End of an era at Clarendon ISD

Times are changing at Clarendon ISD. No longer will students go into the library and see Mrs. Jean Stavenhagen's smiling face and experience her guiding hand when doing their book reports and research papers.

I remember my senior year, by some quirk of scheduling, I ended up enrolled in a home economics class. Nothing against home ec... but I didn't need any more hours, and I just wasn't interested in that class.

And poor Jolani. The paddle my mother found in her desk drawer on her first day of teaching has already been in semi-retirement for a couple of years.

Frankly, I never thought I'd see the day that Mom retired. She's loved teaching so much. It has been her whole life.

Oh, there were times when she could have throttled some kid or some administrator. And I remember that she was absolutely furious when the State of Texas and Gov. Mark White mandated that she (and all teachers) had to take a competency test.

Although she's received several awards from the education profession, her accomplishments haven't been limited to the classroom. She's been active in Boy Scouts and the American Cancer Society.

But the federal government puts some big roadblocks in the way of achieving that dream. One of the biggest is the death tax. Also known as the inheritance tax, this tax can force Americans to turn over to the government up to 55 percent of everything for which they've worked.

Studies show that most family-owned businesses don't make it to the second generation, and very few make it to the third.

From the time it leaves the hospital until it graces the coat lapel or dress front of the individual citizen, the Poppy provides care for the widows and orphans of deceased veterans for his work.

More than 16 million Buddy Poppies will be assembled this year and will be distributed by VFW Posts and Auxiliaries throughout the nation.

Each of them will have traveled a long way, and each will have helped to make someone happier.

The annual distribution of Buddy Poppies is the only public solicitation conducted by the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

A million marching mommies is a big joke

Excuse me, but can anyone tell me when it became the government's duty to raise our children?

I grew up believing that mothers and fathers were responsible for nurturing, teaching and protecting their offspring, with help from family, church and a supportive community.

The Million Mom March proves that moms are ready to throw in the towel and let Uncle Sam take care of the kiddoes.

These mothers don't want to educate and inform their children, and guns are just the starting point.

The marching mommas have asked for stricter gun control legislation, beginning with mandatory gunlocks, licensing and registration.

Their emotional pleas have caught the ear, and no doubt the eye, of impeached President Clinton.

"They're letting the gun lobby know it is no match for America's mom," said Clinton in his weekly radio address.

Rally organizers met with Clinton and his cronies before the march to discuss the gun issue and to take advantage of yet another photo opportunity.

Once again, guns do not kill people. People kill people, whether it be with fists, rocks, automobiles, knives, ropes, poison and yes, guns.

New gun laws will not help. Better education and enforcement of our current gun laws will be the key to preventing accidental shootings and random acts of violence.

Before you take away my gun, why don't we first try to lock up repeat offenders and violent criminals.

And what about reducing the level of violence our children see via movies, television, and video games?

We need parents to do their jobs of educating their children about guns. Programs of this nature are available, whether it be through the NRA's Eddy Eagle curriculum, or the state's hunter safety program.

When I was a kid, my friends and I completed a similar course at a 4-H camp at Lake Brownwood. Gun Safety classes are available, whether it is through the NRA or not.

The Marching Mommas are unfortunately misguided in their mission. And the only way they are going to get my gun is bullets first.

The Marching Mommas believe that giving up more of our freedoms will save thousands of children each year.

They quote statistics such as guns kill 13 children every day in the United States.

However, they conveniently forget to add that adults in their 20's are considered children, by their standards, and these figures include the gun deaths of criminals by police, drug dealers, and gang bangs.

However, if you want to see the results, then you have to check out the Second Amendment Sisters' web site.

Although guns contributed to the deaths of 34,000 individuals last year (suicides are included in the figure), this weapon saved the lives of nearly two million people, often with no bullets fired.

Once again, guns do not kill people. People kill people, whether it be with fists, rocks, automobiles, knives, ropes, poison and yes, guns.

New gun laws will not help. Better education and enforcement of our current gun laws will be the key to preventing accidental shootings and random acts of violence.

editor's Commentary

WARNING: The following column is an editorial... it is an opinion... it is not intended to be taken as a statement of fact...

End of an era at Clarendon ISD

Times are changing at Clarendon ISD. No longer will students go into the library and see Mrs. Jean Stavenhagen's smiling face and experience her guiding hand when doing their book reports and research papers.

I remember my senior year, by some quirk of scheduling, I ended up enrolled in a home economics class. Nothing against home ec... but I didn't need any more hours, and I just wasn't interested in that class.

Meanwhile, another, more personal departure is taking place at Clarendon Junior High. After 37 years of teaching, my mom is retiring.

Mothers around Clarendon won't be getting good leaf inklings for Christmas or Mothers Day anymore. Junior high English students probably won't write books anymore.

Grammar students won't be able to recite "can, could, do, did, does, have, has, had, must, might, may, shall, should, will, would" nor will they have any idea what "braggsit" stands for.

And poor Jolani. The paddle my mother found in her desk drawer on her first day of teaching has already been in semi-retirement for a couple of years. Now, he'll likely be locked away in a box in my parent's basement, never again to administer the discipline that so many kids today need and deserve.

Oh, there were times when she could have thrilled some kid or some administrator. And I remember that she was absolutely furious when the State of Texas and Gov. Mark White mandated that she (and all teachers) had to take a competency test.

But it has been her courage that always stands out in my mind. In 1981, she found a lump that she thought was breast cancer. She didn't piddle around with it; she went straight to the doctor, and in less than a week she was in the operating room.

She's done all the typical stuff you expect from a mother. My mom was always a "pig sty" (although I maintain that was my brother Russell's fault). She would pick us up when we were feeling low and doctor us when we were sick. She corrected us when we did wrong and praised us and hugged us when we did right.

But the federal government puts some big roadblocks in the way of achieving that dream. One of the biggest is the death tax. Also known as the inheritance tax, this tax can force Americans to turn over to the government up to 55 percent of everything for which they've worked.

Studies show that most family-owned businesses don't make it to the second generation, and very few make it to the third. Whether you are in farming and ranching or the dry cleaning business, the death tax can force your children to sell off what you spent a lifetime to build just to pay the tax.

