, so naturally I spent most of my time and most of my money at Neuilly. The cases there are all severe. The men need more help than the average, and there was one ward in particular . . . I won't describe it to you, but the first time I ever set foot in it, I knew I'd found the place to take all I had to give. And it was there that I met this man Morgan. He paused a moment. "And Morgan needed me more than anyone else in the ward."

"Was he . . . hurt so badly?" The girl's voice was taut with feeling. "Yes, badly," he said, "but that wasn't the point. He was alone. He was friendless. He was under the darkest cloud that ever man can live under. You know what it was, Mr. Cullen."

The older man nodded tardily. "I have an idea," he conceded. "Well, there he was—wounded, and marooned in France, and with a bad conscience. Perhaps you can understand why he got my sympathy."

"Poor Dick!" said Angela, barely above a whisper, and Hilliard, looking across at her, was stirred by vague intuitions which rendered him gutturally uncomfortable. It had simply never occurred to him in announcing the death of a man who had run away from Syracuse in disgrace, he might find pity and forgiveness waiting for expression. Was there still an opportunity for him to change his tactics, to admit that it was only the unregenerate soul and the outward countenance of Dicky Morgan that had perished, and to maintain that a new being, a penitent and resolute being, had arisen phoenixlike to make atonement for the wasted years that had been ended by shrapnel fire from the Hun? And suppose he did so, what would they say? If public opinion were to model itself upon the sorrow of poor little Angela Cullen, was it not better to confess at once, to wipe the slate clean, and to begin afresh? Had he said so much that the pathway to truth was closed—or was a lie well stuck to better than the truth, half told?

Morals, which are nothing but negative virtues anyway, hang on trifles. Hilliard was tottering on the utter-

"What his offense may have been, I don't know," said Hilliard, plunging doggedly into his narrative. "But he left town, so he told me, in a tremendous revulsion of feeling. His one ambition was to make something of himself, to wash out the past—to justify his existence. And he went overseas with the idea of genuine service and sacrifice. And very soon, terribly soon . . . during a night attack . . . they got him. Hilliard paused effectively. "There wasn't a chance in a hundred for him to recover, and he knew it. And then it came to him, blindly and desperately, that the world—that is, the world which had known him in his failures—would never hear what he had done. He had made his sacrifice, and it was useless. In hospital, he was Pierre Dutout, you see . . . and between that character, and his own, was the barrier of the subterfuge he had grasped so eagerly—his alias, and his false record. No one would have any reason to doubt that he wasn't what he purported to be. He craved to tell someone; to send back a message to his old friends; and I happened to be there—and he confided in me. And here I am, Mr. Cullen. Bringing credentials. Now, in the first place, I have a photograph of him, taken from his original passport. He produced it from his pocket, and offered it to Mr. Cullen. "Is there any mistake, sir? Or is it the Dick Morgan you know?"

Mr. Cullen switched on a standing lamp; Angela hid her face, and shrank back from the white electric glare. "Yes—yes." He gave the tiny picture to his daughter. "There's no question about it, Mr. Hilliard."

"That's Dick!" said Angela agonizedly. "With his signature, of course—you recognize it, do you?"

"It's his handwriting fast enough," conceded Mr. Cullen. He looked up at Hilliard, and his brows were furrowed, as though he were struggling to comprehend what all this had to do with the Cullen family. "Show dramatic boy, he was—always 'Dicky Morgan'—"

"Dramatic—yes. That is—imagin-

of furious helplessness, and brought back Hilliard to his senses. "Yes," said Hilliard, "he had plenty to be sorry for, and he was. Of his troubles here, I'm not capable of pitying as judge. Instead, I sat as confessor. So that you'll be more interested in that part of his life which you evidently haven't known about, and I have. He left here, I think, in December. He hadn't any fixed purpose; all he wanted was to find a place where he could begin over again on a fresh basis, and make a man of himself. . . . For that much, at least, you can give him credit."

"And I do," said Cullen approvingly. Hilliard, led again by the nervousness of deference from his deceptions, moved forward. A strong indorsement of Morgan's ambition at this juncture might yet have brought about a re-education.

"I'm glad you do, Mr. Cullen. . . . I think myself it was the only course he could have taken." He hung perilously upon the response; it would either justify or condemn his present attitude.

"That's probably why he took it," said Mr. Cullen. "Oh, I'm fair enough to him, Mr. Hilliard, but as for judgment—" He shook his head firmly. "What made him go to France?"

Hilliard sat back. The gates of truth, changed shut. "That came to him as the logical course," he said shortly. "He's not with some brother adventurers in New York, and they put the idea into his head. He had no money, so that he worked his passage across on the Mouette, a French tramp, in January, 1915. On the other side, he met a lieutenant of artillery who took a fancy to him. As you undoubtedly know, he spoke French like a native, and that made it easy for him. France is a land of papers, and of records; and papers and records can be created, shuffled—when there's a reason. The reason was that a republic needed men—and the lieutenant was willing to be a forger if that were a condition to his being a patriot. His conception of patriotism was to enlist every able-bodied man in the service of France. But at that time, the war was still rather exclusive as far as Americans were concerned. So that Dicky Morgan disappeared from earth—and there was a new soldier of the sixtieth Territorial by the name of Pierre Dutout . . . 'Peter Nobody.'"

"What!" said Mr. Cullen. Hilliard shrugged his shoulders. "I said he told me much about himself. He sailed under his own name, and I dare say you can verify that in New York. But when he landed, he took an alias. He had wanted to start over again, unhampered. Nothing could have been more opportune than this chance. See what it gave him! He simply dropped out of the world. . . . It was the possibility of losing himself utterly that first appealed to him. And there must have been a good cause."

"Yes," said Mr. Cullen absently. "There was. But . . . always the atypical, Dick was. That was so like him—to do just that sort of thing, and to do it just that way."

