Chamberlain Motors being sold

Local family in business since 1956

It put Clarendon on the map in terms of car sales and engrained the city's location in the minds of people throughout the Tri-State area. But in just a few days, Chamberlain Motor Company will be no more.

Officials with the dealership confirmed this week the sale of the business to Mark Suna of Dallas, a deal which is expected to be finalized as soon as General Motors gives its approval.

Trey Chamberlain, whose father Fred E. Chamberlain, Jr., established the business in 1956, says it's a time of mixed emotions for him and his family. Ultimately, Trey's health led to the decision to sell.

"We talked about it," he said. "But it was my decision, and they agreed with me."

The motor company had seen many changes over the years. The business used the slogan "The Happy Face Place" before Fred Chamberlain came up with something better about 35 years ago - "It's downhill all the way to Chamberlain Motor Company in Clarendon."

"My father came up with that," Trey said. "It's from a song that he liked which said, 'It's down hill and shady all the way.'"

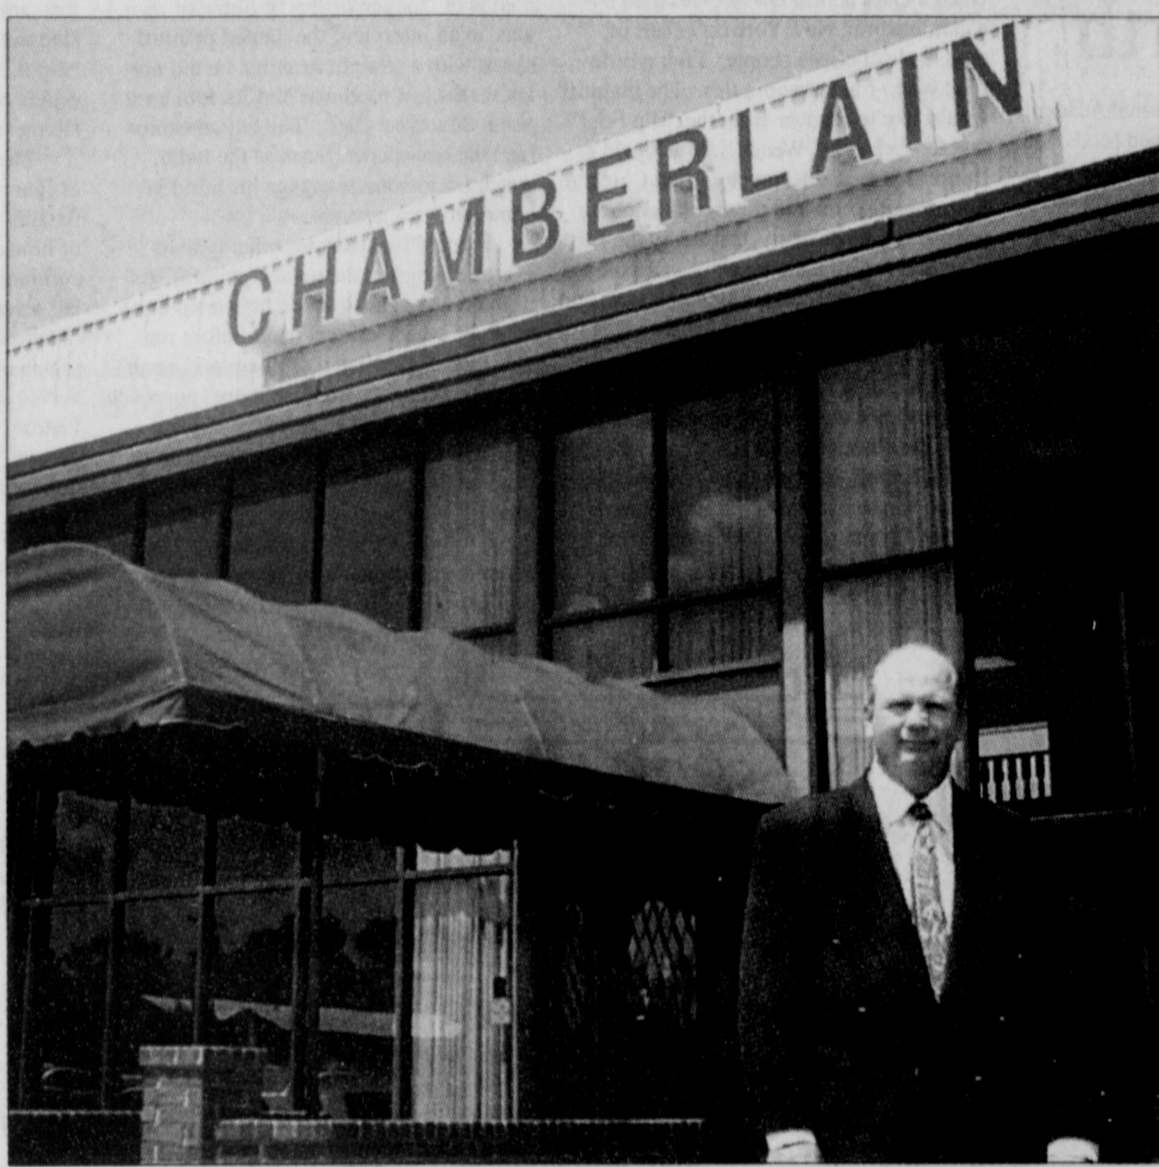

The use of that catch phrase in radio and television commercials forever associated Clarendon with Chamberlain's and vice versa. The popular slogan even inspired a copycat for a brief time several years ago when a Claude business claimed it was "Halfway down the hill."

"Dad was pleased with the popularity [of the slogan] and the fact that the name Chamberlain was linked to Clarendon."

In the course of the business' life, three generations of Chamberlains have worked there at one time or another. Fred got his start as a used car dealer before starting Chamberlain Motor Company in the location it still occupies today.

"He started with Buick, Pontiac, and GMC trucks," Trey said. "Later, he added Oldsmobile and Cadillac." In 1991, Chamberlain's became a full-line GM dealer when the Chevrolet franchise was added.

Fred's wife Jean kept books for the dealership for more than two decades, and Trey grew up around the dealership and got his first job there at an early age.

"I started work hoeing weeds in the fifth grade," he said. "I got an inside job in the parts department when I got my drivers license at 14."

