The trouble is that too many members of our Legislature are willing to use their hands and feet, but appear to be paralyzed from the neck up.

Great Hidalgo.

Hidalgo county, Texas is said to have more bonded indebtedness; more convictions for violation of public trust; shipped more citrus fruit; been given more scandalous publicity; had more high water and raised more political hell than any other county in the state.

Financially Swamped.

According to state auditor Moore Lynn, Texas and her local units owe a net bonded indebtedness of $712,710,035, or $122.36 per capita based on the census of 1930. At present prices, it would require a freight train 1173 miles in length to haul enough crated eggs to pay the bill.

Qualification.

Our idea of a man to head the new West Texas state that is to be, would be a man who is clean inside and out; who neither looks up to the rich nor down on the poor; who can lose without squealing and win without bragging; who is considerate of women, children and old people; who is too brave to lie, too generous to cheat and too sensible to loaf, and who takes his share of the world's goods and lets other people have theirs; speaks only of his enemies in their presence; and has a deep-rooted conception of and reverence for the history and traditions of our section.

In addition to the above qualifications, we would like to know that he is a name-blown-in-the-bottle, guaranteed not to rip, crack or ravel hombre who would use his head for something else besides keeping his backbone from unraveling. In other words, an honest-to-god-he-man, if you can get the drift of our idea. We're simply burned out on the other kind of men who have been trying to run the old home state.

Blissless Osculations.

In the column of the "World's Worst Hick" of the Moore County News of last week, Editor Holcomb divests himself of a self-conceived social duty thusly: "I'd just about as soon kiss my brother—if I had one—after he had done a day's work in a cotton patch and was smelling like a Louisiana nigger than kiss a gal in men's pants."

Conducting a bureau of pulchritudinous inhibitions in his section, Editor Holcomb on previous occasion had confined his remarks to a mere slap on the wrist. His latest effulgent edict will likely be classed as a "swat in the face with a wet rag" by the feminine followers of 1933 fashion modes in that section of country where the weather appears to always be in a hurry and the editors slow to change their opinions.

So far as Moore county is concerned, the craze for wearing men's habiliments seems to have struck a snag. A few of the more daring misses of the smallish cities like Dalhart, Channing and Tascosa have been known within recent months to have assumed sufficient brazen effrontery to the extent of wearing pajamas, which is a fantastic garb hardly creditable to their good sense. That is evidently the reason they changed to men's pants. Or is Editor Holcomb warning in advance that there may be no disappointments in Dumas?

We did not know that kissing was compulsory in Moore county, or is this blissful custom confined to the corporate limits of Dumas by an ordinance passed by city dad's who preferred to have husbands spend their money and time in their home town rather than meander off down to Dalhart where John McCarty has simply built highways letting social customs go to the demerition bow-woos? We're really interested in knowing since vacation time is near.

Years ago while drawing money from the XIT's during his single and sillier days, the writer often made bovine "surveys" while accompanied by feminine beauties of God's noblest creations. They wore chaps, boots and spurs to say nothing of sombrero and silk bandana. A cursory glance at her habiliments inventoried not one pair of pants but two. One pair abstract, the other concrete, with divided skirts between. Unsophisticated youth in the halcyon days of the pioneer confined his osculations to a limited area, and was not given to explorations such as appears to trouble our erudite friend of Dumas today.

Delving back into the dark recesses of fashion history, real old timers will recall the hoops era of the sixties. A woman in hoops was a most outlandish looking creature of all their fantastic idea of dress.

This monstrous garb was succeeded by the bustle of the 70's that lasted up into the 80's. Their idea of pulchritude was the deformity of the female figure divine. The 90's saw the deflation of the bustle. It had been such a disguise that it had become an alibi for a lot of bad form. This style passed reluctantly and women began to emphasize figure by bringing in the wasp waist. Protesting flesh, that had to go somewhere was pushed up and down by hour-glass corsets until some women boasted, "Really, you know, but it's perfectly ridiculous, but my belt won't go around my head!" Even as she spoke other women made note of the size of a galaxy of pads above that little waist in the front, and below in the back and to the sides.

The going down of the bustle, with its yards of draperies, must have done some harm to the manufacturers of dress materials but there remained enough to keep the mills running. The long, full skirts that swept the floor and the unpaved streets were 10 to 12 yards around the bottom. They were gored, biased and goteled and back-breakingly lined and interlined. Above the tiny waistline stiff, bulging pseudo-bosoms were covered with ribbons and bows and bugles, gew-gaws and doo-dads and every unnecessary gadget that could find space to hang. Clothes were very, very feminine.

