Vandals hit rural mail boxes

Two mail boxes were vandalized early this week on a rural route northeast of Clarendon.

A concerned reader reported that someone had stuffed beer cans into two mailboxes. The beer leaked out onto the mail, the reader said.

Besides being uncivilized, tampering with mailboxes and ruining people's mail is illegal. A postal representative told the ENTERPRISE it is a felony to tinker with the mail in any fashion.

and county officials last Thursday to report the initial findings of his firm's weeklong survey of the courthouse.

"We have been overwhelmed by the beauty of your courthouse and by the friendliness and hospitality of the people here," Volz said.

The architect is no stranger to working with beautiful old courthouses. His firm recently oversaw the restoration of the Gonzales County Courthouse. Volz showed slides of that project to the Donley County audience, which showed how badly deteriorated the South Texas structure was.

Earlier this year, the Donley County Commissioners' Court hired Volz & Associates, Inc., to come up with a Master Plan for the preservation and renovation of the courthouse. Volz and his team spent most of last week going over the structural and physical condition of the building. They also poured over court minutes to establish a chronology of work that has been done to the courthouse.

Volz said there are five main areas of concern facing the courthouse: the roof, bats in the attic, water in the basement, the mechanical and electrical systems, and the structural supports.

The primary problem with the roof is leakage caused by the elaborate angles of the roofline. Volz said this is nothing new to the

The bats need to be removed, and a way must be found to keep them out.

> Water has seeped into the basement and is deteriorating the mortar in the walls. Volz said these walls will need to be re-pointed (have the mortar replaced).

> The mechanical and electrical system needs to be looked at closely and largely replaced. The old knob and tube wiring has frayed insulation and presents a danger of shorting

> The structure is sound for the most part, but one truss in the attic is in compression and needs to be braced. Volz said that if a renovation were to include restoration of the third story tower and dormers on the east side of the courthouse, the issue of support for those additions would need to be looked at

Several mysteries remain about the courthouse. No reference has been found as to what the original roofing material was. And no one seems to know exactly why or when the third story tower and dormers were removed. Volz did find in the minutes a reference to a contract being let by the court in 1937 to "repair the courthouse," and it is thought that may be when

Local firm recovers stolen rental truck

Elm leaf beetle causing heavy damage to trees

By Leon J. Church, County Agent

Something is eating my elm tree; what is it? That question is being asked a lot this summer. The answer is — the Elm Leaf Beetle.

We had a big out break of this pest last summer, but it appeared later in the season after the populations had build up. A large number of the adults overwintered and have given life to millions of larvae that have been skeletonizing the elm leaves. Generally, the elm leaf beetles favor attacking Chinese elms, Siberian elms, and European elms. However, other varieties such cedar elm. American elm, and winged elm are seldom attacked, if these other host trees are available. The population this year is such that even

• Elm Leaf Beetle Life Cycle — Adult elm leaf beetles overwinter in sheltered dry places. They emerge and eat holes in the new forming elm leaves. They then lay eggs on the bottom of the elm leaf, each female produces 400 to 800 eggs. Larvae hatch in about 7 days and feed on the leaves. They feed for about 3 weeks, then crawl down the tree to gather in large masses at the base of tree to pupate. Adult beetles will emerge from pupating in about 2 weeks time. · What can we do? (Control) There is not much that can be done at this time, due to the fact that the beetle is in the pupae stage. We can find the masses at the bottom of the trees and pour carbaryl (Sevin), or Boiling Water, or A Light Horticultural Oil on the mass. This will kill a few. The best plan is to wait until the larval stage to control. We could spray the adult, but remember they are winged making them able to

Enterprise wins state press awards

The Texas Press Association recognized THE CLARENDON ENTERPRISE as one of the best newspapers of its size in the state this past weekend.

Winners of the 1999 Better Newspaper Contest were announced Saturday in Galveston during the TPA Summer Convention. Members of the Missouri Press Association judged the contest.