After attending local schools, Trey attended and graduated from the General Motors Institute. He went to work for GM and Buick and joined the engineering team for Opel cars. During his time with GM, Trey worked on the team that put the first electronic fuel injection system on a car made in America.

He came back to Clarendon in 1975 and took on the role of general manager because Fred was in poor health. He planned on going back to work for GM, but when Fred's health improved, they embarked on an enlargement of the business and in 1978 built a new showroom and office building adjacent to the old combination showroom-parts department-service center.

Upon Fred's death in 1980, Trey took on the leadership of the business. His sister Carol worked for the business after college, and in due course, Trey's children, Chris and Catherine, also spent time employed by the family business.

Trey said the early- and mid-1980s were good years for business with a resurgence in the early-1990s, but he can't say that was the pinnacle of the motor company.

"I think the high point for the dealership may still be down the road," he said.

The business and the family suffered a blow in 2001 with the death of Jean Chamberlain, but it was Trey's coming down with pancreatitis in 1996 that really brought on the need to sell.

"I just couldn't work at it any more," he said. "It needs someone who can work it 18 hours a day."

While selling the business his father built is bittersweet, Trey Chamberlain says he's happy about who is buying it.

"[Suna] will become part of the community," he said. "I did not entertain offers from corporate dealers who would not live here. And I left some money on the table because of that. But I did it because I was scared that they might fire a bunch of people and just use the dealership for the franchises."

Chamberlain says the sale probably won't fully dawn on him until he wakes up one morning to realize he's no longer responsible for a tremendous overhead - not in terms of physical inventory but in terms

Mark Suna to become new owner

Mark Suna has big city origins, but the future owner of Chamberlain Motor Company - to be re-named Suna AutoMall - says he is ready for life in the small town.

"The town has been wonderful," Suna said. "The banks here - the Herring National Bank and the Community Bank - have rallied around to make this sale possible. The hospitality given to me as an outsider has been wonderful."

The New York City native says he wants to get involved in civic activities and work to make the town grow, and he wants Suna AutoMall to help lead the way.

"I'm not treating it as my dealership," he said. "I'm treating it as a part of Clarendon."

Suna says he wants to open the dealership for civic events and plans to hold either monthly or bi-monthly activities to bring people out to enjoy his facility whether they buy a car or not.

While the look of the dealership may change, other things will stay the same at the dealership. Suna says he's keeping all the current employees, and folks who purchased cars from Chamberlain's can still get quality service for their vehicles. And Suna AutoMall will still be a full-line General Motors dealer, although it will no longer sell Oldsmobiles since GM is discontinuing that line of cars.

A GM Boutique will be added to sell GM branded merchandise.

Suna also plans on adding to the employee roster as he triples the inventory of cars and works to achieve his goal of selling 70 or more new cars per month.

"Our motto will be 'No one walks away from Suna AutoMall; they drive away,'" he said. "Whatever it takes to earn people's business is what we'll do."

Suna has had a varied career. Born and raised in New York, he studied psychology and became a university lecturer. He later hosted a radio talk show and worked as a motivational speaker. He left New York and lived in Louisville, Kentucky, for

'Relay for Life' breaks goal, brings in more than $19,000

By Carrie Helms, Clarendon Enterprise

Clarendon's Relay for Life topped its original goal of $10,000 and brought in $19,263 for the American Cancer Society.

From dusk until dawn, people from all over Donley County came out for good food, great fun, and to help in the fight against cancer.

"When the teams registered and brought in the money they had raised already, we had more than our goal," Chairperson Dawn Watson said. "We opened with our goal before anyone walked a lap, and we had no where to go but up."

The event opened up with a Survivors' Lap walked by 75 of those who had survived cancer.

Awards were given to the teams that made the most money and walked the most laps.

"The Hula Hildogs from Herring Bank made $2,888 and walked the most laps," Watson said. "In second was the Hedley Hooligans with $2,300, and Grumpy's Gang from the Medical Center Nursing Home was third with $2,093."

Prizes for Most Original Campsite went to USDA, and Best Campsite went to the Caduceus Clan from the Clarendon Family Medical Center.

"Herring Bank won Worst Campsite because they wouldn't bribe the judges," Watson said.

The Luminary Service began at 10 p.m. with 206 luminaries purchased in honor of loved ones, and the bachelor/bachelorette auction began at midnight.

"We auctioned off eleven people and made about $200," Watson said.

The event ended at 7:00 a.m. with a hearty breakfast prepared by Alan Graham.

"A big thanks goes to Alan," Watson said. "He and his team were out there all night long and cooked breakfast for everyone."

Committee member Darlene Spier attributes the event's success to the involvement of the community.

"The event was successful because we had real county-wide involvement," Spier said. "Cancer has no respect for where you live, and everyone has been affected by it in some way."

The event would not have happened without the organization and loving care of the local chapter of the American Cancer Society.

