County property values up five percent

The total value of property in Donley County has increased 5.06 percent over last year, according to a report this week from the Donley Appraisal District.

The 2004 appraised value for property in the county's jurisdiction totals nearly $160 million, an increase of $7.7 million over 2003 figures. The average home in Donley County is valued at $29,240.

Chief Appraiser Paula Lowrie said the appraisal district looks at all the known sales that have occurred in the last year and bases increased valuations on that information. Local taxing entities use the property valuations when setting their tax rates for the coming year.

Although some sources cite higher property valuations as a sign of a growing economy, many local residents don't like seeing their valuation increase because it results in a higher property tax bill even if a taxing entity does not increase its tax rate.

This year more than twice as many property owners filed to appeal their valuations than the year before.

Lowrie said 98 people filed protests, and ten of those settled their disputes before the Appraisal Review Board met July 8-9. Forty-nine of the remaining 88 presented their cases before the Board, and of those only nine were granted an adjustment.

Appraisal district officials say they can only go by the market prices set by real estate sales and follow the guidelines set by the state in setting valuations.

"Appraised values are still only 70 percent of what the sales actually were," Lowrie said.

Valuations in all local taxing entities were up this year.

Property owners inside the City of Hedley experienced the smallest percentage increase, as property values in that city rose 3.16 percent from $5.98 million in 2003 to $6.17 million in 2004. But property in the in Hedley Independent School District had the biggest percentage increase with values rising 6.93 percent from $24 million last year to $25.7 million.

Valuations in the City of Clarendon are up 4.9 percent to $50.3 million, and property values in the City of Howardwick are up 5.99 percent to $13.7 million. The average home in Clarendon is worth $33,340; and the average Howardwick residence is worth $23,240.

The average home in jurisdiction of the Clarendon Independent School District is valued at $30,674; and property values within the CISD increased 5.74 percent to a total of $123.2 million.

Valuations in the Clarendon College District and the Donley County Hospital District were similar to the county itself - about $160 million - with increases of 5.00 percent and 5.42 percent respectively. The difference being due to certain tax abatements given by those entities, Lowrie said.

Ag Department seeks historic farms, ranches for land heritage award

AUSTIN — Agriculture Commissioner Susan Combs announced that the Texas Department of Agriculture's Family Land Heritage Program is seeking farms and ranches for recognition by the Family Land Heritage Program, which marks its 30th anniversary this year. Since the first ceremony on Oct. 14, 1974, the program has honored almost 3,900 farms and ranches in 222 counties for being kept in continuous agricultural production by the same family.

"These families have nurtured life from the land to make a future for their children, all the while making their mark in Texas history," Combs said. "The Family Land Heritage Program honors their contributions to the settlement of the Lone Star State. It also chronicles the unique history of Texas agriculture, a proud record that otherwise might be lost forever."

To be eligible for the program, the farm or ranch must meet these qualifications:

The farm/ranch has to have been agriculturally productive for 100 years or more and the line of ownership traced from the first family member to the present, either through direct relatives, marriage, or adoption.

The land must fit the old U.S. Census definition of a farm: 10 acres or more with agricultural sales of $50 or more a year; or if less than 10 acres, sales of at least $250 a year.

Owner(s) must be actively managing the everyday operation of the property.

If all the land has ever been rented to someone outside of the family, it will not qualify. If only a portion was leased, and as much as 10 acres retained in the family for agricultural production with sales of at least $50 annually, it will qualify.

Deadline to submit applications for properties established in 1904 or before is Nov. 15, 2004.

Farms and ranches that qualify will be honored during the ceremony in Austin in March 2005. The history of the farm or ranch will be chronicled in a registry, and honorees can obtain historic farm or ranch signage for their property.

Applications are available through TDA, county judges, and at www.agr.state.tx.us. For information, contact Melissa Blair at (512) 463-2631.

WTAMU proposes tougher admission requirements

CANYON — Successful completion of the Texas Recommended High School Program (RHSP) and a computer-science course will be required of all first-time West Texas A&M University freshmen beginning fall 2006.

