CISD students register next Monday, Tuesday

Clarendon CISD will be holding registration for elementary, junior high, and high school students in the cafeteria from 6:00 p.m. until 9:00 p.m. on August 15 and 16, 2005.

Students will receive classroom assignments and schedules at this time. The student's parent must be present in order to complete the registration process.

It is extremely important that all parents complete the federal lunch form. For those that qualify, students may receive free or reduced priced lunches. We need all parents to complete the form regardless of qualification. This program helps determine funding for the district.

New students to the district are asked to come to the school offices between 9:00 a.m. and 4:00 p.m. on August 17 and 18, 2005. Please bring records from the student's previous school, a copy of the student's birth certificate and social security card, and a copy of the student's immunization records.

Scammers try to use CHS name to get cash

Clarendon residents and businesses beware! It is that time of year again, and there are people out there trying to get your money by using Clarendon High School's name.

If you are contacted by anyone other than a CHS employee or student, it is not supported by the school district. If someone other than an employee or CHS student approaches your business for a sponsorship, do not give them any money.

Clarendon High School appreciates any and all support that is received from the community. They want to continue to receive your help and keep the money in the community.

Contact CHS at 874-2181 if you have any concerns or questions concerning a fund-raiser.

CHS Class of '55 plan reunion next month

All of the 1955 Clarendon High School ex-students are invited to this class reunion to be held September 23-24. They will be spotlighting the Class of 1955 as this is their 50th reunion.

For more information, call 874-3811 or 874-2053.

Youth Football League sign-ups next week

The Clarendon Youth Football League will hold sign-up during school registration on August 15 and 16 at Clarendon Elementary from 6:00 to 9:00 p.m.

A fee of $35 is due at the time of sign-up.

For more information, contact Mike LaRoe at 205-0142.

Local schools exceed TEA standards

Less than 15 percent of the school districts in Texas can call themselves "exemplary" or "recognized," and Clarendon and Hedley school districts are part of this exclusive club.

The Texas Education Agency announced on August 1 that Clarendon and Hedley were both rated as "recognized" school districts, despite a more rigorous standard this year.

Clarendon campuses were also rated individually with Clarendon High School and Elementary being named "recognized" for the second year and Clarendon Junior High falling from "recognized" to "academically acceptable."

Clarendon ISD Superintendent Monty Hysinger said it's difficult to achieve a "recognized" rating, and he is excited about the results.

"The fact that less than 20 percent of the state reached this level says something," he said. "We're not where we want to be yet, but we're getting there. We do have some areas where we need to improve, math especially."

Hysinger said the reason for the junior high results was due to Texas

Assessment of Knowledge & Skills (TAKS) math scores.

"There was something statewide not quite right in math," Superintendent Hysinger said. "We have a dedicated staff, and they want the kids to get better."

"We may not be there yet, but it's not because we're not trying. Our staff is so dedicated. If we're low in an area, they're the first to say what can I do to get better."

Hedley ISD Superintendent Bryan Hill was also pleased with his school's ratings.

"We're pretty happy about it," he said. "Being 'exemplary' isn't impossible, but the state is making it seem that way, and we're really excited to be 'recognized.'"

The ratings are partly based on TAKS results.

Clarendon results are as follows: Third grade - reading 100 percent, math 89 percent; Fourth grade - writing 92 percent, reading 82 percent, math 74 percent; Fifth grade - reading 96 percent, math 91 percent, science 90 percent; Sixth grade - reading 92 percent, math 80 percent; Seventh grade - writing 83 percent, reading 83 percent, math 64 percent; Eighth grade - reading 97 percent, math 56 percent, social studies 84 percent; Ninth grade - reading 88, math 61 percent; Tenth grade - English/Language Arts 85 percent, Social studies 97 percent, math 71 percent, science 67 percent; and Eleventh grade - English/Language Arts 100 percent, social studies 100 percent, math 87 percent, science 97 percent.

Campus results for Hedley are as follows: Reading, 93 percent; Writing, 100 percent; Social Studies, 88 percent; Math, 82 percent; and Science, 76 percent.

The coming thing

Barbara Daniels, Gwen Holladay, Winnie Permenter, Dorothy Arnold, and Donley County Democratic Chair Jean Taylor gather around a demonstration model of an electronic voting machine Monday afternoon at the Donley County Courthouse. County officials are considering which kind of machine to purchase under a federal mandate that requires each polling place to have one of the devices.