"As nearly as I could gather," said Hilliard, "he had been practically ostracized here. Is that correct?" He noted that Angela flinched at the suggestion, and that her head was drooping very low. "Oh! dad!" said Angela, pleadingly, below her breath. "Please don't say things like that—I can't stand any more."

"What his offense may have been, I don't know," said Hilliard, plunging doggedly into his narrative. "But he left town, so he told me, in a tremendous revulsion of feeling. His one ambition was to make something of himself, to wash out the past—to justify his existence. And he went overseas with the idea of genuine service and sacrifice. And very soon, terribly soon . . . during a night attack . . . they got him. Hilliard paused effectively. "There wasn't a chance in a hundred for him to recover, and he knew it. And then it came to him, blindly and desperately, that the world—that is, the world which had known him in his failures—would never hear what he had done. He had made his sacrifice, and it was useless. In hospital, he was Pierre Dutout, you see . . . and between that character, and his own, was the barrier of the subterfuge he had grasped so eagerly—his alias, and his false record. No one would have any reason to doubt that he wasn't what he purported to be. He craved to tell someone; to send back a message to his old friends; and I happened to be there—and he confided in me. And here I am, Mr. Cullen. Bringing credentials. Now, in the first place, I have a photograph of him, taken from his original passport. He produced it from his pocket, and offered it to Mr. Cullen. "Is there any mistake, sir? Or is it the Dick Morgan you know?"

of furious helplessness, and brought back Hilliard to his senses. "Yes," said Hilliard, "he had plenty to be sorry for, and he was. Of his troubles here, I'm not capable of pitying as judge. Instead, I sat as confessor. So that you'll be more interested in that part of his life which you evidently haven't known about, and I have. He left here, I think, in December. He hadn't any fixed purpose; all he wanted was to find a place where he could begin over again on a fresh basis, and make a man of himself. . . . For that much, at least, you can give him credit."

"And I do," said Cullen approvingly. Hilliard, led again by the nervousness of deference from his deceptions, moved forward. A strong indorsement of Morgan's ambition at this juncture might yet have brought about a re-education.

"I'm glad you do, Mr. Cullen. . . . I think myself it was the only course he could have taken." He hung perilously upon the response; it would either justify or condemn his present attitude.

"That's probably why he took it," said Mr. Cullen. "Oh, I'm fair enough to him, Mr. Hilliard, but as for judgment—" He shook his head firmly. "What made him go to France?"

Hilliard sat back. The gates of truth, changed shut. "That came to him as the logical course," he said shortly. "He's not with some brother adventurers in New York, and they put the idea into his head. He had no money, so that he worked his passage across on the Mouette, a French tramp, in January, 1915. On the other side, he met a lieutenant of artillery who took a fancy to him. As you undoubtedly know, he spoke French like a native, and that made it easy for him. France is a land of papers, and of records; and papers and records can be created, shuffled—when there's a reason. The reason was that a republic needed men—and the lieutenant was willing to be a forger if that were a condition to his being a patriot. His conception of patriotism was to enlist every able-bodied man in the service of France. But at that time, the war was still rather exclusive as far as Americans were concerned. So that Dicky Morgan disappeared from earth—and there was a new soldier of the sixtieth Territorial by the name of Pierre Dutout . . . 'Peter Nobody.'"

"What!" said Mr. Cullen. Hilliard shrugged his shoulders. "I said he told me much about himself. He sailed under his own name, and I dare say you can verify that in New York. But when he landed, he took an alias. He had wanted to start over again, unhampered. Nothing could have been more opportune than this chance. See what it gave him! He simply dropped out of the world. . . . It was the possibility of losing himself utterly that first appealed to him. And there must have been a good cause."

"Yes," said Mr. Cullen absently. "There was. But . . . always the atypical, Dick was. That was so like him—to do just that sort of thing, and to do it just that way."

"As nearly as I could gather," said Hilliard, "he had been practically ostracized here. Is that correct?" He noted that Angela flinched at the suggestion, and that her head was drooping very low. "Oh! dad!" said Angela, pleadingly, below her breath. "Please don't say things like that—I can't stand any more."

"What his offense may have been, I don't know," said Hilliard, plunging doggedly into his narrative. "But he left town, so he told me, in a tremendous revulsion of feeling. His one ambition was to make something of himself, to wash out the past—to justify his existence. And he went overseas with the idea of genuine service and sacrifice. And very soon, terribly soon . . . during a night attack . . . they got him. Hilliard paused effectively. "There wasn't a chance in a hundred for him to recover, and he knew it. And then it came to him, blindly and desperately, that the world—that is, the world which had known him in his failures—would never hear what he had done. He had made his sacrifice, and it was useless. In hospital, he was Pierre Dutout, you see . . . and between that character, and his own, was the barrier of the subterfuge he had grasped so eagerly—his alias, and his false record. No one would have any reason to doubt that he wasn't what he purported to be. He craved to tell someone; to send back a message to his old friends; and I happened to be there—and he confided in me. And here I am, Mr. Cullen. Bringing credentials. Now, in the first place, I have a photograph of him, taken from his original passport. He produced it from his pocket, and offered it to Mr. Cullen. "Is there any mistake, sir? Or is it the Dick Morgan you know?"

Mr. Cullen switched on a standing lamp; Angela hid her face, and shrank back from the white electric glare. "Yes—yes." He gave the tiny picture to his daughter. "There's no question about it, Mr. Hilliard."

"That's Dick!" said Angela agonizedly. "With his signature, of course—you recognize it, do you?"

"It's his handwriting fast enough," conceded Mr. Cullen. He looked up at Hilliard, and his brows were furrowed, as though he were struggling to comprehend what all this had to do with the Cullen family. "Show dramatic boy, he was—always 'Dicky Morgan'—"

"Dramatic—yes. That is—imagin-

of furious helplessness, and brought back Hilliard to his senses. "Yes," said Hilliard, "he had plenty to be sorry for, and he was. Of his troubles here, I'm not capable of pitying as judge. Instead, I sat as confessor. So that you'll be more interested in that part of his life which you evidently haven't known about, and I have. He left here, I think, in December. He hadn't any fixed purpose; all he wanted was to find a place where he could begin over again on a fresh basis, and make a man of himself. . . . For that much, at least, you can give him credit."

