Clarendon enjoys soggy celebration

The 124th anniversary Saints' Roost Celebration will go down in history as the "soggy celebration" as storm clouds dumped more than two inches of rain but failed to dampen the spirit of the festivities.

Old-timers say they have no recollection of such a heavy rain ever falling on the Fourth of July. Tommie Saye, official observer for the National Weather Service, recorded half an inch of rain by 8 a.m. on July 4 and another 1.74" by the next morning.

The early Thursday morning rain drove many craft fair vendors to the indoors at the Clarendon Community Center, some vendors didn't show up at all, but a handful of others braved the elements and set up at City Park. The day started off with wet grass and occasional sprinkles as celebration-goers began to congregate at the park.

During the Old Settlers Reunion, P.T. Maxey, age 84, was honored as the oldest person in attendance and having lived in Donley County the longest. Peewee and Jerry Bowen of Dickenson were recognized for having traveled the greatest distance.

The Al Morrah Shrine Club went forward with the annual barbecue, serving 856 people despite the periodic downpours that started just before noon. Fortunately the Shriners had rain insurance, which will help their financial situation. Funds from the barbecue are used in conjunction with the Khiva Temple of the Shrine in Amarillo to help pay for transportation of kids to the Shriners' burns and crippled children's hospitals, both of which are Masonic charities operated free of charge.

The Lions Club's annual Cow Patty Bingo was also carried out in the rain. The calf exhibited more sense than the Lions or the viewers and was reluctant to leave its dry trailer. But it was coaxed out and eventually did its deed on the $50 square with Roberta Pittman's and Kirsten Bertrand's names on it.

At 2 p.m. the phrase "raining on my parade" was taken to a new level as the precipitation really cut loose. Exhibiting true rugged pioneer spirit, the folks in the parade marched forward. Many viewers took shelter as much as possible while kids reportedly tried to scoop up candy before it was washed away.

In the Bicycle and Tricycle division, first place winners were Taylor Knorpp, Tres Hommel, and Chris Tiedeman. Second place went to Hannah Hommel, McKinzie Ivey, and Nick Tiedeman. And third place winners were Taylor Perryman, Kendra Davis, and one child whose name and number were washed off the judge's paper. Each first place winner got $20 from the Donley County State Bank. See 'Celebration' on page 6.

Officers nab 2 suspects in burglary

A quick investigation by the Donley County Sheriff's Department led to the Saturday arrest of two local men for the burglary of Henson's jewelry store Friday night.

Jason Curry, 22, and David Deatherage, 19, were in the Donley County Jail awaiting arraignment at press time on burglary charges.

Sheriff Butch Blackburn said the two men entered Henson's about 4 p.m. Friday. Curry distracted the shop owners while Deatherage hid in the attic. He came downstairs about 10 p.m. after the store was closed and cleared out several jewelry cases before exiting about 10:30 p.m.

A.R. Henson said he noticed the back door of the business ajar when he came to work Saturday and then found the mess the suspects left.

An investigation by the sheriff's office and Texas Ranger Gary Henderson was undertaken, and Curry and Deatherage were arrested about 5 p.m. Saturday. The stolen merchandise was recovered, Blackburn said. Both suspects confessed to the crime.

Rain on our parade

A very wet Jim Shadle tells the photographer, "You're never going to get a picture from here," as the annual July Fourth parade makes its way up Kearney Street in the background. Shadle and scores of others took refuge in the City Park Pavilion as the parade proceeded undaunted by the weather.

Deadline near for SBA loan applications

FT WORTH - Businesses in some Texas and Oklahoma counties have until August 5, 2002, to file applications for low-interest disaster loans from the US Small Business Administration (SBA).

The SBA's Economic Injury Disaster Loans are available for businesses dependent on farmers and ranchers sustaining crop losses due to drought that occurred June 1, 2001, and continuing; and by lightning and wildfires that occurred on July 16, 2001. Farmers and ranchers are not eligible for these SBA loans. However, nurseries that are victims of drought disasters can apply.

Businesses in Donley County are among those eligible to apply.

Applications and further information can be obtained by calling the SBA toll-free at 1-800-366-6303 or TDD 817-267-4688 for the hearing impaired.

These loans are intended to assist businesses in offsetting working capital losses which they suffered as a result of the severe weather reducing the crop income of the area farmers and ranchers.

Cattle Raisers working to halt termination of beef checkoff

FORT WORTH- Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association has asked the U.S. Justice Department to seek a stay of a district court injunction that would terminate collection of the beef checkoff effective July 15.