Those of middle age today will recall that girls ate very little of the Sunday dinner and no supper at all simply because there was no place to put it with that wasp waist fashion squeezing the daylight out of her.

decree of fashion of that period penalized the health of at least three generations.

Anyhow, the clothes of the young lady of 1890 were very enticing to the gentlemen who came calling in black cutaway coat, flowered vest, puffed cravat, trousers of a loud stripe and a top hat. Using the small boy's definition, he resembled an "accident looking for a place to happen."

And, by the way, "women" were "ladies" in those days. To have referred to them otherwise, would have seemed coarse and uncouth. When ladies took off the corset early in the twentieth century, they broadened out into women. Women today wear undies, but a "lady" wore underwear and lots of it. A long-sleeved long-legged union suit, then a corset, then the fancy corset cover and nice large, voluminous, muslin embroidered ruffled drawers and a chemise on top of all that junk. Nor was that all. She next stacked on a short petticoat, one or two long ruffled petticoats and still another, usually of taffeta, highly starched to create a swishy-rattle. At this stage she felt that she might be sufficiently covered to put on her dress.

Now in 1933 it begins to look very much as if the women were to become "ladies" again. There is a mighty struggle going on in fashion centers. Our women are undecided whether to continue to accept the fashion dictates of a sissified Frenchman, or throw the whole mess overboard and don men's pants and be done with it.

In behalf of the feminine population of Moore county, we have gone to a lot of trouble interviewing ladies of all ages—admitted and otherwise—that we might give friend Holcomb first-hand knowledge of the barbarisms of fashion within the present generation. (Fashion and suicide were synonymous terms farther back.) If he will spend his vacation on the beach this summer, view the thousands of beauties garbed in rubber bathing suits of greatly curtailed dimensions, he will rush home and offer Moore county women folks men's pants as a premium on subscriptions for the Moore County News.

ODE TO A NAG

Oh, horse, you are a wonderful thing, no horns to honk, no bells to ring, no license buying every year. No sparks to miss, no gears to slip you start yourself; no clutch to slip. No gas bills mounting every day to steal the joy of life away. Your inner tubes are all OK and thank the Lord they stay that way. Your spark plugs never miss and fussy, your motor never makes us fuss. Your frame is good for many a mile, your body never changes style. Your wants are few and easy met, you have something on the auto yet.—Arkansas Highways.

POEME OF PROTEST

When things waxed tough not long ago and business everywhere was slow, you may recall that right away we took a slashing cut in pay. And prices quickly followed suit, our vegetables and milk and fruit, and other daily needs of life were also quick to meet the knife. The clothes we wear upon our backs were next to feel the axe; our radios and our machines were also put within our reach. The landlord promptly cut his rent to keep his tenant well content and even taxes, well-known curse, were cut somewhat to meet our purse. Our shoes and shaves, our drinks and fags, all bore the new depression tags, and even all the good M. D.'s put on their masks and cut their fees. In fact when wages took a drop, the only birds who failed to chop their wartime prices if you please, were all the big utilities! We may be wrong, as we have said, yet we can't get it through our head why these concerns can't fall in line and take their loss with yours and mine. Can you bring forth a good excuse why telephones should not reduce? If I am wrong, as I may be, will someone please enlighten me? So here I sit and here I'll wait in hopes someone will set me straight and show me why I'm treated rough because I'm forced to use their stuff! And in the meantime I insist, I do resent that iron fist. —Not by Walt Mason.

TEMPLE OF TRUTH
By the Apostle

The above excellent photo was taken of the Apostle just as our good friend V. V. Johnston stepped into the office armed with a large hunk of good old Jersey beefsteak. Know it was Jersey because the fat was tinged with yellow giving it that wonderful color so much admired by Doc Howard. The flavor was up to par and the first twenty pounds satisfied the inmates of the Apostolic poor farm from 6 p. m. to 8 a. m. next day. One person did not eat 20 pounds, it took four of us to down it at one meal.

The College Hill Widow says the reason so many marriages are a failure is because no house is big enough for two people who did not get spanked enough when they were small.

And over at Hereford last week a man forgot he was married when there came a rap on his door, and the poor devil jumped out of the second story window. And what is more, it is claimed that he did not take time to raise the window.