"And I do," said Cullen approvingly. Hilliard, led again by the nervousness of deference from his deceptions, moved forward. A strong indorsement of Morgan's ambition at this juncture might yet have brought about a re-education.

"I'm glad you do, Mr. Cullen. . . . I think myself it was the only course he could have taken." He hung perilously upon the response; it would either justify or condemn his present attitude.

"That's probably why he took it," said Mr. Cullen. "Oh, I'm fair enough to him, Mr. Hilliard, but as for judgment—" He shook his head firmly. "What made him go to France?"

Hilliard sat back. The gates of truth, changed shut. "That came to him as the logical course," he said shortly. "He's not with some brother adventurers in New York, and they put the idea into his head. He had no money, so that he worked his passage across on the Mouette, a French tramp, in January, 1915. On the other side, he met a lieutenant of artillery who took a fancy to him. As you undoubtedly know, he spoke French like a native, and that made it easy for him. France is a land of papers, and of records; and papers and records can be created, shuffled—when there's a reason. The reason was that a republic needed men—and the lieutenant was willing to be a forger if that were a condition to his being a patriot. His conception of patriotism was to enlist every able-bodied man in the service of France. But at that time, the war was still rather exclusive as far as Americans were concerned. So that Dicky Morgan disappeared from earth—and there was a new soldier of the sixtieth Territorial by the name of Pierre Dutout . . . 'Peter Nobody.'"

"What!" said Mr. Cullen. Hilliard shrugged his shoulders. "I said he told me much about himself. He sailed under his own name, and I dare say you can verify that in New York. But when he landed, he took an alias. He had wanted to start over again, unhampered. Nothing could have been more opportune than this chance. See what it gave him! He simply dropped out of the world. . . . It was the possibility of losing himself utterly that first appealed to him. And there must have been a good cause."

"Yes," said Mr. Cullen absently. "There was. But . . . always the atypical, Dick was. That was so like him—to do just that sort of thing, and to do it just that way."

"As nearly as I could gather," said Hilliard, "he had been practically ostracized here. Is that correct?" He noted that Angela flinched at the suggestion, and that her head was drooping very low. "Oh! dad!" said Angela, pleadingly, below her breath. "Please don't say things like that—I can't stand any more."

"What his offense may have been, I don't know," said Hilliard, plunging doggedly into his narrative. "But he left town, so he told me, in a tremendous revulsion of feeling. His one ambition was to make something of himself, to wash out the past—to justify his existence. And he went overseas with the idea of genuine service and sacrifice. And very soon, terribly soon . . . during a night attack . . . they got him. Hilliard paused effectively. "There wasn't a chance in a hundred for him to recover, and he knew it. And then it came to him, blindly and desperately, that the world—that is, the world which had known him in his failures—would never hear what he had done. He had made his sacrifice, and it was useless. In hospital, he was Pierre Dutout, you see . . . and between that character, and his own, was the barrier of the subterfuge he had grasped so eagerly—his alias, and his false record. No one would have any reason to doubt that he wasn't what he purported to be. He craved to tell someone; to send back a message to his old friends; and I happened to be there—and he confided in me. And here I am, Mr. Cullen. Bringing credentials. Now, in the first place, I have a photograph of him, taken from his original passport. He produced it from his pocket, and offered it to Mr. Cullen. "Is there any mistake, sir? Or is it the Dick Morgan you know?"

of furious helplessness, and brought back Hilliard to his senses. "Yes," said Hilliard, "he had plenty to be sorry for, and he was. Of his troubles here, I'm not capable of pitying as judge. Instead, I sat as confessor. So that you'll be more interested in that part of his life which you evidently haven't known about, and I have. He left here, I think, in December. He hadn't any fixed purpose; all he wanted was to find a place where he could begin over again on a fresh basis, and make a man of himself. . . . For that much, at least, you can give him credit."

"And I do," said Cullen approvingly. Hilliard, led again by the nervousness of deference from his deceptions, moved forward. A strong indorsement of Morgan's ambition at this juncture might yet have brought about a re-education.

"I'm glad you do, Mr. Cullen. . . . I think myself it was the only course he could have taken." He hung perilously upon the response; it would either justify or condemn his present attitude.

"That's probably why he took it," said Mr. Cullen. "Oh, I'm fair enough to him, Mr. Hilliard, but as for judgment—" He shook his head firmly. "What made him go to France?"

Hilliard sat back. The gates of truth, changed shut. "That came to him as the logical course," he said shortly. "He's not with some brother adventurers in New York, and they put the idea into his head. He had no money, so that he worked his passage across on the Mouette, a French tramp, in January, 1915. On the other side, he met a lieutenant of artillery who took a fancy to him. As you undoubtedly know, he spoke French like a native, and that made it easy for him. France is a land of papers, and of records; and papers and records can be created, shuffled—when there's a reason. The reason was that a republic needed men—and the lieutenant was willing to be a forger if that were a condition to his being a patriot. His conception of patriotism was to enlist every able-bodied man in the service of France. But at that time, the war was still rather exclusive as far as Americans were concerned. So that Dicky Morgan disappeared from earth—and there was a new soldier of the sixtieth Territorial by the name of Pierre Dutout . . . 'Peter Nobody.'"

"What!" said Mr. Cullen. Hilliard shrugged his shoulders. "I said he told me much about himself. He sailed under his own name, and I dare say you can verify that in New York. But when he landed, he took an alias. He had wanted to start over again, unhampered. Nothing could have been more opportune than this chance. See what it gave him! He simply dropped out of the world. . . . It was the possibility of losing himself utterly that first appealed to him. And there must have been a good cause."

"Yes," said Mr. Cullen absently. "There was. But . . . always the atypical, Dick was. That was so like him—to do just that sort of thing, and to do it just that way."

