Clarendon Volunteer Fire Department First Assistant Chief Jeremy Powell holds up the cigarette that was thoughtlessly thrown down by someone on the Clarendon College campus Monday afternoon. That singular act of stupidity ignited a blaze that burned about 10,000 square feet west of the softball field and threatened equipment there before the quick action of local firemen. Earlier that same day, Donley County Commissioners enacted a ban on outdoor burning during certain conditions. For specifics of the ban, see the notice on page 8.

'Glory Road' runs through Hedley

Hedley ISD was the host to the Glory Road Group last Friday, which consisted of Mary Haskins, the widow of the late Coach Don Haskins; Sue Coyer, Mary's sister; Nevil Shed, a player from the 1966 NCAA Championship Western Texas team; Steve Tredennick, a former Haskins player; and Fred Schwake, an assistant.

It is a rare occurrence when a small town like Hedley can honor such a famous group of people as this. We felt as if we were in the presence of royalty.

The program began with Steve Tredennick's presentation of two film featurettes. Mary Haskins delighted the audience with her warm words and beautiful smile, and Nevil Shed spoke to the eager listeners about his experiences with Coach Haskins as well as his philosophy on life in general, which he credited Haskins with shaping to a large degree.

The Hedley students, teachers, support staff, administration, community members, and former Haskins players were mesmerized by Mr. Shed's speech. We sat spellbound by his wonderful sense of humor and his insightful words. He emphasized the message that the winning team of which he was a part could be summed up with one word "cohesiveness," and it was a "we" team not a "me" team.

He also told the students that Coach Haskins taught his team that if they had a dream that they would

All banks not created equal

President/CEO, Independent Bankers Association of Texas

Much has been written about America's current economic dilemma and measures by the U.S. Treasury to unfreeze credit markets and stimulate lending activity. The Treasury's Troubled Asset Relief Plan, or TARP, as originally designed would permit the government to purchase troubled assets such as mortgage and commercial loans from financial institutions. This move would free capital that banks must reserve for bad loans and be available for new lending activity.

Instead today's TARP program allows the Treasury to inject dollars of new capital directly into banks, taking an ownership interest under specific terms and conditions. The "capital" represented by TARP funds can be used to absorb potential losses in the loan or securities portfolio, to provide "net worth" for the institution to "leverage" by borrowing additional money in the form of deposits or other liabilities, or could simply be "loaned out".

America's media outlets would have you and I believe that every bank that makes application and receives TARP funds is being "bailed out". The current program, as designed, is anything but a government bail out. Here are the facts.

The nation's largest nine commercial banks, (including banks such as Bank of America, Wells Fargo, Citicorp and others) were deemed too big to fail because of the systemic risk to the U.S. and world economies. These banks control nearly fifty-four percent of the nation's deposits. Some filled their loan portfolios with toxic sub-prime loans, played heavily in the sub-prime securities market and got caught with bad assets and no market to place these assets, or made other strategic errors in judgment. All were "strongly encouraged" to take the first round of TARP money, and indeed did so. Several have received additional TARP funds as well as further guarantees intended to stabilize the system. But that is where the so called "bailout" begins and ends - at least in the commercial banking sector.

Healthy banks, such as the vast majority of our nation's nearly 7000 community financial institutions have also been deemed eligible to apply for TARP funds with specific conditions and limitations. Since October of 2008 the Treasury has committed $195 billion to 359 institutions in 45 states and Puerto Rico. The banks that have received these funds are held to rigorous evaluation of the bank's management, historical profitability and safety and soundness by their primary federal regulator. Upon passing extensive due diligence, the bank is approved to receive TARP funds. Many of the banks that have opted to participate in the program view the new "capital" as an opportunity to expand lending activity, precisely what the program was designed to do. Despite what you are made to believe, there are many banks that have robust loan demand in this economy and put their dollars to work in local communities.

