Bone marrow needed to help Roy Lee Helms

The National Bone Marrow Donor Program will be conducting a drive in Clarendon on June 29, 1996, from 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. at First Baptist Church on behalf of Roy Lee Helms.

Helms, a lifelong resident of Donley county and a farmer in the Lelia Lake Community, was diagnosed with acute myelogenous leukemia (AML) in October of last year.

After a period of remission, the leukemia has reoccurred and he is currently undergoing treatment at University Medical Center in Lubbock. Doctors have advised that a bone marrow transplant is essential to saving his life. Although Roy Lee's family have all been tested and the National Bone Marrow Bank has been searched, no match has been found for him.

The test for compatibility is a simple blood test from a very small sample drawn from the arm. If you are a compatible marrow match then a small amount of marrow is extracted from the back of the pelvic bone using a special needle and syringe. The donor is under anesthesia during this simple surgical procedure. Typically, the donor stays overnight in the hospital. After being discharged, the donor can resume normal activity, although you may experience some soreness for several days, a week, or slightly longer. Your marrow naturally replenishes itself within a few weeks.

To be eligible to be tested, donor candidates must be between the ages of 18 and 60 and be in good general health. Those persons who are tested will be registered with the National Bone Marrow Bank. Opportunities to register, to be tested, and details of the drive will be available at various locations around the community throughout the next three weeks. Donations are being accepted to help defray the cost of the drive. An account has been opened at First Bank and Trust for this purpose.

Please seriously consider what your part in this endeavor will be and please pray that a match will be found for Roy Lee. If you have any questions, please call 874-3651 and leave a message. Your call will be returned.

WHAT A MESS. A Burlington Northern train derailed last week east of Clarendon, spilling its cargo of coal and wheat. The cause of the derailment was not immediately determinable, but observers noted that it looked like one car had lost its wheels. The train had sparked one grass fire near Ashtola and another east of town before leaving the tracks.

Elliott elected to PIN directors board

Dr. Scott Elliott, president of Clarendon College, has been elected to the Panhandle Information Network (PIN) Board of Directors.

The PIN is a consortium of public school districts, colleges, hospitals, and libraries who are joining forces to ultimately provide the Texas Panhandle with an array of information services through contemporary electronic means.

"As distance learning is and will continue to be a major mode of educational delivery," Elliott commented, "it is essential that Clarendon College be positioned to take advantage of the opportunities that will be created through this consortium."

Elliott said that it is expected that the consortium will be engaged in such activities as interactive video classrooms, Internet access, and one-way broadcasts of classes.

"Technology has developed faster than our ability as educational institutions to take advantage of it," Elliott said. "Through the PIN, Clarendon College will be part of an entity that will hopefully have some real ability to benefit from the public funds that will become available for distance learning projects."

Other colleges and universities associated with the PIN are West Texas A&M University, Amarillo College, and Frank Phillips College.

Elliott noted that the PIN will undoubtedly be involved in variety of services, including the ability to engage in conferences, seminars, and meetings over satellite.

"The ability for Clarendon College employees to take part in meetings and conferences electronically rather than flying to Austin will ultimately prove a significant cost savings in the future," Elliott said.

The Clarendon College first-year president said the PIN is also very important in terms of having some control over what is electronically delivered in the Panhandle in upcoming years.

"The PIN is absolutely vital in terms of coordinating all the opportunities its membership can either generate or access," Elliott explained. "There are numbers of opportunities to earn college credits (and even whole degrees) over the Internet right now. No consortium can regulate that, but we can at least present an alternative that has quality control as one of its real points of emphasis."

As the PIN continues to develop, more information will be provided by the college.

Clarendon files ELC petition for area cities

An application has been filed with the Public Utilities Commission for Clarendon to receive Expanded Local Calling Services to Amarillo, Lakeview, Memphis, Pampa, and Wellington. ELC approval is a long process, and the Enterprise will have more information in the near future.

Excavations taking place at Greenbelt

More than 200 professional and avocational archeologists are working in Clarendon this week as part of the 1996 Texas Archeological Society (TAS) Field School.

The Field School is being held at the Greenbelt Site near Lake Greenbelt. Known as 41DY17, the Greenbelt Site was designated a State Archeological Landmark in 1994, and has long been recognized as one of the premier cultural resources in the region.