From the time it leaves the hospital until it graces the coat lapel or dress front of the individual citizen, the Poppy provides care for the widows and orphans of deceased veterans for his work.

More than 16 million Buddy Poppies will be assembled this year and will be distributed by VFW Posts and Auxiliaries throughout the nation. Each of them will have traveled a long way, and each will have helped to make someone happier.

The annual distribution of Buddy Poppies is the only public solicitation conducted by the Veterans of Foreign Wars. The distribution in the Donley County area will be during the week of May 22.

Dear Editor, I have enjoyed getting your paper for the past year. Although I do like the writer's personal experiences in your different community columns, I would rather read about what good things the school children, Boy and Girl Scouts, churches, and city civic groups are doing.

Also, I think a church registry would be a good column. To have all the churches in the county with the pastor's name and time of service would be good, I think. Just trying to be helpful.

A million marching mommies is a big joke

Excuse me, but can anyone tell me when it became the government's duty to raise our children?

I grew up believing that mothers and fathers were responsible for nurturing, teaching and protecting their offspring, with help from family, church and a supportive community.

The Million Mom March proves that moms are ready to throw in the towel and let Uncle Sam take care of the kiddoes. These mothers don't want to educate and inform their children, and guns are just the starting point.

The marching mommas have asked for stricter gun control legislation, beginning with mandatory gunlocks, licensing and registration. Their emotional pleas have caught the ear, and no doubt the eye, of impeached President Clinton.

"They're letting the gun lobby know it is no match for America's mom," said Clinton in his weekly radio address. Rally organizers met with Clinton and his cronies before the march to discuss the gun issue and to take advantage of yet another photo opportunity.

You'd think working in the school library would be dull, dull, dull. The reality was just the opposite. I would have never guessed that job would lead to me and co-worker Stacy Graham performing a karaoke duet to "Luckenbach, Texas" in the library. But that's another story for another time.

With Mrs. Stave you just had to expect the unexpected and have fun. She will be missed. Meanwhile, another, more personal departure is taking place at Clarendon Junior High. After 37 years of teaching, my mom is retiring.

Mothers around Clarendon won't be getting good leaf inklings for Christmas or Mothers Day anymore. Junior high English students probably won't write books anymore. With this week's performances, we've likely seen the last of the eighth grade plays - certainly the last play featuring that troublesome kid, Wilbur. As he would say, "Shoot a mile!"

"MORE BAD NEWS, SAM... THE BACKSTREET BOYS ARE GOING TO COVER HILLARY'S CAMPAIGN!"

Support for death tax repeal keeps building

Day after day American workers and small business owners work long hours, trying to save and build up a successful business or at least a nest egg to leave to their children. It's often called the American Dream.

But the federal government puts some big roadblocks in the way of achieving that dream. One of the biggest is the death tax. Also known as the inheritance tax, this tax can force Americans to turn over to the government up to 55 percent of everything for which they've worked.

Studies show that most family-owned businesses don't make it to the second generation, and very few make it to the third. Whether you are in farming and ranching or the dry cleaning business, the death tax can force your children to sell off what you spent a lifetime to build just to pay the tax.

CC names Dean Cassel as employee of the year

Clarendon College administrators, faculty, and staff personnel were honored with an end of the year dinner last Friday. Dean of Regent's members Tommie Sage, Doug Lowe, and Mike Butts were also present.

Dr. Shelton presented gifts of retiring teacher Jo Shaller, who had been associated with Clarendon College for 11 years, and Louise Horton, who had served on the cafeteria staff for 23 years.

Dr. Cassel, Dean of Instruction, was honored as Employee of the Year by the Clarendon College faculty and staff. Dr. Cassel came to Clarendon College from the CC Pampa Center where he had been counselor since 1997.

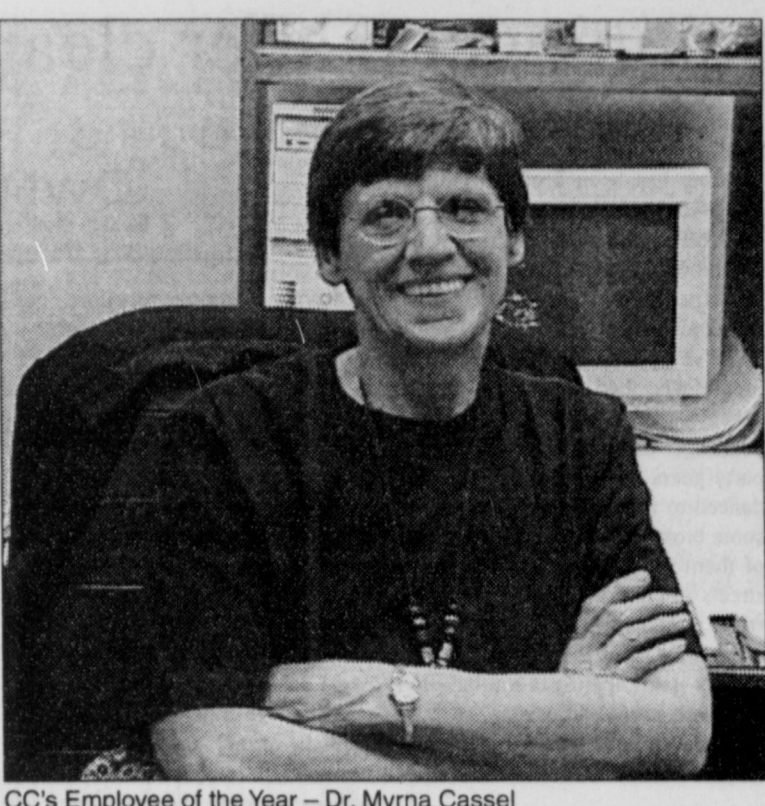

Dr. Cassel has been serving as Dean of Instruction at the Clarendon campus, and this past year she was also acting Dean of Students, fulfilling both positions.

Before moving to Texas, Dr. Cassel was Vice President of Academic Affairs and Student Services at the University of Maine.

She has also taught in the graduate program at the University of Missouri, Kansas City, and at the University of Alaska, Juneau, serving as Dean of extended graduate programs.

