States Tighten Livestock Entry Requirements

On Friday, July 21, the Texas Animal Health Commission (TAHC) reported the state's first case of Vesicular Stomatitis (VS), diagnosed in a horse near McCauley, a small town in eastern Fisher County, about 35 miles northwest of Abilene. The Vesicular Stomatitis virus outbreak began in New Mexico earlier this summer, where livestock on 1127 premises now are under quarantine. Arizona has one case, and Colorado has four premises quarantined, all due to infection in horses.

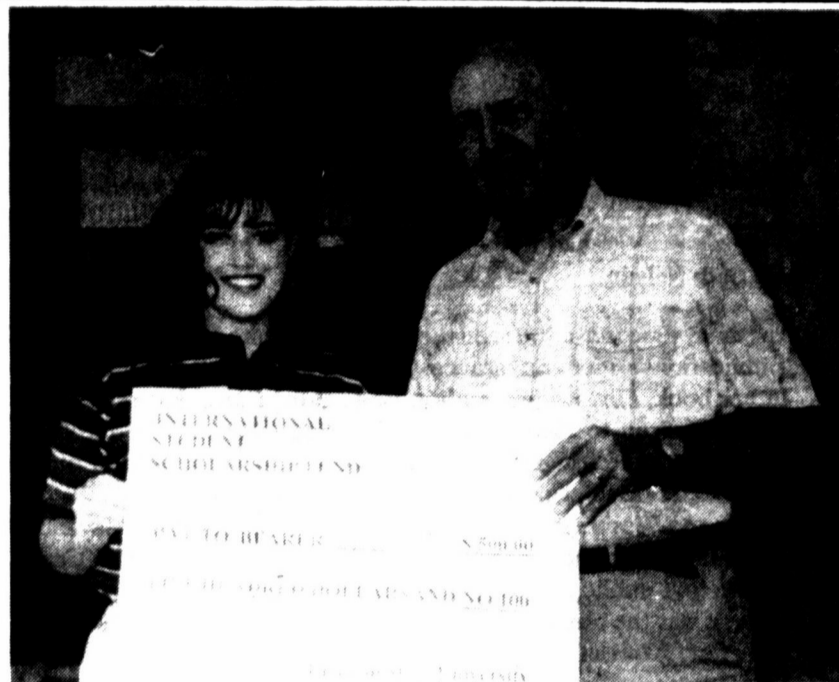

"With a laboratory confirmed case in Texas, many other states will add extra health restrictions on livestock from Texas," said Dr. Max Coats, state epidemiologist for the TAHC, the state's livestock health regulatory agency. "Most states will require a certificate of epidemiologist for the animal, with a written statement from the veterinarian that the animal haven't been exposed to Vesicular Stomatitis, or been on or within 10 miles of an infected premise within the past 30 days.

For several weeks, TAHC inspectors have been working at inspection sites on roads in West Texas to check incoming livestock and health papers and are assisting showing, fair, and rodeo officials with livestock inspection. Dr. Coats applauded New Mexico's effort to prevent the spread of the outbreak, pointing out that livestock officials there quarantined infected premises and restricted animal movement from surrounding premises within a 10-mile radius.

Vesicular Stomatitis can affect horses, cattle, sheep, goats, and deer, causing blisters in and around the animals' mouths, on their tongues, hooves, and teats. When the blisters break, large sections of skin slough, leaving painful open lesions. The animals become lame and unable to eat or drink until healing begins. Infection lasts about two weeks, and affected animals usually display symptoms two to eight days after exposure. To prevent the spread of infection, affected livestock must remain under quarantine until 30 days after their last lesion has healed.

"The infected horse in Fisher County apparently was exposed to the virus at an out-of-state event by that was not yet showing symptoms," said Dr. Coats. "The infected horse in Texas, as well as two other horses exposed to the infected horse have been held in isolation and under veterinary care for the past two weeks.

Panhandle Ground Water District Board Meets

At the Board of Directors' meeting on August 2, 1995, Panhandle Ground Water Conservation District considered an application for Permit to Transport Water from QUIXX Corporation/Canadian River Municipal Water Authority. QUIXX/CRMWA had requested up to 65,000 acre-feet of water per year. The permit granted by the Board allows QUIXX/CRMWA to pump 37,800 acre-feet of water per year, under normal conditions, from the proposed Roberts County well field. Under unusual or emergency conditions, the permit will allow up to 45,000 acre-feet per year, calculated as three-year rolling average.