The site was discovered and first recorded in 1966 by Dr. Jack Hughes and Bill Harrison. Excavations since that time have revealed subterranean houses with post holes (pithouses); hearths; trash pits; a variety of stone tools; bone artifacts; and food source remains. Specific tools recovered indicate that agriculture was well-established at the site. Extensive looting by pothunters has caused severed damage to the site over the

Is Texas an independent nation?

Republic of Texas says annexation was illegal and Texas has been 'captured nation of war' since end of Civil War

All political power is inherent in the people, and all free governments are founded on their authority, and instituted for their benefit; and they have at all times the inalienable right to alter their government in such manner as they see fit.

"They shouldn't have put that last part in there," said Archie Lowe with a grin.

Lowe quoted that passage from the 1836 Constitution of the Republic of Texas at the Libertarian Party State Convention in Lubbock last Friday night as party officials invited the representatives of the Republic of Texas to explain their position that Texas was never properly admitted to the United States of America.

Lowe, who is the president of the provisional government of the republic, opened the meeting by outlining the need for Texas to reassert her independence in the face of an ever-growing and over powering Federal bureaucracy.

"Lands are being stolen. The judicial system has been perverted, and we are becoming victims of a growing police state," President Lowe said.

Lowe was originally elected as the Secretary of Defense for the provisional government when concerned citizens sent delegates to a San Antonio convention to restore the republic last December. After the first provisional president was expelled by the General Council and after the vice president resigned for personal reasons, Lowe became president through succession. Prior to becoming president of the republic, Lowe was a senior design engineer for an electronics firm in Dallas.

Lowe blasted American foreign and domestic policies and regulatory agencies. He also discounted the Clinton administration's claims of a growing economy saying, "If we (America) were really successful, we would be building more Neiman Marcus stores and not more Wal-Marts."

Also speaking at Friday's forum was the republic's Chief Ambassador and Consul General Richard McLaren. He arrived after just being released from the Midland County Jail where he was serving a 34-day sentence for a contempt of court charge.

"Basically, he made a federal judge mad at him," said President Lowe.

It is McLaren who has done most of the research to substantiate the republic's claim to independence. He has turned up several points he says support the republic.

McLaren points first to the U.S. Constitution and notes that no provision was ever made to admit sovereign nations to the union. "States can only be created from existing states or from territory acquired by the United States," he said. "Texas was not a territory, it was a sovereign nation."

He quotes passages in the Congressional Record which reports senators at the time as saying annexation of Texas was illegal, and he also quotes John Quincy Adams as stating the U.S. has no authority to admit sovereign nations to the union. But even if admission to the union was legal, McLaren told the Enterprise, the people of Texas dissolved that union in 1861 by a three to one popular vote and reclaimed the Republic of Texas.

McLaren mentions the passage of the 1836 Constitution quoted by Lowe and notes that the same wording appeared in the 1845 Constitution. More importantly, he says, an 1847 U.S. Supreme Court ruling upheld the 1845 Constitution and confirmed that provisions of the 1836 document were still in force.

After the Civil War, McLaren says Texas became a "captive nation of war similar to Japan, Germany, or the Balkans" and was forced to create the state constitution of 1876 by the U.S. government.

Both Lowe and McLaren emphasized that the Republic of Texas is not a militia movement and does not have any connections to such groups as the Montana Freeman. They also said that they are not secessionists. They believe that Texas is not a legal state, so the act of secession is not necessary.

"We want to do this (establish the republic) in a lawful, legal, and most of all peaceful manner," President Lowe said in an interview with the Enterprise.

The provisional government has outlined plans for a transition to the republic. Those plans call for a 75 to 80% reduction in the size of government through downsizing and privatization.

The Texas Libertarian Party has taken no official position on the republic's claims, but it has for many years called for a state referendum on whether Texas should be a state or independent nation.

"We're the only party with the courage, conviction, and determination to offer people the chance to decide this issue," said Libertarian spokesman Wesley Burnett.

The next steps for the Republic of Texas, McLaren says, are to continue following their course through the legal system and to gain an opportunity to speak to the United Nations.

The Republic of Texas: Who are these guys anyway?

When I read in the Amarillo Daily News last week that the Republic of Texas was going to be speaking in Lubbock and that they were claiming that Texas was illegally annexed by the US, I thought to myself, "Now this I gotta hear."

Ok, so maybe we didn't go exactly by the book in 1845, but both sides (the US and the RT) voluntarily agreed to the annexation. How could Texas come back 150 years later and claim it was illegal?