Beef grid marketing to be offered August 16

CANYON - Beef producers wanting to know about marketing options for finished cattle can attend the Beef Grid Marketing 101-North seminar August 16 at West Texas A&M University here.

"Marketing Strategies for Finished Cattle" will begin at 8 a.m. in the Agriculture and Natural Science Building and includes a noon lunch. The program is jointly sponsored by Texas Cooperative Extension, Texas Cattle Feeders Association, and West Texas A&M.

Dr. Ted McCollum, moderator and Extension beef cattle specialist, said, "Basically, beef or carcass grids are established so you can differentiate among cattle by discovering a value for individual carcasses rather than a group of live cattle. There is continued interest, so we're providing opportunities for producers and cattle feeders to become more familiar with carcass grids to discover value for finished cattle."

Attendees will get a virtual packing plant tour, during which they will learn about beef carcass grading, carcass quality defects, and carcass and animal maturity.

There will also be a discussion on understanding grids.

Marcine Moldenhauer, strategic supply chain manager for Cargill Meat Solutions in Wichita, Kan., will explain how base prices, premiums, and discounts are determined.

Dr. Ted Schroeder, noted livestock marketing economist, will compare live and grid marketing and discuss marketing trends for feedlot cattle.

Dr. Dan Hale, Extension beef cattle specialist in College Station, and Mike Brown, West Texas A&M assistant professor of ruminant nutrition, will present an interactive "picking the right marketing method" demonstration and competition.

Other speakers, including a panel of cattle feeders, will address trends in marketing finished cattle and matching them to different marketing options.

The registration fee is $20; deadline is Aug. 12. Call Trent Tyson, TCFA special projects assistant, at (800) 299-8232 or fax the registration form to (806) 352-6026. A registration form can be found at: <http://tcfa.org/events.html>.

Forage Sorghum Field Day to be held in Amarillo

AMARILLO - Several years of research on forage sorghum silage production and grazing sorghum sudangrass hybrids will be discussed at an August 30 field day sponsored by Texas Cooperative Extension and the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

The field day will be east of Amarillo at the Experiment Station's J.E. Bush Farm, 1.5 miles north of Bushland. It will start at 9:30 a.m. and conclude by 11:30 a.m.

"With the dairies coming in and the silage needs they have, forage sorghums are more water efficient than corn," said Dr. Brent Bean, Extension agronomist in Amarillo. "Some of these new forage sorghums are higher in quality than what were previously being planted."

Bean, Dr. Ted McCollum, beef cattle specialist, and doctorate student Kim McCuiston will present information on their studies.

Participants will have the opportunity to view more than 80 sorghum varieties, including brown mid-rib, photoperiod sensitive, conventional forage sorghum, and sorghum-sudangrass hybrids.

Pros and cons of the different types of varieties will be discussed, as well as seeding rates, fertilizer requirements, water use, yield expectation, and forage quality.

Discussion of grazing of sorghum sudangrass will include presentations on cattle weight gain from brown mid-rib, conventional, and photoperiod sensitive hybrids. Strategies for maximizing cattle performance will be included in the presentations.

For more information contact Bean or McCollum at (806) 677-5600.

Local kids to receive CASA help

Abused and neglected children in Donley County will soon have new advocates in the court system now that CASA of the High Plains has expanded its coverage to this county.

CASA, which stands for Court Appointed Special Advocate, is a system by which a volunteer is appointed by a judge to provide factual information to the court on behalf of a child. CASA volunteers come from all walks of life and only handle one case at a time.

"We have been very interested in serving Donley County because it is a good fit for our area," said Janet Watts, Executive Director for CASA of the High Plains.

Watts said her office is looking for six to eight local people to serve on an advisory committee and help recruit volunteers. Training will begin in September.

CASA represents children placed in the foster care system, most of whom have been removed from their homes because of their parents' addiction to illegal drugs, typically methamphetamines. Watts said the cases are simply situations where the parents care more about themselves than about their own children.

Once in the foster system, children can be placed in several different homes and be served by several different caseworkers from Child Protective Services (CPS).

"The great thing about CASA is that those kids have the same representative from the time they enter the system to the time they reach a permanent home," Watts said. "CASA is their only consistent face."

Ann Huey is a CASA volunteer and advisory committee member in Clarendon and has worked as a foster parent and with the CASA system for over 20 years. She has been instrumental in bringing CASA to the kids of Donley County.