Dr. Cassel was given a standing ovation at the announcement that she was elected as employee of the year. Administrators, faculty, and staff described her as being an exemplary administrator, mentor, and confidante.

Dr. Cassel will be leaving the administrative position in August.

Buildings looking good after cleaning efforts

A stroll through downtown Clarendon will reveal much to the casual observer. For instance, it seems to be spring cleaning time.

Several parking spaces were blocked off in front of the library last week while repairs were made on the building to tighten things up and make it leak-proof.

The librarians did wonder what would happen if the bats that were already in the building couldn't get out...

If the bats had someplace to live besides the top of the courthouse or the attic of the library, maybe Clarendon could do like Austin.

People come from all over Austin—and maybe other places farther afield—to watch the bats fly out from beneath the bridges at sundown.

Clarendon's bats could be a tourist attraction, if they only lived elsewhere. I guess our bridges are too little for the bats to hang out.

Next door to the library, the building there is going through yet another transformation to house the Main Street Ministries of Clarendon's First Baptist Church. This building has been a clothing shop that won't change much, since the church's clothes closet will be moving downtown.

But I seriously doubt that the dance hall will be resurrected, or the skating rink.

I've spoken to Clarendon residents who had their high school senior party in that building, some years ago. They said that some of the party-goers gathered in the back and danced to the jukebox in the corner, some broke out on the skates, and some of them rode each other around the streets in grocery carts from the store across the way.

I can see today's teens—at least our Clarendon seniors—participating in similar activities with great enthusiasm. Maybe times haven't changed as much as we think.

be having its mortar repointed, but I haven't stopped to ask. It's certainly looking nice.

I hope, for the sake of those working in the environment, that they have discovered the source of the fish smell in the bank downtown. It simply appeared out of nowhere, and no one knew why on the day I visited them.

Surely someone didn't decide to clean his catch from the lake beside the air conditioning intake. Our sympathies are with you.

Louisiana was lovely, and I had a delightful time lounging on the veranda of our tiny cabin plotting books with fellow writers. The bruises from the bed post weren't so great. Tiny room, two big double beds with square bed posts, narrow passage to the bathroom, not so narrow people. You figure it out. Several of us looked like we'd been in a fight with really mean six-year-olds who couldn't reach higher than our legs.

This cabin was on a pond behind an old plantation house north of Baton Rouge, moved in from elsewhere to accommodate the bed-and-breakfast trade. The pond came complete with geese, ducks, and a lone male peacock who was apparently enamored of one of the ducks.

He followed it everywhere except onto the water) flashing his tail and ruffling his wings. We thought of taking a collection to get him a girlfriend of the proper species. Hedley students prepare for summer break

I had, I thought, a really neat Mother's Day column all laid out last week, but in the wee hours of Friday night Keith took me to spend a few days of rest and relaxation with Dr. Clark, III, and the fine staff at Hall County Hospital.

I was gasping for breath when we got there, and the nurses put an oxygen canula on me and drew some blood.

In a few minutes, Dr. Clark came in and said I was low on blood. About that time the lab tech came to draw some more blood. When I asked him why my blood was so low, was she drawing some more, he said it was my blood pressure.

This continued for almost two days and a night. Needless to say, I didn't get any sleep.

When I got there, my hands and feet were swollen until they looked like fat little sausages. After the blood was run in, they gave me something to rid my system of the excess fluid. Then I wore out the floor tile going to the bathroom.

By Wednesday night I'd almost got back to normal, and my feet looked their normal size too again.

Su-San brought me home. I never thought I'd be glad to see this apartment, but I was. Nothing except home ever looked so good.

Anyway, Roger and Cheryl made the Mother's Day wish from me to all the mothers and it looked really nice. Thanks, Roger and Cheryl.

next fall. If the phone calls are any indication, I've offended some people with a recent column. Nobody in this world is prouder of Hedley than me.

I've always been very vocal about how the churches co-mingle and how the whole town is like an extended family. And I thought people who've lived here for several generations know not to take anything I say seriously.

But, somebody did stray onto the Methodist churchyard and made some deep ruts across it. I know because I stepped in one, not seeing it, and almost fell. And since there are no Methodist young people to drive across the churchyard, someone else strayed across it.

I've never seen a Baptist nor Church of Christ straying, however. Perhaps those who have strayed are the ones who are offended.

I got a good talking to when we got home because that stuff won't wash off! Gene was sort of like another brother to me. It was good to see him.

Hand that rocks the cradle rocks the world

On Sunday, May 14 there was a protest march held in Washington, D.C. - not that unusual...there are always protests going on in Washington. But, this one was unusual because it was made up of women.

The mothers mainly - the Million Mom March. They were protesting gun violence. I understand their concerns, but I have no idea what the solution is. The point is it got me thinking about women in general. On Mother's Day I went out to eat with my mother and some friends.

The whole thing was arranged, reservations booked, transportation provided, and meal paid for by women.

In all fairness, I must say that my husband asked me, "What do you want for Mother's Day, dear?" "I don't know...what do you think?" I answered.

"Whatever you want...just as me know," he said on his way out to work in the yard.

So...my mother and I arranged everything. The men showed up properly dressed and on their best behavior. After the meal, I couldn't help but remember the old saying...

"The hand that rocks the cradle rocks the world..." How true. Take for instance, Elizabeth Ross of Philadelphia (known as Betsy to her friends). She was married, but her husband died in 1776 at which time she took over his upholstery business.

The story goes that George Washington came to her with a committee wanting her to make the new "United States" a flag. Historians believe that the flag for the new country was actually designed by a man - one Francis Hopkinson - a member of the Continental Congress. I suspect that the historians are right. I mean, doesn't it stand to reason? Here is old Francis, and he has drawn up a picture of a flag. He takes the picture to the new president.

"Let me see it!" the new president said. "So...what do you think?" "It looks great! Can you sew it?" Of course, they knew at that moment they were in trouble. What do? Play a visit to Mrs. Ross - that's what! She could get it done.

Whether the details we know today are right or not...I just know in my heart that Betsy took matters in hand.