Community banks that have applied and received TARP funds are not "troubled" banks. So too it can be said that banks that have chosen not to apply for Treasury assistance, are not "troubled." Many bank managers and their respective boards of directors have made the determination that participation in the TARP program was simply not in the bank's best interest consistent with their local business conditions. Some have chosen not to be partners with the federal government; others have determined that current levels of bank capital are adequate to meet the lending demands in their community, and absorb any potential future losses. After all, banks must lend money to make money, and in the case of banks receiving TARP funds, a bank must earn money on this additional capital to meet the interest/dividend requirements mandated by the Treasury and still provide a reasonable return to bank shareholders.

You and I should be outraged by the irresponsible and unethical lending tactics of the too big to fail banks, investment bankers, giant insurance companies and others who have profited greatly from the excesses of the past, and now are in need of government assistance. Our free enterprise system teaches us that success, not failure, should be rewarded. But don't be confused. All banks are not created equal. Community banks are responsible lenders. And frankly, if community banks had the capacity to fill all the lending needs of the American public, we would never have experienced this economic mess in the first place.

A toast to Lone Star winemakers

You've heard it described as medium heavy, sweet and low in sulfates. Its presence pre-dates the arrival of the first Anglo-American settlers to Texas. And today, its industry pumps millions in revenue into the Texas economy each year.

While crude oil may first come to mind, this liquid is Texas wine. More than three centuries ago-long before the first wine grapes arrived in Napa Valley- Franciscan priests brought grapevines from Mexico and planted the first North American vineyard at Ysleta, perhaps the oldest town in Texas, along the Rio Grande near present-day El Paso. These grapes provided the priests and missionaries with sacramental wine for the Eucharist.

Over the next 200 years, the El Paso Valley would be recognized by travelers for its grape-growing capabilities and wine production. The concept of viticulture did not really gain traction in the rest of the state until settlers from European countries like Spain, Italy, and Czechoslovakia brought their interest in wine and the European vinefera vines to Texas. These European vines did not take well to the Texas climate, local pests, and fungus, however; and many of these initial efforts did not survive.

After these setbacks, German immigrants who settled in the 1840s in South and Central Texas—founding Hill Country cities such as Fredericksburg and New Braunfels-learned to adapt their process and incorporate local Mustang grapes, a high-climbing vine native to Texas and well adapted to heat. By adding more sugar during fermentation, they produced commercial wine and are largely recognized as the most successful wine-makers in Texas history.

texas times

Meanwhile, back along the Texas-Mexico border, an Italian immigrant, Frank Qualia, found success with the Lenoir grape, a Spanish black grape, in Del Rio, Texas. He started the Val Verde Winery; and today, as the only Texas winery to survive the Prohibition, it remains the oldest continuously running winery in Texas and still uses the Lenoir grape.

by sen. john cornyn

One of Texas' most famous grape breeders was horticulturist Thomas Volney Munson, more simply known as T.V. Munson. A native of Illinois, Munson moved to Denison, Texas in 1876. While he devoted much of his life to the study of native American grapes, his work on rootstock development would earn him international acclaim. In Denison, Munson researched and developed rootstock that was resistant to phylloxera-tiny, yellow insects that feed on roots of grapevines and had severely damaged many native American grapevines. In the late 19th century, a phylloxera epidemic devastated the French wine industry-destroying almost twothirds of France's vineyards. Little did they know the solution to their problem would come from an American horticulturist in Denison, Texas. Munson's phylloxera-resistant rootstock saved the industry in France; and, in gratitude to his contribution, the French government named him Chevalier du Merite Agricole of the French Legion of Honor, and the city of Cognac, France, became a sister city to Denison. Today, Grayson County College's West Campus houses much of Munson's research and work.

After the Prohibition, the Texas wine industry was slow to get back on its feet. But as the grape culture began to boom in the U.S. in the 1970s, so did the number of vineyards that began popping up across Texas-beginning with the establishment of the Llano Estacado and Pheasant Ridge wineries near Lubbock. Today, Texas is home to nearly 3,700 acres of family-owned vineyard land, including eight American Viticulture Areas-wine grape-growing regions that have been identified by the U.S. Alcohol and Tobacco Tax and Trade Bureau. Texas is America's fifth-leading grape and wine producer, and the industry contributes more than $1.35 billion to the state's economy.

