Library patrons need barcode card

All patrons of the Burton Memorial Library will soon need a card with a barcode to check out books.

Librarian Carolyn Blackerby says a new computer system will be installed within the next month. In order to check out books locally or anywhere in the 26-county Texas Panhandle Library System, a barcoded library card will be required.

If you can't find your card, go by the library and let them make you a new one.

Howardwick board okays buying semi

The Howardwick Board of Alderman met in an emergency called meeting on May 23 at 7 p.m. to discuss purchasing a semi tractor for the fire department.

The drought conditions necessitated a called meeting.

Joe Zeyen reported on a 1985 International Semi Tractor to pull the department's tanker. He found the semi at McDowell-Haynes Truck Sales, Inc., for $4,500, had driven it, and found it in good condition.

After some discussion, the board approved the purchase, 4-0. Alderman Lynn Dishong abstained since he is on the fire department.

County remembers veterans on holiday

By Jackie Boyd

Three memorial services were held this weekend in Donley County to honor soldiers that served their country.

On Saturday, a ceremony was held at Rowe Cemetery near Hedley. This was the first year for the memorial service there. The ceremony included raising the flag, a reading, and a short address from Jack Moreman, Commander of the American Legion Post 287. "Taps" concluded the ceremony.

Monday morning a short ceremony was held at Citizens Cemetery. Members from Girl Scout Troops 118 and 169 presented the colors and led the Pledge of Allegiance.

Scouts helping with the ceremonies were Brandi Mays, Chandice Lowe, Elizabeth Christopher, and Caitlyn Christopher. Members of the Donley County Memorial Post of the VFW were also present along with a crowd of about 20.

Later in the morning a ceremony was held at the Donley County War Memorial on the Courthouse Square.

The service was led by Bill Holden, Officer of the Day of Donley County Memorial Post of the VFW. More than 50 people attended.

Holden said that Memorial Day was a very emotional time for him.

"This is an emotional time because I'm remembering all of my fallen comrades," Holden said. "It is difficult for me to make it through some of my speeches because I get choked up."

Even though it is a difficult time for him, he said it is very important for the public to remember the soldiers that gave their lives for our country.

A total of 675 flags were placed on the graves of soldiers in Donley County. 479 were placed in Citizens Cemetery, 10 in Jerico and 186 in Rowe cemetery. Ten of the flags were placed on graves of men who had served in the Confederacy.

Memorial Day or "Decoration Day" as it was first called, was started in the mid 1860s after the War Between the States. Sources say family members and friends going out and decorating the graves of the fallen soldiers started the tradition.

General John Logan proclaimed May 30, 1868 to be Decoration Day. The northern states celebrated this day ever year and southern states celebrated a day similar to this on a different day until sometime after World War I.

In 1882, the name Decoration Day was changed to Memorial Day, and in 1971 Memorial Day was declared a national holiday to be held on the last Monday of May.

Today, Memorial Day includes honoring those who gave their lives for America in all wars.

Thornberry says bill will strengthen federal crop insurance program

WASHINGTON, DC - The House of Representatives approved legislation last week that will strengthen the Federal Crop Insurance Program and provide $5.4 billion in assistance to help farmers and ranchers cope with low prices and the continuing effects of the drought.

US Rep. Mac Thornberry (R - Clarendon), who supported the legislation and cosponsored the crop insurance improvements, called the measure "a good bill for difficult times."

"This legislation was written with two things in mind," Thornberry stated. "First, it will help make crop insurance more accessible and workable for producers. Second, it will put money in producers' pockets to help them cope with bad weather and low prices. While more clearly needs to be done to solve some of the problems facing agriculture, overall this is a good bill for difficult times."

The legislation called the Agricultural Risk Protection Act, or HR 2559, was approved by the House by a voice vote. According to Thornberry, the bill will strengthen the crop insurance program by, among other things, providing better coverage at a lower cost and more coverage flexibility. The measure also contains two key provisions that Thornberry has supported since Congress began its reform of crop insurance.

The first provision would allow producers to use a county average in determining their coverage. This is designed to make up for those who may have suffered multiple losses, especially during the 1990s. The second provision authorizes a first-time livestock risk management pilot program.

In addition to the crop insurance improvements, HR 2559 also contains federal assistance that will provide farmers and ranchers around the country with $5.4 billion in relief. Producers in the 13th Congressional District alone are expected to receive approximately $110 million of this amount.