"Well fine...George...so now you want me to bail you out, huh? Need a flag do you? O.K...but it's gonna' cost you!"

Actually, you could look further back than this to find the influence of a woman. What about Chris Columbus. He was born in Italy and became a sailor...didn't have much luck at it though.

The company he worked for went bankrupt after a few ships sank, and he took up residence in Portugal (where the ship sank that he was on!). He developed a few theories of the size of the earth and became convinced that he could sail to new, undiscovered land. He pitched his ideas to King Ferdinand V and Queen Isabella. Of course, Isabella was only 14 years old at the time, and we all know about teen-agers...but to continue our story.

Columbus was refused by the King, but Queen Isabella liked his idea, and talked the king into giving him the money! You see how it is, don't you?

Christopher Columbus never actually got any closer to what is now North America than Puerto Rico. But the influence of a woman gave air to his sails!

Later on there was Susan B. Anthony. She was born in 1820...a terrible time for women. They were to be seen and not heard, keep the house clean and keep food on the table. Susan had a problem with alcohol (could have been because her husband drank too much of it) and decided to do something about it. She advocated temperance and along with that - an end to slavery, which she found horrible to think about.

From 1848 to 1853 she was actively involved with abolishing slavery and alcohol. In 1856 she established the "American Anti-Slavery Society".

In 1863 she founded the "Women's Loyal League to Fight for Emancipation of Slaves". I can just imagine the conversation in the Ross household!

"Why are you doing this?" Mr. Ross would have said. "Don't you have enough to do with your chores?" "Slavery is not right, and you know it! Besides, you and your friends are not doing anything about matters!"

"We've been talking about it...we just haven't made up our minds about what to do."

"Well...I have!" And Susan proceeded to take action. In 1869 she founded the "Suffrage Association", trying to gain the right to vote for women - black and white. Don't you just love a "Woman in Action"!

Amelia Earhart was born in 1898 - still a time for women to remain in the kitchen! She married George Palmer Putnam. Can't you just imagine what he thought and said when she announced her intentions to fly an airplane across the ocean? "You want to do what? Have you lost your mind?" "No dear...I know what I'm

A stroll through downtown Clarendon will reveal much to the casual observer. For instance, it seems to be spring cleaning time.

Several parking spaces were blocked off in front of the library last week while repairs were made on the building to tighten things up and make it leak-proof.

The librarians did wonder what would happen if the bats that were already in the building couldn't get out...

If the bats had someplace to live besides the top of the courthouse or the attic of the library, maybe Clarendon could do like Austin.

People come from all over Austin—and maybe other places farther afield—to watch the bats fly out from beneath the bridges at sundown.

Clarendon's bats could be a tourist attraction, if they only lived elsewhere. I guess our bridges are too little for the bats to hang out.

Next door to the library, the building there is going through yet another transformation to house the Main Street Ministries of Clarendon's First Baptist Church. This building has been a clothing shop that won't change much, since the church's clothes closet will be moving downtown.

But I seriously doubt that the dance hall will be resurrected, or the skating rink.

I've spoken to Clarendon residents who had their high school senior party in that building, some years ago. They said that some of the party-goers gathered in the back and danced to the jukebox in the corner, some broke out on the skates, and some of them rode each other around the streets in grocery carts from the store across the way.

I can see today's teens—at least our Clarendon seniors—participating in similar activities with great enthusiasm. Maybe times haven't changed as much as we think.

Have you noticed that work is being done on First Christian Church? The brickwork on the front gets to fluid. Then I wore out the floor tile going to the bathroom.

By Wednesday night I'd almost got back to normal, and my feet looked their normal size too again.

Su-San brought me home. I never thought I'd be glad to see this apartment, but I was. Nothing except home ever looked so good.

Congratulations to the eight graders and a special congratulations to the kindergartners.

Rance Watt will be my first grade teacher. I was surprised and pleased Friday with a visit with my cousin, Gene Denton.

He lived at Quail with my grandparents, Bob and Dovie Moore. When he was old enough to drive, he and I went to Hedley on Saturday night, and we'd ride around in his old green Buick.

Once, when I was visiting Gran, he asked us to dispose of some grapes that had spoiled. We poured them into the chickens. It made them all drunk.

Another time we were playing with R.L. Norton and his brothers and sisters. Cowboys and Indians. There was a shelterbelt with some mulberry trees between Grandpa's house and the Nortons.

The fruit was ripe, and it, and almost fell. And since there are no Methodist young people to drive across the churchyard, someone else stayed across it.

I've never seen a Baptist nor Church of Christ straying, however. Perhaps those who have strayed are the ones who are offended.

Estlack: Teacher retires after 37 years in the classroom her first grade teacher in Floydada asked her to help a struggling classroom learn to read.

"I had learned to read very fast, and the teacher asked me if I would help my friend Ray learn. I just knew that's what I would do."

Estlack has always pushed herself to find new techniques to keep her approach fresh. For years, people in the school knew that if you needed a poem for someone's birthday, or special occasion, or just because, you asked Mrs. Estlack. And within an hour, you had one that was fitting for a Hallmark card.

And she didn't come upon the method for writing poetry in a pinch in a teacher's schoolbook.

When her father suffered a head injury, she became intensely interested in how the brain works. During her research, she found an exercise that would later become useful in the classroom and in writing poetry.

To write a poem or one of her "zany stories," she assigns students, she chooses a topic and spends 10-12 minutes thinking about the subject and writing down all the ideas thought of. Students are not allowed to use the left side of the brain, which wants to disregard any ideas considered silly.

When Mrs. Estlack brought the exercise into the classroom, it really helped the students overcome their fear of writing, she said.

"When I did it with my kids, I got some beautiful work. I wrote a poem when my mother died. I asked everyone to give me a word or thought about her. It just turned out wonderfully. I always had done research papers and didn't rely on my creativity. I just never thought I was very creative," she said.

Her students disagree. Tim Cole, who graduated in 1985 and is a physician with Surgical Associates of Lincoln PA in Lincoln, Neb., said Mrs. Estlack spent a great deal of time looking for ways to bring out the best in her students.