The ENTERPRISE claimed three first place plaques - for News Writing, Feature Writing, and Editorials - in Division 9 (weekly newspapers with a circulation of 1,201 or less).

Debr# Wells, publisher of the EAGLE Press in Fritch, accepted the awards on behalf of the ENTERPRISE.

The judge praised Valerie Avery's feature writing, calling her "accomplished and professional." Her story from December of last year about the closing of The Grocery Store was called "an excellent feature presented in an excellent manner enhanced by sparkling writing."

In the Editorial contest, judges said the January 29, 1998, article about the proposed sale of the Medical Center was a "good explanation of a financial subject" that "helped citizens understand." Regarding the August 13, 1998, editorial titled "Aldermen Stall College Program," the judges said, "Readers should thank the paper for stepping out and explaining about politics. They may not appreciate it, but

The ENTERPRISE also garnered third place honors in Advertising.

"This was our third year to enter the state contest," said ENTERPRISE publisher Roger Estlack, "and we are very pleased with our performance. Last year, we had

Gore declares his candidacy for 2000

It's official. In case there was any doubt in the minds of the American people, Vice President Al Gore declared last week that he is definitely running for president

Trying to overcome a personality deficit, Gore appeared on ABC's 20/20 with Diane Sawyer last week and sleep alone. She also had two other sisters, tried to cast himself as a simple farm boy from Tennessee.

I don't know about you, but I just can't see the vice president as a good old boy. But that's just me.

Gore discussed many things including "finally revealing" his true feelings about impeached president Billy Jeff Clinton. He said he was very disappointed with his friend [the president] and that what he did was wrong. He also said he believed Climton was telling the truth right up to the time Clinton admitted that he was less than truthful.

Most people knew that Clinton was lying from the get go. I think even top Democrats knew he was lying. If Al Gore truly believed what this philandering compulsive liar was saying, do we really want him as president?

I can see it now: "Mr. Hussein swears that he won't invade Kuwait any more, so I'm ordering an end to the nofly zone." Or how about this: "Well, they said they were Tibetan nuns. I thought it was a sort of Vacation Bible School that I was taking the collection for."

If Al Gore wins the presidency in 2000, at least he their b.o. will probably conduct himself with some dignity unlike the current occupant of the Oval Office.

And whether the next president is Al Gore or George would fill with hot water. The man of the Bush. America can look forward to one thing. There house would get the privilege of the nice are only about 578 days left before we can furnigate the clean water. Then all the other sons and men, White House

A Modest Proposal... revisited

Last week, I made a modest proposal that we keep track of school children by having a microchip implanted in them for identification purposes. The chip would keep track of personal, financial, and educational records. This idea was inspired by the foresight of the Randolph County School District in West Virginia, which is keeping up with faculty and students by requiring them to wear bar-coded

Well, it turns out my idea wasn't original.

A loyal reader in Lubbock called this week to inform me that a variation of the idea is already in practice in England. There is a company across the pond that for a fee will reportedly put a microchip in your newborn.

The microchip is tracked by Global Positioning Satellites, and the theory is that this way no one will ever be able to kidnap your child. You will always be able to find your kid anywhere in the world. Of course if the kidnapper takes your child to a moonbase, you're out of luck.

But again, here is an idea that could be improved upon further. Seems to me, the chips could be modified to monitor your child's vital signs and so forth. That way you would know if the kid was fooling around or imbibing adult beverages. I know it sounds a little invasive, but it's all for the sake of the children.

Little known tidbits of historical data

Here is a little history lesson for the day: I'm unsure who the original author is, but it has been passed on to me by one of my aunts.

Anne Hathaway was the wife of William Shakespeare. She married at the age of 26. This is really unusual for the time. Most people married young, like at the age of 11 or 12. Life was not as romantic as we may picture it. Here are some examples:

Anne Hathaway's home was a three was seldom used (only for company), kitchen, and no bathroom.

Mother and Father shared a bedroom.