Pending approval by The Texas A&M University System Board of Regents, the new admission standards will be phased in during the next two years. Fall 2005 freshmen must have four credits of high school English, three credits of math and three credits of science.

Three social science credits, two foreign language credits, and one computer science credit will be added to the list of English, math, and science requirements for admission to the WT 2006 freshman class.

Current admission standards require entering freshmen to graduate in the top 50 percent from an accredited high school and submit ACT or SAT scores OR graduate from an accredited high school (or equivalent) and submit a composite ACT score of 20 or higher or a combined SAT I verbal and math score of 950 or better. The RHSP is currently recommended by WTAMU, but it is not required.

"We want our students to be successful," Dr. Flavius Killebrew, provost/vice president for academic affairs, said. "Their preparation, based on completion of the recommended high school curriculum, gives us a good indication that they are capable of handling the rigors of a university education."

The increased standards are aligned with the state mandated RHSP. Beginning with this year's high school sophomores, students will be placed in the recommended curriculum unless parents request an exception.

"The proposed admission standards will put us ahead of the curve," Dr. Troy Johnson, dean of enrollment management, said. "We want our students to be successful. To help do that, we need to match the academic preparation of our entering freshmen with the rigors of our curriculum."

According to Johnson, improving the quality of the freshman class won't adversely affect the size of future freshman classes.

"I don't expect any significant downsizing to occur in our enrollment," Johnson said. "I think quality and quantity go hand in hand, and we're increasing both."

WT has enjoyed five enrollment increases in the last six years and hit a 30-year high with 7,032 students last fall.

Adventures of Democrats in Beantown

The Democrats this week have raised the curtain on Fib Fest 2004 as this year's presidential campaign moves into high gear.

Watching the opening speeches on Monday night felt like a combination of a poor man's version of VH1's I Love The '90s and Alice in Wonderland. Given all the hot air this week, it is somehow appropriate that this convention is being held in a city nicknamed "Beantown."

editor's commentary
by roger estlack

Almost every speaker harkened back to the Clinton days. A time, we all recall, that was the widely recognized as the "good old days." A time when birds sang, when mommas loved their children, when every person in the United States had a job - sometimes two or three, when there was never a cloud in the sky, when water was pure, when our nation was at peace and terrorists were simply unheard of, when the whole world loved us unconditionally - even the French, and when were all linked arm in arm singing "Kumbaya" despite our differences.

And then, if we listen to the Democrats, then George Walker Bush appeareth and darkness covered the Earth. He and his demons stoleth the election, he commandeered the White House, and now we live in a world where all the birds are dead or endangered, where children are targeted for budget cuts and are denied basic sustenance, where there are no jobs, where the world hates us and terrorists try to kill us, and where the French won't return our phone calls anymore.

Yes, my friends, George Bush is indeed Satan himself. Bill Clinton, on the other hand, is... well... none other than the Savior, and all we can do is hope for the Second Coming when Hillary runs in four years. But in the meantime, the Dems are busy trying to get this Kerry fellow elected.

Presidential loser Al Gore kicked things off Monday. The basic thrust of his remarks was what he's been saying everyday for the last four years. "Count the votes. Count the votes. Count the votes."

Never mind that the votes were counted - three times and then later by different media outlets - and every time George Bush won Florida. (Granted it was by a slim margin, but he did win.) Of course, I can't really blame Gore. If he had been named the winner on dangling and pregnant chads, I can assure you I would have spent the last four years advocating secession.

Moving on to the big guns, the Dems trotted out the renowned and beloved former president Jimmy Carter, the man who has done a lot of good building houses for poor people but who was an utter failure as a president. But this week, two things he said stuck out.

"Today, our dominant international challenge is to restore the greatness of America," Carter said.

This from the man whose weak response to terrorists in Iran helped set the stage for all the dangers that have followed, the man who emasculated our military, the man who helped wreck the American spirit, and the man whose domestic policies caused the malaise days of runaway inflation and out-of-control interest rates.