The injunction was issued following a June 21 ruling by South Dakota Federal District Court Judge Charles B. Kormmann that the Beef Promotion and Research Act and check-off "are unconstitutional and unenforceable" because they violate the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution.

"It is imperative that the Department of Justice work quickly to request the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals to grant a stay in this case pending appeal, and if possible to seek an expedited appeal of this decision," TSCRA

"Although the decision issued by the federal district court applies only to the beef program, it increases the threat to all similar initiatives by other industries such as cotton, soybean, honey, and dairy programs," Dudley said.

Dudley explained that the majority of TSCRA members have small and midsize operations.

"These businesses are not large enough to advertise their own products," he pointed out, "but by joining together with other cattlemen, they can enhance demand for their own products."

"The loss of these programs would be a huge blow to the livelihoods of thousands of family farms and ranches and add to the economic challenges facing rural America."

Established as part of the 1985 Farm Bill, the checkoff assesses $1 per head on the sale of live domestic and imported cattle and a comparable assessment on imported beef and beef products.

The assessment became mandatory when the program was approved by 79 percent of producers in a 1988 referendum vote. Since then, support for the program has remained above 60 percent, according to producer attitude surveys by three different companies independent of the industry.

States retain up to 50 cents on the dollar and forward the other 50 cents per head to the Cattlemen's Beef Promotion and Research Board, which oversees the national program, subject to USDA oversight. Checkoff revenues may be used for promotion, education, and research programs to improve the marketing climate for beef.

Termination of checkoff collections threatens funding for critical research on preventing E-coli and other food borne bacteria, demand-building promotions such as the Beef, It's What's for Dinner ads, and Beef Quality Assurance programs nationwide, to name a few.

The free Texas Beef Quality Program education programs conducted by TSCRA are partially funded through checkoff funds received from the Texas Beef Council.

See 'Beef Checkoff' on page 8.

Panhandle board gets money to provide services

AUSTIN - The Texas Workforce Commission (TWC) announced its approval of a $13,259,934 allocation to fund workforce services provided through the Panhandle Workforce Development Board

PWDB is one of 28 local workforce development boards throughout the state that, along with TWC, comprise the Texas Workforce Network. The primary goal of the network is to guarantee that a skilled and qualified workforce is in place to meet the needs of Texas's employers through locally controlled, employer-driven workforce development programs.

The services provided through the Network are primarily federally funded. TWC allocates these funds, but the specific manner in which the funds are utilized is largely left to the local boards.

The money allocated to PWDB will fund programs including:

- Workforce Investment Act - WIA provides employment and training services to match employers' needs. WIA also offers services for people who have lost their jobs in mass layoffs or plant closings, or who have been laid off.
- Employment Services - Local workforce boards provide employment services that help employers find qualified workers for their openings by screening applicant lists, scheduling interviews, and arranging space for the interviews, if necessary.
- Child Care - Local boards help build a stronger workforce through the design and management of quality, affordable, child care services for low-income families.
- TANF Choices - These employment services help welfare recipients transition from welfare to work and expand employers' available workforce options by providing job-search and job-readiness classes, basic skills training, vocational training and support services, including transportation to promote self-sufficiency.

• Food Stamp Employment and Training - These training services increase the number of workers available to employers and help food stamp recipients become self-supporting through participation in employment, job readiness, education and training activities, and related support services, including transportation.

The Texas Workforce Commission is a state agency dedicated to helping Texas employers, workers, and communities prosper economically. For details on TWC and the services it offers in unison with its network of local workforce development boards, call (512) 463-8556 or visit www.texasworkforce.org.

City must get serious about enforcement

Ordinance #340 went down in flames late Tuesday night on a 4-1 vote by the Clarendon Board of Aldermen. The Livestock Law was rendered moot by the passage of the brand new Ordinance #342. You'll have to wait for next week's issue to read all the particulars of the new law, but, in a nutshell, it is a compromise effort designed to tick off the fewest people.

The livestock issue has been settled, but the new law must be diligently enforced if it is to work properly. And that's an area where this city needs to get its act together.

The time has come for our city leaders to vigorously enforce all of our city ordinances. Different aldermen have for years discussed the need to "clean up" Clarendon - to go after dilapidated houses and other structures and to target junk vehicles and trashy yards. This is as good a time as any to start that initiative.