Anne had a queen sized bed but did not and they shared the bed also with six servant girls. (This was before they married). They didn't sleep like we do length-wise, but all laid on the bed cross-wise. At least they had a bed. The other bedroom was shared by her six brothers and 30 field workers. They didn't have a bed. Everyone just wrapped up in his blanket and slept on the floor. They had no indoor heating so all the extra bodies kept them warm. They were also small people; the men only grew to be about 5'6", and the women were 4'8". So they had 27 people living in their house.

Most people got married in June. Why? They took their yearly bath in May, so they were still smelling pretty good by June; but since they were starting to smell, the brides would carry a bouquet of flowers to hide

Like I said, they took their yearly bath in May, but it was just a big tub that they then the women and finally the children. Last of all the babies. By then the water was pretty thick. Thus, the saying, "Don't throw the baby out with the bath water." It was so dirty you could actually lose someone in it.

I'll describe their houses a little.

You've heard of thatch roofs. Well, that's all they were - thick straw, piled high, with no wood underneath. They were the only place for the little animals to get warm. So all the pets, dogs, cats, mice, rats, and bugs lived in the roof. When it rained, it be-on the Mark

would slip and fall off the roof. Thus the saying, "It's raining cats and dogs."

Since there was nothing to stop things bedroom house with a small parlor, which from falling into the house, they would just try to clean up a lot. But this posed a real problem in the bedroom where bugs and other droppings from animals could really mess up your nice clean bed, so they found if they would make beds with big posts and hang a sheet over the top it would prevent that problem. That's where those big four poster beds with canopies came from.

> When you came into the house, you would notice most times that the floor was dirt. Only the wealthy had something other than dirt. That's where the saying "dirt poor" came from. The wealthy would have slate floors. That was fine, but in the winter they they started to spread thresh on the floor to help keep their footing. As the winter wore on they would just keep adding it and adding it until whenever you opened the door, it would all start slipping outside. So they put a piece of wood at the entry way ... a "thresh hold "

> In the kitchen they would cook over the fire. They had a big kettle that always hung over the fire, and every day they would light the fire and start adding things to the pot. Mostly they are vegetables; they didn't get much meat. They would eat stew for dinner, then leave the leftovers in the pot to get cold overnight and then start over the next day. Sometimes the stew would have food in it that had been in there for a month! Thus the rhyme: "Peas porridge hot, peas porridge cold, peas porridge in the pot nine days old."

some pork. They really felt special when that happened; and when company came over, they even had a rack in the parlor where they would bring out some bacon and hang it to show it off. That was a sign of wealth and that a man "could really bring home the bacame slippery. Sometimes the animals con." They would cut off a little to share with guests, and they would all sit around "chew

If you had money, your plates were made out of pewter. Sometimes some of their food had a high acid content, and some of the lead would leach out into the food. They really noticed it happened with tomatoes. So they stopped eating tomatoes for 400 years. Most people didn't have pewter plates, though. They all had trenchers. A trencher was a piece of wood with the middle scooped out like a bowl. They never washed their boards and a lot of times worms would get into the wood. After eating off the trencher with worms, they would get "trench mouth."

The bread was divided according to status. The workers would get the burnt bottom of the loaf, the family would get the middle, and guests would get the top, or the "upper crust."

They also had lead cups; and when they would drink their ale or whiskey, the combination would sometimes knock them out for a couple of days. Someone would be walking along the road, and there would be would get slippery when they got wet. So a person knocked out who appeared to be dead. So they would pick them up and take them home and get them ready to bury. They realized if they were too slow about it, the person would wake up. Also, maybe not all of the people they were burying were dead. So they would lay them out on the kitchen table for a couple of days. The family would gather around and eat and drink and wait to see if the dead would wake up. That's where the custom of holding a wake came from.