"As nearly as I could gather," said Hilliard, "he had been practically ostracized here. Is that correct?" He noted that Angela flinched at the suggestion, and that her head was drooping very low. "Oh! dad!" said Angela, pleadingly, below her breath. "Please don't say things like that—I can't stand any more."

"What his offense may have been, I don't know," said Hilliard, plunging doggedly into his narrative. "But he left town, so he told me, in a tremendous revulsion of feeling. His one ambition was to make something of himself, to wash out the past—to justify his existence. And he went overseas with the idea of genuine service and sacrifice. And very soon, terribly soon . . . during a night attack . . . they got him. Hilliard paused effectively. "There wasn't a chance in a hundred for him to recover, and he knew it. And then it came to him, blindly and desperately, that the world—that is, the world which had known him in his failures—would never hear what he had done. He had made his sacrifice, and it was useless. In hospital, he was Pierre Dutout, you see . . . and between that character, and his own, was the barrier of the subterfuge he had grasped so eagerly—his alias, and his false record. No one would have any reason to doubt that he wasn't what he purported to be. He craved to tell someone; to send back a message to his old friends; and I happened to be there—and he confided in me. And here I am, Mr. Cullen. Bringing credentials. Now, in the first place, I have a photograph of him, taken from his original passport. He produced it from his pocket, and offered it to Mr. Cullen. "Is there any mistake, sir? Or is it the Dick Morgan you know?"

Mr. Cullen switched on a standing lamp; Angela hid her face, and shrank back from the white electric glare. "Yes—yes." He gave the tiny picture to his daughter. "There's no question about it, Mr. Hilliard."

"That's Dick!" said Angela agonizedly. "With his signature, of course—you recognize it, do you?"

"It's his handwriting fast enough," conceded Mr. Cullen. He looked up at Hilliard, and his brows were furrowed, as though he were struggling to comprehend what all this had to do with the Cullen family. "Show dramatic boy, he was—always 'Dicky Morgan'—"

"Dramatic—yes. That is—imagin-

of furious helplessness, and brought back Hilliard to his senses. "Yes," said Hilliard, "he had plenty to be sorry for, and he was. Of his troubles here, I'm not capable of pitying as judge. Instead, I sat as confessor. So that you'll be more interested in that part of his life which you evidently haven't known about, and I have. He left here, I think, in December. He hadn't any fixed purpose; all he wanted was to find a place where he could begin over again on a fresh basis, and make a man of himself. . . . For that much, at least, you can give him credit."

"And I do," said Cullen approvingly. Hilliard, led again by the nervousness of deference from his deceptions, moved forward. A strong indorsement of Morgan's ambition at this juncture might yet have brought about a re-education.

"I'm glad you do, Mr. Cullen. . . . I think myself it was the only course he could have taken." He hung perilously upon the response; it would either justify or condemn his present attitude.

"That's probably why he took it," said Mr. Cullen. "Oh, I'm fair enough to him, Mr. Hilliard, but as for judgment—" He shook his head firmly. "What made him go to France?"

Hilliard sat back. The gates of truth, changed shut. "That came to him as the logical course," he said shortly. "He's not with some brother adventurers in New York, and they put the idea into his head. He had no money, so that he worked his passage across on the Mouette, a French tramp, in January, 1915. On the other side, he met a lieutenant of artillery who took a fancy to him. As you undoubtedly know, he spoke French like a native, and that made it easy for him. France is a land of papers, and of records; and papers and records can be created, shuffled—when there's a reason. The reason was that a republic needed men—and the lieutenant was willing to be a forger if that were a condition to his being a patriot. His conception of patriotism was to enlist every able-bodied man in the service of France. But at that time, the war was still rather exclusive as far as Americans were concerned. So that Dicky Morgan disappeared from earth—and there was a new soldier of the sixtieth Territorial by the name of Pierre Dutout . . . 'Peter Nobody.'"

"What!" said Mr. Cullen. Hilliard shrugged his shoulders. "I said he told me much about himself. He sailed under his own name, and I dare say you can verify that in New York. But when he landed, he took an alias. He had wanted to start over again, unhampered. Nothing could have been more opportune than this chance. See what it gave him! He simply dropped out of the world. . . . It was the possibility of losing himself utterly that first appealed to him. And there must have been a good cause."

"Yes," said Mr. Cullen absently. "There was. But . . . always the atypical, Dick was. That was so like him—to do just that sort of thing, and to do it just that way."

"As nearly as I could gather," said Hilliard, "he had been practically ostracized here. Is that correct?" He noted that Angela flinched at the suggestion, and that her head was drooping very low. "Oh! dad!" said Angela, pleadingly, below her breath. "Please don't say things like that—I can't stand any more."

"What his offense may have been, I don't know," said Hilliard, plunging doggedly into his narrative. "But he left town, so he told me, in a tremendous revulsion of feeling. His one ambition was to make something of himself, to wash out the past—to justify his existence. And he went overseas with the idea of genuine service and sacrifice. And very soon, terribly soon . . . during a night attack . . . they got him. Hilliard paused effectively. "There wasn't a chance in a hundred for him to recover, and he knew it. And then it came to him, blindly and desperately, that the world—that is, the world which had known him in his failures—would never hear what he had done. He had made his sacrifice, and it was useless. In hospital, he was Pierre Dutout, you see . . . and between that character, and his own, was the barrier of the subterfuge he had grasped so eagerly—his alias, and his false record. No one would have any reason to doubt that he wasn't what he purported to be. He craved to tell someone; to send back a message to his old friends; and I happened to be there—and he confided in me. And here I am, Mr. Cullen. Bringing credentials. Now, in the first place, I have a photograph of him, taken from his original passport. He produced it from his pocket, and offered it to Mr. Cullen. "Is there any mistake, sir? Or is it the Dick Morgan you know?"

