New water treatment can affect aquariums

A new method for treating water coming from the Greenbelt Reservoir is expected to come online next week, and officials with the local water authority are advising aquarium owners to be ready for the Beginning Monday, the Greenbelt Water Authority will treat water with chloramines - a combination of chlorine and ammonia, which is harmless to humans but can be toxic to pet fish.

"Aquariums will need carbon filters to remove the ammonia," said Greenbelt General Manger Bobbie Kidd. "That's the only way to get it

Using chloramines will reduce the level of disinfection byproducts (DBPs), which are not a problem in the local drinking water but were appearing at the far end of Greenbelt's distribution network.

Greenbelt provides water for municipal and industrial customers between Clarendon and Crowell and serves a population of more than 25,000.

Chloramines can also affect people using dialysis equipment, but Kidd said dialysis patients don't need to be concerned about the drinking

"It's just an issue for the treatment equipment," he said.

Kidd said that medical facilities in Childress treat a lot of dialysis patients and that those facilities are "more than ready" for the change. Anyone setting up for home dialysis in the future will have their water tested and the appropriate filters put in place.

The new treatment method is part of a $2.3 million project at Greenbelt, which is upgrading the chemical feed system, disinfecting system, filtering process, and reporting process.

The project began last November and has focused on replacing the old filters, which have been in place for 35 years, and on getting the authority into new more stringent standards set by the federal government. Greenbelt officials also have tried to anticipate any new regulations which might come into effect in the next 20 years.

Other changes include doubling the electrical service at the filter plant from 500 KVA to 1,000 KVA and upgrading the computer system in the plant which controls treatment of the water and delivery of the water from the Greenbelt Reservoir from here to Crowell. Newspapers record history, protect liberty

Although America's soldiers face danger every day, major combat is over in Iraq. Leaders in that country are now trying to hammer out what form their new government will take; and meanwhile, freedom appears to be taking root among the Iraqi people.

News reports have revealed that Iraqis are enjoying new benefits of a free market. Satellite television receiver sales are brisk, cellular phone service is on the way, and schools are reopening without the omnipresent influence of Saddam.

commentary

Things are by no means perfect in Iraq, but they are getting better. Even Democratic congressmen who have gone there are admitting this. Last week, FoxNews.com reported another hall-mark of liberty has emerged in Iraq - a free press. During Saddam's brutal regime, there were only five newspapers; and all reported just what Hussein and his cronies wanted them to. There was no opposi-

Today, approximately 160 newspapers are being published in Iraq.

"The Iraqis are very eager to read and express themselves," said printer Slah Hassan.

Reading. Becoming informed. Expressing opinion. Each of these is good, and each is necessary for a representative form of government to work.

This week is National Newspaper Week, and Americans are fortunate to have the benefits of a free press protected by the highest law in the land - the United States Constitution. Newspapers, publishers, and printers were instrumental in the formation of our Republic; and for more than 200 years, newspapers have flourished in America.

Literally thousands of newspapers are published every week in this country. Texas alone boasts 91 daily newspapers and 440 weekly and semi-weekly newspapers.

Newspapers have recorded every major historic event from Washington's crossing of the Delaware to the War Between the States to Pearl Harbor to September 11, 2001. Along the way, papers have recorded millions of birth announcements, wedding stories, and obituaries. They have covered countless elections, public meetings, and political wrangles.

As civilization pushed its way into the unsettled areas of the American continent, newspapers were among the first institutions to arrive and encourage others to follow. Such was the case when this newspaper was founded as THE CLARENDON News back in

For more than 125 years, our paper has covered the ups and downs of Clarendon and Donley County. It was there when "Saints' Roost" was founded, and it was there when the community had to painfully pull up stakes and move to the new railroad. The newspaper was there for the establishment of Clarendon College, the construction of every new public building, and every good and progressive thing that this city has

The newspaper has also been there when the wrath of nature struck our county in the form of heat, high winds, hail, deadly tornadoes, more than one flood, and even a few small earthquakes. It was there when fire destroyed several downtown businesses and there when the fire department was created. It was there when the depot was built, and it was there when the depot was moved.

The newspaper was there when a heinous murder was committed and there when the killer's own life was taken by the state.