The Canadian River Municipal Water Authority (CRMWA) proposes to buy water rights on 42,765 acres in Roberts and Hutchinson counties from QUIXX Corporation, a subsidiary of Southwestern Public Service Company. Plans are to drill wells, build a new aqueduct and mix the water from these counties with water from Lake Meredith. Ultimately, the water would be used to improve water quality and quantity for the authority's eleven member cities.

Under conditions of the permit, the permittee must establish a network of five monitoring wells and provide the District with information from these wells quarterly, they must not drill any wells closer than one-half mile from the perimeter boundary of the well field within the District, and they must provide water conservation and drought management plans for themselves, and for the member cities receiving the water. These water conservation and drought management plans must comply as closely as possible with the guidelines established by the Texas Water Development Board. Also, the permittee must maximize the use of surface water and minimize the use of groundwater to meet the needs of CRMWA's member cities' total water demands and the requirements of state and federal drinking water standards.

This district will be issued subject to the rules of the District and to the Continuing right of the District to supervise and regulate the depletion of the aquifer within the District's boundaries.

The Board also considered an application for Permit to Transport Water from the city of Amarillo. Amarillo's applications requested 2,645 acre-feet of water annually. The permit granted by the Board will allow the City to produce and transport 1,455 acre-feet of water per year from Section 24, Block T, AB&M Survey, Carson County, Texas.

This water will be used as additional municipal water for the city of Amarillo.

Under the conditions of this permit, the City will implement a water conserving rate structure and file and comply with a water conservation and drought management plan that follows the guidelines established by the TWDB. They will also furnish the District annual water level measurements for each producing well and copies of any results of chemical analysis, water quality, or hydrologic conditions regarding the well field.

In addition, when water becomes available from the CRMWA Roberts County project, the City must use its best efforts to reduce the total permitted amount of its groundwater production from the Carson County Well Field by up to 35 percent.

McCampbell Wins Slam-Dunk Contest

Clarendon graduate Danny McCampbell was the first Panhandle basketball player to ever win the slam-dunk contest during the July 30 Texas High School Coaching Association's McDonald's all-star game at Fort Worth's Daniel-Meyer Coliseum.

McCampbell, a 1995 graduate of Clarendon High School, was selected to play for the elite North squad, which was comprised of the most talented Texas high school players. The North squad led by Springlake-Earth's Brian Hulett's 25 points edged the South squad, 118-117.

Hulett, who was named the game's Most Valuable Player, had met McCampbell previously when they matched up against each other during Clarendon's area game during the 1995 play-offs.

McCampbell started at post and finished with 13 points and eight rebounds. He also won the halftime slam-dunk contest with a windmill, reverse-360, and a double-pump-reverse. A photo of his phenomenal slam dunk was featured in color on the front page of the Dallas Morning News.

Clarendon Coach Jimmy Avery, who attended the all-star game said McCampbell and Hulett outshined all the other players in the star-studded game and said both have great futures in sports. McCampbell is headed toward Frank Phillips Junior College and Hulett will attend Cisco Junior College on a football scholarship.

By Mary Beth Nelson

How many times have you seen the wife of the United States President on television or read about her in various publications? Her appearances are taken for granted, but obviously, it wasn't always that way.

In her book, First Ladies, author, Betty Boyd Caroli has related "an intimate look at how 36 women (from Martha Washington to Nancy Reagan) handled what may be the most demanding, unpaid, unelected job in America." She interestingly conveys the story of how the role of our nation's First Lady evolved from only a ceremonial situation to prominence as a public world figure.

As Martha Washington stepped ashore in Manhattan that May morning in 1789 with her husband, there was still uncertainty surrounding the new government's activity. The ritual, ceremonial aspects of the presidency included the first public role for a presidential spouse.

George was the one who hired the household staff and even selected guest lists for social functions of which there were few. Martha, content to play the hostess role was never requested to do more. Custom required that a gracious lady, regardless of her husband's title, return all calls of women who left calling cards (there was profuse curiosity concerning the First Family), so Mrs. Washington resolved to return each visit within three days. She displayed a character of meekness, and never involved herself in political debates of the day.