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By REV. F. M. FITZPATRICK, D.D., Teacher of English Bible in the Bible Institute of Chicago (Copyright, 1924, Western Presbyterian Board)

LESSON FOR APRIL 18

THE VICTORY OF GIDEON

WE ARE Showing

The Newest Things
For Spring and Summer

The Shoes

Pumps, black and cordovans. Oxfords black and cordovan. Suads and White Kids. A fit for every foot.

The Stockings

The most complete line ever shown in Cross Plains.

Piece Goods

Georgette, plain and fancy; Crepe Dechine, Plain and Fancy Voils; Organdies, plain and fancy, Etc. Get our price first.

For the Men and Boys

We have a good line of Suits, Shoes, Hats, Shirts, Ties, in fact clothes for every one for work or play.

The Waist and Skirt

Must be seen to be sold. Take a look at our Ready-to-Wear.

When you think of Groceries,
staple or fancy, Phone No. 1.

The Cross Plains Mer.
Company

NEW LUMBER YARD

RIG TIMBERS

AND ALL KINDS

Building Material

Paints, Lime, Cement, Brick
Patton's "Sun-Proof"
Paints

Higginbotham Bros. & Co.
of Texas
CAPITAL $1,500,000.00

Herman Reiger, Mgr. Lumber Yard
CROSS PLAINS

NEW LUMBER YARD

Just Opened

Immediately South of the Railroad on Main Street

Ready to furnish both house bills and rig patterns.

We located in your town not altogether on account of the oil boom, but largely because of the opportunity this big trade territory offers in an agricultural way.

Our constant aim is to have what you want when you want it.

Come, let's get acquainted.

Clay & Butler Lbr. Co.

CITATION BY PUBLICATION.

The State of Texas,

To the Sheriff or any Constable of Callahan County—Greeting:

You are hereby commanded to summon J. F. Brown, J. M. Forbess, and the unknown heirs of J. M. Forbess, John
A. Haywood, and the unknown heirs of John A. Haywood by making publication of this Citation once in each week for four successive weeks previous to the return day hereof, in some newspaper published in your county, if there be a newspaper published therein, but if not, then in any newspaper published in the 42nd judicial district; but if there be no newspaper published in said judicial district, then in a newspaper published in the nearest district to said 42nd judicial district, to appear at the next regular term of the District Court of Callahan County, to be holden at the court house thereof, in Baird, Texas, on the 2nd Monday in May A. D. 1920, the same being the 10th day of May, A. D. 1920, then and there to answer a petition filed in said Court on the 2nd day of April A.
D. 1920, in a suit, numbered on the docket of said court No. 1930, wherein J. A. Hayward is plaintiff and J.
F. Brown and the unknown heirs of J. F. Brown, J. M. Forbess and the unknown heirs of J. M. Forbess, John
A. Haywood and the unknown heirs of John A. Haywood are defendants, and said petition alleging

The State of Texas,
County of Callahan.

In the District Court of Callahan
County, Texas, May Term, A. D. 1920,
To the Honorable District Court of said County:

1. Now comes J. A. Hayward, who resides in Shackelford County, Texas, hereinafter called plaintiff, complaining of J. F. Brown and the unknown heirs of J. F. Brown, J. M. Forbess and the unknown heirs of J. M. Forbess, Jno. A. Haywood and the unknown heirs of Jno. A. Haywood, residences unknown, hereinafter styled defendants, and for cause of action plaintiff represents to the Court that on or about the 9th day of March A.
D. 1893, he was lawfully seized and possessed of the following described tract of land, situated in Shackelford and Callahan counties, Texas, holding and claiming the same in fee simple, to-wit: One-quarter section University land, No. 117, containing 154.4 acres of land, situated in Shackelford and Callahan counties, Texas, title to said land having been acquired by plaintiff herein by deed of record in Volume I, page 466 of the Deed Records of Callahan County, Texas, and by deed of record in Volume 48
page 154 of the Deed Records of Shackelford County, Texas.

2. That on the day and year last aforesaid defendants unlawfully entered upon said premises and ejected plaintiff therefrom, and unlawfully withheld from him the possession thereof, to his damage in sum of Five Thousand Dollars.

3. Plaintiff further represents to the Court that on March 9th, A. D.
1893, J. F. Brown, executed and delivered to Jno. A. Haywood, a deed con-

Now Ready to Sell

Small lease two miles southeast of town.
Small tract in fee mile west of well, priced right.
Small royalty interest near Hilburn, Vestal or Odum's.
40 acre lease near Roxana, priced right.
5 to 20 acre, west; also northwest of town, near well.
Resident and business lots.
A good restaurant—might take in lease or royalty. Also a good rooming house, making good money.

Any kind of insurance, oil rigs, autos, compensation, etc.

Carter & Henslee

Oil Properties, Real Estate & Insurance.

veying to him, the aforesaid tract of land, that said deed was for a valuable consideration, to-wit: Five hundred dollars, which said consideration plaintiff then and there paid to defendant.

4. That plaintiff purchased said land as above that the name of plaintiff, the vendee in said deed was erroneously stated as Jno. A. Haywood, when same should have been John A.
Hayward. That said deed was signed
"J. F. Brown," when it should have been signed and executed by J. F.
Brown.

5. That said deed of conveyance was so, as aforesaid incorrectly written by the mistake of the writer who drew the same; that it did not express the mutual intent of the parties, but was executed and delivered by defendant Brown and was received by plaintiff, under a mutual mistake, of fact, and plaintiff has requested and demanded of defendant that he execute to him a correct and proper deed of said premises, but defendant has ever failed and refused and neglected and still refuses and neglects to comply with said request and demand.

6. Plaintiff alleges that he claims to have good and perfect title to the land above described, had had and held peaceably the land claimed and adverse possession of the same cultivating, using and enjoying the same for a period of more than ten years after defendants cause of action or right to said land, if any they have accrued, and before the commencement of this suit and this he is ready to verify.

7. That defendants are asserting or claiming some adverse interest or claim to said land and seek to establish a cloud on plaintiff's title to said land.