Whether the athletes were in a winless season or headed to state or national playoffs, the newspaper has been there to cover the Bronchos, the Bulldogs, and

The newspaper is more than just another business - although in this case, it is the oldest business in town. The newspaper is an institution in its own right. It fills a present need for the reader and the advertiser, and it serves as a weekly time capsule to tell future generations about the way we live and who we are. It communicates our hopes and dreams and our victories

Whether you made the honor roll, scored a touch down, or just wrote a letter to Santa, odds are you've been in the paper. The newspaper records your birth, your education, your marriage, and ultimately your

The newspaper has an obligation to report the facts in its news stories, and it also serves as a forum of ideas on its opinion page. Those opinions may sometimes be diametrically opposed, but being able to express them is what freedom means.

Readers may not always like what the editor or the letter writer has to say, but that's okay. Being able to express yourself is not about being liked; it's about exercising our God-given freedoms. It's about having a say in how our government serves us, and it's about holding our elected representatives - from City Hall to Capitol Hill - accountable.

The survival of Liberty - in America and elsewhere - is forever linked to a free press. A recent letter to the editor referred to this newspaper as "the embodiment of a free society," and so it is. So it has been, and so may it ever be.

Professor's message causes car wreck

I learned a very important lesson this week: cell phones and driving are bad.

I am not a very good driver. I will be the first to admit it. I'm not ashamed. I have never liked driving. It makes me nervous, and I don't like being that stressed

I also have a history of being unable to walk and chew gum. I cannot clap and sing. Contrary to popular belief, I do not think the ability to multi-task is gender related.

So I have been genetically set up for day, and I looked at my cell phone and saw I had a missed call. I didn't recognize the number, but it had the prefix for a number on campus.

Normally, I would have tossed the phone back in my bag and checked it later, but I was waiting for an important call from a boy. I listened to the message.

It was from one of my professors. I didn't hear the whole thing, but I picked up that some paper of mine was missing or

I was trying to re-play the message when the girl riding with me cursed and told me to stop! Red light!

brake and slowed down enough that when I hit the car in front of me, it was a very gentle "love pat." Maybe it was a little harder than that. The guy pulled over into a parking lot just to the side of the "scene" and got out. I was very nervous, and I laid my head on the steering wheel for a minute to regroup.

life's lessons

Do I tell him I was on the phone? I was driving back to campus the other Where's my insurance card? Are we going to call the police? Am I going to jail? What

> He was looking over his car that obviously was not damaged in any way. I apologized as sincerely as I could and asked if he thought everything was okay.

> He was bitter because he had just gotten his car back after an accident he had a few months earlier that wasn't his fault either. He said I needed to realize I wasn't the only person in the world and I should be concerned with someone besides

It was then that I realized what he must be thinking.

Here I was talking on a brand new cell phone in a relatively new car. I had just come from an important meeting so I was all dressed up. He thought I was some spoiled little rich girl whose Daddy was going to take care of bribing judges and officials to keep me from getting in

How much further from the truth can you get!

It was obvious that the accident was less than a fender bender. I would hardly even call it a scrape. The guy didn't want to look like a jerk, so he said he didn't have time to get a police report, he had better things to do, but he would be in touch later.

The girl who was riding with me is 19 years old and doesn't have a driver's license. "Why is it they let you have a driver's license, and they won't give me one?"

All of this stressed me out beyond my normal limits. I mean, this is a feeling worse than the security alarm going off in the computer lab.

I called my mom, and then I went back to my room and cried. There was a message on my dorm phone, too. The professor found my paper. Oops. She had it all along. She was sorry she bothered me.

I was pretty sorry myself.

The Newspaper: A Nation Talking to Itself

Free trade pacts make America richer

What do Chile and Singapore have in common? The first nation is in South America; the second is halfway around the globe in Asia. Chileans speak Spanish; the language of Singapore is Mandarin. Fifteen million people live in Chile while Singapore has only four million. Until recently these countries shared little. But this summer they became the most recent countries to engage in free trade agreements with the United States, an exclusive group of nations destined for economic

The agreements were the first to be signed under the Trade Promotion Authority (TPA) enacted by Congress last year. TPA gives the president the ability to negotiate trade agreements Congress can accept or reject, but not modify. Unfortunately, TPA lapsed in 1994 and was not renewed. As a result, trade negotiation has remained stagnant for nearly a decade. While other nations built partnerships, America largely sat on the sidelines as an observer. Foreign governments did not want to waste effort crafting a complex and far-reaching agreement, only to see it altered in the initial stages. Our economy - and our workers - suffered.

