WT to host wind power seminar

CANYON - Wind energy and its many possibilities will be the topic of a Windy Land Owners Seminar Saturday, Oct. 17, at West Texas A&M University.

The Alternative Energy Institute (AEI) at WTAMU will host the half-day seminar in Room 101 of the Agriculture and Natural Sciences Building on campus. Registration begins at 12:30 p.m., and the day's program will focus on wind energy basics and the steps and considerations needed to develop a wind farm.

Seminar speakers include windy land owner Mac Etheredge, who will share his experiences from the resource assessment to project completion of his own wind farm. Brad Christopher, a wind farm supervisor, will explain what a working wind farm means to landowners and its expected benefits.

Other speakers scheduled for the seminar are Dr. Vaughn Nelson, director of AEI, Ken Starcher, assistant director of AEI training, education and outreach, and David Carr, assistant director of AEI testing and resource assessment.

"Everyone has questions about wind energy so we have pulled together some great speakers and interesting topics to get the answers people need," Starcher said. "It's just a half-day seminar, but the information will definitely be beneficial to all who attend."

A schedule of the seminar and a registration form can be found at www.windenergy.org/wlo. Seating is limited to the first 150 paid attendees. Cost of the seminar is $30 for those who pre-register online or $40 at the door to cover handout and reference materials. Beverages will be provided.

The Alternative Energy Institute was established at WTAMU in 1977 as an outgrowth of research begun in 1970. AEI's mission is to conduct research and development in the use of alternative sources of energy including wind, solar and biomass. AEI's program includes establishing a center for collection and distribution of information and education of students and others.

For more information about AEI or the upcoming seminar, call 806-651-2295 or visit www.windenergy.org/wlo for the agenda and online registration.

My Dad warned me years ago that nothing would hurt worse than losing my Mother. His death was so sudden and so devastating that I was sure he was wrong with that one piece of advice. But I have begun to think that he was right. The pain of losing him was immediate. The pain of losing Mom - like her death - was not immediate. It is building from day to day with the slow realization that she really is gone and that so many things - memories, knowledge, words of wisdom, and more - are likewise gone forever.

I am left with a sense of numbness that I fear will never go away; but I am also left with memories, lessons, and love that I will carry forever. My brother and I were lucky growing up. We had the best parents any boys could ever want, and they taught us much about character, honesty, trustworthiness, devotion, courage, perseverance, and love.

better when we were sick, commentary could comfort us when we were hurt, and could guide us down the right path no matter what was before us. Even in the face of great difficulties, she would encourage us to have faith that things would turn out okay, and she was almost always right.

She could cook like nobody's business. It was nothing fancy, mind you. It was just good home cooking that usually involved the key ingredients of browned butter and/or the proper dose of salt. Very few things came out of a box. Most of it was made from scratch, and she served it hot every night when we were growing up. Her chicken fried steak can't be beat, and her banana pudding is the standard by which all others are measured. Family meals were important to her, and she could cook it up for just the four of us or just as easily for a family reunion with 75 people.

We always had a big garden. I only cared about the okra, but she put up every kind of vegetable that could be frozen. And the fruit trees and grapevines at our house weren't just for landscaping; they were the basis for jars and jars of jellies and preserves. In fact, one of the first questions asked me in the hours following her death was if I had a good count on the inventory of pear preserves and peach butter at home.

She had numerous hobbies to occupy her time, but I think her favorite thing to do was to take care of her family. In addition to being a devoted wife and mother, she spent a lot of time helping my grandmother care for my injured grandfather, and she also spent some part of everyday keeping up with her sisters and her brother and their extended families. They were always very close, and she was proud of all of them. She also loved her grandchildren and never missed an opportunity to

For all her life, Mom was also a fighter.

She fought for knowledge and was always trying to learn new things. If life presented an obstacle or an opportunity, she learned all she could about it before tackling it head on. She was always reading and wanting to learn, whether it was from a book about Native Americans, the National Geographic, a science magazine, a breakthrough medical report, or the latest joke in READER'S DIGEST.

She fought for her students. In an era before standardized tests and the sissy-fication of public education, Mom taught her classes for 37 years with a perfect balance of mastery of the subject, creativity to gain student interest, discipline, and love. She had no tolerance for those who did not behave or did not perform. She was willing to swing Jokari when she needed to, but she was also willing to pull a struggling student aside and find out the reason for his troubles.

