Ramirez draws time for violating probation

Richard Ramirez of Hedley has been sentenced to 15 months in state jail following a probation violation.

District Judge David McCoy delivered the sentence on April 28 following a Motion to Adjudicate Guilt filed by District Attorney Stuart Messer.

Ramirez was originally placed on five years felony probation on May 20, 2002, for the offense of Injury to a Child, but he violated one of the conditions of that probation on February 27, 2003, which led to his appearing before the court to have his probation revoked.

The defendant agreed through his counsel, Alex Vazquez, to a plea bargain made by the State of 15 months instead of facing a possible maximum sentence of 24 months from the judge.

"The work of the Donley County Sheriff's Office and the Clarendon Department of Public Safety office should be commended for keeping a watchful eye over the crime and probationers in Donley County," Messer said. "Their hard, dedicated work is keeping our communities and towns safe."

Annual car seat check to be held here July 1

The Associated Ambulance Authority, Potter-Randall Safe Kids Coalition, and Suna AutoMall will sponsor a car seat checkup on Tuesday, July 1, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at Suna AutoMall.

Hotdogs will be provided from 11:30 a.m. to 1:00 p.m.

GOP leaders need to think of Texas first

Governor Rick Perry issued the call for a special session of the Texas Legislature last week for what will surely be one of the most partisan battles we've ever seen in Austin.

The pressing matter facing our state senators and representatives isn't one of public health or safety, it has nothing to do with helping old folks or "the children," and it won't do anything to improve highways or help fund public education. No, the real problem that Texas has to deal with right this very minute is redistricting.

I know, I know. You're thinking, "Didn't we just do that?" and "Don't we only do that every ten years when the Census comes out?" The logical answer to both questions is "yes," but logic has almost nothing to do with what happens in Austin.

Perry, whom Molly Ivins likes to refer to as "Governor Goodhair," is quoted by the Ft. WORTH STAR-TELEGRAM as saying, "I believe elected officials, not federal judges, should be responsible for drawing district lines."

I believe that, too, but the Republican governor had a chance to let the Legislature do that very thing way back in 2001. When the Legislative session ended that year, it was widely expected that Perry would call a special session to deal with the redistricting required following the 2000 US Census. He didn't do so, and, as per our State Constitution, the matter was thrown into the hands of the Legislative Redistricting Board.

The LRB was comprised of five members: Attorney General John Cornyn, Comptroller Carole Keeton Rylander, Speaker Pete Laney, Lt. Gov. Bill Ratliff, and Land Commissioner David Dewhurst. Laney was the lone Democrat. The four Republicans proceeded to draw lines - typically called Gerrymandering but about to become known as Perrymandering - for the districts of the state Legislature as well as the state's Congressional lines.

Seeing it as their manifest destiny, the four Republicans proceeded to set things up for the Grand Old Party to make huge gains in the 2002 elections and cast out that evil, "flaming liberal" cotton farmer

Now, politically astute observers understood then and still do that the party in power gets to draw the lines once every ten years. That's the way it works, and the Republican Party has absolutely become the party of the majority in Texas over the last couple of decades - a fact that doesn't sit well with Democrats.

Unfortunately, the GOP ran roughshod over some of their own supporters in the process of ousting Laney, who had been a fair and conservative leader. They also just went nuts in Perrymandering some of these districts. Donley County is now represented by a senator from Lubbock in a district that stretches from Pampa down to Schleicher County, which is south of San Angelo. (A nice guy, Duncan, but I would rather be represented in our former district by Craig Estes or at least have the opportunity to be in Amarillo's district so I could vote against Teel Bivins.)

For reasons too lengthy to explain - let's just say it goes back to the Civil War - federal courts can review the redistricting done by certain states. I haven't been able to find the details, but Texas apparently wasn't up to snuff, and so the courts re-drew some of the lines. That left the Dems with a 17-15 advantage in the Lone Star State's congressional delegation coming out of the 2002 elections.