The Chile and Singapore agreements signaled an end to that era. This trade legislation was an important step to promote economic growth, bring lower prices to consumers, and create jobs in America.

Trade is essential to our current and future prosperity. Texas exports everything from computer and electronic products to rice. The absence of favorable trade agreements imposes an invisible tax that Americans pay every time we shop, whether we buy tennis shoes or tractors. Economists predict that reducing tariffs by one-third would boost the U.S. economy by $177 billion each year. That's an average savings of $2,500 a year for a family of four.

Trade jobs are high paying jobs. One in 10 Americans works in industries that depend on the export of goods and services. Accounting for more than one quarter of all U.S. economic growth in the 1990s, export jobs pay wages approximately 13 to 18 percent higher than the national average. Clearly, opening markets for American businesses creates employment here at home. And export opportunities are not only beneficial for large companies. Small business is the backbone of our nation's economy, every four jobs and producing one-half of the U.S. gross domestic product. To stay at the forefront of innovation, small businesses need access to global markets and a level playing field. Free and fair trade provides that and more.

It also creates opportunities for farmers and ranchers - especially important for Texas, the nation's third largest agriculture exporting state. Texas' number one agricultural export is live animals and red meats, totaling more than $800 million annually. As the nation's number one cotton exporter, Texas exported 1.5 million bales in a single year to Mexico alone. And when it comes to feed grains and products, Texas ranks seventh. One in three U.S. farmers plants for exports, and they will ship an estimated $54.5 billion overseas in agricultural products and crops this year. That means more jobs here at home and growing markets for our products.

Our global standing is increasingly reliant on the economy of the Western Hemisphere, and political stability is largely dependent on economic factors as well. Unfortunately, the slowdown in the U.S. has trickled down throughout Central and South America, threatening fledgling democracies. Building and establishing trade relationships with our neighbors is critical. If our Hemisphere is economically viable, everybody wins.

The North American Free Trade Agreement, NAFTA, opened the doors for free and fair trade in the northern part of our hemisphere. In fact, of the 233 destinations for Texas exports, more than half go to Canada and Mexico as a result of NAFTA. The agreement with Chile is our first with a South American country, but certainly not the last.

Free and fair trade agreements with Australia, the Dominican Republic, Bahrain, Morocco and a number of nations in Central and South America, as well as in Southern Africa, are in the works. Soon, doors will be open a little wider on all the earth's continents, helping to expand foreign markets and strengthen our nation's

By extending our global reach, we will share the fruits of democracy and continue to be the beacon of freedom for the world. And our country and our people will be richer for it.

Winners of the poster contest will be announced.

The purpose of the event is to educate children and families about the importance of fire safety and prevention methods. Broncos rout Bucks, 32-7

By Sandy Anderberg

After a scoreless first quarter, the Broncos came out big in the second and third periods to dominate the Bucks in their 32-7 victory over White Deer. In posting their first win of the season, the Broncos racked up 403 total yards to only 134 for their opponent.

Several Broncos scored as Clarendon got their first three scores in the first quarter and the last two came in the third quarter. Quarterback Quentin West connected with Jeremy Howard on two different occasions, beginning with a 13-yard pass for the Broncos' first score of the game and then again in the third quarter on a 56-yard pass.

Will Betts caught a 43-yard pass from West in the second quarter, and Chase Thornberry and West put together a 72-yard score. The final Bronco touchdown came from Tim Sanchez on a 47-yard run. West threw for 218 yards and also kicked two extra points after touchdowns. Senior Dusty Martindale added 84 yards on 17 carries.

The coaches were very pleased with the effort by the Broncos. "Our defense really played well," head coach Roger Hoeltzel said. "It was really a bright spot for us. We held White Deer to only 45 total yards in the first half and 82 total yards in the second half. We were pleased with their performance, and it was nice to get a win going into District."

The Broncos will begin District play Friday at Shamrock beginning at 7:30 pm. The Junior Varsity will take on Claude at home on Thursday, October 9, beginning immediately after the jr. high game.

Colts rollover Wheeler, 18-6

The Clarendon Colts put together their first win of the season as they rolled over Wheeler Thursday night at Bronco Stadium. The Colts were in control of the game from the beginning and sent the Mustangs home with a loss.