"I just saw what CASA did for my kids, and I want to be a part of getting that started here," Huey said.

CASA is a non-profit organization that is separate from the state-run CPS. Cases are handled by a Cluster Court, which only deals with CPS cases. The court operates with the permission of District Judge David McCoy and is overseen by Judge Phil Vanderpool of Pampa.

The Cluster Court is the only one of its kind in the state and covers CPS cases in 23 counties in the Texas Panhandle. A special prosecutor serves the court with the permission of District Attorney Stuart Messer.

CASA of the High Plains was established in Gray County 1994 and now serves seven other counties including Donley, Hansford, Ochiltree, Lipscomb, Hemphill, Roberts, and Wheeler.

There are currently 122 kids in cases overseen by CASA of the High Plains, including 12 kids in six cases in Donley County.

"As soon as volunteers can be trained, Judge Vanderpool will start appointing volunteers to cases here," Watts said.

Most volunteers average 10 hours per month on a case, and most work full time at other jobs. Watts said volunteers can work on their own schedules but they do have to attend court hearings.

For more information or to volunteer, call the CASA office in Pampa at 669-7638 or call Ann Huey at 570-9268. Donations to CASA of the High Plains can be sent to PO Box 604, Pampa, TX 79065.

US overreacts to terrorists' strikes in UK

By Charles V. Peña and Ted Galen Carpenter

The US response to the July 7 terrorist bombings of the London tube system has been predictable: more hasty security measures. On July 21, police began conducting random searches of bags and packages carried by people on the New York City subway; those who refuse to be searched are not allowed to ride.

According to Mayor Michael Bloomberg, "These kinds of security measures are necessary." But any security measure must pass two litmus tests. First, it must be proven to be effective. Second, it must not violate constitutional rights. Mayor Bloomberg's "necessary" security falls down on both counts.

The odds of catching a would-be subway bomber are not very good. New York's subways carry about 4.5 million passengers on the average weekday, according to the Metropolitan Transportation Authority. If on any given day there were a single terrorist riding the subway, and half the passengers were carrying some sort of bag, the probability of finding him or her during any particular search using a truly random search pattern would be about one in 2.25 million or about four ten-millionths of one percent. Such odds are only slightly better than winning New York's Mega Millions lottery (about one in 175 million). Even multiplied by thousands of intrusive searches that's a poor bet - and that assumes terrorists are too dim to adapt by, say, strapping bombs to their bodies.

Random searches on the subway are as useless as random searches of airline passengers at the gate - a practice that fortunately has been eliminated by the Transportation Security Agency after TSA administrator James M. Loy decided it was a "stupid rule." The spectacle of security personnel patting down grandmothers and toddlers deserved the ample ridicule it generated. Furthermore, the procedure netted exactly zero terrorists. It is also rather telling that British authorities are not instituting random searches on the London tube system - a testament to the fact that doing so would be ineffective and cripple a transportation system that moves seven million people daily.

Aside from the futility of random searches, Bloomberg's panacea ought to be rejected because the Fourth Amendment of the U.S. Constitution guarantees the right of the people to be "secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects against unreasonable searches and seizures." Without probable cause - such as someone fitting the physical description of a suspected terrorist - a random search of subway passengers is the antithesis of the Fourth Amendment.

That amendment is already in the intensive care unit thanks to the numerous exceptions made in the name of the war on drugs, as well as some of the provisions of the USA PATRIOT Act. If Mayor Bloomberg's measures are adopted nationwide, the prohibition against unreasonable searches will be in danger of expiring entirely.

According to New York Police Commissioner Raymond Kelly, passengers are free to "turn around and leave" to avoid being searched and having their rights violated. But this is hardly providing the protection of the Fourth Amendment. To begin, it is an impractical solution. Presumably, people are using the subway to go somewhere - most likely to work. It is highly unlikely that many employers will take kindly to an excuse of not wanting to have Fourth Amendment rights violated as a reason for being late or not showing up to work. Also, a decision to turn around and leave is likely to be viewed as suspicious behavior by law enforcement and might be used as "probable cause" for detention and an even more extensive search.

Officials in Washington, DC and San Francisco are waiting to see what happens in New York before deciding to implement random searches on Metro and BART, respectively. But deliberation won't change the fact that random searches are both ineffective and a gross violation of constitutional rights. The decision should be a no-brainer.