The young lady who heard that a certain meat was devoured with "avidity", said she would like to try a bottle of the same stuff on her meat some time. That reminds us of the young man who stated that he was "seized with lethargy." The hotel lady became greatly offended informing the ingrate that "she had not seen a bug in the hotel for a year."

ming birds choke rattlesnakes and pink elephants crawl out of boots, but the old mountain stood as a faithful sentinel with nary a wobble. It's different now. Last week the mountain again started for the river while belching fish, shells and sand. That was too much for the scientists who rushed out of Denver and made a minute examination to ascertain in the cause. Fourteen long-whiskered gents held a consultation and came to the conclusion that the mountain took the jitters and became nauseated when the Dagoes planted their spring crop of garlic.

In explaining the results that her husband had gotten from taking reducing salts, she explained that the battleship tattooed on his chest while in the navy, was no larger than a row boat at present.

Some folks want to be so up-to-date that they borrow trouble from next year.

The Apostle is indebted to Miss Sizzie Snodgrass for another famous family remedy. This recipe is famed as a cure for Asthma. Stand the patient up against a post. (No don't shoot.) With a hammer and staples tack the hair against the post. Cut the hair off as close to the scalp as possible. Under no circumstances allow the patient to look back at the hair hanging to the post. Recovery is assured in 10 days if the patient lives. (P. S. (which means potato salad) The man hasn't a blamed thing to do with the success of this well known East Indian remedy, known as a combination of plant, mineral and animal.)

A woman is said to be happiest after 35. This is because she has a husband, or knows that she isn't going to get one. In either case, she's resigned.

The wives used to ask if their hats were on straight. Just look at the danged things as they are worn now.

The Bible tells us of ancient times and a land of milk and honey. All we hear about these days is "silk and money."

A bunch of niggers down in East Texas have found room to criticize their pastor just like some white folks. It seems their pastor bought a new jitney. A white friend inquired about the disturbance and one old colored brother said: "Boss, de phason yuster preach Christ and him crucified, but since he got de cah, he preach "money an' hit multiplied."

A friend is one who can look beyond your broken down gate of imperfections and see the flowers blooming in your yard of good intentions.

Some years ago when the first blind jitneys came out, a Missouri man came out here looking for a location. He was taken over the country and in due course of time saw a patch of loco. He was informed that the weed was "wild alfalfa" and was in the act of displacing native grass in most places. A chaparral bird ran across the road and the stranger, in reply to his question, was informed that the pest was a "bird of paradise." Passing a 2000 pound hereford bull, the stranger admired the bull very much, but was promptly informed that the bull was a mere calf just thrown in the weaning pasture the day before. Nearing Salt Fork, it was discovered that the river was bank full. While crossing the bridge the stranger commented on the flood until Ed

Fox turned around and said: "Flood h-l, that's just some bird up the creek draining his radiator."

While in town discussing the weather a few days ago, Mart M. McCracken told of an incident during the severe cold spell last winter when a cow froze to death while he was milking her. He milked three gallons of ice cream before he discovered that she was rigid as a rock. He left her standing until in March when she fell down during the spring thaw. He heard of several others that froze standing up, but no one had presence of mind enough to milk them and capitalize on the proposition.

Quite a number are fishing in the Lelia lakes now, some coming from as far away as Borger. Fishing at best is a delusion, many times an illusion and in either case surrounded by liars in wet clothing with a sunburn complexion and a strong appetite. Fishing, either as a vocation or avocation, is designed to do no more than to develop rheumatics and accustom men to associate with worms and more liars.

Fishermen are called Nimrods. Nim is from the Latin meaning "dumb", and "rod" is from the Sanscrit meaning "all wet." Fish are divided into four general classes: Fresh water, salt water, store and conversational. Fishermen are divided into several classes of which Coach Burton, Lester Boykin and Ira Merchant are a fair sample. Salt water fishing alone is designed for the protection of the more violent cases of "fishanity." If they fall in, they won't sink. The only evidence of sanity crops out in the belief of the salt water fisherman that fish have sense enough to appreciate bait on a hook that a fish can eat.