"If recent temperatures are any indication of what farmers and ranchers will face this year," Thornberry remarked, "then this bill will be needed and could not have come at a better time."

Not Forgotten

American flags mark the graves of three members of the Ivey family in Citizens Cemetery. A total of 675 flags were put on graves in cemeteries around Donley County as part of this year's Memorial Day services.

AUSTIN - Four Clarendon High School students received an award at the twentieth annual Texas History Day held in Austin May 12 and 13.

Noel Devin, Claire Rodriguez, Kara Barker, and Kelley Lemley were honored with one of three Jane Y. McCallum Awards. The award is given to recognize the exhibits which best address some aspects of history of women in Texas.

They received the award for their display "Foxes Not Oxes: Title IX, Texas Women and Athletics." High school history teacher, Lyndal Gillen-Goetze sponsored the winning entry.

Kathleen Rice, Director of Educational Services for the Texas State Historical Association (TSHA), sponsor of the annual fair, noted that almost 800 students competed in the

Crayons are a threat Million Moms missed

While the Million Marxist Mommies were recently making their ridiculous march on Washington, DC, to "save the children" from gun violence, they missed addressing another, more pervasive and more sinister problem.

Oh, yes, dear readers. There is something out there that is far more dangerous than handguns. Nearly every child is exposed to it, and it is a common element inside schools across this nation.

The danger I'm talking about, of course, is crayons. Yes, crayons. They're a real problem, dadgum it! In case you missed it, the big news last week was an investigative report published in the SEATTLE POST-INTELLIGENCER which found that crayons contain trace amounts of asbestos.

A lab hired by the Seattle paper found the carcinogen in crayons made by three companies, including industry giant Crayola. That company's Orchid color crayon had as much as 2.86 percent asbestos. The asbestos reportedly is being found in the talc of the crayon, a substance used to provide durability.

This is crazy. American children have been playing with crayons for 100 years. According to Crayola, more than 2.5 billion of its crayons are bought in North America each year; and by the time a kid reaches the age of 10, he has used up about 730 Crayolas. The smell of Crayola crayons, the company says, is one of the 20 most recognized aromas in the world.

But tradition, popularity, and the fact that there is no apparent epidemic of Crayola-induced lung cancer is not stopping the nation's health nazis from getting involved. One "expert" is even suggesting children not be allowed to play with crayons.

Dr. Philip Landrigan, director of the Center for Children's Health and the Environment at Mt. Sinai Hospital, told ABCNEWS it would be best if parents didn't allow their children to use the crayons until they have been assured by independent labs that the risk is gone.

But how in the world can it be such a risk? The dangers associated with asbestos are primarily found in industrial settings, such as mining, where workers inhale airborne fibers. Landrigan thinks he has the answer.

"The way you use crayons is to abrade them," he told the POST-INTELLIGENCER. "In the course of using them, the risk exists that some of the asbestos fibers are liberated and can be inhaled by a child whose face is close to the paper."

Ah, yes, I remember well the days of my youth — coloring so fast and furiously that my head became encircled in a cloud of Crayola dust.

Other experts told the Seattle paper that kids could inhale or eat the shavings in the bottoms of crayon boxes. Come on, people. Are there really children out there snorting crayon shavings? And if so, which is the bigger danger — the trace amounts of asbestos that at most make up less than three percent of the shaving or the wax that makes up the majority of it? I'm no doctor, but my guess is that inhaling wax is not good for the lungs and that it would probably present a more immediate health hazard.

A spokesman for the Washington Education Association thinks there should be no tolerance for even a small risk. "I think you'll see schools pulling [crayons] in the next week or so," he told the Seattle paper. "It's the prudent thing to do, just to be on the safe side."

No, the prudent thing to do would be to see if there is really a problem. But sadly, our society has developed a knee-jerk reaction to any reported "potential health hazard."

Is asbestos bad for you? Certainly long-term exposure to significant amounts of airborne asbestos is bad. But then on the other hand, you could say the same thing about lots of things. It's not good to breathe a lot of West Texas dust, for example.

Experts will also tell you that asbestos is a proven to cause cancer in humans. Experts also told us that saccharine caused cancer in humans. Last week, experts took saccharine off the list of known carcinogens. Who knows? Next week saccharine may prevent cancer.

The question really should be how much asbestos is in the crayon and is it enough to hurt anybody? Based on the number of people who have used crayons and then led healthy, normal lives, I'm going to go out on a limb here and say crayons don't cause cancer.