Considering that media reports recently have mentioned the Republic of Texas group in the same breath as they do the Montana Freemen, I thought this would be a good chance to see some wackos up close and personal. I wanted to know exactly who it was that was giving legitimate conservatives and libertarians a bad name.

So armed with what I consider to be a pretty good knowledge of Texas history, I headed down to Lubbock to check these guys out.

I knew what to expect. I had seen videos on 20/20 and Nightline of the Montana Freemen and other groups. Shots of unkempt guys shouting incoherently at judges and law enforcement personnel about them violating imaginary parts of the Constitution came to my mind as I entered the hotel where the forum was to be held.

I was surprised.

The representatives of the Republic of Texas were not like that at all. These men were rational, intelligent, calm, cool, and collected. They also had a great sense of humor, which I appreciate in anyone.

What surprised me most is that I found that a case could easily be made for their arguments. The crux of their position isn't really illegal annexation in 1845; it is defeat in 1865.

The argument goes like this: The people of the State of Texas (whether it as a legal or illegal state is irrelevant) voluntarily left or seceded from the United States in 1861. This action was fully in keeping with the founding principals of both America and Texas and was supported by the constitutions of both the state and the Republic of Texas and the declarations of independence of both America and Texas. At the end of the Civil War, Texas was captured and forced back into the union. Texas, the argument goes, shouldn't be a part of the US any more than Lithuania should have been a part of the Soviet Union.

On several occasions in graduate school I had raised questions about the motivations of the United States during the Civil War. Fact: It took about ten years after the war for the Southern states to be "re-admitted to the union." Why, I asked my classmates and professors, did they have to be re-admitted? The position of the US had been that those states had never left the union and were simply in a condition of rebellion. You couldn't leave the union. Secession was not an option. That was the justification the US used for its actions in the war.

However, the fact that Texas and other Southern states had to be "re-admitted" seemed to be tantamount acknowledgment that those states had in fact left the union. Therefore, they had to be forced at gunpoint, during ten years of military occupation, to re-write their state constitutions and "rejoin" the American union.

It never really occurred to me to take that argument a step further, which is what the representatives of the Republic of Texas have done.

Texas, they claim, is still a captured nation, and they say they want to pursue this idea in the international arena by working to get a chance to speak on the floor of the United Nations.

Wow.

We always say things are big in Texas. The plans of this bunch certainly are that.

But what has these guys so upset? Why are they bending over backwards to find some little known way in which Texas might slip out the backdoor of the American union?

Well, I found that out, too. It wasn't that big of a mystery. They were meeting at the Libertarian Convention after all. And the Libertarians are adamant about being against big government.

The supporters of the Republic of Texas are simply fed up with big government in Washington (and Austin). They have had it with out of control crime and excessive regulations. They have given up on changing the system and have decided to scrap it.

Whether you agree or disagree with their position, you can be sure that these guys aren't going away. Movements like these are growing.

Fortunately, this group is peaceful and is working more or less within the system.

Montana isn't so lucky. They just have a bunch of nuts up there.

Corrections:

In last week's article for the American Cancer Society, Margaret Pettit's name was inadvertently left off as the Chair of the Howardwick fund raising efforts. We have also received word that the Donley Unit of the ACS has raised $4,874 so far this year.

In the graduation notice from West Texas A&M University, the information from WTAMU incorrectly stated that Tina Hook and Jenny Owens received B.S. degrees in "undeclared majors." Tina and Jenny both actually earned their degrees in Interdisciplinary Studies with a focus in Reading.

"The Plaza Preacher"

Standing in front of the Alamo absorbing a bigtime chunk of Texas history, it was an extraordinarily steamy June evening.

I had just finished a tedious day of attending seminars at a national summit of college educators. In the distance, I heard a voice piercing the sticky air like a jet shattering the sound barrier.

"Wonder what all the fuss is about?" I thought to myself, as the voice originating from the plaza gazebo attracted me with Pied Piper magnetism.

As I ventured closer, I spied a bearded man pacing back and forth like an expectant father. His clothing might have been charitably described as threadbare. He wore a gray, moth-eaten T-shirt, cutoff denim shorts with frayed ends, and a treadless pair of tennis shoes, doubtless rescued from some smelly trash bin.

In one hand he grasped a Holy Bible, while gesturing wildly with the other, as if to poke a hole in the cloudless blue sky. He spoke to no one in particular, rather anyone who might lend an ear.