As Alderman Janice Knorpp correctly pointed out Tuesday, "We live in a city. We don't live in the country." As such, we agree to live by certain rules and regulations, and we elect representatives to govern our municipality. The function of our city government is not only to provide municipal utilities and services, but it is also to adopt guidelines for city residents to insure public health and safety as well as to keep the town neat and orderly.

To that end we have building codes, zoning ordinances, animal laws, and rules requiring plumbing and electrical inspections. We have ordinances that prevent certain unhealthy or dangerous businesses from locating in the city and ordinances that are designed to prevent fires. The list goes on and on.

In recent weeks, two other Panhandle area cities have announced "get tough" policies in regards to ordinance enforcement. THE CANADIAN RECORD reported last week that that city's leaders have promised to take legal action against property owners in violation of health and safety codes.

Officials in one Wheeler County town have gone even further. THE COUNTY STAR-NEWS reported last month that the City of Shamrock is giving its residents until September to come into compliance with its municipal laws or deal with fines from $1 to $500 per day. Shamrock City Manager Johnny Rhodes said people with unpaid fines will face jail time.

Shamrock has been divided into four sections, and city officials will begin random inspections one section at a time in September and start prosecuting violators.

Clarendon should be in a good position to start a similar program. In the midst of the hoopla over #340, the Board of Aldermen approved Ordinance #341. That law was the culmination of a $2,800 contract with the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission and nearly nine months of work, and it was easily one of the most important ordinances to be passed in the last 100 years.

Ordinance #341 codified the municipal code of Clarendon. In simple terms, it completely re-wrote all of the laws of the city in one fell swoop. Outdated items were either done away with or updated. The office of the City Scavenger - who was responsible for cleaning out privies - was abolished, and the title of Poundmaster was changed to Animal Control Officer.

The work sessions of the board were the most interesting city meetings held in a long time as aldermen actually read the 300+ ordinances that had been passed since 1901. Did you know in Clarendon it's illegal for any person to jump on or off a moving train... unless they have a ticket? That law was kept, along with several others that the city felt was of importance to the historical character of the town. But I digress...

The greatest thing to come from the codification is that the city ordinances have been completely organized for the first time. Anything you want to know about the law in Clarendon can be easily referenced at City Hall.

Previously, ordinances governing traffic, for example, were spread out and not grouped together in any way. Ordinance #6 was passed in 1909 and prohibited racing along the streets or alleys. That was at the opposite end of the book from Ordinance #313, which was passed in 1997 and set the speed limit at 25 mph in construction zones on US 287 in the city limits. Now, you just have to open the book to Chapter 11, labeled "Traffic," and there you have all the pertinent laws at your fingertips.

But this codification project will have been nothing but a waste of time if city officials are not serious about enforcing the laws.

Just last week, our reporter was working on a story, and she called City Hall to inquire about the legality of shooting fireworks in the city limits. She was told that City Hall "didn't know" if it was illegal or not and that she should call the Sheriff's Department to find out.

Well, for crying out loud! We just spent $2,800 plus nine months of time, and City Hall can't answer that simple question? Your trusty editor whipped out a draft of the codification and, in less than 30 seconds, flipped over to Chapter 10, "Offenses," and there it plainly said in 1908 it was made illegal to shoot fireworks in the city limits. A city employee could have made that determination just as quickly.

We have these ordinances for a reason - to make Clarendon a better, safer place to live. The codification makes reading the laws easy for anyone. All that's needed now is the will to enforce them.

Government should stop Amtrak support

By Bart Frazier

Once again, Amtrak is in dire need of our tax dollars. Without a cash infusion, Amtrak president David Gunn said it will have to halt operations. Negotiations are now underway that will provide a guaranteed "loan" (read: subsidy) to the railroad.

The question that no one seems to be asking is: Why is the government even involved in the railroad business? Experience has shown time and again that in a free market, products and services will be supplied that are of a higher quality and at a lower price than if produced by the government.

The problem that America faces with Amtrak is twofold. One, Amtrak is a government monopoly - the state has made it illegal for anyone to compete with it in the delivery of train-passenger service. That is an instant recipe for inefficiency and poor service. When a firm does not have to worry about someone else producing a better product, it will inevitably be more lax in its business practices. (Think about the Postal Service.)

Why worry about late trains, derailments, old train cars, and poor food and service when no one is permitted to compete with a better product and better service?

Second, and more important, Amtrak is not held accountable by the sharp razor of profit maximization. In the private sector, if costs exceed revenue, that is a signal that the producer has failed to sufficiently satisfy consumers with his product or service. The firm then has to cut costs, produce something else, or go out of business. That results in efficiency, both in the firm and in society - resources flow to where they are valued the most.