They are not free from other dangers though. It's not good to put one against a hot light bulb. Cheryl tells me you can get in big trouble if you melt a bunch of them in your mother's cooking pans. And I know, too, that they can make a heck of a mess if you run over and melt one with a Kirby vacuum cleaner.

But do they cause cancer? Well, I sure didn't get sick from using crayons. Did you?

Meanwhile...

A "for sale" ad recently in the ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH read: "Lavish two-story residence, all brick, renovated bathroom, theatre/entertainment room, finished basement, intercom system, tennis court and indoor pool. $550,000/offer."

What the ad doesn't say is that the "residence" in question is actually a local high school with hundreds of students. A group from the senior class put their school on the market as a joke.

The assistant principal reportedly said the ad was one of the best pranks he's ever seen. He found out about the hoax when he came to work and had dozens of messages waiting from potential buyers.

Good news: experts say dust is good for you

Good-bye Pledge. So long Endust and I'm throwing out the feather duster. Researchers in Denver have concluded that ordinary household dust may actually be good for you.

The dust study was conducted by the National Jewish Medical and Research Center and found that ordinary household dust may repel allergies in babies and small children.

With today's antibiotic soaps, germ-killing cleaners, and food safety, researchers believe we may not be coming in contact with enough viruses and bacteria. This is in turn results in increased cases of asthma and allergies, according to the current issues of the medical journal THE LANCET.

"I wouldn't worry too much about dirt or dust at this point," said Andrew Liu, an asthma specialist at National Jewish Medical and Research Center in Denver.

Thank goodness. I'm a terrible duster and usually only do so when company is walking up to the front door. Photo frames are shrouded in a fine layer of dust, which adds a nice misty look to photos. I might add. Door frames and baseboards need to be wiped down, but really who's going to be up that high to see dust? The TV screen is covered with Kate's handprints, as is the coffee table. Forget about paper and crayons; little ones can draw in the dust on the coffee table!

As a new bride, I was a cleaning machine who believed a house should constantly smell like Pine-Sol. Time has changed me, though. Now I realize that no matter how much I clean, the house I going to be dirty in just a few hours with a little one running around. Plus, if I died today, with a clean house, the house would just get dirty again in a few days. So, instead of constant cleaning, I do other things I enjoy and clean a couple times a week.

Maybe this dust retreat isn't such a bad idea. Ranchers have supplemented their incomes with other side ventures, such as hunting and fishing leases, dude ranches, and wildlife sightseeing tours. And with another year of drought looking imminent,

on the Mark with Christi Ross

perhaps I'm onto something. I'll advertise my allergy-prevention adventure as a week-long vacation for families with children at high risk for allergies. Daily activities at the retreat will include playing with animals with lots of dander such as barn cats, shedding horses and ranch dogs who eat manure and roll in foul-smelling items. Kids can dig in the dirt with old silverware, play under the cedar and pine trees, and pick dandelions and other wildflowers.

Meals will be ranch-raised beef, thawed on the counter, and three-day old leftovers from the refrigerator. Of course, the table will have to feature a vase full of the flowers and weeds picked by the kids.

Nighttime will feature feather pillows, open windows and if you really need to be exposed to dust mites, we'll leave the sheets on the bed from the previous guest.

Now I know why I don't have any allergies, or why any of my ranch-raised friends don't have allergies. We now have to credit our mothers for being touch-and-go housekeepers, as they were usually busy helping out on the ranch, and us kids for always playing outside. Perhaps kids have always internally known that dirt is good for them, and this explains why children are constantly seeking out ways to get dirty. Just give researchers time and a few million dollars, and they'll prove this true, too.

Repeal of 1898 phone tax is long overdue

It may surprise you to know that a tax is added onto your phone bill each month to pay for a war fought and won more than 100 years ago. The Spanish American War was over in 1898, but American telephone customers are still footing the bill.

The federal telephone excise tax was first imposed 102 years ago as a temporary luxury tax on 1,356 households in America that were prosperous enough to own a phone. The money generated was used to help pay for the war.

This temporary tax was never taken away, and in 1990 it became a permanent

issue Update with Rep. Mac Thornberry

3 percent tax on some communication services. The tax affects both local and long-distance telephone service, as well as wireless communication.