Fresh water fishermen, however, believe that all fish are as foolish as a member of the legislature, or a fellow who puts sugar on his eggs. On rare occasions will he put real bait on a hook, but generally delights in rowing a round in a lake with a brief case filled with tin, copper and brass junk brightly painted with which he attempts to fool the fish. Some of these baits are called spinners. They look like a tin lid slightly bent and a dab of rouge and a spatch of horse hair tangled up together. They may look like a fly to some, but they never fool a fly, and very few fish unless he is a speed demon. Other baits look like carrots, cucumbers or dill pickles with a spring rash. Some have brightly colored spangles resembling athletic medals and are supposed to be devoured either with or without avidity by fish of the jellybean and flapper type found going through life without any purpose in view except to come away from some place. He got the idea when he saw a hungry fish swallow a suspender buckle in a private fish pond. Some baits look like a combination of a red fireman's shield attached to a pair of roller skates and then bradded to an egg beater. These kind are dragged along mountain streams at a rate of 40 miles an hour. The temper of the fisherman at the close of the test is determined by the amount of 3-point-2 imbibed. The average fish care about as much for either as a politician does his constituents 30 minutes after the polls close.

About the most shocking thing of the week was when Mr. Hugh Brown wrote into the veterinary department for a remedy to stop his horse slobbering. The reply gave explicit directions in one sentence: "Teach him to spit."

A certain man in this town is alleged to have paid poll taxes for a bunch of his renters in order that they might vote for Sterling. When the votes were counted, every one is said to have voted for Ferguson. We could not tell just who it is because it humiliates him to realize how foolish an old man can get sometimes.

3 RULES big help to BOWELS

What a joy to have the bowels move like clockwork, every day! It's easy, if you mind these simple rules of a famous old doctor:

- 1. Drink a big tumblerful of water before breakfast, and several times a day.
 - 2. Get plenty of outdoor exercise without unduly fatiguing yourself.
 - 3. Try for a bowel movement at exactly the same hour every day.
- Everyone's bowels need help at times, but the thing to use is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. You'll get a thorough cleaning-out, and it won't leave your insides weak and watery. This family doctor's prescription is just fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin, and other helpful ingredients that couldn't hurt a child. But how it wakes up those lazy bowels! How good you feel with your system rid of all that poisonous waste matter.

SAYS NEW TIRE OFFERS EIGHT IMPROVEMENTS

Eight important improvements in construction are embodied in the new 1933 Pathfinder automobile tire, according to Joe Holland, local Goodyear Dealer who has recently received his initial shipment of these tires.

"Heading the list of outstanding features is thirty per cent longer average tread wear by actual factory test," said Mr. Holland.

"With a tread that is 20 per cent thicker and 20 per cent higher in tread block design, Goodyear tire engineers have made this extra mileage possible," he continued.

The new tire has full center traction, more shoulder non-skid and prised sidewalls.

New styling, full oversizing and improved design, according to Mr. Holland class the new tire as the smartest looking product at its price that he has ever handled.

"Incidentally, the Goodyear Company has built more than 17 million Pathfinder tires since the original design was introduced several years ago," said Mr. Holland, "and these have established an enviable reputation among thrifty buyers everywhere."

EGG LAYERS IN CONTEST

International Competition at A Century of Progress

Courtesy American Poultry Journal

An aerial view of Chicago Century of Progress which will include an International Egg Laying Contest. The artist's sketch in the right foreground shows the detail of the Poultry Exhibit.

Millions of city folks along with millions of their country cousins will have the opportunity to see at first hand the operation of modern poultry plants at the Century of Progress Exposition at Chicago, May 28th to October 29th.

More than 3,000 of the best producing hens in the country will be entered in an International Egg Laying Contest under the auspices of the National Poultry Council.

The American public is not consuming the number of eggs annually that our Canadian neighbors are, according to the poultry officials. Harry C. Wood, Manager of the International Egg Laying Contest at the Century of Progress, states that Canadians eat 86 more eggs per capita than do U. S. citizens.

"One of the purposes in conducting this exhibit," says Mr. Wood, "is to make millions of new friends for the poultry industry. Also we want to demonstrate in a practical way that good quality in eggs really means."

In this effort to prove the producing ability of hens kept under proper conditions and fed according to proper feeding methods the Official Rules Committee of the Contest has decided upon an Official Egg Laying Mash and Scratch Grain which must be fed to all birds entered. After an exhaustive search for a feed that would meet all requirements the committee selected Purina Breeder Egg Chowder and Purina Hen Chow.