The outrage in America after the London tube bombings is certainly understandable - as is the desire for Americans to feel safe. At most, that's all random searches on the subway will do: make people feel safer. But such measures won't actually make them safer. It is all too easy to adopt the attitude of one New York subway passenger: "It's just part and parcel of the world we live in."

But nothing could be further from the truth. The world we live in is represented by the Constitution and the principles upon which American society rests. As such, we should heed Benjamin Franklin's admonition that those who would "give up essential liberty to obtain a little temporary safety deserve neither liberty nor safety." Random searches on the subway ultimately mean we have neither.

Charles V. Peña is director of defense policy studies at the Cato Institute and a terrorism analyst for MSNBC. Ted Galen Carpenter is vice president for defense and foreign policy studies at the Cato Institute and author of six books, including Peace & Freedom: Foreign Policy for a Constitutional Republic.

New beau's handgun changes outlook

You know, there's a time in every person's life when she thinks she knows who she is. She thinks she knows how she'll react when Life hands her lemons. She thinks she'll just make her lemonade, sell it, and use the money to buy a new pair of shoes.

Then something happens. Someone new enters the picture; and like the great philosopher Andy Milonakis, instead of lemonade, she makes beef stew. And she is mystified.

This is not a story about cooking beef stew or overcoming adversity, really. It's a story about me, a 9mm pistol, and some very dead cardboard men.

Let me go backward in time a little bit. I have been dating this one guy now for a little over a month. His name is Jay, he's an aspiring dentist, and he is the sweetest guy I've ever met.

One of the first times we ever went out, I found out that Jay had a Concealed Handgun License. I saw him taking the gun into his house from the car where I had just been riding. I told him it made me incredibly uncomfortable to have a firearm in the car, and I was morally opposed to weapons of all kinds. I didn't ask him to stop carrying it, but he did.

I was kind of taken aback by this move. He changed his normal pattern of behavior for me. No one had ever done that for me, and I had certainly never done it for them.

At that point I realized that not only was I having an effect on him, but this boy was having a serious effect on me. I was watching action flicks. I was eating at Chik-fil-A, and I hate Chik-fil-A. They misspell everything, and there are no actual words in their name. I was letting him pay for things and open my door, and I wasn't offended at all.

Well, to celebrate my last day at Taco Bell and his last Organic Chemistry test, Jay invited me to go with him and his dad, a licensed handgun safety instructor, to meet up with some friends at the shooting range to do some target practice.

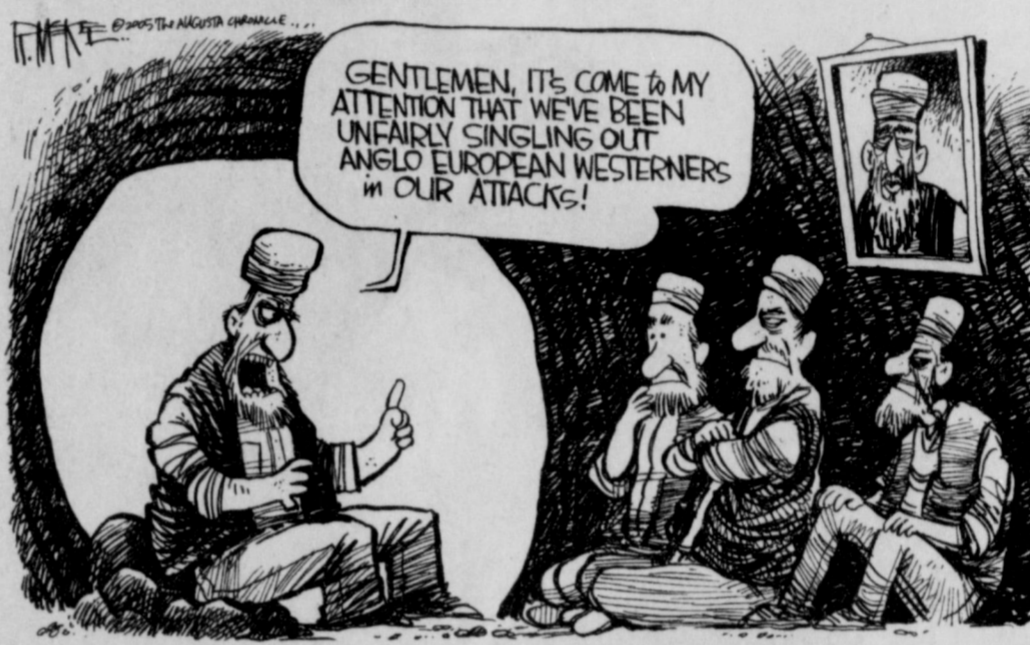

I'd been brought up to fear guns with a fear reserved for tornadoes, spiders, and Willy Wonka. No way was I going to get anywhere near there. I had made a big deal about hating guns before. Going back on it now would make me a serious hypocrite.