"One quality about Mrs. Estlack that made her special was her willingness to 'go the extra mile' with students both in class and also outside the classroom," Cole said from his home in Lincoln last week. "She often gave her time assisting with students' extracurricular activities."

"She taught us that persistence is a must. She did not accept 'second-rate' effort. She taught us how to expect only the best from ourselves."

1988 graduate Jay Gage echoed Cole's thoughts. "She didn't settle for second-best," Gage said. "I remember she would get livid when we didn't do well on an assignment that we should have done well on. She often made us do assignments over again until we got them right."

"At the time, we thought that was pretty mean, but I know now that it was because she really cared about us. She taught me to value education and not waste the opportunities I had."

"Because of the background she gave me, English was always easy for me. I chose to become a coach and an English teacher, but I am now working for the Texas Panhandle Mental Health Authority as a case worker."

"I'm still being asked to proof-read memos and articles, so my English skills are still being used today."

Estlack's students weren't the only ones who recognized her outstanding skills.

In 1997, she was tapped as Teacher of the Year for secondary school teachers in Region 16. And in 2000, she was named the Outstanding Middle School Teacher from the Texas Middle School Association for Region 16. Her peers and her students say she and her room always had some type of magical mystique.

Mrs. Estlack liked it humming. If the kids were talking, they were thinking and exchanging ideas.

Instead of students lined up in rows dutifully listening to a teacher drone on day after day, you might hear excited chatting as they moved from desk to desk comparing notes or see 18 pairs of eyes following Estlack reading aloud from one of the New-York Times.

"She is a neat lady and has left a very well-defined and loving legacy through her years. We are very lucky to have had her here all this time."

—Melinda McAnear

But her teaching wasn't the only thing that brought her the respect of her students. When a young Larinda Pettit Brown moved to Clarendon as a sixth grader, she was scared of being in a new place.

"She would always encourage me to become more of an outgoing person and not be afraid to get involved," Brown said. "She helped me through a really rough time in a new place. I just knew I wouldn't fit in. It was junior high, and it was terrible."

"She patted me on the back at every turn and encouraged me to excel, not just in her class, but in my other classes and everything that I did. She was very inspiring."

Those comforting words helped Brown develop a niche at Clarendon. She played basketball and became involved in UIL Literary events. She now writes stories for her children and helps family members with research papers.

While Mrs. Estlack guided a timid Brown through the awkward junior high years, she also helped her develop social and literary skills.

"She just seemed to really care about you as a student and as a person," Brown said. "She wanted you to make good grades and excel and do the best you could and carry it through with everything you did."

Mrs. Estlack constantly searched for ways to better herself and become an educator who was on the cutting edge of the latest trends in education while sticking to the core fundamentals of education.

"She earned her master's degree in the mid-70s and made many trips to Canyon with Jean Stavenhagen and Kay Hayes - two longtime cogs in it simple. Make it fun! If you have them busy doing things they like to do, you'll have control."

Mrs. Estlack borrowed many principles from the Boy Scouts, of which she was an active leader while raising her two sons who went on to earn the highest honor - Eagle Scout. She accomplished all of her goals while battling several devastating illnesses, including breast cancer.

She never stopped long enough to feel sorry for herself though. There were always lessons to prepare and kids to coddle.

As each day ticks down toward the end of school, Mrs. Estlack becomes more and more nostalgic for her impending retirement.

But there will be rocks to polish, her son's newspaper THE CLARENDON ENTERPRISE, to proofread, her husband's business books to balance, and keeping up with Russell and his latest ventures. She may even take the opportunity to write for herself and for the ENTERPRISE, instead of molding young writers.

Mrs. Estlack plans to be underfoot at her son's paper more than her typical Tuesday afternoon runs to read the paper before it is put out to press.

Sleeping in and not rushing off to beat the school bell will take some adjustment.

"I can't imagine what it's going to be like not to go to school and not learn something every day," Mrs. Estlack said.

And neither can the students and faculty at Clarendon Junior High.

"She has been such an asset to the Clarendon school district and to all the students she has taught," McAnear said. "She is one of those rare teachers who is a teacher according to Webster's Dictionary. And she's given everything she's had to all the kids over the years. She's been an inspiration to those who have become teachers."

"She is a neat lady and has left a very well-defined and loving legacy through her years," McAnear said. "We are very lucky to have had her here all this time."

Perhaps one of Mrs. Estlack's greatest legacies is how her words and actions live on in people who are raising children today.

"Even as a parent, I catch myself saying things that she said," Brown said. "I tell my kids 'Why waste your time making up a lie when you can just tell the truth?'"

"I go, 'Man, I've become Mrs. Estlack.'"

"That's not a bad thing. I love that woman. I love that woman dearly."

Brown regrets that her children will never get chalk dust in their hair or feel Jokari's firmness, but she feels lucky to have had her and pass along her words to her children.

"I feel privileged to have been one of her students. I regret that my children won't be able to have her as a teacher because she's a very inspirational woman. And she's someone who's unforgettable," Brown said.

"I can't say enough nice things about her. I just love her, and that's not saying enough. This is an example where words just can't do the person justice. I really feel lucky that I have had her as a teacher and a friend."

A reception will be held this Sunday, May 21, at the Church of Christ Family Life Center from 2 to 4 p.m. to honor Helen Estlack and Jean Stavenhagen. The public is invited.

Henderson's writings adhere to basic truth of stories told in Scripture. Her accurate research allows presentation of biblical fact intertwined with imaginary events. Through her special talent of weaving drama and history together, she became of America's leading biblical fiction writers.

Lydia portrays a fascination look at life and times of ancient Macedonia. Lydia, successful and influential business woman in Philippi, a beautiful city thriving under Roman rule.

In the novel, Ruth, readers witness a loyal devotion demonstrated by the young woman for her mother-in-law, Naomi, her marriage to Boaz, and her development into a strong, courageous woman.

Priscilla and Aquila remains true to biblical account contained in Paul's epistles, and draws upon historical fiction concerning the era, 48 AD to 54 AD. Henderson relates their encounter with Appule Paul as they become his fellow workers. Paul's trials with riotous crowds, murderous plots against his life, and other threatening dangers are vividly brought to life. Marital issues of respect, obedience, devotion, and trust in Priscilla's and Aquila's relationship as husband and wife are engrossingly described. Priscilla's discontent with the traditional role of women in her day is revealed in this writing. According to professional comments about the novel, "What emerges is a sensitive, beautifully executed look at the deepest concerns of women in the church not only then, but now."