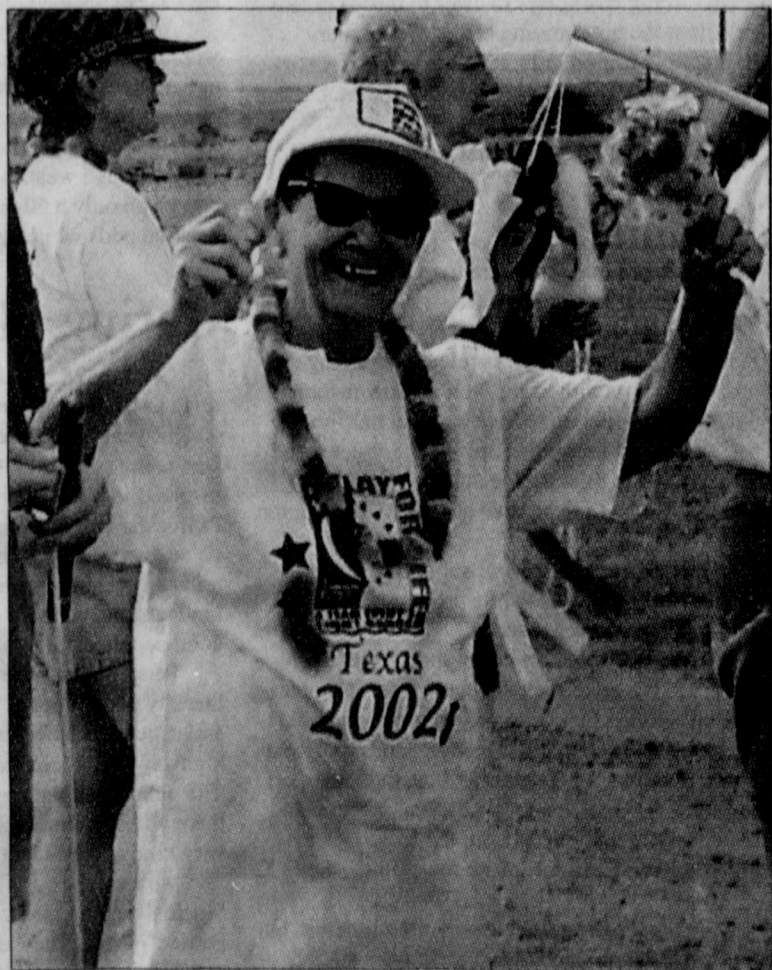

"It was something new we had never done before," Spier said. "Dawn Watson and Greg Henry both had a lot of experience with the Relay for Life, and their ideas and leadership had a lot to do with our success."

The committee hopes that with as much success as they had this year, they will be able to raise about $30,000 next year.

"It is something we definitely want to do again," Watson said. "We're already taking notes about what we can do next year to make it even better."

Proceeds from the event will go to the American Cancer Society to fund cancer research and education all over the country.

"There were a lot of sore muscles on Saturday morning," Watson said, "but it was worth it."

Cennet Rhode lines up on the starting line as a member of the Herring National Bank team during last week's Relay for Life. Her team raised more money than any other, a total of $2,888, to help find a cure for cancer.

Don't blame restaurants for anyone's girth

Fat is in the news. Last month the National Academy of Sciences' Institute of Medicine condemned foods with trans fatty acids (trans fats) for supposedly leading to coronary artery disease. Among the trans fat laden items that are bad for you are margarine, vegetable shortening, dairy products, pastries, fried foods, and... breast milk.

Earlier this summer, the Hollister School District out in California started sending letters to the parents of children considered to have a weight problem.

The United States Senate recently took up consideration of a bill called the Improved National and Physical Activity Act (which supposedly translates into the acronym IMPACT). Senator Bill Frist of Tennessee, a heart doctor turned senator who is one of the more worthless Republicans, wrote the bill. He wants to spend $200 million to teach health care workers that being overweight is bad, build new parks and bike paths, and spend more money on nutritional programs in schools.

The Surgeon General has declared obesity to be an epidemic, and some politicians have even proposed fat taxes—fees that would be levied like the "sin taxes" are on alcohol and tobacco.

But now the lawyers have gotten involved. I knew it would happen, and I warned you. Now, God help us.

Last month, a New York attorney filed suit against several major fast food businesses on behalf of his client, Caesar Barber, a 56-year-old apparent moron who claims he "didn't know" fast food was bad for him. He ate at those establishments four or five times a week. Now he is fat and diabetic, has high blood pressure and high cholesterol, and has had two heart attacks.

"I trace it all back to the high fat, grease, and salt," he told FoxNews.com. "All back to McDonald's, Wendy's, [and] Burger King. There was no fast food I didn't eat, and I ate it more often than not because I was single, it was quick, and I'm not a very good cook."

Oh, boo hoo. How pathetic.

Barber said his situation made it necessary for him to eat the fast food, but now his doctor says it's killing him. He supposedly only recently found out that the greasy fare was bad for him and now says, "I don't want to die."

This guy is just like smokers who puff away for 40 years and then sue the tobacco company claiming they didn't know it was bad for them. In both cases, if the plaintiffs are telling the truth, then they are too stupid to live. It's just amazing to me this nimrod has lived to be 56 years old.

And speaking of stupidity, one restaurant industry spokesman, John Doyle of the Center for Consumer Freedom, summed it up best.

"To win his suit, [Barber] has to convince a jury or a judge that people are too stupid to feed themselves or their children," Doyle told ABC News. "If people are so stupid, should they be allowed to vote or go to work in the morning?"

Barber's attorney, Samuel Hirsch, seeks to force restaurants to offer non-meat vegetarian dishes, fewer grams of fat, and a reduction in the size of food portions. And, of course, he wants warning labels on fast food products.

My friends, America is going straight to hell, and we're being led there by greedy lawyers and plaintiffs with very little brain activity. The time has come for our governments to adopt strict tort reforms to cut off this kind of insane litigation. It's time to force people to be responsible for their own lives and their own mistakes rather than forcing businesses to cater to those citizens who are still at the bottom rung of the evolutionary ladder. And more importantly, it's time to tell our government and the Health Nazis to leave us the heck alone and let us eat what we want to eat.

"Live free and die happy;" that's my motto.

Meanwhile...

Your editor has managed to rain on the parade of at least one bureaucrat in recent weeks.

Our friends at the Federal Communications Commission recently e-mailed a press release regarding a new welfare program aimed at providing low income individuals with telephone service at about half-price. The program is paid for by the Universal Service Fund charge on our phone bills—a fee that was levied, as I recall, solely by an administrative act during the Clinton regime.

"I hope we can count on your support to inform consumers about these worthwhile programs," an FCC servant wrote on the cover letter.

"No you cannot count on my support for this project," I responded in an e-mail, "because I don't support the Universal Service Fund charges on my phone bill. Low income people can just use a pay phone or go next door to their neighbor's house rather than mooching off the rest of society."

Then came the reply back from the feds.

"This is what makes our job so rewarding," the FCC said.

It sounded like her feelings were hurt a little bit, but frankly it's time that taxpayers and fee-payers started telling not only our elected representatives but also our un-elected public servants to stop wasting our money. Better yet, tell them not to take our money to start with so they won't be tempted to spend it.

Fat New Yorker should learn life isn't fair

By Rebekah Turner

I was born with a fast-metabolism appetite and a slow-metabolism body, mostly the courtesy of good Scot-Irish, German, and American Indian bloodlines. I know firsthand that I could easily weigh 250 pounds if I eat what I want when I want and do not exercise. Though I will not be featured on any fitness magazine covers or Cosmopolitan, I am proud of what I have accomplished through diet and exercise.