With the wiry fellow bellowing on, I ambled over to a stone wall, taking a load off in the shade. While endeavoring not to gawk, I listened for a while to his sermon in the sun.

He spoke of Solomon, feverishly yelling, "He was one of the wisest men in history! Yet, he lost his focus on God!"

My mind researching the scriptures about King David's unsuspecting successor, the self-appointed plaza preacher continued with, "How many of you have lost your focus? How many of you are focusing on worldly things?"

About that time my eyes met the preacher's, and it was as if he was looking right through me. I'd endured enough, reasoning, "I don't know who he's barking at, but it can't be me."

Nazarene Youth raise money for mission trip

The youth will also have a car wash at the Carter Chevron Station on Thursday, June 13. They will begin washing cars at 9:00 a.m. and will continue until about 6:00 p.m. They can also pick up and deliver cars if you are at work. Proceeds will go to a mission trip to Mexico and church camp.

Finch runner up in Most Photogenic

Laura Finch was first runner up in the Most Photogenic category of the the Miss North Texas America Coed Pageant held May 26 in Dallas.

Finch was supported by many local residents and businesses and residents. A $100 gas raffle helped pay for part of her expenses. Charlena Ford was the winner in the raffle.

Strangely annoyed, I began a trek of several blocks back to the hotel, my assessment of the stormy thumper becoming more caustic with each hurried step.

"That bum's got to be half crazy yelling like that out in the heat," I critiqued. "Betcha the loony never had a job in his whole sorry life."

Maneuvering through the storied plaza the next day, I heard that unmistakable railing again. This time he was preaching on man's obsession with material wealth. At one point, he quoted the "eye of the needle" passage, while waving his arms about like a frenzied Leonard Bernstein.

Then his brown eyes met mine again - a haunting look that caused chills to run down my spine in the 100-degree sauna. I scurried off like a rabbit in rabbit season.

As my quickened pace neared the hotel, oddly my thoughts drifted back to a short story I'd authored in a college creative writing class. It was about a young man running away from home who encounters a transient on a bus station bench. While I never really identify the protagonist, the connotation is that the derelict was Christ-like. Because the troubled young man in my story didn't recognize the face, he couldn't hear the message.

Laying on my soft bed, a stone's skip from the famed Riverwalk, I stared at the ceiling, unable to shake my vision of the plaza preacher. I took pause, considering, "If Christ came back today, would I know him?"

So incredibly quick was I to judge. No big surprise - I'd done it a zillion times before. But at face value, the tattered Alamo orator was engaged in something far more positive than anything I'd ever done. Yet, irrespective of his powerful message, he drew mocks, rather than flocks.

Was it his seedy appearance that made me squirm? Or was it his poignant pitch?

I guess it doesn't matter. Both are pretty glaring statements.

Hommel house featured on DCSC "Tour Of Homes"

The Donley County Senior Citizens is sponsoring a "Tour of Homes" to be held on June 22, 1996, from 1:00 p.m. until 5:00 p.m. Since the Donley County Senior Citizens does not receive 100 percent funding from the federal government and senior meal programs are facing even more funding cuts, the board members and fund raiser committee members are constantly looking for creative ways to raise money to benefit their meals. The "Tour of Homes" will feature five of Clarendon and Donley County's most unique and interesting homes. Each home owner has written an informative history of their home that will be handed out on the tour. The home to be featured this week is the home of Kathy and Gene Hommel.

F.A. White's father moved his family to Texas after fighting in the Civil War. Times were hard and the family thought it would be better in Texas. They first moved to Terrell, Texas, and in 1896 moved on to Hedley. Mr. White owned stock in the Hedley bank, owned farm land, and was in the dry goods business. One of his sons, F.A. White, bought three lots and their improvements in the original town of Clarendon on October 5, 1900, for $300. The deed shows that the payments were $5 a month and the Interstate Savings and Investment Company of Denver, Colorado, charged an interest rate of a flat 10 percent.

In 1903, MR. and Mrs. F.A. White moved their six children to the home located on the first of the three lots. He made plans to build a larger home on the two other lots when his family out grew the one they were in. Mr. White drew up the plans himself and hired the contractor. His plans called for each board in the frame of the house to be doubled. Mr. White found that the contractor was not following the plans and hired a new contractor. The new home was completed in 1917. The home is located at 422 West 4th Street and is now owned by Gene and Kathy Hommel.