But that's not the case with Amtrak. Amtrak has been allowed to continuously run in the red with the aid of tax dollars. The result is not only a lousy service because of its monopoly status but also the endless consumption of resources through taxpayers' subsidies.

Efficiency arguments aside, is the subsidization of Amtrak just? Well, is it moral that the state prevent citizens from providing passenger train service - a peaceful activity? Is it moral that tax dollars are used to fund Amtrak? How can it be just to take money from a person who does not use trains and give it to someone who does? That's called theft in any circle other than government.

Amtrak should not be bailed out. It involves an unjust transfer program and it's also a service that could be done better by private companies. What is needed is to get government out of the train business and open the market to competition. If private entities cannot turn a profit at it, then Americans don't value train travel enough to merit its existence.

Stop treating high school kids like criminals

By Ron Crickenberger

What do convicted criminals have in common with some American public high school students?

Each can be forced to urinate into a paper cup at any time - to "prove" they're drug free. Even if there's no evidence that they've ever used illegal drugs.

Now the Supreme Court has decided the constitutionality of subjecting public school students to random, warrantless drug tests as a prerequisite to participating in extracurricular activities.

The case, Board of Education v. Earls, concerns an Oklahoma school district drug-testing policy. The school requires drug tests for students in grades 7-12 who want to participate in after-school events such as the chess club or the school band.

The plaintiff, Lindsay Earls, was a high school sophomore trying out for the girls choir when she was asked to urinate into a paper cup as a teacher listened outside the bathroom stall.

The experience was "humiliating," said Lindsay, who passed her test. Then she and two other students filed a lawsuit against the district because the search wasn't based on "individualized suspicion."

But it gets worse. If the Bush administration has its way, soon every student in the USA's 14,700 public school systems - not just those involved in extracurricular activities - could be subject to drug searches.

That's because the administration argued in a brief to the Supreme Court that every school should "have the flexibility to adopt reasonable measures, like the policy in this case." Note the word "reasonable." It means that schools should have the power to test any student, as long as school officials claim it is "reasonable."

But there are good reasons for Americans to stand up and "just say no" to mass drug testing of students.

It's unconstitutional. The Fourth Amendment, which prohibits unreasonable searches, clearly states that "no warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause." The Constitution contains no exception for students.

Thus, the government has no more right to compel a random urine sample from high school students than from high school principals, accountants, or even Supreme Court justices.

What part of the phrase "probable cause" don't the Bush administration's legal experts understand?

It won't work. A drug test can be circumvented just as easily by high school students as by any other American who is compelled to take one. If extracurricular activities require a drug test, kids using drugs may simply avoid those activities and avoid the test as well. Or simply find a way to falsify the test, as many American adults already do.

Even the mandatory, blanket testing of all students favored by the Bush administration won't stop kids from using drugs. The proof? The government can't even keep drugs out of its own prisons, so how can it possibly keep drugs out of schools?

Testing or no testing, students who want drugs will find a way to get them - just as millions of their parents do.

It's an attack on parental rights. Coercive student drug testing is based on the assumption that students are in effect government "property" while attending government schools.

But children are the responsibility of their parents, not of the government. And parents are the only ones who should decide whether to arrange a drug test.

Perhaps Lindsay Earls said it best:

"It's nobody's business but my parents' if I'm using drugs."

It's hypocritical. "I didn't inhale," said former president Bill Clinton. "When I was young and irresponsible, I was young and irresponsible," said President George W. Bush.

Even high schoolers are smart enough to recognize hypocrisy, whether the source is a parent or a politician.

Interestingly, in 1998 the U.S. House of Representatives quietly torpedoed a drug-testing proposal for themselves and their staffs because lawmakers protested that it was "insulting and undignified."