Which is why my curiosity was piqued when a class action lawsuit was filed by a gentleman in New York on behalf of thousands of obese people. I felt a little faint when I heard about this. The plaintiff would like to recover from the "Big Four" fast food chains—Wendy's, McDonald's, Burger King, and Kentucky Fried Chicken—for making him and thousands of obese people fat. His obesity, caused by the Big Four and not by his own choices, has led to heart problems, high blood pressure, and diabetes. Hence, he is seeking damages for these afflictions.

According to the lawsuit, the companies do not serve enough healthy fare. Also, the companies do not present the nutritional information in an easily understood format. Our plaintiff ate at these fast food restaurants five or more times a week, probably washing two Big Macs and a super size fries down with a Diet Coke.

According to his lawsuit, the consumption of fast food caused him to become obese.

Stop the presses! Fast food leads to obesity? Are you kidding me? I took an informal poll of about 10 people who work in my building. Though the results are not scientific, the pollees voted unanimously that they have been well aware for years that fast food is not the best choice—particularly for those who already have a weight problem. In fact, not a single one thought that any fast food of any kind was a sound nutritional choice, give or take a couple of chicken dishes or Subway. But, alas, in an interview, the named plaintiff stated with a straight face that he did not know that fast food was bad for him until about three years ago. The guy must not read the newspaper, listen to the radio, watch television, or engage his mind in common sense exercises.

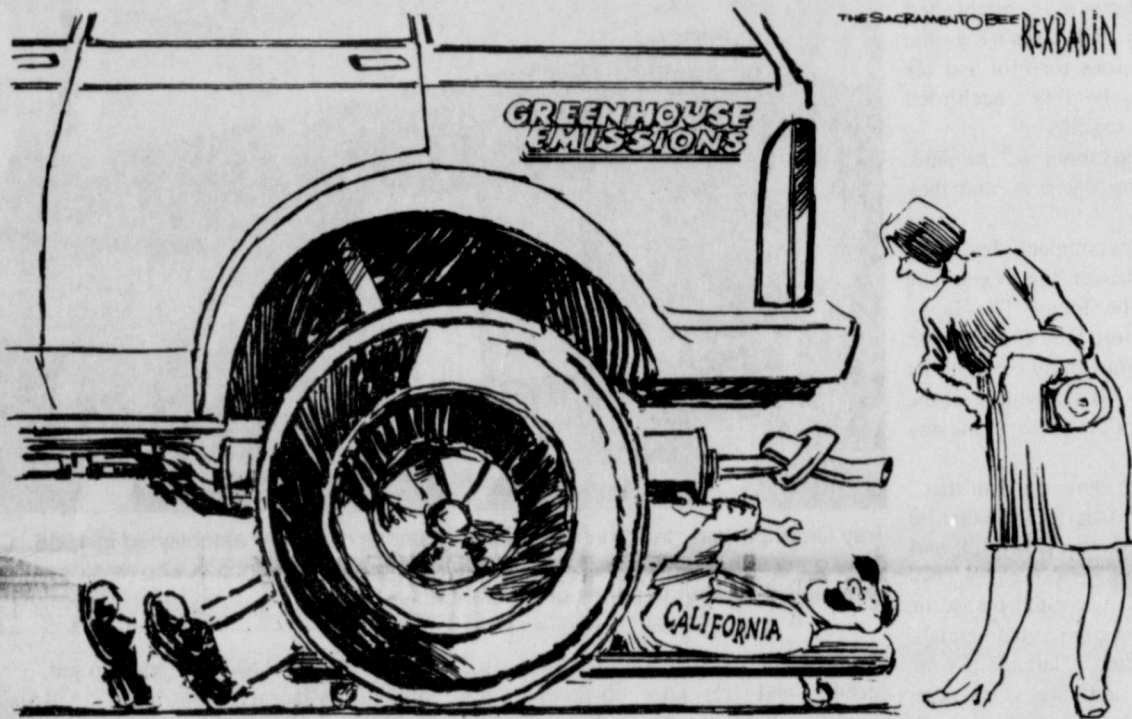

I would like to know what type of exercise program the named plaintiff has been on. My guess is that he waited until his body was at critical mass before recognizing that he had a problem and never tried the "eat less, exercise more" approach that is tried and true. This is so typical of what is happening all over the country. People who are not in control of themselves go looking for someone, or something, to blame for their problems. The plaintiff will probably never be healthy now because he has passed the stage where he could truly do something to control his body. Now it controls him.

I sympathize with the guy. I know how hard it is to watch your co-workers and friends eat the good stuff—pizza, gravy, dessert, fried chicken, you get the idea. And no, it's not fair. But humans' ability to control themselves is what sets them apart from the other beasts that roam the Earth. Unfortunately, many of us choose to ignore this ability or make excuses for our shortcomings. More and more people are choosing to sue rather than admit to their own faults. That is a slap in the face for people who truly cannot help it, such as those with glandular disorders or disabilities which prevent them from exercising.

The problem was either not recognized or ignored by the plaintiff, and now he is passing his responsibility for taking care of himself onto fast food. One of the most common phrases in the English language is, "Everything in moderation." Another common phrase is, "Life ain't fair." Taken together, those two phrases could have solved the plaintiff's weight problem. Instead, he has succumbed to another phrase, "It's not my fault." I have another one for him: "Give me a break!"

Rebekah Turner is a Texas attorney now living and working in Virginia.

"THIS SHOULD JUST ABOUT TAKE CARE OF IT, MA'AM."

Armstrong's life makes him a Texas legend

Lance Armstrong is more than a hometown hero—he's a Texas legend. For the past four summers, Texans—and the rest of the world—have cheered him on to victory in the Tour de France, one of the most grueling sporting events of the modern era.

Charted through some of the most beautiful yet challenging terrain in France, the 2,050-mile course takes three weeks to complete. With weather ranging from blazing summer heat to cool mountain winds, the 189 cyclists competed against man, machine and Mother Nature to cross the finish line in Paris, and for the fourth consecutive year, Texas' son, Lance Armstrong, led the pack.

Watching him coast to victory, one would hardly guess that just over six years ago, Lance nearly succumbed to a deadly disease. In 1997 he was diagnosed with testicular cancer that spread throughout his body. Though weakened by chemotherapy and given only a 50-50 chance to live, he beat the odds while struggling hard to keep

capitol Comment

with Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison

his physical strength. His spirit triumphed, and he has become one of the greatest athletes of our time.