Martha's successor, Abigail Adams, with a sharp tongue and strong views, was quite opposite. Accused of playing politics, she stepped beyond the proper bounds for women. Her husband, John discussed many important problems with her. When some, in favor of opinionated women, desired the President's approval, they occasionally went to his wife first.

Even though a few of the First Ladies were outspoken through the early nineteenth century, most lived a domestic role. Some of them made themselves nearly invisible in Washington, pleading poor health and often sending substitutes to preside over social gatherings. Not so with lovely popular Washington hostess, Dolley Madison who exerted an unusual influence. She was a central figure in the capital for almost half a century. She helped widowed Thomas Jefferson entertain during his Presidential term. During her husband's two terms, she demonstrated "uncanny ability to use social occasions to his political advantage," after which, she continued to unofficially tutor young White House hostesses. Incidentally, she introduced ice cream to America. Aren't we glad?

Around 1861, Mary Lincoln, Sarah Polk, and Julia Grant instigated a turning point when they willingly obliged reporters and photographers with information and pictures.

At the beginning of the twentieth century, evidence showed that the First Lady's job was changing. They gradually began to hire separate staffs, become more involved in public policy, and lead important reform movements.

After Woodrow Wilson's stroke during his 1915-1921 administration, his wife, Edith controlled flow of communication between him and everyone else. She was criticized for exercising a "petticoat government."

Eleanor Roosevelt and Bess Truman were named among the most powerful people in Washington. Until well into the twentieth century, women's campaigning was considered inappropriate, but Rosalyn Carter went off on her own in a quest for Jimmy's votes fourteen months before the 1976 nomination.

Hair-dos of early president's wives never made the Colonial Gazette, but I'm sure there are readers of this article who haven't forgotten the dominance of Mamie Eisenhower's bangs in beauty salons during Ike's administration during the 1950's.

According to author, Caroli, John Kennedy recognized what a great asset his internationally popular wife, Jackie, could be. "Ideas for promoting her glamour and sophistication as part of the administration's glitter originated with the president himself."

Each wife, several superior to their husbands socially and economically, left her own mark in the administration. In 1986, Nancy Reagan was credited with elevating the job of the First Lady to a kind of "Associate Presidency." I suppose a high point of the prestigious position was acclaimed by President Ronald Reagan when he appeared before United States Congress at the end of the 1985 Geneva Summit Conference, and thanked his wife for being "an outstanding ambassador of goodwill for us all."

There are so many fascinating facts with unexpected and surprising events in the lives of these ladies. If this is one of your reading interests, you'll find a variety of their individual biographies on Burton Memorial Library's shelves. Why not check it out?

IF YOU HAVE CANCER, WE CAN HELP. IF NOT, YOU CAN HELP.

Cancer Society Seeking Help In Fighting Cancer

The American Cancer Society is making it more convenient for everyone to contribute to the fight against cancer. While some people prefer to give money through personal appeals and special events, many prefer the convenience of being contacted by mail, according to a recent Gallup survey. The survey indicated that 23 percent of Americans prefer a request for funds through the mail. The American Cancer Society is making that option available, and continuing its emphasis on community-based fundraising programs. In 1994, more than 30,000 Texans chose to help the fight against cancer by contributing over $1 million to the American Cancer Society, giving many people the opportunity to donate who otherwise may not have. "Our direct mail program is an effective fundraising method that is preferred by many supporters," stated Larry Martin, Chairman of the Texas Division's Field Income Development Committee. "As we continue to research new methods for cancer prevention and treatment, we must also explore additional ways of funding the mission of the American Cancer Society." Money raised by the American Cancer Society helps cancer patients and their families. Last year, over 40,000 cancer patients of all ages were helped by the Society's programs that are provided through local volunteers in every Texas community. These services include transportation, home equipment, and information and guidance for patients and their families. Thanks to contributions from the public, the Society has invested more than $1.5 billion in cancer research and provided grant support to 27 Nobel Prize winners. Last year, researchers at Texas medical institutions received 93 new grants for cancer research totaling over $8 million from the American Cancer Society. The American Cancer Society is a leader. Established in 1913, there are now more than 300 local Units, with boards of directors that help raise money and provide the services and programs. Thanks to these volunteers, 200,000 of them in Texas, almost 84 percent of the money contributed by the public is used for research, patient services and educational programs. This means only 16 percent goes into fundraising and administration. The American Cancer Society is the nationwide, community-based, voluntary health organization dedicated to eliminating cancer as a major health problem by preventing cancer, saving lives, and diminishing suffering from cancer, through research, education, advocacy, and service.