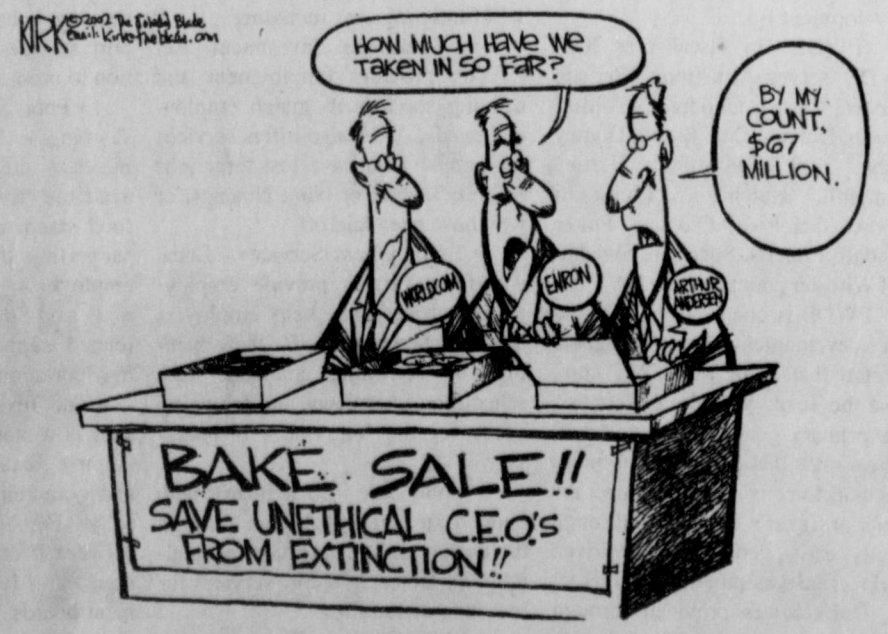

So why should we subject our own children to this insulting and undignified policy?

Clearly, demands for student drug testing have far more to do with political posturing than with public safety - and students know it.

Mandatory student drug testing will only empower politicians and public school bureaucrats; harass millions of innocent schoolchildren in the hope of catching a few drug users; and teach kids to have no respect for the authority figures who have so little respect for their rights.

The Donley County Hospital Board met in regular session June 18, 2002, in the Conference Room of the Medical Center Nursing Home.

A public hearing was held for the nursing home and Associated Ambulance Authority 2002-2003 budgets. There were no members of the public in attendance.

In the ambulance report, District Administrator Alan Graham reported a total of 57 calls in the month of May with a total billing of $39,424.36.

Graham also reported on the status of the building project. A bill for $89,798 from Cruz Construction was paid. Landscaping is budgeted for $18,000. The board approved financing for $127,000 to pay for the final costs of the ambulance facility.

After review and discussion, the ambulance authority and nursing home budgets were approved.

The full book survey of the nursing home has been completed by the Texas Department of Human Services with good results. Census for the nursing home was 51.

In the indigent care report, expenditures in May totaled $596.60. Indigent care for 2001-2002 was reported to be under budget. The same amount has been budgeted for 2002-2003.

Clarendon folks recovering from busy 4th

Are y'all as tired as I am after the Fourth? If so, Clarendon is chock full of pooped people. We worked and played hard from Thursday through Sunday - because by the time the last event was over, it wasn't Saturday night any more. It was Sunday morning.

The rain was welcome, even if it did get our barbecue lunch wet down at the park. Not many people gave up standing in line for lunch. They just stood in the rain. Though I saw Martha Lowe camped out by the condiments eating her lunch from the minute the rain started until it quit for a little while. It quit just long enough for us to sit on the wall by Tommie and Lucy Saye and their company and eat lunch.

Lots of the bravers-of-the-rain wore their gimme caps and cowboy hats to stave off that unfamiliar stuff coming out of the sky. A number of others went for the natural, drowned-rat look. Others used whatever they could find, beg, or borrow to keep the rain off. Including me.

Joburta Helms was kind enough to give me a few of the flyers she'd been handing out to local children inviting them to First Baptist's Vacation Bible School going on this week. So I wore neon green flyers on my head. Don't knock it - they may not have kept much of the rain off my hair, but they kept it off the top of my head. That stuff is cold! And they didn't dye my hair green. I wondered if they might, but didn't really care. I just wanted something to ward off a little rain.

The rain turned the rodeo arena into a mud bath. The kids in the calf scramble were wading in mud; some of them knee deep or more. They had trouble keeping their boots on. One little fellow had trouble keeping his pants on, they were so weighted down with mud. They just slid right off. That's what comes of wearing clothes "they can grow in to." (My

around Town

CLARENDON • 874-9186

Thursday night was a little slow at the rodeo because the rain kept coming, but Friday, things picked right up. Plenty of people came downtown to the Depression dinner. I know because I was dipping up beans in the first hour and a half, and I went through two of those big roaster/cookers and was well on my way through two more before I turned the ladle over to Sharyn Morrow.