But then, I was intrigued. I've never fired a gun. I've never really even seen one up close. How can I have an opinion about something that I know nothing about?

Why, I'm no better than Tom Cruise! I couldn't live with myself after that

IF TERRORISTS CARED ABOUT PROFILING

Lone Star State can brag about its Navy

There are many reasons why Texas is unique, but one of the most interesting is the fact that our state, alone, had its own battle-tested navy and continues to have an existing, albeit honorary, navy today.

Texas has had three navies in its history. The First Texas Navy was formed during the battle for independence from Mexico. This fleet was decommissioned after independence was won but continuing threats from Mexico led to the bitterly contested creation of the second navy.

The Second Texas Navy, commanded by a naval officer by the name of Edwin Moore, held off threats from Mexico to the young Texas Republic. Squabbles over naval funding led to the decision to "rent" out the fleet to the breakaway province of Yucatan as it fought Mexico's central government. Texas' two sailing ships, the Austin and the Wharton, scored a spectacular victory at Campeche during May in 1843 by driving away a Mexican fleet containing what was, at that time, the world's mightiest warship, the 1,100-ton iron steamer the Guadalupe. This was the only time in history that a sailing ship defeated an iron steam-powered warship.

Not long after that battle, the Second Texas Navy was decommissioned, but Moore gained a place in Texan's hearts. In 1867, Moore County in the Panhandle was named in Moore's honor.

The Third Texas Navy was established in 1958 by Governor Price Daniel, as a commemorative organization to assure the survival of Texas' Naval history, boundaries, water resources and civil defense.

Ironically, the Third Texas Navy is by far the strongest of the three, for her flagship is the Battleship Texas, which fought in both World War I and II and is now berthed at the San Jacinto Monument in La Porte. The Texas navy now includes World War II vessels including PT-309 in Galveston, PT-305 which is being restored, the submarine USS Cavalla in Galveston and the famous aircraft carrier USS Lexington, which is moored at Corpus Christi. Other WWII ships include a Liberty Ship, the Edwin W. Moore built in Houston and named after the Second Texas Navy commander, and the USS Orleck, a Gearing class destroyer built in Orange, which has now returned to its birthplace to serve as a museum.

The oldest ship in the Texas navy is the Elissa, a tall sailing ship built in 1877. She now calls Galveston home. Texas' navy also includes an honorary roster of active duty ships serving with the United States Navy and the Coast Guard. These include the nuclear-powered aircraft carriers, the USS Eisenhower and USS Nimitz, and several nuclear-powered submarines, the Houston, City of Corpus Christi and the Dallas. The USS Texas is brand-new and will be part of the Virginia class of submarines.

capitol comment
by sen. kay bailey hutchison

One of the best known ships in Texas' navy is the USTS Texas Clipper II, which up until June of this year, was the Texas State Maritime Program's training ship. It replaced the Texas Clipper I, which was sunk to provide an artificial reef 25 miles off the coast. The Texas Clipper II started life as the USS Chauvenet in 1970 and was converted to serve as a maritime classroom in 1996. Her place is being taken by a newer and larger vessel, the USS Sirius, which will be given a new name at a christening ceremony planned for this November. I have been invited to christen her.

This would be my second christening of a Texas ship. I was honored to christen the first in its class of a versatile and powerful amphibious assault ship, the USS San Antonio, named after a vessel in the Second Texas Navy, which was lost to a hurricane. I asked, of course, that the sparkling wine used to christen the ship come from a Texas vineyard, but I had forgotten how strong we make things in our state. I walloped the bow of the ship two times with the bottle without affect. On the third try, the bottle exploded, dousing me with sparkling Texas wine. Some newspapers quipped that I christened myself.

I cannot tell you how much it meant to me to play a small part in launching another vessel, which will defend America and build on Texas' heroic naval traditions. In November the new floating classroom will take its place in our state's naval history. I look forward to meeting the newest member of the Third Texas Navy's fleet.