Mom fought for this newspaper. She worked hard to see that my dream of returning it to our family was realized, guiding me throughout the purchase process 14 years ago. Then she worked just as hard every week in the unending struggle to banish typos and grammatical errors from its pages.

She fought for her community and would tell anyone who would listen about how wonderful Clarendon and Donley County are. Whether it was our town's latest accomplishment or tales of its pioneer past, Mom knew it all and was happy to share it.

As a young girl she suffered from severe asthma and fought for every breath. Her younger sister would sometimes lie awake next to her and wonder if Mom was going to make it through the night. And through the years she would face other health problems. Allergies, hepatitis, and diabetes would each try to knock her down, but she would not give in to them.

Breast cancer tried to take her in 1980, but she faced it down and took two years of chemotherapy, telling the doctor, "I have two little boys who need their mother."

She fought and won against cancer then and did so again 21 years later, but the last time left her with diminished lung capacity and resulted in her being tethered to an oxygen hose. Mom didn't let that get her down. Instead, she researched the latest methods for dealing with lung problems and would sometimes educate her doctors about a thing or two.

In the last few weeks, the fight for health became more difficult, but she refused to give up. Then last Wednesday she lost the battle... but won the Victory.

Freed from earthly troubles, she now lives in joy with Dad. And while I mourn that her precious grandkids - Benjamin, Elaina, Nathan, and Daniel - may never fully know their Memaw first hand, they now have two guardian angels watching over them, protecting them, and gently whispering guidance to them.

I also can still hear her whispering to me - words of love, encouragement, and wisdom. And while she may not be with me physically, her spirit shall never leave me. Those of us who loved her will carry her with us always.

I love you, Mom.

Costume brings out daughter's sting

Last year Kyndall was a black cat for Halloween - an adorable one, if I do say so myself. She was only six months old then. I painted her nose, drew on whiskers, put on her costume, and took the cutest pictures. That was then.

I ordered Kyndall's new Halloween costume and was delighted to see it arrive last week. I was so excited about it since she is walking now. I imagined putting on the outfit and watching her strut around, looking adorable once again. One big sigh and a huge disappointment later, I came to grips with reality. Kyndall hates her costume. The mere sight of it apparently disgusts her, and she wants nothing to do with it let alone to have it on her.

I tried repeatedly to coerce her into that adorable bumble bee costume. I tried to make it's not that bad. I told her how pretty she looked as she tried to destroy the wings flapping around on her back.

At first I thought it was a fluke. Maybe Kyndall just needed a nap or was abnormally cranky. Nope. I tried to put

In all honesty, I can't blame her. While the suit is adorable, I remember having a similar episode when I was around five years old while my mom tried to get me into a lady bug costume. Obviously my little apple hasn't fallen far from the tree.

I am now strategizing how to make Halloween 2009 happen. I'm fairly certain that bribery and Oreos will be involved in the process. October 31 may be the day we find out who's more stubborn, Kyndall or me.

Maybe it's selfish, but I need cute pictures for scrapbooks and video footage to remember these moments. I need her to be a delightful little bumble bee.

She will be a bumble bee, maybe with more sting than delight, but she will

COMMON GROUND, AT LAST

Feds shirking border responsibility

During a time when Washington seems more determined than ever to inject itself into the day-to-day lives of everyone in the country, border security is one area - a legitimate federal responsibility - where the federal government has demonstrated a decided lack of

For Texans, border security is not, and never has been, a mere rhetorical exercise. It has a direct and tangible impact on the lives of everyone who lives in the Lone Star State, as well as grave homeland security implications, which is why – over the past several years - we have given up waiting for Washington and done it ourselves.

In 2005, Texas vastly expanded our border operations, increasing the number of law enforcement officers on patrol along the border - the "boots on the ground" that are so vital to success. We focused first on local authorities, giving the people who best understood their specific needs the resources and support to address their problems directly.

Beyond that, we deployed stateof-the-art helicopters, enhanced integral radio communications between the various levels of law enforcement, and expanded the sharing of information and the use of new technologies.

In 2007, lawmakers authorized my request for $110 million to expand our efforts further, increasing our patrol capacity to detect, disrupt and deter organized smuggling activity. A key part of the plan was providing critical funding to pay local law enforcement officers overtime to help U.S. Customs and Border Protection personnel conduct random inspections, helping intercept stolen vehicles, bulk cash and weapons flowing into Mexico.