Well, we just can't have that, so this last session the GOP leadership took time out of their busy schedule of slicing and dicing the funding for Clarendon College to again take up the redistricting issue. This led our old friend Laney and several of his buddies to flee the state; hole up in the Ardmore, Okla., Holiday Inn; and absolutely shut down the Texas Legislature by denying the GOP leaders a legal quorum. It was a brilliant move. It caused a lot of national humiliation for Texas, but the determination of that bunch earned the admiration of several people, including yours truly.

The Democrats successfully blocked the GOP's plans then, but now Perry wants to drag out the whole

Over a year ago, this column warned the Texas Republican Party to remember the old adage to "dance with the one who brung ya." It was West Texas conservatives who helped bring the party to power. Following the LRB's actions, this Republican pulled his support from the state party and told their solicitors, "I'd rather be represented by a conservative rural Democrat like Pete Laney than any moderate urban Republican."

The Republicans have hurt themselves in Texas although they may not know it yet. In their quest to keep taxes low - which believe me I'm all in favor of they gave their liberal opponents plenty of ammunition by making deep cuts in social services and particularly in education. And now, when money is so tight in Austin, they are willing to waste $1.7 million to have a special session of the Legislature.

Perry, Speaker Craddick, and others need to pull their heads out and start acting in the best interest of the state rather than just the best interest of their party. Otherwise, there someday will be a reckoning for the GOP's unwise use of power - some day next Novem-

Rites of passage in road to adulthood

I have finally crossed the thin line between semi-adulthood and full-on grown-upness. I've been busy.

As you know, I turned 19 not too long ago. For my birthday, my dearest friend took me out to eat dinner at the best Japanese steakhouse in Amarillo. I ate some swordfish. I didn't order it, but I ate some of it. That is a major milestone for a girl from rural West Texas. Especially a girl as Anytime a cotton farmer's daughter eats an exotic fish... an angel gets its wings, Aruba. or something equally tremendous.

On this same dinner outing, I successfully ate with chopsticks for the very first time. I didn't fumble around and throw chicken and rice everywhere, either. I ate very plainly and simply like I had been eating with chopsticks my whole life. I ate with elegance and grace. Like a grown-up chopstick eater.

I saved the sticks and ate the leftovers the next day just as deftly. I wanted to eat every meal with them, but Mom decided to have her famous chili-bean-soup for dinner. Then I lost the chopsticks. What an adult thing to do!

The next week I received in the mail my very first and very own income tax return. I contributed a somewhat insig-gross national product, and Uncle Sam found it in his heart to reward me with 170 smackaroos. I don't know if that is how it really works, but that's how I like to

I promptly spent the well-deserved gift on supplies and apparel for my trip to

Yes, Aruba is out of the country. Yes, I would need a passport to travel out of the country.

Good thing my fourth rite of passage came in the mail in a beautiful envelope from the Department of State. My picture was beautiful; the pages were beautiful. Now if I can just hang on until I get a stamp on it in July, I'll be home free!

Children can get passports, too, I know. Still, there is something about having the express written permission of the entire government of these great United States to expand your boundaries and seek out the unknown that is exhilarating. If the US government trusts me enough to let me cross an ocean into another country, I must be something trustworthy.

My heartfelt thanks to Uncle Sam, once again.

The final event that convinced me that I was, indeed, an adult happened last Tuesday. I woke up incredibly uncomfortable. The sort of fleeting pain under my ribs I'd had for a couple of days was no longer fleeting. It was going to stay awhile.

It hurt to breathe. It hurt to sit, to stand, to lie down. I went to visit Dr. John C. Howard (if not my biggest fan, at least my tallest one). He ruled out gallstones saying I was much too young to have gallbladder troubles. That's what he thinks.

Little did he know he was treating a real grown-up right there, not some 19year-old kid with hyper-active stomach acid who overdosed on Dr Pepper and other highly caffeinated beverages and was paying the consequences.