Wherefore plaintiff prays the court that defendants cited to appear to answer this petition and for judgment of the court, correcting said deed and that plaintiff have judgment for the title and possession of said above described land, and premises, and that writ of possession issue, for damage and cost of suit, and for other and further relief, special and general in law or equity, and that may be justly entitled to, etc.

J. RUPERT JACKSON,
Attorney for Plaintiff, Jno. A. Hayward.
Herein fail not, but have been said Court, at its aforesaid regular term, at this writ with your return thereon, showing how you have executed the same.
Given under my hand and seal
said Court, at office in Baird, Texas, this, the 5th day of April, A. D. 1920.
ROY D. WILLIAMS,
Clerk, District Court, Callahan County.

My Belgian Stallion
will make the season at my farm
miles west Cross Plains.
S. B. Edwards.

The Farmers' Gin, Cross Plains
for sale. Has four 80-saw stages in good condition, enjoying good patronage, with five-year lease on site. Bids considered to May 1st.
Address or see
J. H. McDonald, Pioneer.

Farm Impleme

Just received a large shipment of famous J. I. Case, John Deere and & O. Farm implements, consisting Plows Planters
Cultivators Harrows
Listers, Etc.

These implements have a reputation for satisfactory service—in other words they worth the money. We are anxious to sel all of your farm needs. Come in and let us and demonstrate them to you.

HIGGINBOTHAM BROS. &

20 Model "Four Ninety" TOURING

Two inches more road clearance, genuine crown fenders, genu comb radiator, improved steel frame, electric lights and stat plete lamp equipment, tailored one man top, top cover and tains, ventilated wind shield, speedometer, electric horn, and carrier on rear, foot rest, pocket in each door, robe rail equipment, including pump and jack. Price $885.00. C Monthly Payments.

Let Us Give You a Demonstration

C. S. BOYES, Agent, Cross Plains

MARY L. GRAVES Kill the Blue Bugs.

DENTIST
Mary L. Graves, Dentist, Cross Plains, Texas.
Office in Higginbotham Bros. building.
Phone No. 1.

NEW LUMBER YARD

Just Opened

Immediately South of the Railroad on Main Street

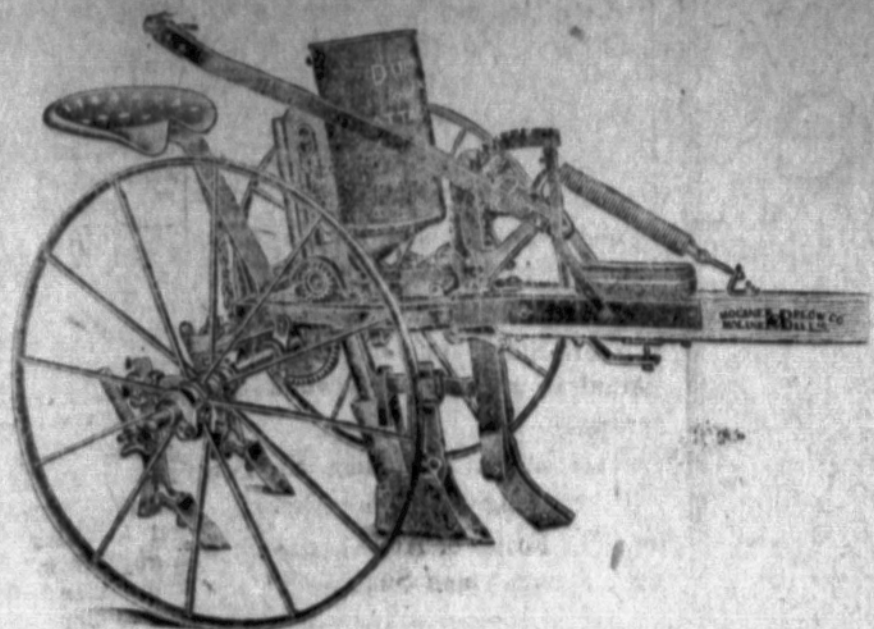

Ready to furnish both house bills and rig patterns.

We located in your town not altogether on account of the oil boom, but largely because of the opportunity this big trade territory offers in an agricultural way.

Our constant aim is to have what you want when you want it.

Come, let's get acquainted.

Clay & Butler Lbr. Co.

Farm Implements

Just received a large shipment of the famous J. I. Case, John Deere and P. & O. Farm implements, consisting of

Plows Planters
Cultivators Harrows
Listers, Etc.

These implements have a reputation for giving satisfactory service—in other words they are worth the money. We are anxious to sell you all of your farm needs. Come in and let us show and demonstrate them to you.