Only one other cyclist has won the Tour de France five consecutive times, and Lance is poised to tie his record next year. But he has repeatedly noted that he wants to be remembered not just for his cycling victories, but as the first cancer survivor to win the elite race.

Lance has dedicated his celebrity to furthering cancer research and, most importantly, promoting survivorship. Before he even knew if he would overcome the disease, he founded the non-profit Lance Armstrong Foundation (LAF) which has grown into one of the nation's preeminent cancer research organizations. Last year alone, the Foundation awarded more than $1.1 million in research grants to study testicular cancer and survivorship.

One unique program supported by the LAF focuses on children whose parents have been diagnosed with cancer. "Wonders & Worries" offers much-needed counseling and support to help children from the ages of seven to 17 deal with the illness afflicting their parent.

Lance exudes the spirit of American triumph and Texas determination. This year as the race came to a close along the Champs-Elysees, more than 100,000 onlookers cheered and feverishly waved both Texas and American flags to welcome back the champion.

The American spirit was tested this year, but we have risen to the challenge with resilience and courage. And it is people like Lance Armstrong who continue to remind us that we are a nation of heroes, fighters, and survivors. Our hats are off to you, Lance—we look forward to cheering you on to a fifth victory.

Caring of local people touches lives of accident victims

On July 28, my daughter Laura Andringa and I and my three grandchildren—eight-year-old Kaylee, three-year-old Keith, and seven-month-old Kevin—were involved in a three-car wreck in front of the Paymaster Gin in Lelia Lake. Fortunately, no one was seriously hurt. But my daughter and I were both overwhelmed by the kindness and concern shown to us by the good people of Clarendon and Lelia Lake.

People living near Paymaster Gin literally poured out of their homes to offer assistance and slow down traffic on the highway until the police could get there. The police and paramedics seemed to get there within minutes of the wreck and were very kind and efficient in their work.

We are especially grateful to Earl Shields' daughters, Rosilyn Sellers and Patrice Woods. They and their children opened up the Paymaster Gin and took our children inside so they could play and stay cool while we waited for the wreckers. Mr. Shields' son even brought in a watermelon for the children to eat, and they loved it.

I hope the people of Clarendon know how special they are. We feel so blessed that our lives were touched by such loving, caring people.

Researcher seeks relatives of former local resident

I am attempting to locate descendants of Walter James (Frank) Collinson - 1855-1943.

Walter Collinson was born in Yorkshire, England, and emigrated to Galveston in 1872. In 1887 he married Jessamine Anne Bremmer at Lamar, Colorado. They then settled in the Texas Panhandle and Clarendon. They had 10 children. He died in 1943 and was buried at Clarendon.

This is part of my research into the Collinsons of Yorkshire, England, who emigrated to the United States and Canada during the early and mid 1800s.

I will gladly share information about the Collinson family with any respondents. My address is George R. Collinson, 2422 Cyprus Ave., Burlington, Ontario, Canada L7P-1G6. My e-mail is geomargc@lara.on.ca.

I thank you for any assistance.

Cancer relay was impressive, meaningful to survivor

A wonderful job was done by all who participated and worked so hard to make the "Relay for Life" such a success. We were in awe and so impressed by the event. Of course this does not surprise us that this happened as it did since any time Clarendon attempts such an undertaking, it is always outstanding.

Being a survivor and having lost several dear friends, this was especially meaningful to our family.

of being one of the city's largest employers.

"Your decision is what makes [the employees'] lives better or worse," he said. "That a responsibility you can never get over."

Other reality checks are not as weighty. During the interview, Chamberlain stops suddenly like there was something he hadn't thought of before: "He took my post office box number... I've had that number all my life!"

Chamberlain's immediate plans are to get healthy. Beyond that he doesn't have any definite plans other than not leaving Clarendon.

"I like it here."

Chamberlain says he doesn't think he will miss the daily responsibility that came with the dealership but helping customers is another matter.

"I appreciate all the friends I've made and the people I could help," he said. "Of course you want to make money; that's why you're in business. But it's when you can help people that makes it really worthwhile. I appreciate all the repeat customers and helping them. I will miss that part of the job."

He was looking for a dealership of his own when Trey Chamberlain offered him the opportunity.

"When I came to Clarendon and saw the town and saw the dealership, from a spiritual standpoint I knew this was the dealership for me," he said.

Suna says Chamberlain made the dealership available at a good price when he could have gotten more money from someone else. But Chamberlain wanted to sell to someone who would make Clarendon his home.

"That says something about the previous owner and his commitment to the community," Suna said. "Now I want to make him proud."

Shopping in your hometown does make a difference!

AUSTIN - With another school year right around the corner, the Texas Department of Transportation is unveiling a statewide program that will improve children's safety in and around school areas.

TxDOT will issue the call for Safe Routes to School projects on Friday, August 2. This competitive construction program is funded through state and federal funds and local contributions.

The goal of the $3 million program is to improve the bicycle and pedestrian safety of school age children in and around school areas.

There are more than 4 million students registered in Texas schools.

"This program gives us the ability to increase safety along routes students take to get to their school campuses," said Carlos Lopez, TxDOT traffic operations director. "It can also help reduce the number of conflicts between students and motor vehicles."

Eligible projects include sidewalk improvements, pedestrian/bicycle and pedestrian facilities, and traffic calming measures for roads located off the state highway system.

Project submittals must be made by cities or counties.

School district officials and other interested citizens are encouraged to work with city and county governments to develop projects.

The deadline for submitting applications for the Safe Routes to Schools program is December 6, 2002.

For program guidelines, go to www.dot.state.tx.us/trafficsafety/srs/default.htm.

September 11 music tribute to be held in Amarillo

Two incredible nights of music and inspiration presented as a "memorial" to the events of September 11 that changed our lives forever and as a "Celebration of Freedom."

"Freedom Memorial" will be held September 11 beginning at 7:30 p.m. at the Amarillo Civic Center Coliseum. The evening will begin with Mayor Trent Sisemore as Amarillo remembers those that gave their lives on September 11, 2001, and the heroes at home and around the world that continue to put themselves in harms way to protect us and our freedom. The Amarillo Symphony, Amarillo Civic Chorus, Area personalities, and local choirs will featured in a music tribute produced by Civic Amarillo.