Enterprise editorials are right on target

I thoroughly enjoy getting online and reading your editorials from the old hometown. I now live in the Houston area, and the only opinion section available to me is via THE HOUSTON (BARNACLE) CHRONICLE. This so-called paper is owned by the Hurst Empire controlled out of California; therefore, the slant is pure left coast.

Your [July 28, 2005] editorial concerning children who are just little criminals waiting to grow up into adult criminals because their parents will not demand that they be held accountable for their actions was right on target. Every day I read about how some child who committed a crime should not be punished because someone else failed them, and it most assuredly was not their parents.

Where has common sense gone? Our society now looks for a scapegoat every time someone does something wrong and breaks the law. How about everyone being held accountable for their actions, just like in the old days? Break a law - go to jail. I'm with you.

How about applying for the editor's job in Houston? We could sure use some common sense.

Local firefighters help Amarillo man with blaze

Last week I had a desperate need to call both the Clarendon Volunteer Fire Department and the Volunteer Fire Department in Hedley. As it turned out, a controlled burn became an out-of-control blaze.

My heart-felt thanks go out to these men who dropped what they were doing to come to the rescue. The firemen from Clarendon showed up, served unselfishly, and left before I even had a chance to personally thank them.

To Hedley's Lon Adams: I could kiss you but I'll leave that up to Lyndon. Once again my gratitude and respect go out to these men. What a wonderful service they perform day in and day out!

Helpful tips keep communications open

By MaryRuth Bishop

It is early August, "Back to School" signs are out, and the sale paper is advertising everything from backpacks to tennis shoes. It never ceases to irritate me that the sales industry would begin advertising during the mere shank of vacation and regularly burst my summer bubble.

As a child I had a love of learning as I believe most children do, but new situations for me were always comparable to scaling a steep, rather treacherous peak. Therefore, beginning each new school year for me was a huge emotional obstacle.

I have come to realize that we are all teachers. Either as a mother, father, grandparent, school teacher, church school teacher, or friend - what ever the category, we are all teachers. We fine-tune our external preparations with the utmost scrutiny. But, we often overlook the area of emotional preparation for our students.

Beginning a new school year for a child, be it a student just beginning his primary years or a high school student, would be comparable to an adult starting a new job every year. Students are placed in a new environment, given new expectations, and surrounded by a new peer group. Children by their very nature are amazingly adaptable and resilient, but a new school year remains a huge transition.

An ideal scenario would include unlimited time to devote to each and every student and offer an all inclusive approach which would meet his/her wide variety of needs. Unfortunately, reality often dictates that teachers are overloaded, overworked, and underpaid.

It is my belief that establishing a bond of trust with children lays the groundwork for both receptive and expressive learning. When we focus on a child and are genuinely interested in wanting to know about him/her, it not only boosts self-esteem, but it conveys a vital message that we earnestly care about what each of our students has to offer.

The following are simple suggestions for activities to help students with the emotional transition of a new school year.

Talk with your student. Not simply a generic greeting and general dialog but make an effort to speak to your student individually every day.

1.) Use "door openers" that invite children to say more. Use phrases such as "Tell me more about that," "That really sounds interesting," and "Say that again."

2.) Give the child your undivided attention. Don't try to talk to a student while doing paperwork, fixing supper, or watching TV.

3.) Look the child in the eyes, ask questions, and affirm responses. Comment on something that is specific.

Be aware and attentive to children who show signs of anxiety and/or difficulties adjusting after the first few weeks of school. These symptoms may include withdrawal, isolation, or no attempts at making friendships, depressed manner, noncompliance, acting out, serious separation anxiety in younger children, etc.

Keep communication lines open. Providing a student with a secure and trusting environment will enable the student to open up and express feelings, and empower teachers to offer solutions.

Use the right words and provide a caring, secure, and motivating environment. This way children feel good about themselves and excited about learning opportunities the new school year has to offer. Feeling worthy, having good self-esteem and knowing what to expect in a new environment are critical to a child succeeding in school and in life. Achieving a balance of physical, mental, and emotional preparation for students will clear a path for stability and success.

New book club to meet in Clarendon

If you like to read, please come join an informal book discussion and help choose the books and share your ideas and opinions about what to read.

They are casual in dress, open to varying opinions, share ideas and challenging concepts, and enjoy being together.

They will meet in the Burton Memorial Library the second Thursday of each month from 2:00-4:00 and work around holidays. None of this is set in stone so if something works better for you, they are open to discuss it.