IT'S "CELEBRITY BASS FISHING" WITH OUR SPECIAL GUEST,

Barack Obama.

The results were striking, as crime fell as much as 65 percent in the unincorporated areas of Texas counties bordering Mexico.

However, the process of securing a border is an ongoing effort, and a welcome drop in crime is no sign we can

The profits from smuggling drugs and humans are enormous, and the Mexican organized crime cartels are too adaptable and too persistent.

Also, as battles wage between cartels in Mexico, the potential of spillover violence needs to be addressed. For example, Juarez has set a most unwelcome record, with more than 1,700 people murdered there so far this year.

In our own major cities, members of transnational gangs like MS-13, Barrio Azteca, Hermanos de Pistoleros Latinos, Tango Blast and the Mexican Mafia conduct criminal operations on our streets, along the way recruiting new members from our communities and schools into lifestyles of violence and Compounding this are the countless lives devastated by drug violence, the drugs themselves, and related criminal activities such as human trafficking and child prostitution.

Thankfully, this year, the Texas Legislature allocated $113 million to maintain and expand our border security efforts, affirming our commitment to working with local law enforcement and the U.S. Border Patrol to protect Texans.

This month, I announced the formation of Ranger Recon Teams, consisting of members of the Texas Rangers supported by Texas National Guard Counterdrug forces, in coordination with our Texas sheriffs and DPS Highway

MORNING SHOW

Patrol strike teams. These teams will be deployed to "hot spots" in remote areas along the border, where well-armed smugglers seek to avoid detection.

These teams are nimble, lean and tapped into the best information our intelligence sources can provide. They will redeploy as needed to consistently stay one step ahead of the bad guys, utilizing advanced technology and unified intelligence.

I also recently announced a commitment to continue a promising hightech solution to increasing the patrol presence along the border through the Virtual Border Watch program, operated by the Texas Border Sheriff's Coalition. This program enables concerned Texans and others around the world to utilize technology to add their own energy to our efforts. I'm proud of the people who have participated and the deterrent effect they have provided. In meeting the challenge of border security, all effort is

More, of course, must be done. In the absence of adequate federal resources along the border, I've asked the Obama administration for an additional 1,000 National Guard troops under our control and six helicopters equipped with Forward Looking Infrared Radar to support our border operations. Under federal law, this authorization requires an order from the president, which I requested in January and have since continued to urge approval.

To date, I've received no official word from Washington.

Of all the issues in the national spotlight and all the funding being thrown around in D.C., border security is one area where Washington needs to make its presence known, and fast.

Clarendon Church of Christ COMMANDS OR TRADITIONS (RITUALS)?

It is odd that some would call obedience to commands of God either traditions or rituals. When someone tells you that, they are usually implying, if not explicitly stating, that commands of God do not have to be obeyed. First, Jesus said in John 14:15: "If you love Me, keep My commandments. Can one go to heaven without loving Jesus? If one isn't keeping His commands, he or she doesn't love the Lord, that's what He said!

Now, no one is perfect as they try to live by the Lord's directions, but that fact doesn't allow anyone to ignore His commands and expect to go

Going to Bible class on Wednesday night is a tradition. We could go on a Tuesday afternoon or not at all. Worshipping on the first day of the week is not optional. Being baptized is not a ritual or tradition if the Lord commanded it, and He did (Mark 16:16; Matth. 28:19-20). The question that needs to be asked is: "Which commands of God can we ignore and God still allow us to have eternal glory?"

We know that we are saved by grace, how do we obtain grace? Everyone doesn't receive grace, Matt. 7:12-14. Not everyone is going to heaven. (Matthew 7:21) "Not everyone who says to Me, 'Lord, Lord,' shall enter the kingdom of heaven, but he who does the will of My Father in heaven." Doing the will of the Father is part of our faith, James calls it a living faith. A dead faith will get us no where. Let's be careful with our verbiage and be more precise with our statements of belief.

Just a mental agreement that Jesus is Lord will not gain anyone anything spiritually, see John 12:42ff. Here we see people who believed that Jesus was the Son of God but wouldn't confess Him. Matt. 10:32 tells us that Jesus won't confess us to the Father if we won't confess Jesus before men. Obviously then confessing Jesus is not a tradition. Jesus commands baptism, obviously not a ritual. Let's take the Bible at its word and not massage a message out of it that isn't there.

