Not in my way nor in your way Does the cause of truth march on; Yet each age has more of progress Than the ages that have gone; And from its inverted shadow Wheels the earth into the dawn.

Often by the storms of passion We are torn and tempest-tossed Often do our plans miscarry, Oft our purposes are crossed; Oft we bow our heads in anguish, Crying out that all is lost.

But the morrow comes in glory And the morning sunshine smiles, Gleaming off into the distance Unto golden afterwhiles, Where the future glints and glistens Over fortunes happy Isles,

Back of our short-sigh ed wisdom Stands the thought omnipotent; Back of all our puny scheming Waits the foreordained event; Oft what seems to us an evil Is a blessing heaven-sent.

God is reigning and his justice Will prevail whate'er betide; There are silent unseen forces Unto truth that are allied; And the legions of the angels Aid us from the other side,

Not in my way nor in your way Comes the triumph of the right, But resistlessly as morning. Steals on the reluctant night, Till the air is filled with music And the world is filled with light.

There are voices from the silence, Soft as sweep of seraphs wings; From the secret soul of being God's eternal mandate springs; And the world moves on forever To the goal of better things.