If you have questions about the American Cancer Society, or you would like to request information about services available locally, call (800) ACS-2345 from anywhere in Texas.

Foundation Gives Trees

Ten free Colorado blue spruce trees will be given to each person who joins The National Arbor Day Foundation during August 1995.

The free trees are part of the nonprofit Foundation's Trees for America campaign.

"Colorado blue spruces were selected for this campaign because of their many uses in the home landscape," John Rosenow, the Foundation's president, said. "They lend beauty to their surroundings with their silver blue-green color and compact conical shape. They can be used as individual ornaments, an energy-saving windbreak, a privacy screen, or as living Christmas trees."

The trees will be shipped postpaid at the right time for planting between October 1 and December 10 with enclosed planting instructions. The six to twelve inch trees are guaranteed to grow, or they will be replaced free of charge.

Members also receive a subscription to the Foundation's colorful bimonthly publication, Arbor Day, which includes regular features about tree planting and care.

To become a member of the Foundation and to receive the free trees, send a $10 membership contribution to TEN BLUE SPRUCES, National Arbor Day Foundation, 100 Arbor Avenue, Nebraska City, NE 68410, by August 31, 1995.

Dr. Dobson Answers Your Questions

Q. What place should fear occupy in a child's attitude toward his mother or father?

A. There is a narrow difference between acceptable, healthy "awe" and destructive fear. A child should have a general apprehension about the consequences of defying his parent. By contrast, he should not lie awake at night worrying about parental harshness or hostility. Perhaps a crude example will illustrate the difference between these aspects of fear.

A busy highway can be a dangerous place to take a walk. In fact, it would be suicidal to stroll down the fast lane of a freeway at 6 p.m. on any Friday. I would not be so foolish as to get my exercise in that manner, because I have a healthy fear of fast-moving automobiles. But as long as I don't behave ridiculously, I have no cause for alarm.

I want my child to view me with the same healthy regard. As long as he does not choose to challenge me, openly and willfully, he lives in total safety. He need not duck and flinch when I suddenly scratch my eyebrow. He should have no fear that I will ridicule him or treat him unkindly. He can enjoy complete security and safety--until he chooses to defy me. Then he'll have to face the consequences.

Q. Is retention in the same grade advisable for any child, other than the late bloomer? How about the slow learner?

A. There are some students who profit from a second year in the same grade level. The best guideline regarding failure to promote is this: retain the child for whom something will be different next year. A child who is sick for seven months in one academic year might profit from another run-through when he is healthy. And again, the late bloomer should be held back in kindergarten (or the first grade at the latest) to place him with youngsters of comparable development.

For the slow learner, however, nothing will be changed. If he was failing the fourth grade in June, he will continue to fail the fourth grade in September. It is not often realized that the curricular content of each grade level is very similar to the year before and the year after. The same concepts are taught year after year, the students in each grade are taken a little farther, but much of the time is spent in review.

The arithmetical methods of addition and subtraction, for example, are taught in the primary years, but considerable work is done on these tasks in the sixth grade, too. Nouns and verbs are taught repeatedly for several years.

Thus, the most unjustifiable reason for retention is to give the slow learner another year of exposure to easier concepts. He will not do better the second time around! Nor is there much magic in summer school. Some parents hope that a six-week program in July and August will accomplish what was impossible: in the 10 months between September and June. They are often disappointed.

Q. There are times when it is obvious that my son is trying to provoke my anger, just for the fun of it. Why would he want to upset me when he knows I love him?

A. It may be the result of a power play between him and you. Indeed, there are times when I think children understand this struggle for control even better than their parents, who are bogged down with adult responsibilities and worries. That is why so many kids are able to win the contest of wills; they devote their primary effort to the game, while we grown-ups play only when we must.

One father overheard his 5-year-old daughter, Laura, say to her little sister who was doing something wrong, "Mmmm, I'm going to tell Mommy on you. No! I'll tell Daddy. He's worse!" Laura had evaluated the disciplinary measures of her two parents and concluded that one was more effective than the other.