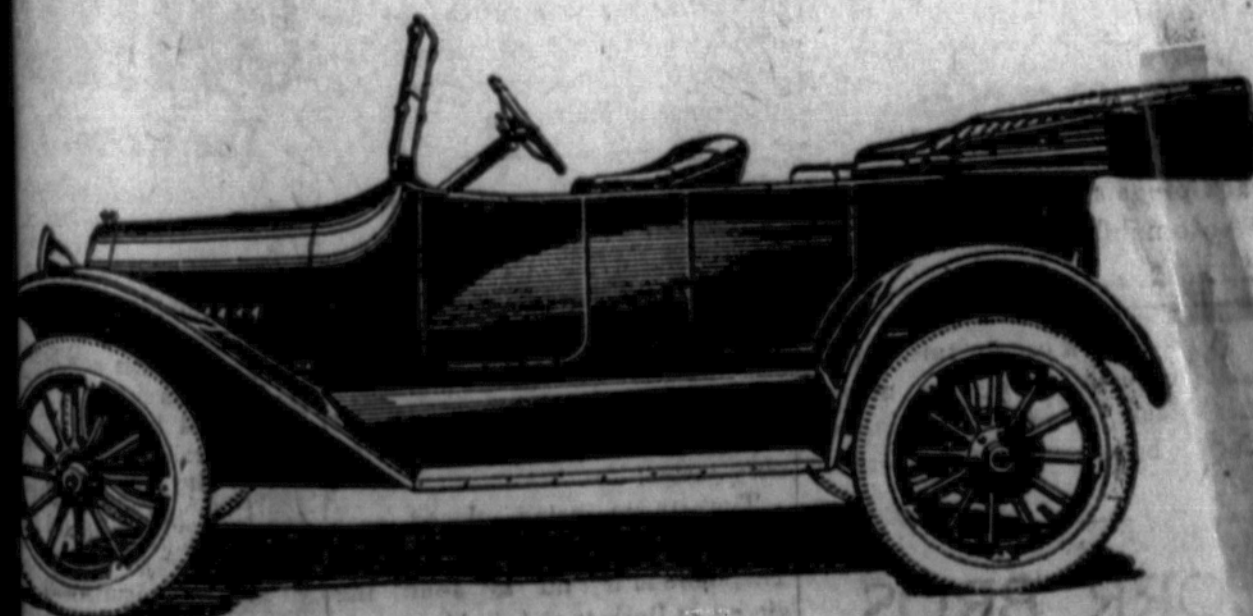

HIGGINBOTHAM BROS. & CO.

20 Model "Four Ninety" TOURING CAR

Two inches more road clearance, genuine crown fenders, genuine honey comb radiator, improved steel frame, electric lights and starter, complete lamp equipment, tailored one man top, top cover and side curtains, ventilated wind shield, speedometer, electric horn, extra rim and carrier on rear, foot rest, pocket in each door, robe rail, complete equipment, including pump and jack. Price $885.00. Cash or on Monthly Payments.

Let Us Give You a Demonstration.

C. S. BOYES, Agent, Cross Plains, Texas

MARY L. GRAVES Kill the Blue Bugs.

DENTIST

Kill the Blue Bugs.

SALE RATES.

SALE RATES.

SALE RATES.

SALE RATES.

SALE RATES.

SALE RATES.

SALE RATES.

SALE RATES.

SALE RATES.

SALE RATES.

Loydd Coplin of Cisco was here the first of the week the guest of his uncle, M. E. Wakefield.

Martin Jones has added a sleeping porch to his home west of the Baptist church. He is also repainting his home, and otherwise making it a real home to live in.

A. Lamont of the Liberty country is a new subscriber to the Review. He owns the old W. H. Lacy place, Mr. Lacy moving to Hardeman County.

Ben Randall of Hico has sent a check covering six months subscription for himself and Sam Randall. Mr. Randall used to live at Cottonwood, and still has property in that country.

A hint to the new city officers: Clean up the town for sanitary and health reasons and later go after material things.

New goods coming in every day. Save money by coming to The Racket Store.

Mr. & Mrs. Wright and Miss Beulah Harpole left on Sunday for various points south Texas for Mrs. Wright's health. Mr. Wright's place at Pryor lumber yard is taken by Ches Barr.

Buildings hardware, glass, Beaver Board, Shackelford's Lumber and Paint Store.

Eugene Miller, field man for the Youngstown Oil Co., returned here on Saturday from a trip to Youngstown, Ohio. He is still a believer in and a booster for the Cross Plains territory as an oil bearing country.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Wilkinson, Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Gwin and E. N. Schaffner and Miss Sophia Payne went fishing on the Bayou the first of this week.

New goods coming in daily. Save money by buying at The Racket Store.

Mrs. Walter Causey returned on Sunday from a visit with her parents at Carbon. Walter is cashier at the local Katy office.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Jim Harlow on April 13 a boy.

I. Griffith of Kress in Hale County came to Cross Plains on Tuesday the guest of his nephew, L. P. Hensley. As a boy the latter, being an orphan, spent several years with Mr. Griffith in Fannin County.

DEVORE'S floor, buggy, wagon, inside, outside, roof PAINTS. Complete stock; also wood stains, varnishes, colors in oil, linseed oil, all sizes in brushes and enamels. Shackelford's Lumber and Paint Store.

Mr. Wesley some time back sold his Cross Plains home to Ranger parties.

A. S. Baker of Snyder is a new subscriber to the Review. He says he likes to keep up with his home country thru the local paper.

C. A. Kent, who lives north of town has been threatening to take the Review for 1920 in case he could dispose of his lease at fabulous prices, at last decided that he had cause and effect confused, and has lined up with the Review in order to help him sell his oil interests well.

The Mayo Studio of Brownwood who has been running a small ad in the Review relatives to their line of work, has reneged for the ad with a call for the continuance of the good work. It pays to advertise.

A De Laval cream separator, used very little, for sale. See J. A. Atwood

FOR RENT, the L. P. Wood farm near Liberty.

For Sale—14 young fullblood Brown Leghorn hens, one cockrell. Beauties. $1.50 each. Mrs. C. M. Erwin, Nimrod.

Cross Plains District Map. The edges of the map from the Vernal well are about 4 1/2 north, 7 1/2 south, 4 1/2 miles east and 7 1/2 miles west respectively therefrom. Scale 2000 feet to the inch; shows surveys, land owners, fences and wells drilling. White prints on linen $4.00 each. Jackson Abernethy Co., Baird, Texas.

It you intend to build

Or have anything built, visit our yard and let us show you how you can save money. We have a large stock of building materials of all kinds, including shingles, doors, paints, oils and builder's hardware.

Sherwin-Williams Paints Are Best

W. W. PRYOR

Serving You With Good Groceries

That is our business, and we always try to make our service as good as our groceries. Goods well bought are half sold. We buy right to sell right and work on the basis of rapid sales and reasonable profits. We both profit if you trade with us. Your business will be appreciated.

Ask your neighbor: He trades Here.

W. E. BUTLER GROCERY

Cisco Floral Company
J. B. ELY, Proprietor

Phone 110 Cisco, Texas
Flowers for All Occasions
Vegetables and Flower Plants
Nursery Stock

Gray-Stacy Motor Co.

Successor to Jones & Sully

Authorized Agents for Ford Parts. Get the genuine Ford Parts. Will have in a big shipment in a few days.

