Out of Money.

Young's Companion.

To be out of money in a country where scarcely a native, much less a foreigner, can find anything to do to get his bread, is a serious matter.

Some readers will remember his story of his predicament at Lyons, when a letter (long waited for) came, with money in it to replenish his empty pocket.

He relates another instance of similar straits, in the city of Florence, while his two traveling companions were gone to Leghorn to procure the much needed cash upon a banker's draft.

"They were to be absent three or four days, and had left me money enough to live on in the meantime, but the next morning our bill for washing came in, and consumed nearly the whole of it.

As it happened, my friends remained two days longer than I expected, and the last two crazie I had were expended for one day's provisions.

I then decided to try the next day without anything, and actually felt a curiosity to know what one's sensations would be on experiencing two or three days of starvation.

But the experiment was broken off at its commencement by the arrival of the absent ones, in the middle of the following night.

Infantile Curiosity.

The candor of the small boy is occasionally very distressing to his friends and relatives. In the waiting-room of the Austin depot, there was a lady with a small boy, and also a benevolent-looking old gentleman.

"Mister, did God make that round lump on your nose?" "Hush, Johnny," said his mother. "I ain't talking to you, ma, I am talking to this gentleman."

"That's what I say, when?" "What do you mean, little l-o-y," said the old gentleman, losing patience just a little.

"I want to know when God made that lump. He made the nose first, and then put the lump on it afterward, didn't He?"

"Keep quiet, Johnny." "But, ma, I'm not talking to you. God had to make the nose first, before He put the lump on it, for if He made the lump first, He would have no place to put it, would He?"

"The nose was made first," replied the old man, who was a miracle of good nature. "I said so. God made your eyes before He put that lump on your nose, didn't He?"

"Then you saw God put the lump on your nose, didn't you, or did He put it on your nose when you were asleep?" Here the boy's mother managed to get him under control, but he broke out in a fresh place.

"A-are you waiting for the train?" "Yes, my boy." "You are not waiting for the train that went off yesterday, are you?" "No, I am not, sonny."

"I thought not, because if you was, you would get left. But you didn't tell me if you saw God put that lump here his mother shoved her handkerchief in his mouth, and the scene was over.--Texas Siftings.

A Government Skillet. The cool effrontery of many persons who say they have claims on the Government is amusingly caricatured in the following "skillet" from the Arkansas Traveler.

"Look heah, jedge," said a colored man, catering the private office of the United States Judge. "I wants a pension."

"I have nothing to do with pensions." "But you can give me a little advice. All de soldiers what was wounded in de war, ef I understands it, is 'titled ter a pension."

"Well," said the jedge. "I was in de war and was mighty badly hurt, let me tell yer. I was waitin' on my young marster, an' didn't do ter suit him an' he broke my arm wid a skillet."

The Deciples of Hippocrates.

The following poem, written by J. W. Carhart, was read at the banquet of the students of the College of Physicians and Surgeons and of the Woman's Medical College of Chicago, in the Dispensary Hall of the former College, on the evening of Feb. 14th., 1883.

Backward, o'er centuries' misty stream We stretch the emmetropic gaze, And visions, like a restless dream Before us rise of other days.

War flames her red face in the sky And declimates the ranks of pride, Till warm gore swells the current high And nations perish in the tide.

Prayer blent with amulets, to win The Devil from infected sense-- To cure disease and cleanse from sin These priests wrought out with diligence.

Hippocrates, the ancient sage, Appeared, like meteor thwart the gloom The woes of suffering to assuage And rescue victims from the tomb.

Where languish lovers--limps a child, Or wrinkles crimp the brow of age; Where women suffers, unbeguil'd, Or marshall armies clash in rage;

Nor shall music--cannon's boom Inspire them in their walks of gloom Where valorous deeds are done unseen. Nor love of gain, nor pride of name Can thus inspire the martyr's heart;

We honor those who, gone before "Left footprints on the sands of time;" And, as we course along the shore "We'll strive to make our lives sublime."

The loves of Collage, love of truth Shine, like a sun-benighted rays Upon our inexperienced youth And cheered the seniors' somber days.

It has been popularly believed that a person becomes unconscious when falling from a great height; but an Englishman who has been making some experiments in falling--whether with himself or other people is not stated--has come to the conclusion that unless one dies from fear or the nervous shock, he reaches the ground alive, and is not killed by the passage through the air.