Court Clarifies Waivers

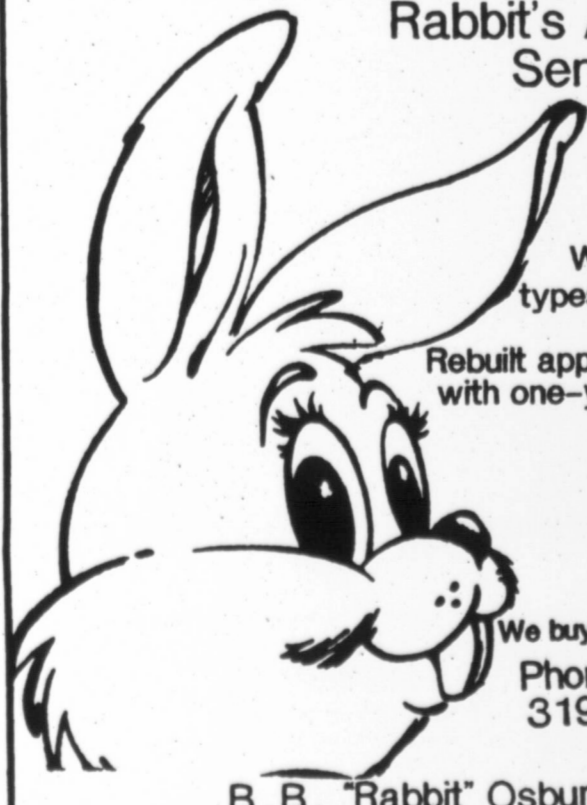

College Station - Landowners who lease their land for hunting often obtain waivers to minimize their liability. Recent rulings by the Texas Supreme Court have clarified what a waiver should contain.

"A waiver is defined as the intentional relinquishment of a known right," says Judon Fambrough, attorney with the Real Estate Center at Texas A&M University and author of The Texas Deer Lease.

"To be effective, the release provision must be based on an offer and acceptance where the parties have equal bargaining power," says Fambrough. "For example, parents cannot release in advance a minor's right to recover for personal injuries caused by the negligence of another."

Parents Can Get Children Back Into Routine

Temple, TX - For children the difference between summer vacation and school days is like comparing Texas and Hawaii, an ocean of difference and several time zones. About this time of year, parents are attempting to get their school-aged child back on a regular routine after two and a half months of staying up, sleeping late, and dodging school books.

So, how can a parent re-establish routines after the summer slack?

Constance J. Fournier, Ph.D., a psychologist in the Scott & White Division of Child and Adolescent Mental Health, advises parents to plan ahead by establishing routines, staging a practice run-through before school starts and keeping the lines of communication open between children and teachers. Dr. Fournier is also assistant professor with the Texas A&M University Health Science Center College of Medicine.

Scott & White Memorial Hospital and Clinic is one of the nation's largest medical centers, with more than 440 physicians. Scott & White's mission is to deliver high-quality, comprehensive, personalized health care enhanced by education and research. The institution consists of the main site in Temple, and 14 regional clinics situated throughout Central Texas, including Bellmead, Belton, Brownwood, College Station, Gatesville, Hewitt, Killeen, McGregor, Moody, Round Rock, Taylor, and Waco.

Getting back on track

"Parents have to help their children adjust; parents have to move their children's schedule back a few time zones to get their systems ready for school time," she said. To get youngsters back on track, Dr. Fournier advises parents to plan ahead. First, about a week or two before school starts, parents should start encouraging their children to adjust to the schedule change by setting firm times for bedtime schedules and routines. "The more children are on a schedule, the better off they are," she said. "Setting a regular routine before school starts help gets their bodies attuned to the schedule."

What time should a child go to bed? "That depends on the child's age and the child's individual needs. The parent is the best judge," Dr. Fournier said. "If you have any doubts about how much sleep your child needs, talk to your child's doctor."

Every youngster has a repertoire of stalling tactics to push bedtime: A drink of water, one more story, an interesting television show. Be firm on weekdays and flexible on the weekends, said Dr. Fournier. Thanks to the miracle of video recorders, a child's favorite show can be taped and viewed at another time.