Lots of people have had company in for the Fourth. Doug and Martha Lowe had their grandsons up from Mesquite. The Sayes had their son and his friend. John and Lori Howard have been hosting a whole slew of relatives from places as varied as Ohio and Arizona. I think they've been rotating different batches in and out so most everybody gets to see everybody else before they have to go home again.

The rain held off Saturday until the rodeo ended, then came pouring down just as the Boy Scouts got the concession stand closed up for another year and headed home. Then Sunday morning, Todd Baker loaded up a bus full of students and took them to Weatherford, Okla., to Band Camp. They had enough going this year for bus transportation, which was sure nice for the parents.

The next few weeks look to be very, very busy as summer rushes to a close. I know, it's not even the middle of July, but with school starting when it does, the summer's about half over. And there are still a few Bible schools, basketball camps, church camps, vacations, and relative visits folks are needing to squeeze in. Have fun squeezing!

A wedding reception was held at the Community Fellowship Church immediately following the ceremony. Pati Cenicerros, Stacey Cenicerros, Donita Phillips, and Stephanie Phillips served as reception attendants.

More than seven inches of rain falls near Hedley

The rain has been absolutely wonderful. It started raining about 11:00 on Wednesday and rained almost continually since. I talked to Keith this evening, and he said he'd had about seven inches so far. As I write this on Sunday evening, it is still raining.

Clarendon isn't the only town with ordinance problems. Hedley has an ordinance banning fireworks within the city limits. For the past several days, there have been firecrackers popping all over town. I thought that once the Fourth was over they would stop, but I can still hear banging. Even the rain didn't stop the noise. The noise doesn't bother me much during the day; but at night, especially on the night before I have to go to Amarillo for treatments early, it does. Mike Wallendorff warned several people about the noise, but it didn't do much good.

Joyce Boliver fell a few days ago and broke her hip. She was in the hospital, but I think she's gone to rehab now. Hopefully she will be back soon at home in Claude. Her nephew, Jon Leggett, said he visited her and she is doing well. It has been several days since I talked with Jon.

Richard and Janet Conine of Amarillo came a few days ago and took her sister, Marie Adams, to Amarillo to several doctors. Marie said she was doing fairly well.

A lot of people have had company over the holiday.

Glyndon and Kathy Holland visited his parents, Buford and Jerry, last Tuesday. Buford and Jerry attended the rodeo in Clarendon on the Fourth.

Joda and Barbara Elam of Colorado Springs visited with Barbara's aunt, Eunice Ward, and Tonya Smith, last week.

Alberta Elliott of Sikeston, Missouri, and her daughter, Regine Medly, of Houston spent several days with Mrs. Elliott's sister-in-law, Mrs. Sandy Bevers. They went to Amarillo to visit Sandy's daughter, Betty Campbell, who is in the hospital. Hopefully Betty will be home before long.

Kay Miller came from Kingsland to spend the holiday with her mother, Mrs. Juanita Brown, and sister, Grace Burkhalter. It has rained so much in Kingsland, she can't get home. She didn't know how long it would be before the flood there would permit her to return home.

My brother, Leonard Mullins, visited with Mother several times recently. He took care of Dan Mullins' garden while Dan spent a few days vacation. Leonard said he picked the squash. I don't know much about gardening but do know that you have to stay busy to keep the stuff picked if you want it to keep bearing. Leonard stopped by my house for awhile Sunday afternoon.

Hedley was shocked and saddened by the sudden death of Jr. Gilchrist Wednesday. I've known Jr. since we were in junior high. He went to school in Memphis. He'll be missed by all his friends.

Will souped-up water really enhance your health?

The sale of bottled water has doubled over the last ten years and is now the fastest growing segment of the beverage industry. What is the newest trend in bottled water? Lacing water with an assortment of nutrients, herbal extracts, flavorings, and sweeteners - and labeling it with such monikers as "fitness water" or "Vitamin Water".

For marketers, tinkering with bottled water is a way to lure in more customers. For the customers, the tinkering comes at a steep price. The enhanced water sells for $1.19 to $1.50 a bottle. What do you get for your money? Some may prefer the sweeter taste and fruit flavorings added to several "enhanced" waters.

The nutritional benefits, however, are largely illusory. And the herbal preparations raise some considerations.

The vitamins and minerals added to "enhanced" water are usually not present in large quantities. And Americans get enough of most of the added nutrients anyway. The amount of vitamin C added to one of the name brand enhanced waters could be obtained by eating two small strawberries, while 2 1/2 ounces of milk (a few sips) provides the same amount of vitamin B 12. As for niacin, vitamin B 6, and pantothenic acid, all are widely distributed in the food supply, and deficiencies are rare in healthy people.