Civic Amarillo and Cumulus Broadcasting will present a "Freedom Celebration" in classic style with "America," one of this country's most popular rock bands in the 1970's and 80's, on September 12, 2002, beginning at 7:30 p.m. at the Civic Center. Joined by special guest, Andy Chase, the concert is dedicated to our hometown heroes. A portion of the proceeds will be given to the Coffee Memorial Blood Center in their honor.

Admission to the September 11 program is free and open to the public.

Tickets will be available starting Saturday for the September 12 concert and can be purchased by calling 378-3096.

Looking Back

20 Years Ago

THE CLARENDON PRESS, August 5, 1982

• Bobby Weatherton had an outstanding game Friday night in the Houston Astrodome as a member of the North squad in the Texas High School Coaches Association All-Star Game. The North won, and Bobby carried the ball four times for a total of 21 yards.

• Rod Keown and Donald Brogdon from Clarendon have been chosen to play on the Little League All-Star team.

50 Years Ago

THE DONLEY CO. LEADER, August 7, 1952.

• Clarendon's Kenny Davis steps into the boxing ring in San Diego for his first professional fight tonight. The Golden Gloves featherweight champion will go up against Luis Adame of Mexico.

• The Amarillo Air Base team defeated the Hedley baseball team at Hedley last Sunday. Bobby Hutchenson and Dewey Debord, pitching for Hedley, allowed only eight hits, but walks and errors gave the soldiers the long end of the score.

Summer fun winding down in Clarendon

Well, summertime is still winding to a close in Clarendon; and in some ways, I think it's going to be easier to tell you what's not happening in Clarendon than what is. It's not raining. That's pretty obvious from all the water sprinklers going and the grass that looks semi-scorched despite the water sprinklers. I'm sure it's even more obvious once one ventures out of town to the farms and ranches. There's no school yet. But it's close. I don't know about your house, but mine was full of shopping bags last weekend for the "tax-free shopping" weekend. I didn't get to do a lick of shopping myself because

I went back to visit the grandbaby again, but the school boys bought lots of new stuff. Some of the purchases are a little eye blinking, but there's just no accounting for a teenager's taste. I'll just have to pay tax when I buy things for me. I guess. Oh, the sacrifices I make. Another sign that school hasn't yet started is the fact that the streets are full of school children getting in their last blissful playtimes before it does start in less than two weeks. I remind all the kids I see just how little time is left as frequently as I can. I suppose some might consider me cruel because I enjoy watching them moan, but hey, it's a small

The things will all be there. The goofing-off time won't. Alas. (Visualize parents all over town rubbing their hands with glee.) Speaking of school beginnings, did anyone else notice that the days of Bronco Band sectionals didn't exactly match up with the dates? Is band practice beginning on Tuesday, or Wednesday? Ah, well. I'm sure Mr. Baker or Mr. Estlack have figured it all out and will let us know. And maybe this time next week, I can report that it might not be raining at the moment, but it has rained. If we're really lucky, maybe it will be raining when the paper actually reaches you. We'll keep praying.

Vinegar useful in many ways

By Dawn Watson, County FCA Agent
I am sure each of you know there are many uses for vinegar beyond pickling; however, I came across a few more uses which are new to me and I would like to share.
• Put a tablespoon or two of vinegar in your dishwasher to help cut grease.
• Get rid of a stuffy, smoky smell in the kitchen by placing small bowls of vinegar around the room.
• Remove wrinkles from clothing by using a pressing cloth dampened with diluted white vinegar.
• Too many suds in the washer? Add ½ cup of vinegar to the rinse.
• Stinky gym shoes? Soak them overnight in a mixture of 1 part white vinegar to 3 parts water.
• Before tossing perspiration-soiled laundry in the washer, spritz on a little vinegar.
• To get strong odors off your hands, like gasoline, rub a bit of vinegar on them, then rinse.
Shazam! This humble (and cheap) household helper can work miracles all over your home.

Do you remember this?
These are just a few members of the Martin and Ashtola communities that will meet this Saturday for their third annual reunion. The event will be held at the Bairfield Activity Center at Clarendon College, and registration begins at 10:00 a.m. Everyone is welcome to attend and see how much the people in this picture have improved.

Hedley Methodist Church welcomes new pastor

The weather this week has been really hot with temperatures hovering close to the 100-degree mark during the afternoon but cooling toward evening. The mornings have been cool and balmy. There's been no rain for almost a month, and the grass is curing and turning brown. I haven't heard a weather forecast so don't know what to expect. And the mosquitoes have been bad. If I get out in the late afternoon, they almost eat me alive. I tell everyone that it's because I'm so sweet. I don't think anyone believes me, but it can't hurt to try.

Glyndol Holland and Lynn came from Turpin last week and joined Gail Hill from Clarendon to have dinner with their parents, Buford and Jerry. Kathy and Whitney were in Claude with Kathy's mother. Lynn is getting ready to go to Lubbock for school. I can't believe he's a junior at Tech already. Seems like he should still be small. Jim and Anita Mitchell had their grandson, Casey McKlesky, at church Sunday morning. He told me he was going to a rodeo. Jeneda Gay came Friday and spent the night with her daughter, Becky Allen, and we went to Tulia Saturday to visit with Gwen Nolen. Gwen went to school in Hedley when we were in high school and had kept in touch with Jeneda all these years. We've both changed. Grace Burkhalter and her mother, Juanita Brown, visited in Clarendon with Helen and Buddy Ford last week. The congregation at the Methodist Church had dinner last week to welcome the new pastor, Gary Boles, and his family to Hedley. Bill and Tanya Combs entertained us with guitar and fiddle music after dinner. They played some country and western music and some bluegrass tunes. Our condolences to Johnny and Eunice Dickson and Brownie and Jewel Quisenberry on the death of Johnny's mother and Jewel's sister-in-law, Ida Lou Dickson.