Practice makes punctual

Two to three days before the first day of school, have a practice morning. "Doing this a few days before gives you time to work out whatever kinks appear in the system. It's better to work out the snags ahead of time, rather than on the first day of school."

This dry run should also include time schedules: What time does the bus or car pool come? What time must a child leave home to walk to school? What route is the best way to walk to school? What time does school begin?

The practice sessions should also include setting aside a special place to organize books and papers the night before. "Getting all this organized the night before eliminates the last-minute shuffle in the morning as the school bus is coming," Dr. Fournier said.

Parents and children need to renegotiate routines each year. What worked last year may be obsolete this year. "For example, routines change as a child gets older. Older students or teenagers may want to spend more time in front of a mirror for such activities as fixing their hair. This becomes important at certain ages. So, make sure the child wakes up a few minutes earlier to allow extra time before the mirror," she said.

Visiting the school

Dr. Fournier also advises parents to arrange a visit to the school before the start of the school year. This is especially beneficial for kindergartners or first graders heading to school for the first time, or when children are transferring to new schools. "If possible, arrange a visit with school officials so that your child can learn where the classrooms, play yards, and cafeteria are and, especially important, know where the lavatories and water fountains are," she said.

Building a team with the teacher

Dr. Fournier, a former school teacher, encourages parents to meet early in the year with the child's teacher. "Parents usually meet the teacher on the first day of school, but that's an extremely hectic day," she said. Instead, parents should arrange to meet or telephone the teacher during conference period, when the teacher is free for phone calls or a visit.

"This first meeting may be intimidating at first for some parents, but remember teachers teach because they really enjoy children. They want your child to have a good education. That's what they are there for," she added.

Parents should ask what they can do to help their child and the teacher. "They are team members in the child's education," Dr. Fournier said. "Some parents may have flexible time during the day to help during school times. Some parents can't be there during the day, but there are still some things that a parent can do. For example, a parent could offer to cut out or gather pictures for bulletin board displays, arrange to provide cookies for school events or volunteer for weekend work sessions such as cleaning up the school yards." She also encourages parents to join and participate in the school's parent-teacher organizations.

NOTICE OF EFFECTIVE TAX RATE

1995 PROPERTY TAX RATES IN PANHANDLE GROUND WATER CONSERVATION DISTRICT NO. 3

This notice concerns 1995 property tax rates from Panhandle Ground Water Conservation District No. 3. It presents information about three tax rates. Last year's tax rate is the actual rate the taxing unit used to determine property taxes last year. This year's effective tax rate would impose the same total taxes as last year if you compare properties taxed in both years. This year's rollback tax rate is the highest tax rate the taxing unit can set before taxpayers can start tax rollback procedures. In each case these rates are found by dividing the total amount of taxes by the tax base (the total value of taxable property) with adjustments as required by state law. The rates are given per $100 of property value.

Last year's tax rate:
Last year's operating taxes	$167,699.00
Last year's debt taxes	-0-
Last year's total taxes	$167,699.00
Last year's tax base	$1,967,918,960.00
Last year's total tax rate	.0085/$100

This year's effective tax rate:
Last year's adjusted taxes	$167,699.00
(After subtracting taxes on lost property)
- This year's adjusted tax base	$1,916,417,145.00
(after subtracting value of new property)
= This year's effective tax rate	.0088/$100

notices and holds hearing	.0091/$100

This year's rollback tax rate:
Last year's adjusted operating taxes	$167,699.00

What message does all this parent involvement give to the child?

"This shows the child that parents value education and how important it is. A parent's involvement in school lays a foundation and the understanding that 'We as a family place a value on education. Your teacher and we are a team to help you, but it is your job to learn. We're going to help you as best we can.'"

Even if parents are divorced, they must work together for the good of the child. "Studies have shown that children of divorce adjust better when their parents can communicate about the children. That means that the custodial parent must keep the other informed about the child's activities, programs, meetings, and other school activities. This helps the child understand that both parents, even though they are divorced, are involved and interested."

Study time for everyone All family routines must include time for homework or study after school, Dr. Fournier said. "Parents must gauge this according to their child's needs," she said.

No matter when, study time should include no television or phone calls and a well-lighted place to study. Study time should apply to everyone. "This means a time for all family members. Mom and dad can read, and younger children may engage in a quiet activity such as coloring or working puzzles. With the study time, the child still does school-related work such as read, practice math, or even write letters to grandparents. Everyone benefits from the study break. By setting aside this time, children see that parents value this time."