"Why, don't you know that the United States don't grant pensions to men wounded in that army?" "Yes, I know dat is de rule, but dis is a 'ceptional case."

"Case de skillet which my young marster broke my arm wid belonged ter de Newfitted States Government. Can't git no money, yer say--can't? Den dar's no wonder dat de country is filled wid calamities. Good day, sah!"

Jay Gould's Departure. Discussing the Question who might be his Successor. Henry Villard. The World Still in the Market. Lenten Sermons. Improved Pulpit Oratory. A Biography of General Dix. Blue Bird's Herding an Early Spring. Epidemics Probable in the City Next Summer.

New York, February 20th. 1883. Jay Gould's proposed temporary retirement from the activity of Wall Street, to make a tour around the world, has naturally caused a great deal of comment, and the question is common on the street, who can take his place as a leader in that battle for wealth should he die. Certainly the Vanderbilts have no chance. They lack breadth of view, attention to detail and energy of execution. From William H., down to the youngest, none of them possess in any way the qualities necessary to make a great operator. Gould's son George is in active training for the position, but although clever, ambitious and a hard worker he is yet too young to be able to wield the sabre de son pere. Among the leading people of the street it is the belief that Henry Villard is the coming man. Although of German birth he is every inch an American. He has a genius for management, and during the past few years he has developed into the most accomplished railway manipulator perhaps, outside of Gould. His schemes are on a large scale, and he therefore has the experience necessary in order. Besides, he has the reputation of being reliable. He has never betrayed his friends, nor has he ever deliberately given one the wrong point. Furthermore he has a horror of law suits and is thus a safe man in every respect. He is one of the principal owners of the Evening Post, and his uprightness can best be judged from the fact that the financial columns of this paper are never used to bolster up any pet schemes as Gould does in the World.

Apropos of the World. It is still in the market, but somehow nobody seems to want it. There is now talk of reducing it to a four page paper and omitting all financial matter and Wall Street gossip, excepting the mere exchange and market reports. Gould seems to have had enough of it.

The Lenten sermons preached this year in the various churches are generally of a high order, much above the average. The preachers as a rule suggest practicable subjects, and therefore obtain practical result. Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix in particular has attracted considerable attention by his lectures on Woman's Duties. The sermons I understand are to be collected and printed in a pamphlet. Dr. Dix is also collecting material for a biography of his father, the late Governor Dix. This should prove an interesting work and a valuable contribution to the history of New York of a century ago.

Our friends on the other side of the North River the New Jerseyites predict that Spring is at hand, or at all events will make its debut much earlier this year than formerly. The reason for this is the advent of blue birds in large flocks. These charming little harbingers of Spring usually come to stay and hence there is every prospect that the terrors of winter are nearly over. And how glad everybody will be in this city. It seems to me that winters in town are getting more disagreeable from year to year. This season Gotham has been literally buried beneath slush. We have a Street Cleaning Department which annually swallows up many millions and yet we have nothing to show for it. With the exception of Broadway and a few very few favored localities, people have not seen the paving stones since the first snow storm. The slush alternately freezes and softens but stays. A physician tells me that hard times are in store for us this summer, in consequence of this shameful neglect of the authorities. Malaria and typhus will carry off thousands of victims.

"The ground," said he, "could not have been better prepared for an epidemic, if Commissioner Coleman and the contractors had made a league with death against the welfare of New York."

Washington Letter.

From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, February 19, 1883. The open history of the late memorable debate in the House on the tariff bill has been written verbatim in the Congressional Record; it has been criticised from standpoints as various as the interests which it touches, but there is occult history of legislation that will never be published until the recording angel furnishes the copy. Many members of Congress know this, but they think the publication will be too late to affect their political fortunes. It is believed that the majority in the House has abandoned all intention of passing a tariff bill this session, from the fact that Ways and Means Committee have directed their Chairman to move to suspend the rules to-day and pass a bill to reduce internal revenue taxation that will accord with a bill for the same purpose now pending in the Senate. If the Democrats wish to do so they can with about fifty tariff reform Republicans pass the Senate tariff bill and it begins to look as though this may be done.