Carter also talked about how every president - Democrats and Republicans - has worked to "secure a comprehensive peace for Israel with hope and justice for the Palestinians" and then noted that now "violence has gripped the Holy Land, with the region increasingly swept by anti-American passions."

Where the hell has this guy been? People have been killing each other in the Middle East forever! How long does the United States have to butt its head against the wall trying to get those idiots to be nice to each other? Frankly, I'm glad we've got a president who understands the philosophy of fish or cut bait. If we're lucky, in a second Bush term, we'll just let Israel off its leash and say, "Sic 'em!"

Moving on again, we come to the highlight of Monday's speakers - impeached president Billy Jeff Clinton, who provided enough material for an entire series of columns. I will, however, restrain myself only make two points.

First, Billy was whining and crying about how rich folks like him got a big tax cut under Bush. He didn't want the money when he realized the working people were paying for it. (That's economic hogwash by the way. The money was in fact his, and us working stiff got our tax cuts, too.)

He bemoaned that "most of us (the wealthiest Americans), almost all of us, from Republicans to independents and Democrats, we wanted to be asked to do our part, too. But all they asked us to do was to expend the energy necessary to open the envelopes containing our tax cuts."

Well, gee, Bill. If you don't want the money, why don't you and all your dopey friends just endorse the tax refund checks and turn them back over to the Treasury Department?

Clinton later went on to praise Sen. Kerry's military record, clicking off an impressive list of hair-raising wartime situations in which the courageous Kerry each time said, "Send me," and in which, as my beautiful fiancée pointed out, young Bill Clinton would have said each time, "Hide me."

Monday night was a barrel of laughs, and I can hardly wait to see what the rest of the week will bring. Check back here in seven days for the wrap up.

Spring cleaning leads to soul searching

Summer is almost over. I have two more weeks before I get to go back for good, and I cannot describe to you my excitement. Only it means I have two weeks to finish my Great Summer Purging.

Some people have Spring Cleaning where they put away the winter clothes and dust. I have Summer Purging. It's a little more intense and destructive. I dust, I paint, and I clean my room.

My room has been a little neglected since I've been away. If something doesn't have a place readily made for it, it goes to Carrie's room. It only seems logical that the bank statements and income tax stuff should be in my room along with yesterday's laundry, last week's laundry, and last July's dry cleaning.

But I'm not bitter. I made a little of the mess myself. I have this genetic disorder that, as I understand it, I inherited from my Papaw. My dad says he kept substandard equipment around just so he could fix it from time to time.

I cannot throw broken things away. I have to fix them. I keep ugly shirts so I can sew sequins on them and make them cool. I don't live there anymore, so I can't work on my stuff.

Instead, my room has become the place where these things go to die. Creative failures like scrapbooks and sewing projects crawl into my shelves and give up the ghost. There they lie festering and forgotten.

This is the graveyard that greeted me in May. This is the mammoth task that awaited me.

The first thing I had to do was to take an honest look at myself in the mirror and remind myself why I am doing this. This is a healing process, a way to close one chapter and begin a new one. I was going to have to take drastic measures that were going to hurt, but they were for my own good. I do this because I love you, Carrie.

I'm a sentimental fool. I have every remnant of every failed romance since third grade. I had to work carefully in shifts. I made peace with one memory and got rid of it. I ate some ice cream, healed, recovered, and moved on to the next of love's labors lost.

When I was in elementary school, I was convinced that someday I would be a great and famous writer. It was in the third grade that I first realized that I would have to be solely responsible for making certain that the work from my early years would be safe for posterity.

life's lessons
by carrie helms

Everything I have ever written - short stories, poems, plays, notes passed in church, grocery lists - everything is in notebooks and spirals all over my room. I spent some time reading through and cataloging my earliest works.