Television should not ruin the family routine. "Instead, encourage your child to read more. More reading means a better school student."

When to get additional help

At the beginning of school children can experience anxiety and a feeling of loss mixed with excitement. "It's not unusual for this to happen when children are beginning a new school," she said. Coupled with this are the traditional rituals of buying new clothes, checking with other schoolmates to "find out what everyone is wearing." This is all part of growing up, she added.

However, if a child is having difficulty adjusting to the newness, has trouble sleeping, appears anxious, cries too much or is having other adjustment problems, Dr. Fournier advised parents to talk to their child's physician. "There may be some other issues that are affecting the child that are interfering. The child's doctor may refer the child to a mental health professional for evaluation," she said.

Likewise, the agreement for release must be based on consideration, but it need not be monetary. An agreement not to sue in exchange for hunting rights may be sufficient.

Recently, the Texas Supreme Court added three requirements for an effective waiver agreement. First, there must be a statement in which the hunter expressly releases the landowner from any acts arising "from the landowner's negligence."

Second, the written contract must give the hunter fair notice of the release provision. The fair-notice principle focuses on the appearance and placement of the provision, not its content.

"The fair-notice requirement is not necessary if the landowner can prove the hunter had actual notice or knowledge of the provision," says Fambrough.

Tom White, PA

This week we will look at the various problems that can arise from the bites of dogs and cats. There are 52 million dogs, and 55 million cats in peoples homes in this country. Some 4 million people experience a dog or cat related health problem in a typical year, although not all of these people suffer bites. The cost of treating people for these dog and cat related health problems amounts to $300 million a year. So, there are many of us at risk and the risk is significant from the perspective of both the cost to society and the impact on us as individuals.

Lets look at the potential consequences to us of the bites of these animals. Dog bites occur more frequently to males, and most frequently involve the extremities, except in children who tend to be bitten more frequently about the face. The victims of cat bites are more frequently women and usually it is a young cat or a kitten that does the biting or scratching. Eighty to ninety percent of the bites that occur are serious enough to require medical care. Bites can cause immediate injury in terms of damage to skin, blood vessels, bone, nerves, joints, and occasionally, internal organs. Puncture wound bites are the most likely to become infected because of the favorable setting for bacteria introduced by the bite to grow in the wound. Bites of the hand are particularly risky in terms of risk of damage to tendons and joints. Cat bites are usually of the puncture variety with dog bites being either puncture or tearing in form.

The cat puncture bite that is deep enough to reach bone is more likely to cause bone infection (osteomyelitis) because of the type of bacteria found in the cat's mouth. It is generally well recognized that dogs and cats can transmit rabies by their bites. In fact, in urbanized settings in this country and in foreign countries, the dog is the major source of rabies infection due to inadequate rabies immunization of the dogs. Eighty-five percent of the cases of rabies that do occur in this country arise from the bites of wildlife. The sites of a bite by a rabid animal makes a difference with bites on the head and face being statistically more likely to result in clinical rabies than bites of the extremities. This is important because of the greater tendency for children to be bitten about the face which puts them at greater risk.

Dog bites can also transmit tetanus and it is important that a person whose tetanus immunization is not current, and who sustains a dog bite, should be sure to have their tetanus immunization updated. Tetanus is a particular concern for adults because seventy percent of the cases of tetanus in this country occur in people over 50 years old, as a result of incomplete immunization.

Cat bites and scratches can cause tularemia and cat scratch disease. Cats acquire the tularemia organism in the course of hunting and feeding on infected animals. Dogs don't transmit the tularemia organism by their bites but can carry a tick that can transmit the disease. There are about 24,000 cases of cat scratch disease in this country each year. The organism that causes this disease has only recently been successfully identified and it causes an illness in humans that appears as a persistent unilateral or solitary enlargement of lymph nodes. This presentation frequently seen in children, is a source of concern until more serious potential causes of enlarge lymph nodes are ruled out.

While not every dog or cat bite produces these serious consequences, it is important to recognize that they can occur. Next week, we'll look at the potential aftermath of tick and flea bites.