The Lions Tale

By Gene Alderson

The Clarendon Lions Club held its regular meeting at noon on Tuesday, June 4, 1996, at the Lions Hall. Nineteen members, one guest, and Clayton Ferris, who plays the piano for the meetings, were present.

Following the meal, the meeting was called to order by Boss Lion Johnson. After the regular opening ceremony, Lion Tamer Henson introduced Russell Estlack, who was the guest of Lion Allen Estlack.

In lieu of a scheduled program, Lion Shelton amazed those present by correctly stating the age of Lions Mann and Alderson and also the amount of change that they had in their pocket. He did this after they completed a series of mathematical computations and gave him only the total.

There was no business to be discussed, the meeting was adjourned.

The Clarendon Lion Club held its regular meeting at noon on Tuesday, June 11, 1996. Twenty members, three guest, and the club's piano player, Clayton Ferris, enjoyed a delicious Mexican dinner before the meeting was called to order by vice president Todd Knorpp.

Following the regular opening ceremony, the guests were introduced including James Bell, who is the new minister at the First United Methodist Church. Rev. Bell stated that he was glad to be in Clarendon and that he had been a member of a Lions Club in a town where he was located 36 years ago. This club probably had a much better chance of signing Mr. Bell up as a new member before Lion Knorpp mentioned something about him getting his dues caught up for the past 36 years.

Program Chairman Smith introduced Larry Goetze, who brought the program. Larry stated that the government agency he works for had gone through a lot of reorganization in the past year. His agency was formally known as the Farmers Home Administration (FHA). The current name is farm Service Agency and Larry is the Ag Credit Manager. He was raised in Iowa Park and has been with FHA for 12 years. His office serves Donley, Wheeler, Gray, Armstrong, and Carson counties. The program was both interesting and informative.

There was no business to be conducted so the meeting was adjourned.

Check It Out

By Mary Beth Nelson

Anyone in this area interested in the annual Fort Worth Fat Stock Show? Ridiculous question, isn't it? You could inform me of more about this fabulous event than I could ever tell you.

You for whom this show holds special interest each year will be glad to know of Burton Memorial Library's book, "A Hundred Years of Heroes," history of the Southwestern Exposition and Livestock Show, by Clay Reynolds.

In 1942, records documenting the first fifty years of the Stock Show were completely destroyed by flashing floods from the Trinity River. Efforts of Mr. Reynolds' extensive research have resulted in validated statements presenting colorful, accurate occurrences of the beginning of another aspect of Texas heritage. One that concerns all ages from young 4-H and FFA members to veteran cattlemen. Even readers who do not have personal interest in livestock can enjoy and appreciate the knowledge offered in this writing.

In 1896, Texas stockman, Charles McFarland and Charles C. French, public relations director for Fort Worth Stock Yards Company met on a sidewalk in Fort Worth. Each agreed that a stock show would stimulate the livestock industry and draw attention to Fort Worth. The author relates the city's coming of age, one of the main contributing factors being its rapid development as a shipping point for livestock.

During this particular time, Americans didn't each much beef. The meat diet consisted of rabbit, venison, antelope, lamb, turkey, chicken, and mostly pork. Hogs were easy to raise, ship, and handle. Cattle were more troublesome to deal with.

National attitudes toward beef began changing. Texas stockmen believed the nation's taste could be cultivated. The introduction of pure bred cattle did much to make beef desirable as table meat. Incidentally, the term, "fat stock" previously reserved for pork, also became applicable to cattle because of heavier weight of pure breeds.

In 1907, horse shows emerged when George Amos and C.M. Wheeler of Chicago brought forty-six horses to participate. The concept of a formal horse show was so new that The Fort Worth Record felt obliged to publish a list of "Horse Show Don'ts" for citizens' proper behavior which read as follows:

Don't hiss at judges' decisions.
Don't say "hitch up a pair"; say "put to."

Don't show your appreciation of the judges' decision by tipping your hat. A slight movement of whip is sufficient.

Don't call a private city stable a barn. A barn is a large country building for storing hay, grain, and implements.

Horse and mule demonstrations became prevalent. It was the first time that awards were given to animals whose primary purpose was not to provide food. Enthusiasm for horse shows assured their importance from that date forward.

During organization of the original Stock Show Association, Samuel Burk Burnett was named President. Other officers are named, one being Richard Walsh of Clarendon as vice-president. The reader will recognize names of Van Zandt Jarvis, John Justin, Billy Bob Watt (later nicknamed "Mr. Stock Show"), Amon Carter among many others, instrumental in the show's continuing success.