Author, Louis Henderson, completed 27 chapters of Priscilla and Aquila at the time of her death in 1983. Harold Ivan Smith, very familiar with Henderson's research and plot details, wrote the final eleven chapters which dramatically end the story.

"When I did it with my kids, I got some beautiful work. I wrote a poem when my mother died. I asked everyone to give me a word or thought about her. It just turned out wonderfully. I always had done research papers and didn't rely on my creativity. I just never thought I was very creative," she said.

Her students disagree. Tim Cole, who graduated in 1985 and is a physician with Surgical Associates of Lincoln PA in Lincoln, Neb., said Mrs. Estlack spent a great deal of time looking for ways to bring out the best in her students.

"One quality about Mrs. Estlack that made her special was her willingness to 'go the extra mile' with students both in class and also outside the classroom," Cole said from his home in Lincoln last week. "She often gave her time assisting with students' extracurricular activities."

"She taught us that persistence is a must. She did not accept 'second-rate' effort. She taught us how to expect only the best from ourselves."

1988 graduate Jay Gage echoed Cole's thoughts. "She didn't settle for second-best," Gage said. "I remember she would get livid when we didn't do well on an assignment that we should have done well on. She often made us do assignments over again until we got them right."

"At the time, we thought that was pretty mean, but I know now that it was because she really cared about us. She taught me to value education and not waste the opportunities I had."

"Because of the background she gave me, English was always easy for me. I chose to become a coach and an English teacher, but I am now working for the Texas Panhandle Mental Health Authority as a case worker."

"I'm still being asked to proof-read memos and articles, so my English skills are still being used today."

Estlack's students weren't the only ones who recognized her outstanding skills.

In 1997, she was tapped as Teacher of the Year for secondary school teachers in Region 16. And in 2000, she was named the Outstanding Middle School Teacher from the Texas Middle School Association for Region 16. Her peers and her students say she and her room always had some type of magical mystique.

Mrs. Estlack liked it humming. If the kids were talking, they were thinking and exchanging ideas.

Instead of students lined up in rows dutifully listening to a teacher drone on day after day, you might hear excited chattering as they moved from desk to desk comparing notes or see 18 pairs of eyes following Estlack reading aloud from one of the New-York Times. "She is a neat lady and has left a very well-defined and loving legacy through her years. We are very lucky to have had her here all this time."

very award winners. But her teaching wasn't the only thing that brought her the respect of her students. When a young Larinda Pettit Brown moved to Clarendon as a sixth grader, she was scared of being in a new place.

"She would always encourage me to become more of an outgoing person and not be afraid to get involved," Brown said. "She helped me through a really rough time in a new place. I just knew I wouldn't fit in. It was junior high, and it was terrible."

"She patted me on the back at every turn and encouraged me to excel, not just in her class, but in my other classes and everything that I did. She was very inspiring."

Those comforting words helped Brown develop a niche at Clarendon. She played basketball and became involved in UIL Literary events. She now writes stories for her children and helps family members with research papers.

While Mrs. Estlack guided a timid Brown through the awkward junior high years, she also helped her develop social and literary skills.

"She just seemed to really care about you as a student and as a person," Brown said. "She wanted you to make good grades and excel and do the best you could and carry it through with everything you did."

Mrs. Estlack constantly searched for ways to better herself and become an educator who was on the cutting edge of the latest trends in education while sticking to the core fundamentals of education.

"She earned her master's degree in the mid-70s and made many trips to Canyon with Jean Stavenhagen and Kay Hayes - two longtime cogs in it simple. Make it fun! If you have them busy doing things they like to do, you'll have control!"

Mrs. Estlack borrowed many principles from the Boy Scouts, of which she was an active leader while raising her two sons who went on to earn the highest honor - Eagle Scout. She accomplished all of her goals while battling several devastating illnesses, including breast cancer.

She never stopped long enough to feel sorry for herself though. There were always lessons to prepare and kids to coddle.

As each day ticks down toward the end of school, Mrs. Estlack becomes more and more grateful for her impending retirement.

But there will be rocks to polish, her son's newspaper THE CLARENDON ENTERPRISE, to proofread, her husband's business books to balance, and keeping up with Russell and his latest ventures. She may even take the opportunity to write for herself and for the ENTERPRISE, instead of molding young writers.

Mrs. Estlack plans to be underfoot at her son's paper more than her typical Tuesday afternoon runs to read the paper before it is put out to press.

Sleeping in and not rushing off to beat the school bell will take some adjustment.

"I can't imagine what it's going to be like not to go to school and not learn something every day," Mrs. Estlack said.

And neither can the students and faculty at Clarendon Junior High.

"She has been such an asset to the Clarendon school district and to all the students she has taught," McAnear said. "She is one of those rare teachers who is a teacher according to Webster's Dictionary. And she's given everything she's had to all the kids over the years. She's been an inspiration to those who have become teachers."

"She is a neat lady and has left a very well-defined and loving legacy through her years," McAnear said. "We are very lucky to have had her here all this time."

Perhaps one of Mrs. Estlack's greatest legacies is how her words and actions live on in people who are raising children today.

"Even as a parent, I catch myself saying things that she said," Brown said. "I tell my kids 'Why waste your time making up a lie when you can just tell the truth? I go, 'Man, I've become Mrs. Estlack.'"

"That's not a bad thing. I love that woman. I love that woman dearly."

Brown regrets that her children will never get chalk dust in their hair or feel Jokari's firmness, but she feels lucky to have had her and pass along her words to her children.

"I feel privileged to have been one of her students. I regret that my children won't be able to have her as a teacher because she's a very inspirational woman. And she's someone who's unforgettable," Brown said.

"I can't say enough nice things about her. I just love her, and that's not saying enough. This is an example where words just can't do the person justice. I really feel lucky that I have had her as a teacher and a friend."