In its February issue, Bon Appétit lists Becker Vineyards in Stonewall as one of seven of its favorite wineries off the beaten path. As our state's wineries and vintners continue to gain national and international attention, fortunately, we don't have to travel far to enjoy the unique Texas wine culture.

The Texas wine industry is yet another hallmark in Texas's long history of ingenuity and achievement. Let's toast to the men and women who have built up this industry.

CHIP compassionate, economical

With the U.S. economy in recession and unemployment soaring, many American families are struggling to meet their fundamental needs: a heated home, groceries, adequate clothing, and medical care. According to health officials, when the economy suffers, many people give up routine care, including checkups, immunizations, and treatment for minor conditions. Without medical attention, many illnesses become significantly worse and more expensive to treat. Unfortunately, a large segment of Texas' population may face rising obstacles to health care, including 21 percent of our children who are uninsured. Now, more than ever, we must prudently leverage our state and federal resources so children have access to care.

State-provided health coverage for children is a two-dimensional issue. First, every compassionate person knows we should take care of children; their health affects their education and their future. Second, it delivers a cost saving for Texas taxpayers to use federal dollars at a 72 percent match to treat children, rather than state and local taxpayers for emergency room treatment with no federal match.

The State Children's Health Insurance Program (SCHIP), a joint federal/ state initiative, was created to provide a backstop for children who are ineligible for Medicaid, but whose families cannot otherwise afford health insurance. If not for this program, many children would go without insurance coverage altogether. Economic studies have shown that uninsured individuals either seek treatment for minor infirmities at emergency rooms, or they avoid treatment until an illness or injury becomes serious and costly. Each scenario burdens the health care system with extra, and in many cases avoidable, costs that are often passed on to taxpayers and families in the form of higher insurance premiums and taxes.

Recently, Congress considered legislation to reauthorize this program. The bill was not perfect, and I supported a number of measures to improve the capitol comment by sen. kay bailey hutchison legislation. Though some of the changes we sought were not adopted. I voted for the final SCHIP bill because it provides critical federal funds for young Texans' health care needs, which are not currently being met. Furthermore, the federal match could ease some of the state budget limitations that have prohibited Texas from doing more to address this growing problem. The Congressional Research Service projects that, under this legislation, Texas' SCHIP allotment will rise 72 percent from roughly $550 million to over $945 million. This funding will make a significant difference in the lives of families who are struggling to provide their children with care.

The Center for Public Policy Priorities reports that, unfortunately, more than half of our uninsured children in Texas who could be enrolled in Medicaid or SCHIP today are not. Because SCHIP funding is provided to the state in the form of a block grant, if Texas does not utilize these dollars, we will lose them. In fact, the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities projects that Texas has forfeited nearly $1 billion in SCHIP funding to other states over the past 10 years - even as the rate of uninsured children in Texas has swelled to the highest in the nation.

During times of hardship, citizens across our state find ways to help Texans who are less fortunate. Likewise, our policies must show compassion to those in need, while also protecting taxpayer dollars. Our state has taken some steps to raise and strengthen these programs, but budget constraints at the state level have impaired its ability to do more. The SCHIP bill, which the President signed into law on February 4, 2009, may address these shortfalls by making funding available to swiftly enroll eligible children so they are provided the necessary medical services without added taxpayer burden. The federal government and the state of Texas can be partners in this vital effort. Together, we must work to provide all children in Texas the foundation for a strong and prosperous future - beginning with proper health care.