Exposition developments through the Roaring 20's, Depression, and World Wars; parades led by Quannah Parker; the show's first national recognition when President Wilson, at the touch of a button in Washington D.C., lit the buildings and grounds; a fire right before Theodore Roosevelt's coliseum speech; and others too numerous for this article are described.

A coliseum, aimed to be the "largest, most elegant, and perfectly appointed livestock auditorium in the South" was completed in 1908. Nothing like it had ever before been seen in the Southwest. It, later, would become famous, notably as the home of National Feeders and Breeders Show, but also, a cultural center. Famous celebrities, Harry James, Elvis Presley, opera stars, Madame Geraldine Farrar and Enrico Caruso are only four of its many performers.

The "calf scramble," popular youth event, was introduced in the 1936 rodeo. Youth participation and sense of family are important to the exposition. Three of the Stock Show's main priorities are youth, education, and future of industry. Sponsored scholarship funds and grants are available to 4-H students and FFA members. More than $100,000 per year is provided for educational purposes and junior exhibitors.

At this point, Burton Memorial Library recognizes and re-congratulates four of Clarendon's youth who placed high in their divisions at the 1996 Stock Show last February: Mark Howard with his steer, Jennifer Jackson, Wes Ritchie, and Walker McAnear with their pigs. Among their honors, each received a beautiful silver coin commemorating the Show's centennial year. Clarendon is proud of these deserving students as well as many others in our area who participate in this worthwhile program to make our country a little better.

I guarantee "A Hundred Years of Heroes" to provide enjoyable, informative reading. The author's fitting tribute to this unique American institution is in his last paragraph. "The Southwestern Exposition and Livestock Show is a monument to a century of heroism of a region and to the type of people one region produces. It is, immodestly and with pride, far more than a livestock show. And the first 100 years seem only a good beginning for a future bolstered by the hope and promise it represents." Why not check it out?

Uh-Oh, Father's Day

Summer is here. School is out. Without warning Father's Day will arrive on June 16. What do you give the man who has everything? Here are my top ten gift suggestions, and all are better than one more ugly tie.

1. The newest and best fishing innovations are "Power Baits" by Berkley. Power baits are soft plastic lures that contain special scent and flavor ingredients that "increase your fish catch over ordinary plastic lures." The professional anglers who must catch fish for a living are using these baits because they really work. They are stocked at all good tackle stores, and specialized baits are available for bass, crappie, trout, and catfish.

2. Honey Hole - The trophy bass fishing magazine of Texas costs only $18. Jerry and Debra Dean are anglers who publish my favorite bass magazine. Each month, some 25 local experts from all across Texas report current lake conditions. Any bass angler would be delighted with a year's subscription. Call Honey Hole subscription at 800-657-9565.

3. For a special fishing trip, consider renting a Houseboat at Lake Amistad (512-774-4157). The fishing is great at Amistad and surely Dad will want to take the entire family on this unique vacation.

4. Let Dad select his own gift from the world's largest seller of fishing products. A gift certificate from Bass Pro Catalog (800-272-7776) is a proven winner for Father's Day.

5. Guided striper fishing trips. Call Curgus Lowe at 405-564-3898 and expect to catch an icebox load of Lake Texhoma filets. For a trophy striper (20-50 lbs.), book a trip at Elephant Butts with Dale Wagby by calling 800-9-GET-BIT. The fishing is outstanding, and both guides are really nice guys who can provide excellent angling.

6. Book a fishing trip on our local lakes with either Ron Snyder (806-353-7136) or Kirk Balke (806-355-3495). They know our lakes and the secrets learned ruing a guided trip can improve your catching for years to come.

7. FireLine by Berkly is the best of the super lines. A spool of 20 lb. FireLine will b appreciated by every angler.

8. Dillas Baseball Game - Minor league baseball is exciting and an evening at the ball park will bring back memories of the play by play of Dick Risenhover and the antics of the old Gold Sox.

9. If Dad enjoys hunting, a guided quail, dove, or pheasant hunting trip can be reserved up by calling Wesley Webb (806-883-4101) in White Deer, Frank Hommel (800-678-5771) in Clarendon, or Harper's Game Preserve (806-435-3495) in Booker.

10. Renew your newspaper subscription - and we at Southwest Outdoors will do our best to keep all fathers informed about how to have more fun in the great outdoors.