The fact that more than 99 million American households now have phones illustrates that communication is no longer a luxury, but a necessity. It's an example of how — once imposed — taxes never seem to die in Washington. This past week, the House of Representatives overwhelmingly voted to repeal the telephone excise tax.

Repealing this tax will save Americans around $5 billion a year by beginning to trim some of the taxes and fees we all see on our phone bill each month. It's long overdue and something that's just common sense.

After all, we won the Spanish American War. But there's no reason we should still be paying for that victory today.

Gun rights guard against federal tyranny

by Jacob G. Hornberger

We should not let the hoopla associated with the Million Mom March cause us to lose sight of the real purpose and meaning behind the Second Amendment: the ability to protect ourselves from the tyranny of our own government.

Virtually all the arguments in the gun-control debate have revolved around gun violence in American society. The proponents of registration, licensing, waiting periods, gun buy-backs, and even gun confiscation aim to rid our society of gun-related deaths.

But as their opponents have so ably pointed out, the means that the proponents of gun control are advocating are not likely to achieve their ends. People who violate laws against violence are not likely to feel constrained by gun-control laws. And people who do obey the gun-control laws are going to be less able to defend themselves against those who don't obey the laws.

Moreover, there is no reason to believe that a war on guns will rid American society of guns any more than that war on drugs has eradicated drugs from our society. Those who wish to purchase illegal guns will be able to do so on the black market as easily as they purchase drugs on the black market.

Thus, the ultimate consequence of gun control would be a society in which violent antisocial people are armed while peaceful, law-abiding people are disarmed. Of course, that's a prescription for disaster for those who are disarmed.

But despite its obvious importance, being able to protect oneself from murderers, thieves, robbers, burglars, and the like is not why the people of the United States enacted the Second Amendment to the Constitution in 1791. The true purpose of the amendment — one that modern-day Americans forget at their peril — was to protect us not from private thugs but rather from government ones.

Don't forget that revolutions are, by their very nature, wars against one's own government. Keep in mind that when George Washington and Thomas Jefferson revolted against England in 1776, they were British, not American, citizens. At various times throughout history, people have taken up arms against their own government because of what they considered to be nasty and brutal acts that their own officials had committed against them.

Historically, the biggest threat to the freedom and well-being of a people has lain not with some foreign government but rather with one's own government. And as Thomas Jefferson pointed out in the Declaration of Independence, if a government "crosses the line" by engaging in overly tyrannical conduct against its own citizens, it is the right of the people to meet force with force, even to the point of violent revolution.

Resistance to tyranny and violent revolution, however, require an essential ingredient — weapons. In the absence of weapons, there is only one course of action in the face of government brutality — obedience. A disarmed society is an obedient society, a society in which, at the extreme, people obey their own government's orders to follow the line into the gas chambers.

This point was recently reflected by what Fidel Castro said about the U.S. government's raid on the home of the Miami relatives of Elian Gonzalez. He commented that his forces would not need to be armed to conduct a similar raid in Cuba because Cuban citizens are not permitted to own guns. What he failed to say, of course, is that because of gun control, the Cuban people also lack the means to overthrow the gun-toting communist thugs who rule over them.

"But in America, our leaders are democratically elected. We are the government. There's nothing to fear here." But given the proper circumstances, a democratically elected government can be even more tyrannical than a totalitarian one. Remember: the very purpose of the Constitution and the Bill of Rights is to protect us from our own democratically elected government officials!

When citizens are well-armed, government officials must think twice before going too far down the road to tyranny against its citizenry. Thus, the right to bear arms protected by the Second Amendment is the best insurance policy that the American people could have against tyranny.

Clarendon honors sacrifices, looks to future

This past week, Clarendon celebrated the graduation of the Class of 2000 from Clarendon High School, and Memorial Day. One event looked to the sacrifices of the past, the other toward our hope for the future.

Our city, and our nation, must cling to both—hope and remembrance—in order to be the community and thus the country we are meant to be.

Monday, Memorial Day, in at least three places across Donley County, people gathered to remember those who paid the price for our freedom. The numbers gathered were too few. Had the number of participants doubled, tripled, or even been ten times those who attended, it would still be too few to properly recognize what was done on our behalf.

Last month, I visited the Port Hudson National Cemetery just north of Baton Rouge.

The white headstones stood in rows just like in Arlington Cemetery outside Washington, DC, and at Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio where my grandfather is buried, and at all the other national cemeteries in the country. The Port Hudson cemetery was established in 1867, but most of the bodies in the oldest portion had been interred several years before, after the battle of Port Hudson, rarely mentioned in history books today.