Book follows amazing life of a Texas doctor

Is she amazing? You decide. In Burton Memorial Library's May Owen, MD, author Ted Stafford, depicts the character of a woman whose goal perseverance against many obstacles led her to become one of Texas' outstanding medical doctors. During a six-decade career, she experienced progress from simple folk remedies to highest technology. May was born to immigrant parents in Falls County, Texas, in 1891. Her family farm duties began at age 2 when she gathered cook-stove wood. She loved and experienced almost every phase of farm life. She could break a wild horse faster than her brothers could. Her mother died before May started to school, leaving more responsibility to eight children. From the time May entered first grade, her greatest joy was learning and reading. Her family could not understand her intrigue for reading. The only book in the house was the Bible, seldom used except on special occasions. While still a young girl, she read from Genesis to Revelations several times. A teacher or neighbor occasionally lent her a book. The County Vet furnished veterinary journals. At age nine, May announced her desire to become a doctor at a time when women doctors were practically unheard of. Her father appreciated everything the country school offered, but never encouraged high school. He considered her dream of Medical School ridiculous and outrageous. After arrangements were made by her oldest brother, May, age 21, entered Texas Christian University in Fort Worth to receive her high school diploma. During the first fall at TCU, she traveled home on weekends to help with crop harvesting. Returning to school on Monday mornings, her desire for more education never faltered. Dr. Truman C. Terrell became a dynamic factor in May's life, assuring her of college completion, offering opportunity of work in his professional medical lab, and suggesting Medical School after graduation. May received many Medical

check it Out
By Mary Beth Nelson
School rejections before she was finally accepted to Louisville Medical School. Assuming there would be other women students, she was surprised to find she was the only one. The male students, curious about a woman from Texas with medical aspirations, were not too pleased about her attendance there. None spoke to her after the first session. Readers will be amused at the circumstances in which they accepted May and would, later, admire her as an equal. After valuable experience at Mayo Clinic, New York's Bellevue, and Scott and White Hospitals, May returned to her beloved Texas, confident that she could deal with any situation in her specialty. First Texas Medical Association Woman President and Texas Women's Hall of Fame induction are only two of May's numerous distinguished honors. Her life was one of humility, modesty, determination, and generosity. Humble and modest and, always sharing credit and acknowledging others for successes, she never tried to become known because of her accomplishments. She was determined in her of love and devotion to medical research to benefit others. Her generosity showed in her physical and financial aid willingly given to students. Almost 500 current doctors began their profession through Dr. Owen's personal efforts. The May Owen Irrevocable Trust for student loans which began decades ago is still active. This exceptional lady Texans maintained alertness, working until the day before she died in 1988, three weeks before her 97th birthday. Owen's entertaining and fascinating biography is located in Burton's Texas Collection. Why not check it out?

Videotape series at Burton Memorial Library helps stutterers overcome problem

For the three million Americans who stutter, saying their own name is just one of the many challenges confronting them as they start their day. Adults who stutter discuss how they have coped successfully with stuttering in a new videotape produced by the Stuttering Foundation of America called If You Stutter:

Advice for Adults, now available at the Burton Memorial Library. In the 55-minute program, men and women discuss how stuttering has affected their lives and how they have learned to deal with it. Between real life examples, experts identify ways people who stutter can manage the problem and become more fluent speakers. The video gives information on what stuttering is, how to improve speech, and how to regain fluency even after relapse. "Because many people are unable to get therapy or aren't aware of its benefits, we wanted to produce a video that would show the results of effective programs and also give some self-therapy ideas," said Barry Guitar, Ph. D., a University of Vermont professor and one of the experts featured in the video. The Stuttering Foundation, dedicated to helping people who stutter, offers the video free of charge to all public libraries.

Christian Men to meet for breakfast

The United Christian Men's Breakfast Meeting will be held August 15 at the Clarendon First United Methodist Church Fellowship Hall at 7:00 a.m. Everyone - men, women, and children - is invited to hear the second installment of a series on Emergency Disaster Relief. A disaster could hit Donley County anytime. These programs are given by those in charge of rescue, relief, and recovery. Several people would be needed in each of these three areas. Please attend the monthly meetings on the third Thursday of each month. The Associated Ambulance Service will present the program August 15. All ambulance service staff and EMT's are invited to attend and let the community show their appreciation for all the work you are doing.

Seniors participate in local cancer walk

By Vida O'Neal
Friday was a great success for the American Cancer Relay for Life. I want to tell everyone that had a part to help our team how much we appreciate their help. Some donated money, time for walking, cookies, etc. It takes all the community to help and have a successful relay, and we did it. Nancy Davis provided the golf cart to help in some of our laps. It was a great help for our seniors, and we appreciate it. Water aerobics will be held at 7 p.m. every Thursday at the Thunder Junction waterslide on Hwy. 70 in Clarendon. If you are interested, meet us out there. We exercise for about one hour.

We had seven for our first exercise class at the center Monday morning. This was a great stretching and low impact exercise. What a wonderful way to start the day! I think everyone enjoyed the program. Dawn Watson, our FCS County Agent, will be leading these exercises at 9 a.m. Monday, Wednesday, and Friday of each week. There are modifications to accommodate difficulties so everyone can benefit from them. Please come join us. You do not have to attend every day, so don't feel that it is a commitment for three days out of the week. Come when you can and have some fun while limbering up your bodies. On August 15 at noon, Jim Holston will be holding a program called "Healing Power of Humor and Laughter." Please mark your calendars for this and come eat with the center and hear a program. We send get-well wishes out to Viola Graham, Carolyn Hamilton, and Larinda Brown. Our condolences to the Judd Family for the loss of their loved one. Reminders: August 12, 19, 26: Dance Club, 7 p.m. August 13, 20: Game Night, 6 p.m. August 15: Healing Power of Humor and Laughter program, noon August 27: Birthday/Anniversary Supper, 6 p.m. August 30: Blood Pressure Clinic

After school program returns from hiatus

The Something More Program will meet on August 7 and August 14 from noon until 2:00 p.m. at the Lions Hall in Clarendon. The program will not be held the first week of school but will resume its regular schedule on August 21 when they meet from 3:30 to 4:30 every Wednesday during the school year. The Something More Program is a community after school program for children in kindergarten through fifth grade. The program focuses on personal attention for each student, help with their studies, social skills, and nutrition. It tries to offer children something more beyond school to let them know they count in our community. Volunteers are needed to help with supervision of the children, food supplies for snacks to feed approximately 12-15 students, and help to serve the children. Anyone who is interested should call Beverly Burrow at 874-2078 or Beverly Alexander at 874-9447 for more information.

WIC reminds mothers about benefits of breastfeeding

In commemoration of World Breastfeeding Month, the Outreach Health Services (OHS) Women, Infants and Children (WIC) program is reminding new or expectant mothers about the benefits of breastfeeding and the free education and support classes available to them.