Thus the exhibition of the poultry people will not only be recreational but informative, and as such

COUNTY SCHOOL NEWS

Report on Legislation by State Teachers Association. The House of Representatives has passed the following measures but the Senate has not voted them to date:

The total cigarette tax has been given to schools. A large portion of a graduated oil tax will go into school fund.

A measure to enforce the gasoline and cigarette tax better. An income tax bill.

These measures it is believed if adopted by the Senate will yield revenue sufficient to furnish revenue for a per capita of $16 next year. The House will not attempt to pass any more revenue measures for schools until the Senate deals with these measures already sent to it by the house. The logic of the situation is such that a sales tax bill will not be considered seriously by the House until the Senate may have acted upon the measures already present.

The eSenate has passed an emergency appropriation bill to enable all the tuition due the high schools from rural districts this year and this to be paid. This bill is now before the House.

Come As You Are Men's Bible Class Enjoys Social

The Come As You Are, Men's Bible Class, enjoyed themselves at a get-together social in the basement of the First Christian church, Tuesday night. Rev. W. E. Ferrell, the teacher of the class had charge of the program, which was very unique. The price of admission was "One Bible Question."

Everyone present put a question in the box and the program consisted of answering these questions. A good time was had by all and many questions of importance were discussed and much information gained. After the Bible lesson, the class was served a generous helping of three kinds of ice cream, hot coffee and cookies. The class will hold similar meetings every month from now on.

SIDELIGHTS
By Marvin Jones

Member of Congress from Texas

I am convinced that a controlled expansion of the currency will not only materially increase farm prices but that it is essential to complete national recovery. The dollar is supposed to be a measure of values—a medium of exchange. We often speak of using dollars to purchase commodities. That depends upon which side of the bargain the trader is located. One man uses money to purchase wheat. The farmer uses wheat to purchase money. When one borrows money to be repaid in the future, it is essential to fairness that the value of that dollar remain substantially the same, measured in the terms of the general commodity price level.

Here is where the hitch comes. Translated into farm commodities, the dollar is worth twice what it was worth a few years ago. The private debts of America run into staggering billions. It is impossible to pay these debts with dollars of the increased value of today. Yet the obligation rests not only upon the farmer but upon other producers and upon manufacturers to pay these debts with greatly appreciated dollars. This is responsible for a great deal of the grief and stagnation from which the country has been suffering.

The strange part about this whole situation is that the debts we owe, we owe to each other. Not a dollar is owed abroad. Yet both agriculture and commerce have been chained and almost destroyed by the high-priced dollar.

The credit of the country has been so greatly contracted that the only practical way to offset it is through an adequate supply of money on a sound basis.

Currency and credit are like other commodities. When they are plentiful they are low in price. When they are scarce they are high in price.

Of course, no one wants printing press money. On the other hand, no thinking person wants money so high-priced that it becomes a hindrance rather than an aid to commerce and exchange.

Foreign countries have, by revaluing their unit of money on a lower basis, practically destroyed the market of the surplus farm products of America.

Any expansion should be properly controlled. Germany went to the extreme by increasing the volume of currency to such an extent as to practically cancel all debts. This was her deliberate purpose. For the last three years we have been going to the other extreme by contracting currency and credit to such an extent as to make payment of debts practically impossible. France, on the other hand, took the middle position, revaluing the franc on such a basis as to make payment of debts possible and yet at the same time increasing to a reasonable degree the farm and general commodity price level.

Through a reasonable increase in the volume of the currency, which can be kept on a sound basis, the prices of farm commodities can be materially increased, debts can be paid, and conditions restored.

Money is the life's blood of the nation. One might have a perfect body, but if he had only half enough blood he would suffer torture. On the other hand, if he had too much blood he might suffer from high blood pressure. If he has a sufficient amount of blood his health conditions become ideal.

Properly controlled expansion of the currency merely means restoration to the normal flow of commerce and trade—a restoration of commodity prices to the point where they would be fair to everyone. Such a step is essential to the proper working out of the different steps in the President's program for national recovery.

The action of the President in approving an amendment granting authority to restore the currency to a proper basis had had a very fine effect on the general commodity price level. The Speaker has designated me as one of the conferees to consider this amendment when it comes to the House. I am in hearty accord with its purposes and expect to urge early adoption by the House. I believe it will do more than any one thing to restore confidence and to bring back prosperity.