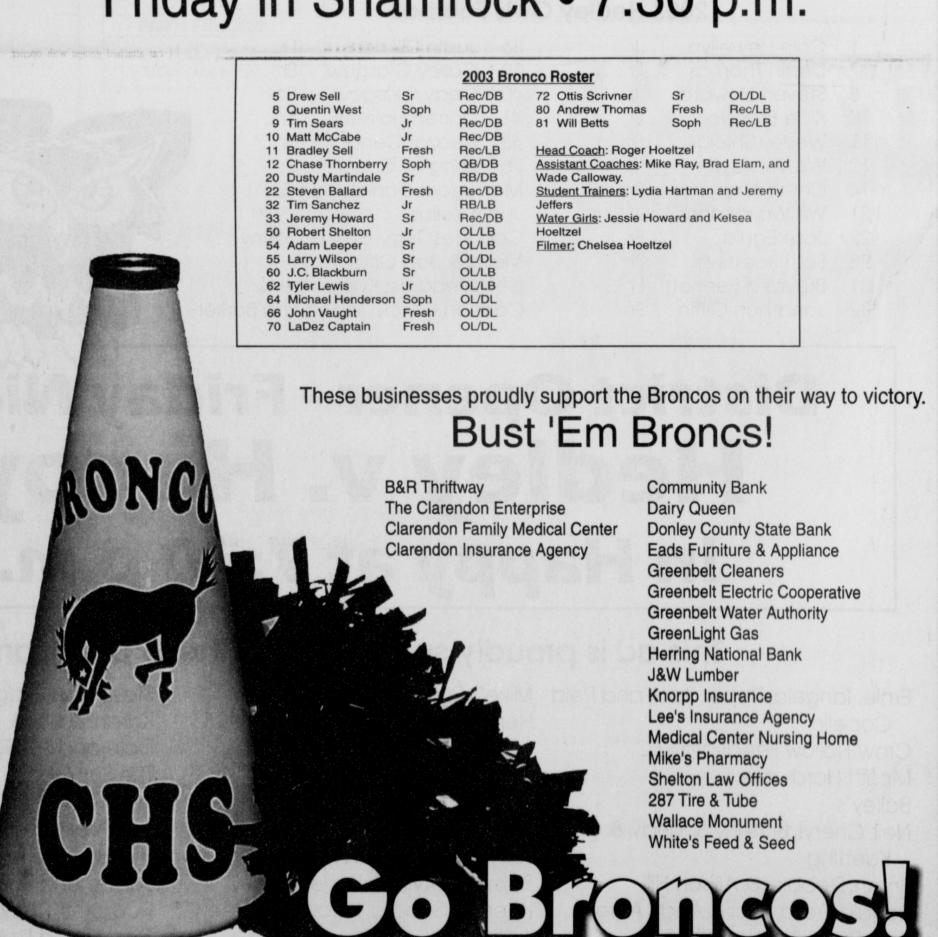

Dalton Askew got things rolling when he scored on a 60-yard run in the first quarter. The Mustangs scored once before halftime-leaving things all even at the break.

It was Askew again in the third and fourth quarters taking it into the end zone on a 40-yard and 5-yard run respectively giving the Colts the win. Derrick Shelton made a great interception to give the Colts another chance to score. "It was a great victory for the Colts with everyone contributing," coach Mike Ray said. "Dalton (Askew) had one of his best games with three touchdowns." Ray also named others that played well in the win: T.J. Brown, Shelton, Austin Howard, Devin Noble, Scott Fowler, Jesse Foster, Stephen Fowler, PJ Ray, James Allmond, and Kaleb Shadle.

The Colts will play Shamrock Thursday, October 9, here at 5 pm.

we use from free chlorine to chloramines. This change is intended to benefit our customers by reducing the levels of disinfection byproducts (DBPs) in the system, while still providing protection from waterborne disease

The change from the use of free chlorine to chloramines can cause problems to person dependent on dialysis machines when carbon filters are not employed to prepare water for the dialysate. A condition known as hemolytic anemia can occur. Therefore, the TCEQ requires that water system officials put the change to chlorimines with the emphasis on the fact that the change may affect dialysis patients. We urge health care officials to be aware that the pretreatment scheme used for the dialysis units must provide some means, such as charcoal filter, for removal of chlorinating

In addition, chloraminated water may be toxic to pet fish. Customers (who may have fish), pet stores, and zoos, should be aware of the change, and add carbon filters to remove chloramines before using