Ranchers Gain New Weed Control Option

Keeping Texas pastures lush and green throughout the season is a challenge. The pressures of heavy grazing and typical Texas hot, dry summer weather become formidable foes for even the most hardy grass species. Weed flourish under such stress. Now Texas ranchers will be able to beat troublesome weeds to the punch with Amber, a sulfonyleurea herbicide from Ciba Crop Protection. The product was recently registered by the Environmental Protection Agency for grazing pastureland. It has been used in wheat and barley crops for several years.

"By mid-summer, the greenest part of a Texas pasture is sometimes where weeds take over and crowd out desirable grasses," says Product Manager Kelly Still. "In tests with Texas A&M last summer, Amber controlled a broad spectrum of common Texas pastureland weeds. It offers excellent residual control with low volatility and it's one of the most economical herbicides available to ranchers."

A&M's Dr. Paul Baumann says Amber is one of several new herbicide options that fit modern ranching needs. "It has a very low use rate," he says. "Only 0.28 to 0.56 ounces of product per acre controls weeds season-long." He also notes that there's no volatile drift with Amber, so it fits in 2,4-D-restricted-use counties.

Baumann adds that because Amber is a low-rate compound, proper application is especially important. "It's important to switch to a boom sprayer with fan-type nozzles," he explains. "Used properly, Amber can be an inexpensive option to control a variety of weeds. It offers several tank-mix options to increase the control spectrum even further."

Clarendon Schools Receive Recognition

Student achievement is the primary focus of the Clarendon Public Schools as well as schools across the state. In order to assign some kind of quality to the jobs that schools are doing, Texas conducts an annual accountability

Junior High Announces Rules

There are a few things that all Junior High students need to remember for the first day of school.

- When they arrive at school, they need to be left off in front of the Junior High School on 822 West 5th Street (where the coke and candy machine are in the foyer). All seventh and eighth grade boys need to report to the new gym when they arrive at school through the foyer area.
- Hemmed shorts of appropriate length may be worn from the first day of school through October 13, 1995. Appropriate length is defined as the length of walking shorts, (about 4 inches above the knee.) bike shorts, soccer shorts, fringed denim shorts, and daisy dukes are just a few of the examples of inappropriate attire. If a student refuses to follow these guidelines they could lose their privilege to wear shorts for the year. Students may start wearing shorts for the spring semester on April 1, 1996.
- Ornaments in, on, around the ear of male students or around the nose, lip, tongue, or eyebrow of any student worn during the instructional day are prohibited.
- Clarendon Junior High is closed campus and all students must report to the cafeteria for lunch unless their parent or guardian signs them out of the office for lunch.
- The only supplies that students will need for the first day of school are an ink pen, pencil, and paper. The teachers will tell them what they will need for their classes.

study of the public schools.

Clarendon Elementary School, Clarendon Junior High School, Clarendon High School, and Clarendon Independent School District received "Recognized" status from the Texas Education Agency on the 1995 Accountability/Accreditation Ratings. Student Achievement on the required Texas Assessment of Academic Skills (TAAS) primarily determines these ratings, while attendance and dropout rates are also considered. Each campus of the Clarendon Schools met the Recognized level performance standards for all base indicators and have demonstrated required improvement of the TAAS. Recognized campuses automatically qualify for a Texas Successful Schools excellence award.

The students and staff of the Clarendon Schools have worked very hard to reach this status which indicates the quality of instruction and learning that is taking place within the district. It is with great pride that the parents and community can boast of an excellent school system. Taxpayers can feel assured that their resources are supporting quality instruction and resources. Students can celebrate success now, as well as be assured of a solid foundation for the future.

Clarendon High School also received an additional Recognized acknowledgement for performance on college entrance examinations. Since each campus performed so well, the entire district received a Recognized accreditation status.

Mathematics - 71.8 percent of all students passed

Writing - 75.9 percent of all students passed

Clarendon High School (Spring, 1995 TAAS, grade 10)

Reading - 81.8 percent of all students passed

Mathematics - 75.8 percent of all students passed

Writing - 93.8 percent of all students passed

Attendance rate - 94.0 percent (1993-94 attendance data)

Hedley School Registration Scheduled

Another year at Hedley School is about to begin. This is a schedule of events to help the students and parents get ready for that first day. Pre-registration will be held on Tuesday, August 15 from 1:00 p.m. until 4:00 p.m.