Since England is so old and small, they started running out of places to bury people. They started digging up some coffins and would take their bones to a house and reuse the grave. They started opening some of these coffins and found some had scratch marks on the inside. One out of 25 coffins were that way, and they realized they had been burying people alive. They thought Sometimes they could get a hold of they would tie a string on the cadaver's wrist and thread it through the coffin and up through the ground and tie it to a bell. That is how the saying "graveyard shift" was made. If the bell would ring, they would know that someone was "saved by the bell" or he was a "dead ringer."

Amazing, eh?

Disaster policy must be adequate safety net

As we move into summer, we're not only reminded about how hot it can get in our part of the country, but how unpredictable the weather can be.

It was just over a month ago that F5 tornadoes tore through Oklahoma City. While our area has been spared this kind of devastation so far this year, we have seen our share of hail and thunderstorms, and the possibility of worse weather remains an everyday

In part because of this threat, I'm supporting a bill to provide better homeowners' insurance for disaster victims. The bill is called The Homeowners' Insurance Avail-

issue Update with Rep. Mac Thornberry

ability Act. It offers a good way for the federal government to provide disaster relief while at the same time saving taxpayers

The bill would provide competitive reinsurance contracts to companies which insure homes in high-risk areas. In this way, federal aid can be provided for a fraction of what Congress has been paying when other disasters have hit parts of the country. This bill will stop Congress from making big, direct disaster payments with money that is sometimes borrowed from programs like Social Security.

As our nation grows both in people and wealth and as more and more Americans realize their dream of owning a home, we've got to make sure our government disaster policy provides an adequate and responsible safety net.

We can never predict exactly when or where a disaster will strike, but we can try to be as prepared as possible.

Internet sites can help plan your trip virtually

I love to travel. I don't care where. Anywhere will do. I just love taking trips. Of course this wanderlust can get expensive if I'm not careful. Luckily, the Internet helps me get the most "mileage" out of my travel budget. Using a few tips, and a few, key sites, you, too, can make some great trips at some incredible prices. I basically frequent three travel sites on the Net: Expedia (http://expedia.com), Travelocity (http://travelocity.com), and Southwest Airlines (http://southwest.com).

At this site, you may easily reserve flights, hotels, and car rentals from their easy-to-use web interface. Expedia is always my first site to check for airfare, mainly because of its speed. It is able to pull up travel information faster than any of the other sites

I use. Expedia seems to have a larger catalog of international flights and hotels than its competitors. If you are flying overseas, you definitely need to check here.

Travelocity is owned by American Airlines. Can you guess which airline receives the best reviews on the site? Despite the obvious bias, this site is great for finding last minute deals. Hotels, rental car companies, and especially airlines don't like having empty "seats" and are willing to cut significant discounts to make a little money. Now, at this point, some of you are going ask, "What about PriceLine? (http:// priceline.com). At Priceline, if you make a "bid" for travel and it is accepted, you have to take it. In fact, you have to give them your credit card number before you make your proposal. Dangerous, if you ask me.

Finally, I like to use Southwest Airlines site, mainly because they are a major carrier in the Texas Panhandle. Unfortunately, Expedia does not have Southwest in their database, so that searches you make on travel will not include their rates. While the interface at the Southwest website is not as intuitive as Expedia or Travelocity, I can sometimes still find the lowest deal here. What I really like about Southwest, though, are their "Click 'N Save" E-mail Bulletins. Every week, they will send you, via e-mail, list of the lowest rates to different destinations only offered on the Net.

I've found that using the Internet, I can often find some incredible travel deals that I would not have found anywhere else. Give it a try. I think you'll be pleasantly surprised at the "deals" you discover.

Though I have not seen him, I know he exists because objects in my house get moved around or broken, and no one living in my household did it. After recent rains, I came home to find muddy footprints (clumps of mud, really) leading across my living room carpet, down the hall, and into the bathroom.

"O.K.," I yelled, "Who has mud on their shoes?"

My husband and visiting children all looked at each other in amazement. What a silly question! This woman has obviously taken leave of her senses to think we would do such a thing and not immediately confess.