Owls lose to Ft. Elliott

By Tangela Copelir

A slow start by the Owls causes the Owls to lose to Ft. Elliott on Friday, September 25.The Owls allowed the Cougars to score several times before they were able to retaliate, and that error caused the Owls to be unable to overcome the score deficit.

The Owls scored the second quarter of the game with Reid Copelin running in a TD and Dylan Pettit with the extra point. Steven Siatta next made a big play tackling behind the line of scrimmage forcing the Cougars to play a passing game, but Brandon Benton batted down their attempt, and the Owls were once again able to score.

Coltin Kingston threw the ball to Evan Thompson for a completed Copelin was once again able to score for the Owls. Danny Garcia attempted the PAT, but it was not good. The Owls allowed the Cougars to score again, but Pettit quickly retaliated and scored for the Owls, and this time Garcia's PAT was good. The Owls left the field at half time with the score being 21 to 36,

The Owls came out at half time pumped and ready to play. Kingston made a 35 yard completed pass to Copelin who made it to the 1 yard line before being stopped. From there, Kingston tosses a short pass to Thompson who is able to score for the Owls. Garcia's PAT was not good, and the Owls still trailed the Cougars 29 to 42 at the end of the 3rd quarter.

The fourth quarter had several Owls, Kolby Foard, Austin Adams, Chris Blackburn, and Benton making key plays and blocks to allow the Owls the opportunity to score, but penalties held the Owls back. At the end of the fourth quarter, Benton and Pettit hit the Cougars running back to cause a pop-up fumble recovered by Copelin who was able to run it in for one last TD, but unfortunately it was not enough for the Owls to win

The Owls will be playing the Guthrie Jaguars on Friday night at Guthrie beginning with the Junior High playing at 5:30 followed by the High School game at 7:30.

lated the Vega Longhorns at home Thursday night at 46-0. According to coach Brad Elam, the Broncos played well.

"This was the best we have played in all phases all year," Elam said. "The linemen have been working hard all week and they played great."

The win gave the Broncos a 4-1 record on the year.

The Broncos opened a big lead in the first quarter of play and never looked back. Forrest Yelverton scored the first touchdown on a 40-yard run and also added the two-point conversion. He scored again on the next series from 30 yards out and Brady Miller added the bonus. It would be Miller again from 24 yards out and 75 yards for six and Devonte Hardaway got the two-pointer to put the score at 30-0.

"We opened the scoring in the second half on defense when JD Baxter blocked a Vega punt and Trevor Cobb recovered the ball in the end zone," Elam said. "Yelverton connected with Diego Santos on the two-point conversion."

Hardaway got the final score in the fourth quarter on a 39-yard run and Yelverton passed to Cole Ward for the extra at 23rd points. "The defense had a really good game as well and was led by the good tackling of Trent White and Jayson Pigg," Elam said. "Jeremi Johnson picked off a pass in the third quarter."

Coach Alton Gaines added that the Broncos started hitting them from the opening whistle and didn't quit until the final buzzer

The Broncos will not play October 1, but will travel to White Deer October 8 to take on the Bucks beginning at 7:30 p.m. The junior high Colts will play Wellington at home Thursday, October 1, at

Drugs in the News

Combination Therapy Positive for Osteoporosis Bisphosphonates are a widely prescribed group of drugs

for the prevention or treatment of osteoporosis. Examples include alendronate (Fosamax), risedronate (Actonel) and zoledronic acid (Reclast). These drugs prevent the resorption or loss of calcium from bones. Loss of bone structure weakens and makes our bones more prone to breaking. Another type of osteoporosis drug is parathyroid hormone, also known as teriparatide (Forteo). It decreases the risk of osteoporosis in a different way - by stimulating bone cell growth. It seems logical that a combination of a drug like Forteo and one of the others that prevent the loss of calcium from bone would be a good idea. However, studies have shown that Forteo may not work as well when combined with other oral bisphosphonate type drugs.

A more recent study, however, involving over 400 postmenopausal women indicates that combination therapy (Reclast and Forteo), may in fact be an ideal treatment and preferred over either drug taken alone for bone loss in the spine and hip. More studies are needed to confirm the value of this drug