I knew I was smart and talented and amazing (my grandmother and my alter ego told me so), but I had no idea what a loser I was in fifth grade. I read one of my stories that I had written, and it sounded very familiar. In fact, it sounded like one of my columns. The very same tone of voice and wit. The very same pattern of really long sentences with lots of commas and clauses followed by two fragments.

Incidentally, the story was about how I couldn't think of anything to write because a man-eating duck was chewing on my head. I knew that's why I couldn't come up with anything last week. Residual brain damage, you know.

Incidentally, the man-eating duck episode followed a story about Alicia and her alien lover Pierre.

I may have been a loser, yes, but I was a loser with an incredible vocabulary, if I do say so myself. And I do.

Don't worry. I didn't throw a thing away. The first edition of The Collected Works: Pierre and the Man Eating Duck is due out in September.

US prepares to face 21st century world

"You may fly over a land forever; you may bomb it, atomize it, pulverize it and wipe it clean of life - but if you desire to defend it, protect it, and keep it for civilization, you must do this on the ground, the way the Roman legions did, by putting your young men into the mud."

Those words were written by my friend T.R. Fehrenbach in his definitive work on the Korean War, "This Kind of War: A Study in Unpreparedness." I have often turned to Ted's insights when reviewing the mission and structure of our military. His observation of the importance of "boots on the ground" is incisive and has served our efforts well. During the World Wars and later, during the Cold War, the importance of an American military presence in Europe and Asia was critical. Our struggle to uproot Nazi totalitarianism and dispel Communism called for a strong, physical presence abroad.

But today, we face a different kind of enemy: terrorism. An enemy with no borders, no uniforms, no respect for the traditional rules of war, and more importantly, no respect for human life. It is an enemy that showed us on September 11, 2001, that the greatest battle of our generation will not be fought in one country or even a single continent. It is a global battle that requires a renewed, sharpened strategy, a changed and relevant force structure, and demands that we take a close look at how we position our military at home and abroad.

As Chair of the Senate Military Construction Appropriations Subcommittee, I oversee the allocation of federal funds for our military installations worldwide. It is an important role, which requires an in depth understanding of our force alignment and the facilities and infrastructure necessary to support it. In recent years, I have become increasingly concerned with the Pentagon's tendency to shut down U.S. bases in an effort to modernize, consolidate, and make our Armed Forces more efficient.

Bases in Germany and Korea, while relevant to a Cold War strategy, must be considered for closure first before bases in Louisiana, California, and Texas face possible reductions or shut down as part of the 2005 Base Realignment and Closure (BRAC). In past BRAC rounds, some stateside closures have been conducted hastily, and the military has only later realized their mistake, costing millions of tax payer dollars, displacing soldiers and their families, and wreaking havoc on the local economies.

Another growing concern is the increased restrictions being placed on our training capabilities abroad. In some areas our ability to fly helicopters at night, conduct live-fire exercises, or move vehicles over the countryside during war preparation has been severely limited. Not only do some bases fail to meet our national security needs, but, in some cases, the host countries are openly antagonistic toward our troops.

Last year I enacted an Overseas Basing Commission, responsible for a comprehensive study of U.S. military facilities abroad that will help defense policy makers arrive at more informed decisions. The panel's charge is to review the existing base structure and location, as well as to assess whether our infrastructure is in place to meet current and future missions.

This July, the Commission held its first public meeting in Washington, the first of a series of meetings which will culminate in a report to the president and Congress later this year. At the meeting the Congressional Budget Office (CBO) presented its study on the costs of and options for changing the Army's overseas basing structure. CBO documented potentially significant savings in many areas, such as moving units home from Germany, where it costs about $1 billion annually to maintain forces, and from Korea. Locating forces in Poland, Bulgaria, or Romania was also recommended, as was consolidating the many bases and outposts in Korea.

If, as has been suggested in the media, the Pentagon returns 29,000 soldiers from Germany - approximately two divisions - we would save $400-$575 million annually and give our troops far better training capabilities and opportunities. And Texas is well poised to benefit from returning troops. Analysts suggest that Fort Bliss in El Paso or Fort Hood in Killeen could accommodate soldiers transferring from overseas.