Three thousand soldiers were buried there, over half of them unknown. As many more have been buried since then in this small, obscure cemetery, some of them at the end of long, fruitful lives, some of them cut down in their youth by the wars their country sent them to. To the casual visitor, they're just names on the headstones, but these were once young men with the hopes and dreams common to young men everywhere.

Many of us can remember the

Town

Vietnam War, and some may have even protested it. But the soldiers who went and who died still died for their country. For us. They died for ideals like freedom—the freedom to pray or not, the freedom to disagree with our leaders, the freedom to meet and speak our minds. They died so that we could raise our families in security and peace.

And now, forty-four of our children have taken one of the biggest steps out of childhood toward the grown-up world where they will live the rest of their lives. Some—hopefully most—will go on to college. Some will join the military, where—perhaps due to the sacrifices of the past—we can hope they will not be required to put their new skills to practice. Some will marry, some will go to work, some will do several things at once; but whatever they do, their lives have all been forever changed.

Some of them will go from success to success. Some will fall flat on their faces. I hate to say it, parents, but it's true. We'll have to pick them up, dust them off, and shove them back out of the nest again until they learn to fly on their own.

These forty-four faces are our future, just as the names inscribed on the markers in cemeteries across the country are our past. The past reminds us that some things are worth the sacrifice, and as we watch our children move into their future, we can only hope that we've taught them enough that they will join us in preserving those things.

Prayers answered as columnist regains sight

Prayers are answered and miracles do happen. I can see!

For the past few weeks I've thought my vision was improving a little, and when I went to see Dr. Munden last week, he asked me if I could see any better and I told him I thought I could, but that it might be wishful thinking on my part. Then he told me he thought so too.

I still can't see well enough to read or drive, but I can distinguish shapes and colors now. I can't distinguish features yet, and that might be a good thing in some cases. If it see someone I know well, I can recognize them by their shape and size or by the way they walk.

Then an angel in the person of Irene Resendes appeared at my door from the Commission for the Blind with a closed-circuit television machine that magnifies print large enough that I can read. The only thing is, if I read too fast, it makes me sick. The way you feel if you suffer from motion sickness.

The first thing I tried to read were the letters from Roger Estlack and Jon Leggett I received a few weeks ago. I read the rest of my mail that had been piling up all this time.

I'm going to read all the newspapers that I've been saving since I couldn't read. Then I'm going to go home and bring a Bible I can read and all the boxes of books I had to leave there.

I hope everyone who's prayed for my recovery will continue to do so. Believe me, I know. Prayer works.

Until I can read for myself, I have watt's

a tape machine, which plays recorded books for me. It's almost better than reading for myself. The machine is also furnished by the Commission for the Blind. The nicest part of it is, it doesn't make me sick to use it.

We had some really hot days last week. I think it was Monday and Tuesday, but I'm not sure. My forgetter works better than any part of me. My rememberer doesn't work so well. In fact, it doesn't work at all sometimes. I tell people that the doctors took my memory out when they put the stints in my heart last year. It might be a natural progression of old age.

Anyway, there were two days in excess of a hundred degrees and it isn't even summer yet.

Several families had reunions this weekend, but I didn't get the information. I do know that Mrs. Juanita Brown had most of her family home. R.L. and Marie Morton of Denver, Johnny and Kay Brown of May, Buddy and Helen Ford and Jay Niller of Clarendon were all there. And a bunch of all the grandkids. Of course Grace Burkhalter isn't a visitor. She lives here.

The Main Street Apartment complex is glad to welcome Mrs. Louise Farley as a resident.

Shopping list is useless when faced with deals

When I go to the grocery store, I go prepared! I spend a great deal of time going through my cabinets, checking for items I need and making a comprehensive list. Nothing goes on the list except for those things I must have to replenish our pantry. If I am out of Mayonnaise, it goes on the list. If we only have four slices of bread left in the package, I write it down. Like I said, I prepare carefully. So, it is always a surprise to me when I unload the newly purchased groceries, when they won't all fit into the empty spaces in the cupboards.

Two days ago, I went to the grocery store with my list. I estimated that the items on my list would cost about $75.00. When I checked out at the store, my ticket came to $189.74! I was in shock, so I went ahead and wrote a check, drove home and, as I unloaded my purchases, I began to see what was going wrong.