On the following dates, the books will be discussed by these speakers: September 8, 2005 - Crossing to Safety by Wallace Stegner, discussed by Barbara Daniel; October 13, 2005, The Devil in the White City by Erik Larson, discussed by Renee Duncan; November 10, 2005, The Mermaid Chair by Sue Mon Kidd, discussed by Jean Stavenhagen; and on December 8, 2005, The Awakening, by Kate Chopin, with speaker to be announced.

People come from all over for Howardwick's big sale

The rains came, but it didn't keep people away from the garage sale.

I visited with people from White Deer, Hereford, Lubbock, Claude, McLean, Pampa, Amarillo, and Canyon. Even one couple from Barstow, Calif., followed our signs from Highway 287 and spent some money. Our biggest support came from Donley County - Lelia Lake, Hedley, Clarendon, and especially Howardwick. Most of our citizens participated with donations, working, buying, or all three.

Everyone went home with a bargain, but the best was grown-up Tina Alexander who walked out to a round of applause after buying a pair of funky shoes dubbed "the witch's shoes" because of the resemblance to shoes worn by the Wicked Witch of the West in The Wizard of Oz. Children took home a free toy of their choice, and the workers took home a sore back, but it all added up to a big success. Our Community Center has been saved if we can find enough volunteer labor. I heard several men say they were headed for the hills.

Jim Baird spent most of the week in the hospital. He came home Friday and was out mowing Saturday. It is hard to keep a good man down, even with kidney dialysis.

Fire department meets Thursday, August 11, at 7 p.m. at City Hall. Beautification Club meets Monday, August 15, at noon at City Hall.

Burton Library offers Lucado's best sellers

It is no wonder that Max Lucado, who preaches, teaches, writes, and lives in San Antonio, has been listed among the seen most admired Christian writers in America. His matchless style holds readers' interest from the first page to the last. His talent enables him to present a serious point in an interesting, clever, thought-provoking manner. Personal applications tend to immediately "draw" readers into reality of situations.

In He Still Moves Stones, examples of our own problems and feelings are discussed. The author makes it evident that these same feelings were experienced by many strong people who lived during biblical times, and about whom you've read. Possible and uplifting solutions are offered to situations such as overcoming shame; facing discouragement; overcoming bad attitudes; when others let you down; when you wonder if your prayers matter; when you wonder if God cares; when you are confused by God's actions; how to love growing old (I'm working on that one). This is not a book of advice, but rather, it conveys the fact of "God doing for people what people cannot do for themselves."

The enticing chapter titles in When God Whispers Your Name, exemplify more of Lucado's refreshing approach to a serious subject.

His warmth and humor almost guarantee a chuckle from readers throughout the book.

Another Lucado book, And The Angels Were Silent, which concentrates on the last week of Jesus' life on Earth, continually intermingles and compares true happenings during biblical times with those of today.

Additional Lucado writings are available at Burton Memorial Library, many of which have appeared on numerous best seller lists.

Not only does Burton Memorial Library have Max Lucado's writings for adults, but Tell Me a Story and Tell Me a Secret are two lovely children's books which he has authored and "joined forces with illustrator Ron DiCianni to create a unique work." The illustrations are powerful, and the stories are written with appealing sensitivity to the feelings of almost any age child, even to your very young "nonreaders." Whether your children read for themselves or depend on your reading to them, these attractive books provide an appropriate addition to their reading material. Why not check it out?

She was preceded in death by her husband in 1995; a son, Donald Mobley in 1982; a daughter, Pat Atkin in 2002; four brothers; and one sister.

Survivors include one son, Michael Mobley of Amarillo; two daughters, Debbie Lomax and Martha Gay Tomlinson, both of Amarillo; six grandchildren; and seven great grandchildren.

Casket bearers were Chris Lomax, Jason Atkin, Beaux Bell, Gary Mays, John Molder, and David Moss.

The family suggests that memorials be to BSA Hospice in Amarillo.

McGuire

Ann Levell Cargill Davis McGuire died on Tuesday, August 2, 2005, at her home in Alpine surrounded by her family and friends. She was 65.