THERE IS MORE STRAIGHT THINKING NOW

The following conversation actually took place between a high school senior and a boy who had been out of high school two years:

John: "I have absolutely wasted two of the best years of my life, and the tragic thing about it all is that I did not appreciate the fact until I did a little straight thinking about a month ago."

Henry: "What do you mean, John? You have been getting ten dollars a week ever since you left high school. You board at home and have plenty of money for your clothes and amusements."

John: "True enough, I have been getting ten dollars a week and I suppose I might go on getting ten dollars a week for the rest of my life if I should continue on my present job. It took me less than half a day to learn my work. Since that, I have been a machine. There is no chance for advancement, nor do I have any hold on the job; any one else with two hands and a reasonable amount of sense can do my work as well as I can do it. So you see, I am exactly where I was when I finished high school. I have no more money and my experience has been worth nothing to me.

"Had I taken a course in some good business college just after I finished high school, I would have been far ahead of what I am today both financially and from the standpoint of valuable experience."

Many thousands of young men and women have had the same tragic experience, and, unfortunately, many more will do likewise.

The thoughtful young person will do the wise thing and enter the Tyler Commercial College and School of Business Administration, at Tyler, Texas, for one of their Complete Business Courses and let them train him thoroughly and assist him to find employment which will pay him ten times as much as John received in his little makeshift job.

or Pennsylvania's costliest crude . . .

WE don't presume to tell you which motor oil gives you best results—Mid-continent or Pennsylvania. But we can prove to you that in these two classes Sinclair Motor Oils are the finest that Nature and science together have produced.

Sinclair Opaline Motor Oil is refined from crude oils, mellowed and filtered for at least 80 million years; it is a blend of the very oldest Mid-continent crudes, including the famous Cambro-Ordovician crude taken from a mile and a quarter below the surface in Oklahoma.

Sinclair Pennsylvania Motor Oil is a product of the Devonian Age of a hundred million years ago. Sinclair Pennsylvania is refined 100% from Bradford-Allegany crude oil—a crude so rich in lubricating quality that every barrel commands an extra price. (See crude oil prices in any petroleum journal.) Both of these splendid motor oils undergo a special treatment in the Sinclair refineries. Sinclair Opaline and Sinclair Pennsylvania are not only de-waxed—they are also freed from heavy, sluggish, non-lubricating petroleum jelly at as low as 60° F. below zero. Containing no petroleum jelly, the lubricating body of Sinclair Motor Oils is absolutely genuine and will not thin out in engine heat.

Experience will tell you quickly why Sinclair Opaline and Sinclair Pennsylvania are the finest in their respective classes. Note how these oils stand up in hard, fast driving. Note especially at draining time how little oil has been used up—positive, visible proof of protection for the last mile as well as the first!

"REPENTANCE"
Repentance is often defined as sorrow for sin. This is an accomplishment but not repentance itself. Nor can repentance be defined as reformation of life, that is the fruit of repentance. (See Matt. 3:8) There is in genuine repentance, sorrow for sin; a change of will, and newness of life.

One has said: "When a man is thoroughly filled with sorrow on account of his sins, that his will is subdued to the will of God, and he says, 'I will sin no more, I will hereafter submit to the will of God he has repented.'" "Repentance" says Prof. J. W. McGarvey, "fully defined, is a change of will, caused by sorrow for sin, and leading to a reformation of life."

The necessary change in the mind, affections, and life is produced by the gospel. It is within the power of man to remain unmoved. If he refuses to give an attentive hearing, or to submit to its claims, he cannot be saved. "Except ye repent, ye shall ALL likewise perish (Luke 13:3). "Repent ye, and be baptized, EVERY ONE OF YOU, in the name of Jesus Christ, unto the remission of your sins." (Acts 2:38).

The great trouble is that so many people postpone this action or repentance. They put it off until it is too late. Augustine said: "God has promised forgiveness to your repentance, but He has not promised to-morrow to your procrastination."

True repentance like that of Zaccheus, affects eye, ear, hands and feet. He says that he was a sinner, he heard the message of salvation, he took hold of Christ by faith, and ran joyfully in the way of obedience.

The first command, given by the first teacher in the New Testament was a command to "Repent." The burden of Christ's message to the people and to His disciples, was a message of "Repentance." The first command given by the Apostles on the day of Pentecost, was a command to: Repent! Christ's last message to the world through John the Revelator, was an appeal to "Repentance."