The review is long overdue, but timely. With the 2005 BRAC rapidly approaching, we must know exactly what our troop commitments need to be internationally before we limit or close any bases here at home. I'm pleased the Commission's work is now underway. At year's end, it will provide conclusions and recommendations to help us make sound decisions about our overseas basing structure. By taking a comprehensive look at our force structure, we can more effectively place our boots on the right ground at the right time to combat the new threats we face in the 21st century.

CC Regents purchase furniture for library

Clarendon College Regents approved purchases related to the institution's new library when the board met July 15.

A bid from Check Point Systems was accepted in the amount of $12,750 to install security and theft detection equipment. Seven other proposals ranged from "no bid" to $40,000.

Regents also accepted a bid from Indeco, a Belton, Texas company, for new library furniture at a cost of $108,977.

Quotes for computers for the library were also considered, and regents awarded the bid to Dell in the amount of $49,994.10, which will be paid for by a grant from the Amarillo Area Foundation.

In other college business, the board accepted a bid for athletic insurance from Seymour Canter in the amount of $41,796, which is more than $8,600 lower than last year.

Regents discussed and endorsed the idea of creating a Hall of Fame for outstanding alumni and friends of the college. CC officials are still working on the details of how to set up this idea.

The board accepted resignations from Dean of Students Joel Zehr and from CC Pampa Center Advisor/Recruiter Jennifer Moore.

A letter was received from former CC board chairman Bright Newhouse commending the regents for naming the new library in honor of the late Vera Dial Dickey of Memphis.

Shoppers to get tax break

Texas shoppers get a break from state and local sales taxes on August 6, 7, and 8 - the state's sixth annual tax holiday. Lay-away plans can be used again this year to take advantage of the sales tax holiday.

The law exempts most clothing and footwear priced under $100 from sales taxes, which could save shoppers about $8 on every $100 spent.

The tax holiday occurs every year on the first Friday, Saturday, and Sunday of August. Qualifying items are exempt from state sales taxes, but exemption from local sales tax is up to individual cities. This year, since no cities opted out of the holiday, qualifying items will be fully exempt from tax throughout Texas.

Most clothing and footwear priced at less than $100 will be exempt from sales tax. Customers will receive the break on individual items, regardless of the total amount they buy. For example, sales tax is not due if a customer buys six shirts each priced at $99.99. But full tax is due on a shirt sold for $100; the first $99.99 cannot be exempted.

Clothing and footwear used primarily for athletic activities or for protective wear are not eligible for the exemption. Customers buying golf cleats or football pads, for instance, must pay sales tax. Athletic wear that is also used for participation in other non-athletic activities can qualify for tax exemption. For example, tennis shoes, baseball caps, and jogging suits are worn during everyday activities and thus may be purchased tax-free during the holiday.

Also excluded from the sales tax holiday are accessories such as jewelry and watches; items that are carried rather than worn; clothing rentals; and repairs and alterations.

No injuries were reported in the first accident, but the vehicle was totaled. The two individuals were transported to Hansford Hospital after the second accident because both were thrown from the convertible vehicle.

According to the Collingsworth Sheriff's Office, Thriftway Grocery was burglarized between 4 and 6 a.m. Saturday morning. An undetermined number of suspects gained entry through an opening in an office wall created by dislodging an air conditioner. A large amount of cash was taken from the office. Crime Stopper's is offering a $2,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction in this case.

Wes Sorenson and Michael van Enter recently began the conservation of several safes located in the Wheeler County Courthouse. One is a freestanding safe that has been painted over. They use a chemical to separate the new paint from the original before scraping it off. They have uncovered a beautiful Moorish Victorian Stencil Motif, which is found in many turn of the century industrial art pieces. The safe also has small pictures, hand-painted by European artists, on the inside of each of the doors and one on the front. The safe was made by Mosler Safe and Lock Company of Cincinnati, Ohio, and August 28, 1888, was the date found on the inside of one of the doors.