Local Agents for Oakland Cars
Garage in Connection

Bring your car around when it needs tuning up. Expert mechanics. Gasoline, Oils, Free Air, Service Cars, Light Hauling with Reco Speed Wagons.

PHONE 161

S. C. Sipes Sheet Metal Works

Manufacturer of All Kinds Sheet Metal Products

Pipe and Pipe Fittings, Plumbing, Bath Tubs and Lavatories

Tanks of All Kinds

If you need anything in the plumbing or tinning line, phone 64 or 65 S. C. SIPES, Cross Plains, Texas

Now Ready to Sell

Small lease two miles southeast of town.
Small tract in fee mile west of well, priced right.
Small royalty interest near Hilburn, Vestal or Odum's.
40 acre lease near Roxans, priced right.
5 to 20 acre, west; also northwest of town, near well.
Resident and business lots.

A good restaurant—might take in lease or royalty. Also a good rooming house, making good money.

Any kind of insurance, oil rigs, autos, compensation, etc.

Carter & Henslee

Oil Properties, Real Estate & Insurance.

veying to him, the aforesaid tract of land, that said deed was for a valuable consideration, to-wit: Five hundred dollars, which said consideration plaintiff then and there paid to defendant.

4. That plaintiff purchased said land as above that the name of plaintiff, the vendee in said deed was erroneously stated as Jno. A. Hayward, when same should have been John A. Hayward. That said deed was signed "J. F. Brown," when it should have been signed and executed by J. M. Forbess.

5. That said deed of conveyance was so, as aforesaid incorrectly written by the mistake of the writer who drew the same; that it did not express the mutual intent of the parties, but was executed and delivered by defendant Brown and was received by plaintiff, under a mutual mistake, of fact, and plaintiff has requested and demanded of defendant that he execute to him a correct and proper deed of said premises, but defendant has ever failed and refused and neglected and still refuses and neglects to comply with said request and demand.

6. Plaintiff alleges that he claims to have good and perfect title to the land above described, had had and held peaceably the land claimed and adverse possession of the same cultivating, using and enjoying the same for a period of more than ten years after defendants cause of action or right to said land, if any they have accrued, and before the commencement of this suit and this he is ready to verify.

7. That defendants are asserting or claiming some adverse interest or claim to said land and premises which is a cloud on plaintiff's title to land. Wherefore plaintiff prays the court that defendants cited to appear to answer this petition and for judgment of the court, correcting said deed and that plaintiff have judgment for the title and possession of said above described land, and premises, and that writ of possession issue, for the damage and cost of suit, and for other and further relief, special and general in law or equity, and that he may be justly entitled to, etc.

J. RUPERT JACKSON, Attorney for Plaintiff, Jno. A. Hayward.

Herein fail not, but have before said Court, at its aforesaid regular term, this writ with your return thereon, showing how you have executed the same.

Given under my hand and seal of said Court, at office in Baird, Texas, this 5th day of April, A. D. 1920.

ROY D. WILLIAMS, Clerk, District Court, Callahan County, Texas.

My Belgian Stallion will make the season at my farm miles west Cross Plains. S. B. Edwards.

The Farmers' Gin, Cross Plains for sale. Has four 80-saw stacks in good condition, enjoying good patronage, with five-year lease. Site bids considered to May. Address or see J. H. McDonald, Pioneer.

NOTATION BY PUBLICATION.

State of Texas.

to the Sheriff or any Constable of Callahan County—Greeting:

You are hereby commanded to summon J. F. Brown, the unknown heirs of J. F. Brown, J. M. Forbess, and the unknown heirs of J. M. Forbess, John Hayward, and the unknown heirs of John A. Hayward by making publication of this Citation once in each week for four successive weeks previous to the return day hereof, in a newspaper published in your county, if there be a newspaper published therein, but if not, then in any newspaper published in the 42nd judicial district; but if there be no newspaper published in said judicial district, then in a newspaper published in the nearest district to said judicial district, to appear at the next regular term of the District Court of Callahan County, to be held at the court house thereof, in said county, Texas, on the 2nd Monday in May, A. D. 1920, the same being the 15th day of May, A. D. 1920, then and there to answer a petition filed in said Court on the 2nd day of April, A. D. 1920, in a suit, numbered on the docket of said court No. 1930, wherein J. A. Hayward is plaintiff and J. F. Brown and the unknown heirs of J. F. Brown, J. M. Forbess and the unknown heirs of J. M. Forbess, John Hayward and the unknown heirs of John A. Hayward are defendants, and said petition alleging the State of Texas, County of Callahan.

In the District Court of Callahan County, Texas, May Term, A. D. 1920, of the Honorable District Court of said County:

1. Now comes J. A. Hayward, who resides in Shackelford County, Texas, hereinafter called plaintiff, complaining of J. F. Brown and the unknown heirs of J. F. Brown, J. M. Forbess and the unknown heirs of J. M. Forbess, Jno. A. Hayward and the unknown heirs of Jno. A. Hayward, respondents unknown, hereinafter styled defendants, and for cause of action plaintiff represents to the Court that on or about the 9th day of March, A. D. 1893, he was lawfully seized and possessed of the following described tract of land, situated in Shackelford and Callahan counties, Texas, holding and claiming the same in fee simple, to-wit:

One-quarter section University land, No. 117, containing 126 1/2 acres of land, situated in Shackelford and Callahan counties, Texas, title to said land having been acquired by plaintiff herein by deed of record in Volume I, page 466 of the Deed Records of Callahan County, Texas, and by deed of record in Volume 48 page 154 of the Deed Records of Shackelford County, Texas.

2. That on the day and year last aforesaid defendants unlawfully entered upon said premises and ejected plaintiff therefrom, and unlawfully withheld from him the possession thereof, to his damage in sum of Five Thousand Dollars.

3. Plaintiff further represents to the Court that on March 9th, A. D. 1893, J. F. Brown, executed and delivered to Jno. A. Hayward, a deed con-