Clarendon Church of Christ

As mentioned a few weeks ago, the Clarendon church of Christ will SILENCING OF GOD". The speaker will be Dave Miller. His seminar w address the changes in our country over the years as there are many people who would like to remove God and His influence from our society (Psalms 14:1) "The fool has said in his heart, "There is no God." They are corrupt, They have done abominable works, There is none who does good". While many claim to believe in and even love God, you would never know it by their actions. Our society and government promote ungodliness because we have allowed them to. We have done it with our votes and our turning a blind eye to abominations such as: abortion homosexuality, subsidizing families who will not work, etc.

Brother Miller will address such issues as they have not only pervaded our government and schools, but in our worship assemblies. Even in public worship we see religious groups as they tolerate and ever promote homosexuality, even in the pulpit! The immodest clothing that many wear in public, now is worn in worship. (Isaiah 5:20) "Woe to those who call evil good, and good evil; Who put darkness for light, and light for darkness; Who put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter!" We see the "redefining" of sin so that it doesn't offend as much. A pregnancy termination is just another name for murdering an unborn child. An affair is just another word for fornication or adultery. Misappropriating funds is the same as stealing. Being loose with the truth is just a nicer way of saying lying. The list could go on and on.

I believe Brother Miller will not only highlight the problems but also the solutions that we all are looking for. Most of us want to do something about the problems that affect us, our children and our community. I pray that you will come be a part of the seminar.

Drugs in the News

Statin Drugs May Reduce Alzheimer's

Several clinical studies in the past have evaluated the relationship between the popular cholesterol-lowering drugs called statins and the potential of such drugs to reduce the incidence of Alzheimer's disease (a specific type of dementia). These studies have produced conflicting results. In a different study, Dutch scientists looked at several thousand people, age 55 or older, who were free of dementia at the time. Some 9 to 10 years later this same group was evaluated. It was found that those who took a statin such as simvastatin (Zocor), fluvastatin (Lescol) or atorvastatin (Lipitor) during that time benefited from a 43% lower risk of developing Alzheimer's compared to those who did not take a statin drug. Other cholesterol-lowering drugs such as nicotinic acid did not provide protection. The results of this large study were published last month in the Journal of Neurology, Neurosurgery and

Scientists conducting the study feel that the next phase of their research will be to find out at what point in a person's life statins would provide the greatest potential protective benefit.

Eighth grade Colts claim championship

The eighth grade Colts glided through three teams to earn a welldeserved championship in the District Tournament held this past weekend. The Colts' offense was on target as they averaged 62 points per game and had six players finish in double figures in the games. "Our eighth graders dominated this District tournament," coach Brad Elam said. "We finished off White Deer and Wheeler on Saturday for the championship. Those two teams had played us close in the year, but our kids were able to put them away in the tournament."

The Colts opened the tournament against Memphis and quickly made short work of them to get the 64-30 win. Clarendon struck early and led by 18 points at the break. Their defense kicked into high gear in the third quarter as they held the Whirlwinds to only two points.

Scoring: Cole Ward 14, Trajen Johnson 10, Forrest Yelverton 9, Diego Santos 9, Cody Wood 8, Adam Topper 8, Tyler Burch 4, and Rowdy Speed 2.

Their second round opponent was White Deer, and they had no trouble with the Bucks at all and defeated them 63-17. The early momentum went to the Colts as they breezed to a 44-point lead at the end of three quarters, while their defense held them to single digits up to that point. The Colts were able to handle their tall post player and hustle up the win. "Cody Wood had a great game on offense and defense," Elam They got their opponent on their 2. said. Lady Broncos' cold shooting cost a win

By Sandy Anderberg

No matter what the Lady Broncos tried, the Quanah Lady Indians had an answer; and that caused them to succumb to Quanah 32-47 at home Tuesday night. A great first quarter catapulted the Lady Broncos to lead by six points; but a cold shooting second quarter was disastrous for Clarendon, and they trailed by three points going into the break. The second half played out just as the second period did, and Quanah earned a crucial win in the play off race. "We played extremely well for one quarter, and then our shots quit falling, causing us to stumble," head coach Randy Yelverton said. "We have to learn to overcome adversity and play through it. We have one district game left and a warm-up game against Groom to get ready for the playoffs." Scoring: Haley Hall 9, Macy Shadle 6, Jill Luna 5, Deidre Lewis 5, Abbie Massingill 4, Bailey Starnes 2, and Janae White 1

The Ladies will play their Bi-District game February 16 at 6:00 pm at the WT Event Center in Canyon and will be against Anton.