Life doesn't slow down as summer ends

So who else got cold toesies last Sunday? Or Saturday? Or Monday?

For July, it got downright frigid first part of this week. I actually shivered heading into church Sunday morning. Creates less stress on the plants when it's a bit cooler - but I don't know what this much coolness does to things like cotton or peanuts. I just know I haven't had to water my lone little rosebush in the planter box out back quite so much. And I've had to put socks on in my new spiffy-cool office because my toes got too cold.

Chez Shelton - which according to my aged college French means "at the Shelton's place," right, Mrs. Sears? - we are beginning to get everything in place. The new tile floor is in, all the appliances have arrived, and the refrigerator is out of the den as is the toilet. (A toilet sitting at the end of the sofa is a real conversation starter!) One of these days, I'm going to have to break down and go buy groceries to cook.

We've hung a few pictures and laid all the rest out in the middle of the living room floor. It's amazing how many pictures a few grandbabies can generate. The African violets and begonias seem to like their new windows. I was worried for a day or two, but the finickiest plant is presenting me with a new leaf, so I'm assuming it's happy. Now, if I can just get the rest of the books unpacked...

Only a few short weeks until school starts again. Some are taking last gasp vacations. Others have already kicked into high gear for the fall semesters. The college library seems to be one of those high gear things - still moving right along. They won't get in it this fall, but they won't be rushing to get it ready for the spring semester.

I'm hoping as school gets closer and life - it won't slow down I know, but I'm hoping my life gets a bit more stable. If it does, I'd like to think my memory might get a bit more stable as well. I don't know if it's the level of activity or what, but it seems that the more I have to stuff in the memory, the easier things fall out.

I've blamed the memory glitches on all the gray hairs - every one that grows in seems to be draining gray matter from the brain. I remember meetings I'm not supposed to go to, and the ones I fully intend to go to and write notes to myself about - those are the ones I forget.

I've had this problem since I was in college, mumbly-something years ago, so maybe it's not the hair. I once forgot to go to a final exam for the one and only math class I took. Must have been something Freudian about that. (The professor was kind enough to let me take the test when I ran to her and begged and confessed my foolishness - right then, without studying. I did manage to pass.)

Whatever the cause, y'all remember to have a good week. See you next time, right here.

Rodney Ellerbrook and Tiffany Wilks

Wilks-Ellerbrook to exchange vows

Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Riggs of Memphis announce the engagement of their daughter, Tiffany Nicole Wilks, to Rodney William Ellerbrook. Rodney is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Ellerbrook of Clarendon.

The couple plans to wed at the Travis Baptist Church in Memphis on August 7, 2004.

Tell friends what they mean to you before it's too late

With seventeen members the Howardwick Fire Department is growing, and these members need training.

The second and fourth Thursday of each month are regular meeting days. This past Thursday the department took their training to the park and at the same time watered the park. I saw Lee Ann Cook and Jeanie Miller taking their turn on the big water hose on the back of the truck. Way to go, girls. Many times the first responders are the housewives, and they need that training too. With the children playing on the swings and moms and dads on the fire truck, it seemed like a family affair.

Gerald and Sandy Sartain of Dana Drive had friends and neighbors over Saturday for watermelon and tall story telling. Those attending were Jim and Peggy Cockerham, Carl and Penny Lord, Paul and Sue Lord, and Gaylen and Margie Frederiksen. The women were nice and quiet and only told true stories, but those men were competing to see who could tell the tallest one. I think it was a tie between Carl and Gaylen. We all went home laughing and promised to do it again soon.

Have you had a friend in poor health and you keep promising yourself "tomorrow" you would drop by? Well, my tomorrow didn't come. I lost a dear friend this week by the name of Betty Molder, and I didn't tell her how much she meant to me.