Waters with herbs added raise still more considerations. All the problems that dog the herbal supplement industry, such as lack of standardization and an absence of purity, quality, and strength guarantees, apply to herbal beverages as well. In fact, from a labeling standpoint, there is even less information provided on herb-water beverages than on herbal supplements. Many of the herbal enhanced waters contain ginseng and claim to "provide a lasting burst of energy". There is no credible scientific evidence that ginseng has any effect on energy levels. Also, at least one of the products researched contained kava kava. This herb is linked to liver damage.

If supplemental vitamins and minerals are what you're after, take a multivitamin/multimineral supplement. A 6-month supply of a popular supplement provides a better range and higher amounts of vitamins and minerals than any of the enhanced waters researched. Try swallowing the 7-cent tablet with a cup or two of tap water, then obtain some proven health benefits by using the leftover money to purchase a nice piece of fruit.

AN INDIVIDUAL SOLUTION TO REMOTE WATER SUPPLY

In the middle of nowhere, the only things you can depend upon are air and daylight. The SQFlex water pumping system is fully operational from one or a combination of these sources. SQFlex Solar and Wind systems are reliable, low-maintenance, and cost-effective.

Where water is a scarce commodity, harnessing the sun and wind to turn the local conditions to your advantage is the low-cost, flexible solution. In the rare cases when Mother Nature doesn't oblige, both solar and wind systems can fall back on generator power, fuel cells, or batteries.

Celebration: Brent Ranch team wins 2002 COEA Rodeo

second place received bike helmets from Duckwall's and Jim Blackerby, and third place was awarded basketballs from Saye's.

All bicyclists were supposed to receive a medal from the Chamber of Commerce. If you didn't get yours, go see Terry at Saye's.

The CHS Cheerleaders won the Float Division, and Greenbelt Rural Electric Coop took second. The Boys Ranch Riding Club was first place in the Riding Unit Division with the Donley County Horse Club in second place. The Antique Car Division was won by Troy Klepper, and Redell Johnson was second.

The Miscellaneous Division was won by the Clarendon Country Club with its golf carts, and second place went to the Christian Motorcyclists from Christian Heritage Church in Amarillo.

The celebration continued with the Jackpot Bullriding Contest on Thursday night at the Clarendon Outdoor Entertainment Association (COEA) Arena followed by a dance hosted by KEFH.

During the dance, the radio station gave away a pickup to one of 8,000 entrants who registered during a 12-week promotion. The lucky winner of the 2002 Chevy S-10 was Chanla Dixon of Memphis. She picked up her truck the next day at Chamberlain Motor Company, which coincidentally was where she had registered for the drawing. Sponsors of the drawing were KEFH, Chamberlain's, Knorpp Insurance Agency, and the Donley County State Bank. Seven other finalists received Florida vacations.

The COEA Ranch Rodeo was held July 5 and 6 and was reported to be well attended considering the weather. The Brent Ranch was the overall winner of the competition with the JA Ranch, the Rafter S, and the Running H taking the second through fourth place positions respectively.

Event winners each night were as follows: Friday Bronc Riding, Running H; Saturday Bronc Riding, Brent Ranch; Friday Team Doctoring, Finch/Thornberry Ranch; Saturday Team Doctoring, Matthews/Darcy Ranch; Friday Wild Cow Milking, JA Ranch; Saturday Wild Cow Milking, Rafter S; Friday Team Sorting, JA Ranch; Saturday Team Sorting, Brent Ranch; Friday Branding, Running H; and Saturday Branding, Rafter S.

Top Horseman was Johnny Hill of the Hall Ranch, and Top Hand was Powder Horn of the JA Ranch. In the junior events of the rodeo, Cody Dryden won the steer riding on Thursday, and Kaleb Shadle won on Friday and Saturday and was the Overall Winner. Corey Dryden won the calf riding on Thursday, Britany Hargrove had the best score on Friday, and Jayson Pigg won on Saturday and was the Overall Winner.

The Chamber of Commerce trip to Las Vegas was won by Kenny Black. Bill Stavenhagen and Markeeta Howard won the beef drawings on Friday and Saturday respectively. Lois Rowland won the Florida vacation drawing to benefit Macy Judd.

Other events during the celebration included a Stick Horse Rodeo and a Depression Dinner on Friday morning. The annual Henson's Turtle Race was held Saturday with Andy Davis, Joseph Jaramillo, and Chris Ariola running the top terrapins this year.