A bill has been passed by the House adding one hour to the days labor for half the year in all the Government Offices. If this measure can be enforced it will be equivalent to the addition of about 5000 clerks to the number already employed and it will not cost the Government a cent. But how to make them work, that is the question. I would suggest that it be forbidden to bring novels or newspapers into any of the Government Offices, and that conversation on all subjects, not actually necessary to the business of the Office, be prohibited. If these rules had been observed the passage of the additional hour bill would never have been thought of. There is no honest well informed man but knows that the present clerical force could do all the work at their desks by working steadily three hours a day. And no honest well informed man but knows that they have always failed to do it by idling, gossiping and reading novels the greater part of the time they are in office. The Government clerks consider this imposition of an additional hour a great hardship, but he has brought it on himself, by neglect of work. The work got behind, and the Chiefs of bureau, dear simple souls, could think of no remedy but to get more clerks. So they said to Congress: "We pray you give us some more clerks." But Mr. Cannon to whom the request was referred replied by the passage of a bill, "give us more work with the clerks you already have." If Mr. Cannon will turn Democrat he shall have my support for the presidency of the United States.

Secretary of the Navy, Chandler, has been trying to have the Revenue Vessels and service turned over to the Navy Department, (this service is now under the control of the Secretary of the Treasury), but Secretary Folger argues against, and appears to have the better of the argument. From statistics it appears that the vessels of the revenue marine, in the course of the last ten years, have sailed 2,150,000 miles, boarded and examined 284,000 vessels, seized 21,000 vessels for violations of laws, assisted 1800 vessels in distress, and saved 741 lives.

Although the amount of work performed has steadily increased from year to year, the annual cost of the service has steadily decreased from $1,293,000 in 1868 to $876,000 in 1882. In seventeen years the navy has dwindled from 675 vessels to 139 vessels of all classes, although more than $20,000,000 have been expended every year for its maintenance. There are in the Navy 880 officers not required to officer the ships, who draw annually in salaries nearly $2,000,000. In view of such facts, the reasons for the proposed transfer should be carefully examined.

An old nurse says: Dr. Acker's English Remedy is best for cough, croup or diphtheria. At druggists.

It seems from the following from the Dallas Herald that the defectiveness of the mail service in the State is not entirely confined to the Panhandle portion, but to even the thickly settled regions where the convenience of railroad transportation is more common than even our mail and freight outfits:

"Complaints of the defective mail service in Texas are heard all over the state, and it looks as if those whose duty it is to see that the mails are carried quickly and delivered promptly have forgotten our state altogether. The matter is one of vast importance, and negligence and carelessness about the Texas service are simply intolerable and inexcusable. We have ourselves, in many occasions, failed to receive mail matter directed to us from such points as Corsicana, and other towns equally as near, until three days after the matter was mailed. This is simply gross neglect on the part of post-officials somewhere. Where is the fault? Who is to blame? We should like for some of the inspectors and traveling agents of the department to save us the trouble of investigating the matter for our own protection."

The "Star-Routers" are much put out by the confession of Rardell. It is hoped that the trial will receive an impetus that will result in its completion at no far distant date.

The Sunbeam comes to our exchange table this week, published at Dallas, Texas, by Miss H. Martindale. The bright and interesting little sheet is a welcome visitor and we honor it by a prominent position on our list.

Eleven freight teams loaded with about 45,000 lbs. mostly corn, for Van Horn. Mr. Bowers was engineer of the train having secured the corn below for Van Horn. The outfit presented a lively appearance as it rolled into town, the train was the largest that has come in since Lee & Reynolds' outfit brought in the wire for Goodnight's fence last summer.

Messrs Phink, Pemberton and Martindale are among the pleasant callers from the bar O ranch. Messrs Phink and Pemberton are now engaged in hauling corn from their store house in town out to headquarters.

The Planters Journal, published at Vicksburg, Miss., in regard to the two great questions that interest the people of that section of the country most, says:

The West and South will stand together upon these two great issues: Improvement of the Mississippi river and "tariff for revenue only."

Charley Lugton sailed for Mobeetic Monday morning to be absent several weeks, having finished his work. Charley left his parting words indelibly stamped upon an old envelope on our table and we will preserve the precious little document until his return.

Have you inflammatory sore throat, stiff joints, or lameness from any cause whatever? Have you rheumatic or other pains in any part of the body? If so use Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. It is the most wonderful internal and external remedy known to medical science.