I am proud to report that I am completely cured, however aged I may have

Education bill prepares Texas for future

educators are hard at work bringing our schools into the 21st century. In June, Rod Paige, our nation's Secretary of Education, gave Texas the stamp of approval for its efforts to comply with the landmark education reform legislation, the No Child Left Behind Act of 2001. Designed to change the culture of America's schools, it encourages creativity and flexibility, teaches students based on what works, and perhaps more importantly, makes schools accountable for achievement.

The reform required each state to formulate how it will close the achievement gap and make sure all students achieve academic proficiency. This month, for the first time in history, every state submitted an accountability plan. The Texas plan is a blueprint to ensure each of our children receives a quality education. In addition to infusing accountability into our schools and requiring students to meet minimum testing requirements, the legislation also provided schools with other options to creatively address the challenges they face.

Teaching

The Transitions to Teaching program recruits and retrains highly qualified midcareer professionals, retirees, and recent college graduates as teachers in high-need schools. It supports the development and expansion of alternatives to initial teacher certification. With many states, including Texas, facing a shortage of teachers, filling those positions with qualified professionals will meet the immediate needs of students and can provide a more in depth educational experience.

Single Sex Schools

Single sex schools and classrooms are another creative attempt to provide greater educational options for public school children. Studies have shown that single-sex programs can reduce barriers to learning by providing a less intimidating and more productive classroom. This has been shown particularly in urban areas and middle to high school grades. Girls educated in an all-girls environment often have more confidence and tend to pursue more science and math courses. Boys in same-sex classes gain leadership qualities and are often more successful in language and writing courses when the distractions of the opposite sex are removed.

Looking to the Future

Texas is encouraging its schools to innovate and reach out to our children. Across the board, the education reforms will continue to expand public school opportunities and try to prepare the next generation to lead our nation in the future.

In a letter written in 1776, John Adams declared that the signing of Declaration of Independence ought to be commemorated with "pomp and parade, with shosws, games, sports ... and illumination, from one end of the continent to the other ... "

And from one end of Texas to the other, Fourth of July celebrations are probably as spectacular as the country's second president ever imagined, particularly with illuminations, or firework displays.

Now not only Fourth of July, but other occasions like New Year's Eve, Weddings, Anniversaries, and birthdays are celebrated with fireworks.

Exhibitor space at first ag expo selling quickly

DUMAS - The High Plains Ag Expo, which promises to offer farmers and ranchers a unique opportunity to see the latest equipment and processes prior to harvest, has already sold 160 of its 230 available exhibition spaces. The show is scheduled for August 5-7.

With over 100 outdoor lots measuring 50 ft. X 50 ft. and indoor 10 ft. X 10 ft. booth space taking up the remaining available spots, the show will include equipment demonstrations, product comparisons including seed plots, and the opportunity to meet and discuss the latest advances with company representatives.

"We are excited that this much of the exhibitor space has booked up already," says Jeff Bistodeau, President of Premier Events, the company organizing the Expo. "That means the attendees will have more opportunity to see the latest advances in equipment from a wide variety of vendors. For a first-time event, the response has been phenomenal."

Outdoor demonstrations will include chemical applicators, tillage, hay, livestock equipment, and more. Scheduling the show in early August give farmers one last chance to see the demonstrations and new products before the harvest begins.

Some of the national suppliers and manufacturers who will be represented include American Equipment &Trailer, Inc., BASF Corp., RHS Inc., Bingham Brothers Inc., DuPont, John Deere, Blu-Jet Tillage, Oglesby International, and Omni-Ag. Local distributors attending include Wilson Trailers, Garst Seed, Outback Guidance, Bestway Sprayers, Pioneer Seed, Hansford Implement Co., Hock Farm Supply, Case I.H., and Nitro Sprayers.

The High Plains Ag Expo will be the first-ever event of its kind to be held in Dumas. The Expo will attract farmers and ranchers from 56 counties in five states