First of all, I had needed two cans of corn and two cans of green beans. But, at the store, they were on sale - four for a dollar! Of course, I had to have four of each - you know - to take advantage of the bargain. Peas and butterbeans were also on sale at the same price, so I got four each of those too. (Please don't remind me that they were not on my list!) And so I got in trouble right off the bat - in the vegetable aisle! I bought tomato sauce, tomato paste, and diced tomatoes - all for the same reason - the bargain! I now have enough tomato products to last well into the fall. I sure hope they don't run those on sale anytime soon.

Then, let's talk Pork-N-Beans, shall we? With Memorial Day at hand, the store had Pork-N-Beans on sale - five for a dollar! Well, let's just say that I could make baked beans enough to feed the entire county and still have plenty of Pork-N-Beans left over!

While putting up my groceries, I realized another serious problem. I had relied on my memory in making my list, instead of actually looking in my freezer. I purchased six pounds of hamburger meat (in one pound packages), and when I went to put it in the freezer, I discovered it would sit very nicely right next to the four packages

rain or Shine
By Cynthia Hall
HOWARDWICK • 874-2951

of hamburger meat that were already in there. I probably shouldn't have gotten the roast either, as it had three others in there already to keep it company. Anyone for a big, big cook-out?

Another memory lapse involved toilet paper. Again, a bargain was at fault here! Toilet paper was on sale at $.69 for a package of four rolls. Well, who could turn up their nose at a deal like that? So, I bought five packages - what a deal! The problem was, there were already six packages stored in my bathroom. I had forgotten about taking advantage of an earlier sale. All I can say is that we are prepared for any gastro-intestinal emergency!

Then, of course, there are the little tricks the store pulls - specifically to lure consumers just like me into buying something they had not planned on purchasing. I came home with two packages of fresh strawberries that were definitely not on my list - but, when I saw them there, so beautifully arranged, with the little Angel-Food cakes sitting beside them...well, I gave in. That meant I also bought whipped cream - another item not on my list. I had to have Sun Screen, just in case I went out on the lake. (I haven't been out on the lake in three years!) But, it was sitting there in a display that featured a picture of happy people, swimming in the lake...and they were all using sunscreen, of course!

The moral of this story is to always go grocery shopping with a friend you trust. The friend's assignment is to walk beside you, and anytime you reach for something that is not on "THE LIST," they swat your hand away. In extreme cases, they may have to tackle you physically and bring you to the ground!

I'm not sure that a full-body tackle would have stopped me though...not from those eggs at $.39 a dozen...I mean, after all, a woman's got to do what she's got to do...right?

Several children's books available at library

I just replaced my library card a couple of days ago. Big deal? Yes... for anyone who wants to continue to take advantage of Burton Memorial Library's many quality reading selections

Because of new computer software, library cards displaying a current white bar code are required for each checkout now. What? You just looked at your card? No white bar code? That's O.K.! Burton Memorial Library will replace your card, free of charge, through July 31. After that, there will be $1.00 charge for replacement. So, come on down, request a new free card replacement, and continue wonderful reading we all enjoy.

Hey, kids! You will want to be sure your library cards are updated with the new white bar code as soon as possible. Many of you have already registered for Summer Reading Club, and are "logging" reading time for points rewarded with neat surprises during the fun, beginning June 6 - July 25. And so many good books from which to choose! Humorous, mysteries, sports action, westerns, biographies, fantasy...you name it!

Burton's got it!

If The Wizard of Oz is your favorite, you might want to start your "reading points" with one or more of L. Frank Baum's Oz books. Lucky Bucky in Oz, Scalawagons of Oz, and Giant Horse of Oz are three intriguing titles.

One of Brad Strickland's Adventures of Wishbone Series, Salty Dog, inspired by Robert Louis Stevenson's Treasure Island, provides the same type of adventure.

Rodeos are fun, aren't they? But nothing like the one you'll discover in Armadillo Rodeo by Jan Brett.

John Erickson, author of favorite Hank, The Cowdog Series, relates more of Hank's unique experiences in Moonlight Madness and The Case of Black-Hooded Hangman.