Among other scholarships, she won a $3,250 scholarship by competing in the Veterans of Foreign Wars Voice of Democracy Speech Contest.

She placed in the top six in a statewide feature writing contest sponsored by the Texas Press Association. "I wrote a feature about my grandfather. I think I learned more from writing that article than any other experience in my life," she wrote in her scholarship application.

Mr. and Mrs. Eddy Helms, and probably the community, will be reading more and more feature articles as she pursues her English degree.

Dustin Knowles graduated from Hedley High School for whom he played football, golf, and ran track. "I intend to become a social worker when I graduate from college," Llewellyn stated in the narrative of her scholarship application. "I have made this career choice because I have seen how the system works. I am going to listen and make sure that the children are taken care of." Her mother, Sheila Llewellyn, will continue to be proud of her daughter.

Mrs. Harrington endowed the Sybil B. Harrington Scholarship through The Amarillo College Foundation in 1989. The scholarship encourages and assists outstanding students to pursue higher education. Students receive up to $3,500 a year for tuition and fees and may reapply for a total of four years. Since inception of the fund, more than $2.25 million has been awarded.

Beef Checkoff: Program has expanded consumption, group says

The challenge to the beef checkoff's constitutionality was raised by the Livestock Marketing Association, the Western Organization of Resource Councils and several individual producers.

Defendants in the case are the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the Cattlemen's Beef Promotion and Research Board, which administers the checkoff, and the Nebraska Cattlemen, Inc., which is leading a group of supportive producers who have intervened on behalf of the defendants.

Citing producer unrest over the direction and administration of the beef checkoff, the Livestock Marketing Association initially sought a producer referendum on whether the program should continue. In 1998, the group began a drive to collect the signatures (10 percent of eligible producers) required to call a referendum.

In November 1999, LMA submitted 126,000 signatures to USDA. In December 2000, with the signatures not yet validated, LMA filed a lawsuit in a South Dakota federal district court to compel USDA to immediately order a referendum. The lawsuit also challenged the use of "producers communication funds" to promote the checkoff program.

In January 2001, following verification of the signatures by PricewaterhouseCoopers, a private accounting firm, then Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman announced that there were insufficient valid signatures and declined to order the referendum.

The lawsuit was still pending and took a drastic change of course when the U.S. Supreme Court ruled in June 2001 that the mushroom checkoff is unconstitutional under the First Amendment.

In August 2001, LMA and other plaintiffs filed an amended complaint, asking the federal district court to declare the beef checkoff unconstitutional because it violates producers' First Amendment rights to freedom of speech and association.

"We are extremely disappointed with Judge Kornmann's decision and its severity," TSRCA Executive Vice President Matt Brockman told media representatives.

"We expect USDA and the Justice Department to appeal and hope a stay will be issued on the injunction on collection of fees. The program should be able to continue during appeal process."

Brockman said it was possible that the case would go all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court and noted that prior attempts to undermine the constitutionality of the beef checkoff have failed.

"The beef checkoff has proven over the years to expand consumption of beef both domestically and in other countries. Today, more than ever, consumers know more about the nutritional benefits, convenience and ease of preparation of beef.

"It would be disastrous not to have this very effective program!"

Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association is a 125-year-old trade organization whose 13,200 members manage approximately 5.4 million acres on 70.3 million acres, primarily in Texas and Oklahoma.

Windmill plans

John Earl Morrow works on a frame to support a 90-year-old windmill at the Pastry Peddler last Saturday. Morrow, cooperating with local property owners, hopes to erect several windmills along US 287 through Clarendon to attract the attention of tourists. He set up one several years ago at "Sam Hill" Pit BBQ and recently put up another at the Clarendon Steak House.

Mayo receives Estlack Memorial Scholarship

Zack Mayo has been awarded the Homer Estlack Memorial Scholarship for $250 to attend Clarendon College.

Mayo graduated from Clarendon High School in May and was active in FFA and the French Club. He received the President's Award for Educational Achievement and helped build handrails for the CISD Functional Living Center.

Mayo plans to study Computer Programming and take up a career in that field.

The scholarship is given in memory of Homer Estlack, who was a graduate of Clarendon High School and Clarendon College. He served on the Board of Trustees for the school and college and was its president when the modern CISD campus was built in the early 1960s.

To qualify a candidate must be a graduate of Clarendon High School and have a "B" or better average.