"CHRIST'S FAILURES" will be our subject Sunday morning. We want to show you how He turned His failures into success. "THE TWO FOUNDATIONS" will be our subject Sunday night. We are building on one or the other, which?

Widow Who Murdered Farm Hand

How she slipped into the room where her farm hand lay asleep, blew away the back of his head with a shotgun, then rolled him in a pit of his own digging and burned his body 24 hours has come out in the confession of Mrs. Anto Dach, buxom farm woman of Schulenburg, Texas. Mrs. Dach with her three children are pictured above, while the last remains of Henry F. Stoeber, her employe, are shown below. She killed him because he attacked her several months ago, according to her statement.

"PROHIBITION FACTS"

By Bozo

"Bozo" the Prohibition Hound, noticed a very interesting item in "The Lookout" and is taking the liberty to pass it on to his many friends.

"It is reported in the morning paper that the President said to the photographer when he had signed the bill legalizing 3.2 beer, 'I hope you got the smile at the end.'"

At one "end" of this situation they smiled who expect the Federal Government to receive $150,000,000 annually to help "balance the budget." Also they smile who anticipate financial profit from this partial restoration of the liquor traffic.

But at the other "end" of this situation are many millions, who will not smile, if they may even keep their tears. Mothers, now know, that their children may buy 3.2 beer openly, and drink it freely. Mothers, know that those who have any prospect of financial profits in the sale of 3.2 beer will leave no device untried which may lead children and youth to drink more and more of it, because the future of the traffic depends upon the creation of an insatiable appetite for alcohol. There may be no smiles at the "end" of this thing, for there will be a day of wrath.

"But whoso shall cause one of these little ones that believes on me to stumble, it is profitable for him that a great millstone should be hanged about his neck, and that he should be sunk in the depths of the sea," Matt. 18:6.

"Bozo" believes that many people are going to be caught by the bait and propaganda that is being circulated by the friends of 3.2 beer. This beer, MAY bring smiles and a type of happiness to a few, but it will bring tears, and additional burdens to thousands. Money spent for this beer, will not be spent for food, clothes and shoes, and thousands of children will go to bed with hungry little stomachs, many shivering little bodies will go without proper clothing and shoes. Smiles for some but tears for many. We cannot afford to produce "smiles" at the price we are asked to pay.

"LISTEN, SON"

I am saying this to you as you lie asleep, one little paw crumpled under your cheek and the curls stickily wet on your damp forehead. I have stolen into your room alone. Just a few moments ago, as I sit reading my paper in the library, a hit, stifling wave of remorse swept over me. I could not resist it. Guiltily I came to your bedside.

These are the things I was thinking, son: I had been cross to you. I scolded you as you were dressing for school because you gave your face merely a dab with a towel. I took you to task for not cleaning your shoes. I called out angrily when I found you had thrown some of your things on the floor. At breakfast I found fault, too. You put your elbows on the table. You spread butter too thick on your bread. And as you started off to play and I made for my train, you turned and waved a little hand and called, "Good-bye, Daddy," and I frowned, and said in reply, "Hold your shoulders back."

Then it began all over again in the later afternoon. As I came up the hill road I spied you down on your knees playing marbles. There were holes in your stockings. I humiliated you before your boy friends by making you march ahead of me back to the house. Stockings were expensive and if you had to buy them you would be more careful. Imagine that, son, from a father. It was such stupid, silly logic.

Do you remember later when I was reading in the library, how you came in softly, timidly, with a sort of hurt, hunted-look in your eyes? When I glanced up over my paper, impatient at the interruption, you hesitated at the door. "What is it you want?" I snapped.

You said nothing, but ran across in one tempestuous plunge; and threw your arms around my neck and kissed me, again and again, your small arms tightened with an affection that God had set blooming in your heart and which even neglect could not wither. And then you were gone, pattering up the stairs.

Well son, it was shortly afterwards that my paper slipped from my hands, and a terrible sickening fear came over me. Suddenly I saw myself as I really was, in all my horrible selfishness, and I felt sick at heart. What has habit been doing to me? The habit of complaining, of finding fault, or reprimanding, all of these were my rewards to you for being a boy. It was not that I did not love you; it was that I expected so much of youth. I was measuring you by the yardsticks of my own years.

And there was so much that was good, and fine, and true in your character. You did not deserve my treatment of you, son. The little heart of you was as big as the dawn itself over the wide hills. All this was shown by your spontaneous impulse to rush in and kiss me good-night. Nothing else matters tonight, son. I have come to your bedside in the darkness, and I have knelt there, choking with emotion, and so ashamed.