McGuire

Ann was born near Rochester, Texas, on December 16, 1939, to Eddie and Ollie Cargill. Her father, Eddie, a farmer, was also a WWI veteran who adopted the middle name of "Armistice" upon returning home from WWI. Ann's mother, Ollie, died the day after Ann was born due to complications following childbirth. Eddie was unable to care for newborn Ann, so she was raised by Mary Josephine (Josey) Cargill Davis (grandmother) and Fred Inglehardt Davis (uncle) in Rochester, where she graduated from high school in 1958. Ann was a cheerleader for the Rochester Steers, enjoyed home economics classes, and was active in all social activities.

Ann attended Abilene Christian College and Hardin-Simmons University and earned a Cosmetologists License from the Abilene Beauty College in 1959. She was married on April 11, 1959 to Douglas Allen McGuire of Rochester.

Ann retired from Sul Ross State University (SRSU) in 2001, after working more than a total of fourteen years for the university Physical Plant and the Wildenthal Memorial Library. Prior to joining SRSU she worked as a cosmetologist in Abilene until her husband graduated from Hardin-Simmons; County Tax Assessor Collector Assistant for Runnels County Tax Office in Ballinger; secretary and bookkeeper for Wallace Monument Company in Clarendon; and receptionist for Dr. Thomas Coats in Alpine.

Ann is survived by her husband of over 46 years, Douglas Allen McGuire; her two sons Mickey Douglas McGuire and wife Pamela Gomez McGuire of Little Rock, Arkansas, and Bradford Rhea McGuire and wife Karen Roach McGuire of Alpine, Texas; and her sister Wanda Gayle Powers of Pampa, Texas. She has ten grandchildren and eleven great-grandchildren.

Ann loved working on craft projects, collecting cookbooks, researching the family history, and putting together family scrapbooks. Her faith and love of the Lord sustained her throughout her life. She was a supporter of the American Cancer Society's Relay for Life and former President and Gold Star member of the American Legion Women's Auxiliary. A celebration of life is planned at the American Legion Hall in Alpine on Saturday, September 3, 2005, at 6 p.m. All family and friends are invited to attend.

Ann was preceded in death by her grandmother, uncle, mother, father, three sisters and three brothers.

The family encourages everyone to be an organ donor, because Ann was a lung transplant recipient, and asks that memorial contributions be made to the American Cancer Society (PO Box 1140, Alpine, TX 79831), Michael's Mountain Ministry (PO Box 822, Alpine, TX 79831), or the American Legion, Post 79, Big Bend Unit.

the lion's tale
by allen estlack

The Clarendon Lions Club held their regular Tuesday noon meeting August 9, 2005, with Boss Lion Mark C. White holding the gavel.

We had 17 members and four guests: Nathan and Scarlet Estlack, guest of Lion Russell Estlack; Ashlee Estlack, guest of Lion Roger Estlack; and Lion Jack King of the Amarillo Downtown Lions Club, guest of the Boss Lion.

Lion Myles Shelton reported that the college will hold registration August 28 and 29, and the cafeteria renovation is in progress and should be finished before classes start.

Lion Monty Hysinger said the public school's abatement and modernization project is nearly finished. He also reported breaking news that Lorenzo had not been able to field enough players and has pulled out of the 11-man football schedule. That leaves Coach Gary Jack looking for an opponent on September 9.

Lion King, PDG, reported 35 children attended the Texas Lions Camp from our district this year. This camp is totally free to the children and he encouraged us to find some children from our town to send. The camp operated on a $1.9 million budget this year.

The Lions Pancake Supper has been set for October 7 just before the Broncos game against Wellington.

There being no further business, we were adjourned.

Donley County Commissioners' Court this week ordered a ban on outdoor fires until conditions improve.

Exceptions to this ban include pre-planned controlled burns for the purpose of brush control. Open pit fires and trash burns are prohibited.

Bird Flu Vaccine Test Results Are Positive

A new vaccine to protect against a type of influenza virus referred to as "bird flu" or "avian flu" is being considered for mass production in the US. While the vaccine is not yet available commercially, test results have been encouraging. Recent test data on 450 healthy adults indicate that the immune response provided when the vaccine was administered may be enough to protect humans from this particular strain of the virus that has killed millions of birds and up to 50 humans in Asia. The US government has expressed considerable interest in developing this vaccine based on concerns that this strain could mutate (change) into a form that would easily spread among humans throughout the world.

Recent reports from one official at the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases indicates that the FDA could approve the new vaccine rather quickly and authorize production of around 2 million doses of the vaccine. This would provide a small stockpile of vaccine that the government could use during an epidemic of avian flu if such were to occur in the United States.