Oh, I called her, but that is not the same as seeing her face to face. We were nurses together at the Medical Center where you always knew when Betty was on duty because of the laughter. The residents loved her but knew they had to follow the rules, and there was no skipping a bath or sleeping through breakfast if Betty was their nurse that day. She and Loyd loved to fish, then have those big fish fries and invite Donley County to eat; and I can assure you, no one went home hungry. I will miss her so much.

Goodbye, dear friend. Remember to call at 874-2886 if you have news, a reunion, a watermelon feed, a new baby, someone off to college, or community news of any kind, and we will get it in the paper.

Ward family holds reunion in Hedley

The Ward family of Donley and Hall Counties held their annual family reunion at the school cafeteria in Hedley recently.

Those attending included Mrs. Eunice Ward and Ms. Tonya Smith of Hedley; Elizabeth Ward, Dell and Mureem Graham, Bobby and Nelyn Ward, David and Erma Graham, Leah Byers and children Kendell, Kade, and Kyle, Helen and Karen Crisman, all of Memphis; Jean Wilkes and Shanna, Shauna Salazar with Izak, Zane, and Aubrey, David and Rhonda London, Holly and Lora, all of Amarillo; James and Aaron Ward, Glenn and Wanda Ward, all of Wellington; and Chris and Jamie Ward and their children Erica, Cole, Clay, and Ryan, of Clarendon.

Memphis couple plays bluegrass in Hedley

It rained during the night Friday and again just a little on Sunday. Just enough to get your glasses wet. I don't mind the rain, but I hate to get my glasses wet. It was cool on Saturday and Sunday, but Monday was hot and dry. Some clouds but no moisture.

Somebody told me they saw Evan Bailey with his granddad, Terry. Grand kids are the nicest things I can imagine. I heard one proud grandfather say if he'd known grandchildren were so much fun, he'd have had his first.

Guy, Cathy, and Christian came Friday and I've been enjoying them, especially Christian... and Cathy... and Guy. Christian kept me busy and when I got home from Amarillo Monday, Cathy had cleaned my house. She vacuumed my carpets, cleaned the bathroom, moved the furniture in my bedroom, did the laundry, and washed the dishes. That's the kind of daughter-in-law to have around.

Linda is good to help me, too. And Karen is good to me. She stays pretty busy with two boys and she never fusses when Keith has to take me to Amarillo.

Bill and Juanell Carson visited in Oklahoma during the weekend.

They have great grandchildren to visit there. We missed them at Church Sunday.

We had a nice crowd at church Sunday morning. Phillip Hancock and his family were there. Phillip, brought the message in Gary Boles place. I think Gary was in Houston.

Bill and Tanya Combs brought their guitar and fiddle and played a pretty bluegrass song, but I have forgotten which one it was.

I started to climb into Guy's truck yesterday and didn't get a good hold and fell out flat on my back. I knocked a hole on the back of my head, bruised some ribs, and sprained my ankle. Guy said the knot on the back of my head was almost as big as an egg.

I lost two good friends last week. Betty Molder of Clarendon and Vira Braddock of Memphis. Sympathy is extended to Betty's girls and their families and Vira's boys and their families.

Local youth learn about pizza history

By Mary Ruth Bishop, FCA Agent
Did you know that 670 million pounds of cheese is sold every year? Or that 350 million tons of frozen pizza is sold every year? How about when pizza was first begun?

In 1889 the pizza was especially created for Italian King Umberto and Queen Margherita. The pizza dish named Pizza Margherita began the world of pizza. Pizza is the number two seller of fast food; hamburgers still hold the number one spot.

All this and more is what we learned at Pizza Day on July 22. Maci White, Skyler White, Trevala Dronzek, Jentry Shadle, Audrey Shelton, Ty Tubbs, Ashlyn Tubbs, Addison Warren, and Lauryn Kellas enjoyed a fun filled morning while they learned all about pizza.

Lauryn, 4-H youth leader, helped the group make a pizza game, which they then played in teams. Trevala, Skyler, Maci, and Jentry were the winners. A coloring contest was concluded, and the winners are: Jentry Shadle - fastest finished, Addison Warren - most variation, Maci White - Best Exact Portrayal, Skyler White - most detailed, Audrey Shelton - best use of color, Ashlyn Tubbs - most organized, Trevala Dronzek - most defined, and Ty Tubbs - most original. You can pick up your certificate and prize at the Extension Office.