A reception will be held this Sunday, May 21, at the Church of Christ Family Life Center from 2 to 4 p.m. to honor Helen Estlack and Jean Stavenhagen. The public is invited.

Among Burton Memorial Library's collections, biblical fiction fans are in for a treat with four of Louis T. Henderson's extraordinary novels: Lydia; Abigail; Ruth; and Priscilla and Aquila.

Henderson's writings adhere to basic truth of stories told in Scripture. Her accurate research allows presentation of biblical fact intertwined with imaginary events. Through her special talent of weaving drama and history together, she became of America's leading biblical fiction writers.

Lydia portrays a fascination look at life and times of ancient Macedonia. Lydia, successful and influential business woman in Philippi, a beautiful city thriving under Roman rule, sought the truth, and became Paul's first Christian convert in Europe. The author's details are accurate to scenes described in Acts, but names from Philipians are added to scenes. Readers experience conflicts and joys in Lydia's newfound faith in God.

Abigail, beautiful wife of a monarch warrior, is based on the dramatic books of I and II Samuel. The beginning of the novel acquaints readers with Abigail as a child in a loving home and continues through an unhappy marriage to Nabal. Readers are drawn into the story as her courage is built by God through devotion to Samuel's teaching and faith in Israel. This remarkable woman becomes David's third wife enduring faith.

In the novel, Ruth, readers witness a loyal devotion demonstrated by the young woman for her mother-in-law, Naomi, her marriage to Boaz, and her development into a strong, courageous woman.

In the novel, Ruth, readers witness a loyal devotion demonstrated by the young woman for her mother-in-law, Naomi, her marriage to Boaz, and her development into a strong, courageous woman.

Priscilla and Aquila remains true to biblical account contained in Paul's epistles, and draws upon historical fiction concerning the era, 48 AD to 54 AD. Henderson relates their encounter with Apostle Paul as they become his fellow workers. Paul's trials with riotous crowds, murderous plots against his life, and other threatening dangers are vividly brought to life. Martial issues of respect, obedience, devotion, and trust in Priscilla's and Aquila's relationship as husband and wife are engrossingly described. Priscilla's discontent with the traditional role of women in her day is revealed in this writing. According to professional comments about the novel, "What emerges is a sensitive, beautifully executed look at the deepest concerns of women in the church not only then, but now."

Author, Louis Henderson, completed 27 chapters of Priscilla and Aquila at the time of her death in 1983. Harold Ivan Smith, very familiar with Henderson's research and plot details, wrote the final eleven chapters which dramatically end the story.

GOODNIGHT

Thanks, mom, for hooking me on fishing

I hope you all had a nice Mother's Day weekend! The wind blew a little on Sunday, but overall the weather was nice.

My mother passed away eight years ago. I miss her dearly, but her memory is always with me. My mother basically raised me and my two brothers by herself. My dad had to work two jobs to support our family of five. He did not have much time to spend with us as kids, so my mother was a full time mom and a part time dad. She would help us with our sporting events, and most of all, she taught us how to fish. Mom's favorite pastime was fishing, and she always took us with her.

Mom was born and raised in Stinnett, Texas. She grew up living in the country, and her family was poor. She told me for years whatever Grandpa shot, trapped, or caught was supper. She was the oldest of four children, and she became Grandpa's little helper.

Mom didn't like guns, so Grandpa decided that she should try fishing. Mom thought fishing was kind of fun and a lot better than those loud guns. She became Grandpa's fishing buddy.

In those days, there was not all of the high-powered fishing gear we have now. Mom started fishing with a cane pole and a Pflueger bait casting reel. I can still remember her reply when I asked her, "How in the world did you ever learn to cast that bait casting reel?"

Her favorite saying was, "You have to have an educated thumb."

At age 13, Mom started out fishing with Grandpa. He didn't mind this at all. As a matter of fact, he was proud of her because she was also out fishing most of the men who were fishing in those days.

Back in those days, you had to catch your own bait. Mom would dig up worms and catch grasshoppers and other bugs. Yes, bugs. She also seined the creek she lived near for crawdads, minnows, and whatever else would get caught in the net. Mom had a knack for knowing what the fish were hungry for. Grandpa would tell her to use one kind of bait, and she would use something else. She was usually right, and usually caught the most fish.

As the years went by, my brothers did not like fishing as much as I did. I became Mom's fishing buddy. I will never forget the first time I caught the biggest catfish on one of our fishing trips at Lake McClellan. I was 9 years old at the time. It was a 1/2 lb. channel cat. Mom had caught many this size, and bigger, but it was my first catfish over 5 lbs. She took me to the bait shop to have my picture taken. They put the picture in the Pampa newspaper. Mom was so proud of me.

My mother and I had many fishing trips together over the years. She out fished me time and time again, but I didn't mind because I loved her and I loved fishing with her. It was always a challenge to try and out fish her. I guess that's why I like fishing tournaments and consider myself to be a pretty good all around fisherman. Thank you, Mom, for getting me hooked on fishing! I love you!

There was a Mel Phillips' Fun Fishing Tournament held at Lake Greenbelt this past Saturday. I would like to apologize for not posting this event last week. I had my tournament dates mixed up.

The top three Fun Fishing Tournament results are as follows: Billy Moore of Amarillo placed 1st with 10.17 lbs. He caught two fish with one weighing 8.91 lbs. He also had the big bass of the tournament. Don Midgett of Amarillo placed 2nd with 3 bass weighing a total of 7.82 lbs. 3rd place went to me. Gary Dittels of Clarendon, with 3 bass weighing a total of 7.34 lbs.

Just to let you know, the Inland Fishery division of the Texas Parks and Wildlife released about 250,000 fingerling Florida strain largemouth bass last week in Lake Greenbelt. This should help the bass fishing in years to come. I am really glad to see this.

Upcoming Events
Lake Greenbelt is going to be busy this coming weekend. The Donley County Bass Club will be having a tournament Saturday, May 20.

Texas Team Bassin' will also be having an open team tournament at Lake Greenbelt this Saturday. The tournament will begin at 6:30am and end at 2:00pm. Team entry fee is $50.00, and an optional fee for the Big Bass Pot is $10.00 per team. For more information on this tournament, call (806)323-8720, fax (806)323-8700, or e-mail taylorfish@am.net.