Four appealing books, authored by Lynne Reid Banks, entitled Indian in the Cupboard, Return of the Indian, Mystery of the Cupboard, and Secret of the Indian are included in her Indian in the Cupboard Series, guaranteed to intrigue elementary age children. These enchanting stories begin when Omri receives an old-fashioned cupboard which turns out to be magic. Three sequels offer fantastic adventures for Omri and his Indian.

check it
Out
By Mary Beth Nelson

You'll have to wait awhile if you think you'd like to run for President. However, author Dan Gutman invented a candidate just your age in his book, The Kid Who Ran For President. This amusing satire, placed in a Y2K election, gives readers an entertaining introduction to the election process.

Fourth through sixth grade girls will find 25 lovely books in American Girl Collection especially attractive and fun to read.

In Where Fireflies Dance by Cuento de Luche Corpi, a young Spanish girl and her brother mischievously explore a house said to be haunted. The book is written in both Spanish and English.

What a great way to chalk up those reading points!

Parents, your young non-readers are an important part of Texas Reading Club. They can also earn points from each complete book that is read to them. It's never too early to inspire literary appreciation in our little ones.

Remember the special activity Tuesdays consisting of story time, crafts, and snacks. (I wonder who the Bookmark Contest winners will be this year.) Ages 4-8 groups will meet on different Tuesdays than ages 9-12. A schedule is available at the library. Children under 8 years old must be accompanied by an adult.

Everyone, remember to get your new free replacement card by July 31, and save that dollar!

Summer readers - Reading Club time is here! Fun! Fun! Fun! Why not check it out?

Boaters, jet skiers make for crowded fishing during holiday

I hope everyone enjoyed Memorial Day weekend. It was a little hot but not too bad.

Boy the lake was really humming, and I mean humming! Seems like there was a contest to see how many boats and jet skis could operate at Lake Greenbelt. I think the jet skis won, but it was a close race. If you tried to fish Greenbelt this past weekend, you probably had an encounter with a jet skier at one time or another. They were everywhere.

I tried to fish a little this weekend off the bank. I thought I was being smart by going into a cove where there was a no wake zone. But, it didn't matter to the jet skiers. They had to visit every inch of water at the lake. The funny thing was where I was fishing, the water was 2' to 4' deep and had shallow moss. Every jet ski or boat that came in contact with my little fishing hole got stuck in the mud or had to get out of their watercraft to pull the moss out of their engine. It was aggravating at first to have these joy riders coming so close to my fishing hole. Then it became humorous to watch these people have to jump into the water and pull their watercraft out of the mud and moss. Most of them were pretty embarrassed as I looked at them shaking my head in disbelief. Why would they even make an attempt to come into such shallow water?

I had a friend who had his boat swamped because some jet skiers thought it would be fun to jet ski at 5:00 in the morning in a no wake zone. I don't think they thought it was too much fun after they had to talk to the lake patrol and the game warden. The fines can be costly.

If you are a Donley county resident and have jet skis, I hope you show some common courtesy and obey the law on your home lake! I know a lot of fishermen, and just about all of them agree that at some time or another they have thought if that jet skier or water skier comes back through their fishing area again, they are going to cast their lure and catch one of these show-offs. It seems like these skiers have to get really close to the bank to show-off and say,

"Look at me! I can jet ski or water ski! Whoopee!"

Anyway, I think water skiing and jet skiing are both neat activities and are a lot fun. But, a little common courtesy to fishermen and other lake visitors goes a long way. There is a lot of open water for these activities. Plus, to me, it is dangerous to ski in water close to the bank because of tree stumps, moss, kids swimming, and mad fishermen. With the water level at Lake Greenbelt steadily going down, I just wonder if there is enough space for all of these watercraft to be safe.

Recipe
If you have some quail or dove from this past hunting season in your freezer, try this out for a tasty grilled treat:

Wild K-Bobs

Season each bird to taste. Place a jalapeno in the center of each bird. Wrap a slice of bacon around each and secure with a toothpick. Choose your favorite raw vegetables, such as bell peppers, onions, squash, tomatoes, and any others you like. Rub the vegetables in butter or margarine and season to taste. Alternate birds and veggies on a skewer. Wrap in aluminum foil and grill on medium heat about 20 minutes or until the birds are done. Serve with your favorite fruits such as cantaloupe, strawberries, watermelon, or peaches.

Fishing Tip of the Week

The fish are suspending in deep water. Try using slip bobbers at different depths to find fish.

If you have any information that you would like to share, please contact me at P.O. Box 1281, Clarendon, TX, 79226, or e-mail me at gdol@nts-online.net.

Catch a few fish for supper, and release a few fish to ensure another great fishing day. Good luck!