Each participant made their own pizza and helped with dessert of a fruit pizza. The Food Pyramid (which looks like a slice of pizza!) was discussed as individuals identified the various food groups that the ingredients of the two dishes come from and how the ingredients fit into a balanced diet.

Lauryn Kellas also led the group in a riddle exercise. Kids remember the question: "I can sometimes be light brown or white. I have yellow stuff inside me. I am a protein." the correct answer is eggs! The day was complete as the group learned about loofas and soap. They each made individual soaps in the shape of - what else - pizzas.

Pizza Day was very enjoyable, and we all learned something different and fun. We appreciate Pizza Hut for the donation of the pizza boxes; Kim Kirkland, 4-H parent leader; and Lauryn Kellas, 4-H youth leader.

The next youth event will be the Bicycle Rodeo, August 9. Watch for the registration form and categories in the paper on Aug. 5.

Silver Hairs open legislative session

By Chester L. Cunningham

The Texas Silver Haired Legislature opened its orientation session at 1:30 p.m. July 12, 2004, in Austin. The order of business was to elect officers and conduct orientation for the 2004-2006 biennium beginning September 13, 2004.

The highlight of the session occurred on Tuesday, July 13, when the 10th Texas Silver Haired Legislature was given a police escort to the Capitol to take their oath of office, administered by Secretary of State Geoffrey S. Conner. Following the ceremony, the rest of the day was spent in legislative training in the House of Representatives.

Chris Kyker of Abilene was unopposed and re-elected as Speaker of the House. Incumbent Speaker Pro tem Carlos Higgins from Austin defeated challenger Tom Perkins from Smiley, Texas. Charlotte Parks from Ben Wheeler was unopposed and retained her seat as Deputy Speaker Pro Tem. Barbara Effenberger of Seguin retained her office as Comptroller after a strong challenge from Brigitte Rogers of Sonora. The officers were sworn in by State Attorney General Abbot.

The four Panhandle representatives received the standard two-committee assignments. Alan Abraham of Amarillo was appointed to the Health and Human Resources Committee and the Operations Committee. Betty Trotter of Amarillo was assigned to the Retirement and Aging Committee and the Communications Committee. Libby Cleveland from Dimmitt was assigned to the Education Committee and the Elections and Credentials Committee, where the committee members named her as secretary. Chester Cunningham was assigned to the Finance committee and then elected as Vice Chair of the committee. He will also serve on the Insurance Committee.

In a caucus of the Panhandle representatives, it was determined that Chester Cunningham would represent the Panhandle on the Executive Committee.

The 2004 orientation session closed with an Executive Committee meeting Friday, July 16. The committee adjourned at 11:00 a.m.

Extension service issues regional bug report

Colonies of greenbugs are showing up in a few sorghum fields in and around Donley, Armstrong, Collingsworth, and Briscoe counties, according to an AgriPartner Report from the Texas Cooperative Extension.

Infestations are light at this time but can rapidly increase in mature fields where an adequate canopy provides suitable environment.

Sorghum that has headed needs to be routinely checked for corn earworm and/or fall armyworm that might be feeding in the head particularly during the grain-fill stage.

Sunflowers that are near bloom need to be monitored for sunflower moth. One to two insecticide applications made during the blooming phase of sunflower will be required to adequately protect the plant from this pest.

Cotton fleahoppers and Lygus bugs should no longer be a concern in cotton fields that are into the bloom stage. They may be present but, at this stage, no longer considered to be an economic pest. They could still be a problem in fields that have yet to bloom.

Bollworm egg lays of up to 15,000 per acre have been reported; however, larval counts remain below the economic threshold. Excellent populations of beneficial insects and spiders can likely be credited with keeping the bollworm infestation below the economic threshold.