We caution all persons not to buy the extra large packs of dust and ashes now put up by certain parties and called condition powders. They are utterly worthless. Buy Sheridan's Cavalry Condition Powders if you buy any; they are absolutely pure and immensely valuable.

"If the Legislature abolishes the office of Chaplain," says the Tombstone, Ari., Epitaph, "some of the members will lose an opportunity of hearing a minister of the gospel for the first time."

Dr. J. W. Carhart who is now in Chicago, and to whom we have been indebted for our Chicago Letters will soon close his studies at the Medical College and start for Clarendon. The Doctor has put in a hard winters work and he will welcome the change from the College walls to the free air of our Texas plains.

Mr. R. C. M. Selden, from the Diamond F ranch, was in town last week. He left in company with J. H. Parks for the ranch Sunday morning. Mr. Selden is an old Mississippian and comes from what was known last year as the flooded districts and the descriptions of the flood by which he was a loser are interesting.

Exercises were held at the school house Friday evening that were of a very interesting character, consisting of speeches and class exercises by the scholars, conducted by their teacher Mrs. J. H. Combs. The exercises as a whole were a success, and the scholars rendered their parts well, and show the extent and success to which the work is being carried on.

The latest feat of gormandising is now in progress in New York. Two men have wagered $400,00 to the one who shall eat the greatest number of pigs heads in thirty days. It is impossible to see any sense in the affair unless the parties include their own heads in the contract, if the latter be the case the world will be satisfied. Somebody says the "fools are not all dead yet."

It is a source of regret to the subscribers of the Panhandle, in this section at least, that the paper has not an extra "outside" in which to insert some of its "extra" matter instead of "repeating"—on both sides, as might have been seen in one of its late issues.

The past two weeks has been a busy season at the White House, having been crowded to its utmost capacity with the many visitors from near town and abroad. This patronage speaks well for the excellent management of its proprietor Mr. B. H. White, whose reputation as a landlord is known in every ranch in this region. Among the recent arrivals this week are: Thos. Moore, Mr. Black, Charley Brown, Jno. Bagley, J. E. Eldridge and G. H. McKee of Delaware Co., Iowa, C. J. Howard and W. D. Anderson, of Tascosa, Jim Ferguson, E. H. Cone, Jno. Ross, Tom Davidson, Sam Dyer, Elck Nail, G. R. McCurry, A. E. Walker,

Governor Ireland is in favor of Texas laying violent hands on what is known as Greer county, which is in dispute between Texas and Indian Territory. There is something very refreshing in the idea of poor, plundered Texas, that has been the prey of land sharks for these many years, going into the land stealing business herself. Texas, however, large as it is, will have to be enlarged. Land certificates have been issued in excess of the public land, hence, to avoid future complications, Texas will either have to extend the State out into the Gulf of Mexico, or walk off with Greer county. We favor the latter alternative. When a State has been robbed as much as Texas has, she has a legal right to steal—Siftings.

The prevailing beautiful weather will hasten the coming spring apparently, and ere long the rising grass will show up green on the surrounding hillsides, relieving the tired sight from the dull and sombre aspect of the bare brown hills. The enterprising cowmen are already beginning to make arrangements for the coming general round that must commence as soon as good grass will permit hard work in the saddle. An immense amount of hard work is anticipated, all hands are making arrangements to fly at it.

We are indebted to the Dodge Times for the following bit of news that is of interest to ranchmen:

George B. Loving, president of the Texas Investment Company, sailed for Europe this week, where he goes in the interest of his company. Loving is doing a grand work for Texas in this enterprise, one that will bring thousands of European capitalists to our shores.

THERE'S NO PLACE LIKE HOME.—More especially if there is a pretty girl in it, and you are seated by her side upon the sofa, and the old folks are gone away, and the grate is well heated—but a home where Swayne's Ointment is not known is no home at all. Itching, Blind, Bleeding and Ulcerated Piles and all Eruptions of the Skin, flee before it. For sale by all the leading druggists, at only a trifling cost. Try it, and you will like it.

A number of persons were misled by the Tariff Commission report, and on a casual reading of that report believed it did reduce the tariff. It is safe to say no man who has considered that report with any care now believes it makes any material or satisfactory reduction. It is a scheme to postpone reduction, and it will receive the support only of men who believe in "protection for protection's sake." It is estimated that the surplus revenue of the government under the present tariff is $150,000,000 and the proposed revision will not reduce it more than $10,000,000. In this connection it is said that the President has expressed a determination to call an extra session of Congress, if there is not a revision of the tariff.—N. O. States.