Lifters compete in Dalhart meet By Sandy Anderberg

Several Broncos competed in the Dalhart Power Lifting Meet January 31 with good results, according to coach Johnny Nino.

Mathew Thomas went head to head in the 148 pound weight class and finished 10th with a weight total of 685 pounds. Jacob McCary was in the 198-pound division and lifted a total of 680 pounds for ninth place. RJ Nino finished eighth in the 220pound weight class with a total lift of 750 pounds. Chris Schultz was also in Nino's weight class and was 10th overall with a total weight of 650 pounds.

"The athletes improved from the last meet and are being competitive," Nino said. "We need to keep working hard so we can start placing higher at the meets. I am very happy with the way they are competing and improving."

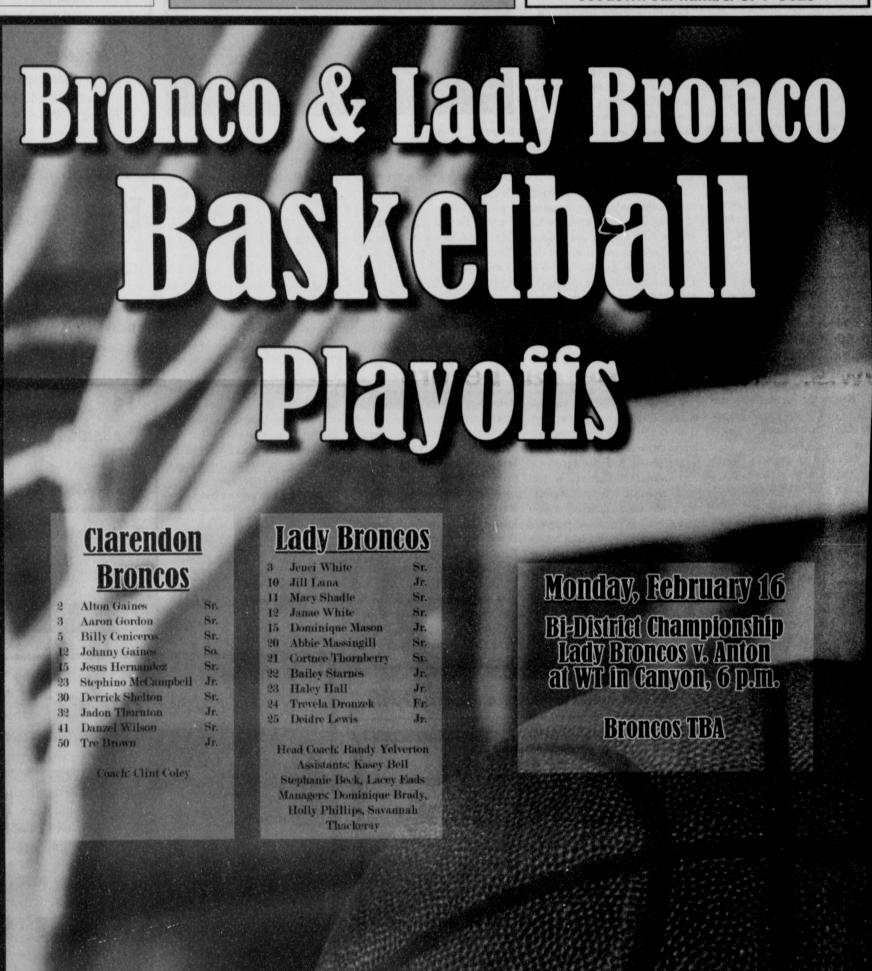

The Broncos will participate in the Randall High School meet on February 14.