It is a feeble atonement, I know you would not understand these things if I told them to you during your waking hours, yet I must say what I am saying. I must burn sacrificial fires, alone, here in your bedroom, and make free confession. And I have prayed God to strengthen me in my new resolve. Tomorrow I will be a real daddy. I will chum with you, and suffer when you suffer and laugh when you laugh. I will bite my tongue when impatient words come. I will keep saying as if it were a ritual: "Here is nothing but a boy, a little boy."

I am afraid I have visualized you as a man. Yet as I see you now, son, crumpled and weary in your cot, I see that you are still a baby. Yesterday you were in your mother's arms, your head on her shoulder. I have asked too much, too much.

Dear Boy, Dear little son, a penitent kneels at your infant shrine, here in the moonlight. I kiss the little fingers and the damp forehead and the yellow curl. Tears came, and heartache and remorse and also a greater, deeper love, when you ran through the library door and wanted to kiss me.

I do not know of a better shrine before which a father or mother may kneel or stand than that of a sleeping child. I do not know of a holier place, a temple where one is more likely to come into close touch with all that is infinitely good, where one may come nearer to seeing and feeling God.

I am passing this "confession" along to the fathers who may be privileged to read it, and for the benefit of all the little "fellows," the growing, earth-blessing little Georgies, and Billys and Marys, Elizabeths and Janes of this very good world of ours.

C. L. Jacobs and J. L. Talley of the Hudgins school board, were in attendance on the county school meet here Monday.

Modernizing a Matrimonial Stunt of 1933 Model

In this age of free space grafting, if a publisher acceded to the request and wishes of all the grafters, his write-up of a wedding would appear about like this:

Last evening at the First Presbyterian church, erected by the J. B. Moore Construction company, Miss Iodyne Simpkins (ribbons, needles, thread, tatting, etc., Hemphill-Fain company), was wedded for better or for worse to Mr. Woodrow Wilson Spradlin (fourth assistant attendant, Texas company filling station, gasoline, oils, free air), in the presence of a few selected friends.

"The bride wore a charming gown made by the Shop of Youth, with shoes from Sears, Roebuck and company, gloves from Neiman Marcus, hat from Dave Knobler's and the necessary unmentionables garnered from Montgomery Ward & Company, Woolworth's and the Renfro Drug stores. The groom wore a hand-me-down suit which had been renovated by the DeLuxe Cleaners, his shoes having been shined by the staff of Lon Smith's news stand. They left for a wedding trip in a model T Ford, recently reconitioned by the Harris Motor company, following the wedding dinner at which was served spinach from Harlow's, potatoes from Emison's, meat from the Helpy-Selfy stores, fresh cookies from the Harper bakery and ice cream from the Alamo Manufacturing company. They will be at home eventually in a house on Fourteenth street, rented from W. A. Bell & Co.

CLARENDON GETS 1-INCH RAIN DURING SUDDEN STORM

Rain Falls Short of Amarillo But Drenches Eastern Part of Panhandle

Carried by zig-zagging and sudden bursts of wind, a hail laden rain storm invaded Clarendon and surrounding territory late Wednesday evening, driving motorists to shelter and sending pedestrians scurrying into buildings. The barrage of small hail-stones lasted but a few minutes, but was sufficient to do damage to small garden stuff and knock off early fruit. Reports from the west part of town indicated that a large amount of the gardens were destroyed.

Scattered reports from over the county say that gardens and fruit suffered considerable damage. The local rain-gauge shows that a one-inch rain fell yesterday and up into the night.

The eastern part of the Panhandle received a heavy downpour with scattered territories reporting hail. Traffic was thrown into a standstill in some places and was compelled to seek shelter until the hail and rain had abated. The rain was cut short a few miles this side of Amarillo, being driven back by dust storms.

At Shamrock, Memphis and Hedley, the rain fell varied from three-fourths of an inch in Memphis to two-inches in Shamrock. The rain fell to light showers before it reached Quitaque.

These beeves are native white face cattle, the best that Donley county can produce. This meat will be retailed through the meat market at the Jitney Jungle. This act upon the part of Mr. Fox further emphasizes the wishes of M. T. Howard and other producers of first-class beef cattle urging the local butchers to supply their customers with choice native beef.