According to the American Academy of Pediatrics, studies have shown that breastfeeding is the optimal method of infant feeding, and breast milk provides newborns with protection against infections and allergies, lowers the risk of diseases and potentially improves mental development.

There is even more good news. Babies are not the only ones who benefit from breastfeeding. Research indicates that mothers also benefit from producing this natural, nutritious, and convenient infant food by having less postpartum bleeding, lowering their risk of developing breast, ovarian and uterine cancers, and experiencing a natural weight loss.

Contrary to popular belief most women are able to breastfeed successfully, but in some cases there is a reason why a mother is unable to breastfeed. Despite proven benefits, a significant number of mothers still rely solely on infant formulas to feed their babies.

"Think about it. Breast milk is always warm, ready to serve, and free. Compare that to bulky formulas that take time to prepare and can cost hundreds of dollars a year, and that's just the practical reasons. Our nurses and staff work with breastfeeding women every day, and they can confirm the important emotional bond that is created between a mother and child," says Joyce Devereaux, Director of WIC programs for OHS.

According to Cari Collins, breastfeeding coordinator for WIC programs at OHS, most mothers choose not to breastfeed based upon misconceptions of what is involved.

"They incorrectly believe their breasts aren't the right size, that the experience will be painful, or that they won't produce a sufficient amount of milk," said Collins. "At WIC, it's our goal to give moms the facts, make accurate information available, and work with each mother."

The Outreach Health Services-WIC program offers breastfeeding support classes year round, and they do more than simply introduce the benefits of breastfeeding to women. The classes provide new and expectant mothers with helpful tips related to proper positioning, breastfeeding in public or at work, encouraging the baby to "latch on" correctly, and recognizing when a baby is getting enough to eat.

During these classes, new and expectant mothers view videos, receive educational materials to take home, and have an opportunity to talk to peer counselors and other mothers who have breastfed successfully.

"Although breastfeeding is natural, it is not instinctual. It is a skill that must be learned by the mom and baby," Collins said. "For some, the experience may be easy from the start. For others, the process may take a few days or weeks until feedings proceed easily."

Each month Outreach Health Services offers WIC services to more than 33,500 clients in 59 Texas counties. Free WIC services are available to middle- to low-income women who are pregnant, breastfeeding, postpartum or have an infant and/or children younger than five years of age.

For more information, contact the WIC clinic at (800) 200-7121 or visit www.outreachhealth.com.

By Allen Estlack

Clarendon Lions Club held its regular Tuesday noon meeting August 6, 2002, with Boss Lion Myles Shelton in charge.

We had 15 members and no guests this week.

Something More reported being back up and running after a summer hiatus.

Students will be returning to College Hill later this month, and CC is expecting a good baseball team.

The Relay for Life brought in nearly twice the expected goal, raising more than $19,000 to help beat cancer.

With no further business, we were adjourned.

Experts offer steps to fight mosquito-borne diseases

COLLEGE STATION - It's shaping up to be a virus kind of year, and Texans are being warned to take precautions to avoid mosquito-borne diseases, according to an entomologist with the Agriculture Program at Texas A&M University.

"The general public needs to be more aware of the local mosquito situation and take precautions against these insects," said Dr. Jim Olson.

Precautions include cleaning up premises by removing all sources of standing water, mosquito-proofing dwellings, and, as much as possible, altering outdoor activities to times and places mosquitoes aren't active.

"Wear loose, light-colored, long-sleeved clothing and apply a mosquito repellent of choice," he said. "Mosquitoes tend to go for dark-colored, moving objects. If the clothing fits tightly, they can drill right through the fabric into the skin."

The first case of West Nile virus in a human in Texas was confirmed recently in a 50-year old Orange resident, who is in stable condition at the Houston VA Medical Center, according to its Web site. Evidence of the disease has been found in birds or mosquitoes in Harris, Jefferson, Fort Bend, Orange, Montgomery and Dallas counties, and several confirmed and unconfirmed cases of the virus have been found in horses in Southeast Texas. Some horses have died while others are recovering.

Presently, occurrence of West Nile virus in the state seems to be supported by the species, Culex quinquefasciatus, or the Southern House Mosquito. It is also a common vector for the St. Louis encephalitis, Olson said.

"The situation in East Texas is further confused by also having Eastern Equine Encephalitis activity," which has been confirmed in one horse each in Nome, Jasper, and Tyler.

According to the Texas Department of Health, mild infections of mosquito-borne encephalitis in humans may occur with only a headache. More severe infections may include headaches, high fever, neck stiffness, disorientation, coma and tremors.

With West Nile infections, flu-like symptoms include fever, headaches, sore throat, body aches, fatigue (often with a skin rash), and swollen lymph glands. It can be fatal, particularly in the elderly or very young or those with weakened immune systems.

Human symptoms of Eastern Equine Encephalitis range from mild flu-like illness to frank encephalitis (true inflammation of the brain), coma, and death, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

In the United States, there have been 153 confirmed human cases of Eastern Equine Encephalitis in humans since 1964; up to 3,000 cases of St. Louis Encephalitis in humans since 1975; 639 human cases of Western Equine Encephalitis since 1964; and 152 human cases of West Nile virus confirmed since it first appeared in the U.S. in 1999, according to CDC information.

Migrating birds are the primary source of the West Nile virus and Eastern Equine Encephalitis, which are transmitted by mosquitoes to other birds, animals, or humans. Eastern does not seem to kill birds (West Nile infections kills blue jays, crows, and hawks), though birds are the reservoir for that virus.

There also is evidence of St. Louis Encephalitis cycling in mosquitoes in the Corpus Christi area and Western Encephalitis cycling in mosquitoes in El Paso. Western Equine Encephalitis is vectored by Culex tarsalis.

Since West Nile virus often shows up in the bird population first, the public is asked to contact the nearest office of TDH when dead blue jays, crows, or hawks are found.

"It's vital that this information be given to the proper authorities, so the movement of this disease can be tracked across the state," said Dr. Bruce Lawhorn, veterinarian with Texas Cooperative Extension and the College of Veterinary Medicine at Texas A&M University.

Dead birds should be reported to the TDH regional zoonosis control offices.

Further information about the TDH offices or West Nile virus is available at its Web site at www.tdh.state.tx.us/, from the CDC at www.cdc.gov/, or the National Pest Alert Web site at www.ncpmc.org/NewsAlerts/westnilevirus.html.