Address CARHART & CO. CLARENDON, TEXAS.

Copies of the Legislative Record are accompanied this week by a copy of Governor Ireland's Inaugural Address delivered in joint session of eighteenth legislature. The lack of space in our columns will not admit of its publication in full but a short synopsis of it will be of interest. The Governor treats tersely and in a brief manner each topic of his address. He opens with a short review of the early history of the State, when it was a part of the Spanish kingdom, noting in a brief manner its rapid development from its early settlement up to the present time. In speaking of the industries and immense resources of the state he does not forget to mention that portion known as the Panhandle to which the world is largely indebted for its immense supply of beef. He compares the public lands of Texas to the gold fields of Australia and California in respect to richness and desirability. His remarks strongly favor the preservation of the school fund and its investment to a better advantage than heretofore and discourages the wasteful sale of the public domain. He recommends the passage of laws regulating the railroad systems in the State. In regard to the frontier he says: "That the time is rapidly approaching when we shall have no frontier, in the sense of an indian border constantly subject to the incursions of hostile savages, is certain; and yet those familiar with our borders and the enforcement of our laws, will readily concede the fact that the time has not arrived for the abandonment of our forces."

The Governors suggestions in regard to the judiciary favor the increase of salary to prosecuting officers that the best legal talent may be had. On the question of the Civil Reform he enlarges considerably and his statements on that subject are full of good sense. Many other subjects to numerous to mention were presented. He closed by paying a fine tribute of respect to the honorable chief to whom he is successor.

The Short Horn Breeders Association met at Topeka, Kan., on the 16th. The following officers were elected for 1883:

President, Gen. J. C. Stone; Vice President, O. W. Bile; Secretary and Treasurer, E. M. Sheldon, Executive Committee, C. E. Allen, G. W. Glick, J. B. McAfee. The meeting was opened by an address by Gov. Glick and followed by the annual address of the President of the association.

T. H. Wilson. Montague county, is here to buy a big string of one and two year old steers. He don't like prices but, as bitter as the pill may be, will have to swallow it, or go without. Young steers are cheaper now than they will be in the next year, and don't you forget it—Stock Journal.

Hardy Cattle.

Result of Proper Handling—Don't Pamper.

National Live Stock Journal.

Your correspondent, Hon. A. B. Allen, "hits the nail upon the head" sure, in the last number, about the hardness of different breeds. My experience, without exception, points that way, as also does my entire observation. I have raised and matured cattle, in breeding from the purest scrub to the purest Bates Short-Horn. In health I could see no advantage of the one sort over the other, when parents were healthy. I think it probably where, for a number of generations, the ancestors of a calf have been highly "pampered," even if entirely healthy on both sides, that it will not be scarcely as hardy, when mode of handling is changed, as the calf of less indulged ancestry; but the difference will be so little that many would not notice it, and in the second generation from such pampered ancestry, it would take a physician to tell the difference as to the health and hardness if any.

Mr. Allen, I am satisfied, has it right. The manner in which calves are reared to maturity determines what they can endure. The Short-horn, the Hereford, the Angus or any other beef breed, if forced or pampered in raising, will equally "go to pieces" as the expression is, if turned out on our vast plains to gather their living as best they may, and especially so during such winters as 1880 and 1881. So also would our mountain scrubs and unadulterated Texans, if forced or pampered in the same way in their raising.

"Colonas" criticism upon our Hereford friends is, to my mind very just. I can bear him out, also, about inbred cattle, as I think I have the cow here now the closest bred to Bates' (he the prince of inbreeders) of any cow in England or America. She has raised her calf this year, as last; dried off in October, about the last; has not had an ear of corn or bunch of hay this winter, or been under shelter, and yet, with grass alone, and a little corn-stalk fodder when the snow is on the ground, she is good beef, as also her two year old heifer handled the same way. I have others of the same sort, but mention this one, as the sire and dam of her grandmother were both raised by the prince of inbreeders, and her sire and grand-sire of the same identical blood—that unadulterated Dutchess blood—that those who own none of it like so well to describe as consumptive, and with all sorts of faults.