Fishing Tip of the Week
Match the hatch. When the mayflies hatch, try using lures that are similar to color and size. You may be surprised at the different fish you can catch, especially if there is a large hatch.

If you have any information that you would like to share, please contact me at P.O. Box 1281, Clarendon, TX, 79226, or e-mail me at gd@mts-online.net.

Catch a few fish for supper, and release a few fish to ensure another great fishing day. Good luck!

Emergency personnel from the Donley County Sheriff's office, the Clarendon Volunteer Fire Department, and the Associated Ambulance Authority responded. There were no injuries, and the fire was contained to the engine compartment of the vehicle.

New aldermen sworn in at city meeting

The Clarendon Board of Aldermen met May 9, 2000, in the Board Room of City Hall for a public hearing and a regular meeting. Mayor Tex Selvidge presented the proposal for application for a Texas Community Development Program grant at 6:30 p.m. The floor was open for discussion, and there was none. The public hearing was then closed. At 7 p.m. the regular meeting was called to order. Mayor Selvidge administered the oath of office to Aldermen B.J. Land, Mac Stavenhagen, and Smiley Johnson. The mayor expressed the city's appreciation to Alderman John T. Morrow for his service to the community. Morrow chose not to seek re-election after serving two years on the board. Greg Collins, representing the Associated Ambulance Authority and presented information to the board regarding the emergency generator for the radios. The county had a generator in storage with an automatic starter. It was being re-built at the time of the meeting. Upon the recommendation of Collins, the city agreed to pay for one-third of the costs of a concrete pad, a cover, and fuel tanks for the generator. The generator purchased by the city for the radios will be used elsewhere.

"Let him who is taught the word share in all good things with him who teaches. Do not be deceived. God is not mocked; for whatever a man sows, that he will also reap. For he who sows to his flesh will of the flesh reap corruption, but he who sows to the Spirit will of the Spirit reap everlasting life. And let us not grow weary while doing good, for in due season we shall reap if we do not lose heart. State looking to lease local land

PAMPA - Do you have a property that attracts dove, pheasant, waterfowl, or sandhill cranes? Texas Parks and Wildlife (TPWD) is looking for land to lease for public hunting this fall and winter.

In 1994, the TPWD began a pilot program to benefit both hunters and agricultural producers in Texas. This program, known as the Short Term Public Hunting Lease Program, sought to lease private lands during the dove season for use by purchasers of the TPWD 540 Annual Public Hunting (APH) Permit. Approximately 38,000 APH permits are sold annually statewide. Originally, leases were only secured along the Interstate 35 corridor in Central Texas. Since that first year, the program has expanded to other areas of the state and to other game species. TPWD has also increased the flexibility of lease terms, with innovations such as multiple year leases. Last year, TPWD leased 143 dove hunting units providing over 45,000 acres of additional public hunting opportunity. Among these, were leases located in Gray, Collingsworth, and Knox Counties.

A short-term public hunting lease is a contract between TPWD and a private landowner. The landowner agrees to let APH Permit holders hunt certain game animals on their property for a specified period of time. TPWD agrees to pay a set fee for this access and also agrees to post signs on the boundary, designated roads and parking areas, restricted areas, or other areas identified in the lease agreement. The agreement does not mean that a TPWD biologist or game warden will be on site during the hunt, but a staff person will periodically monitor the site and be available if problems arise. Activities such as camping, building fires, fishing, and consumption of alcoholic beverages are not allowed. According to Mike Miller, TPWD Wildlife Biologist, the program may be viewed by landowners as a significant windfall. "In recent years, the lease prices have been between $2 and $5 per acre," said Miller. "The price of the lease will primarily be based on size of property, game species and hunting dates provided, habitat quality, ease of public access, and location." TPWD's goal is not to make money, but rather to provide additional public hunting opportunity. Potential dove leases should have a food source, such as grain, sunflower, or other annual weeds, with roosting cover and/or a reliable water source. Sites must also have a public access point where hunter's vehicles can be parked and hunters can access the property. Sites that encompass 100-400 acres and located within 60 miles of Amarillo, Pampa, or Borger are preferred. Any property that will provide a high quality dove hunting experience will be considered. Lands currently enrolled in Conservation Reserve Program contracts can be leased with no effect on US Department of Agriculture payments. See "Hunting" on page three.

Clarendon to replace old waterlines in part of city

Many neighborhoods in the west central part of Clarendon will be noticing construction in the near future as the city starts to replace old water lines. The goal of replacing the lines is to help maintain a constant water pressure. "The problem we face is that some of the water lines in town are old and rusted and when they rust breaks free and gets in the meters, the water pressure decreases," said Janice Barber, city secretary. When construction is underway, Barber said, there shouldn't be a time when the water will be shut off for an extended period. The project is being paid for with $248,034 from the Community Development Block grants. The funds are provided by the Texas Department of Housing and Urban Development and are being administered by the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs through the Texas Community Development Program. The project includes installation of approximately 2,450 feet of six-inch PVC waterline, 7,200 feet of four-inch PVC waterline, 97 service reconnections, and four fire hydrants to service 171 people. Brandt Engineering of Amarillo is already working on the project, and the construction company is not yet up for bid. The starting date for construction has not been set, but the project must be completed by April 18, 2002. The Community Development Block Grant program, one of HUD's largest, is designed to assist communities in carrying out a wide range of development activities aimed at neighborhood revitalization, economic development and improved community facilities and services.

BLT provides funding for local activities
By Sue Church, County FCS Agent
Donley County has been one of 165 counties statewide benefiting in funding provided through the Better Living for Texans (BLT) program over the past eight months. The Texas Agricultural Extension Service and the Texas Department of Human Services are partners in a collaborative agreement to provide consumer and family science education to limited resource families, including food assisted recipients. The BLT program focuses on topics such as food and nutrition, food safety, and food resource management to assist area residents in taking greater responsibility for their own health and well-being and move towards greater self-sufficiency. This $10,000 grant has assisted in providing upgrades in technology, office equipment supplies, and dem. See "BLT" on page three.
